Christianity Not a Foreign Religion

In some countries Christianity has to bear the reproach of being a "foreign religion." But really Christianity is to every people and to every individual man, no matter what his peculiarities, the most fitting religion. Every nation and every individual that puts on Christianity will find it fits like a well-made garment. Other religions are indeed foreign and unadaptable, but not so Christianity. The most supernatural religion, it is at the same time the most natural religion. It is unfortunate anywhere, in this country as much as in China, when Christianity is presented in such a way as to create the impression that it is something "foreign" to our true life. The fact is that Christianity is needed to make life natural and true. The un-Christian man is the "foreigner," he is the unnatural man. Christ was perfectly natural in the best sense of the word because he was perfectly Christian. Christianity is not something to prepare us for a super-mundane state of existence, though it does that. Christianity is something that prepares us to live our true lives here. Let men understand that when they are asked to become Christians they are not asked to make of themselves monstrosities; they are asked to come to their true selves.

If This Were Your Last Year

We often hear people declare that if we knew this would be our last year of life, we would live very circumspectly and well. We would so live that we would be prepared for death when it came.

But is not such a supposition an impeachment of the wisdom or goodness of God? If the supposition were true, ought not God to reveal to us the fact that it is our last year? Could a man live circumspectly and well if he were constantly agitated by the thought that death is near? The reasons for right living are independent of the fact that we are approaching the end of our stay here. We ought to live well if we knew that death is a thousand years away. The kind of life to which fear of imminent death would prompt us would not be the best life. Regard for God, not regard for death, gives rise to the motive that impels to a good life. If the goodness of God does not lead us to good living, to noble lives, surely the fear of death and judgment will not do so. God is wise and good in withholding from us the exact day of our death. We should thank Him that He has done so and we should be moved by His goodness to the effort to make every year the best we can. Then we can face death and judgment with confidence. Doing the best we can of course includes repentance, reformation and belief in Christ's atonement for the pardon of our sins.

—Those men who destroy a healthful constitution of body by intemperance and an irregular life do as manifestly kill themselves as those who hang or poison or drown themselves. —Shakespeare.

Chinese Christians Carrying On

Report comes from missionaries who have been driven out of central China by the war that the missionary work is still going on, being continued by Chinese Christians. This is as it should be. The native Christians, if real Christians, will have in them the evangelistic spirit and will labor to spread the good news that has meant so much to them. Persecution scattered the early Christian workers and thus spread the church. It seems likely that the agitation of the Chinese people will result in giving the Gospel a better chance. If so, that will be a great compensation for the losses of war, great as they are.

For months our government has had marines in Nicaragua to help keep order, it is said. There has been strong protest against this interference in the government of another people, but the President and those who advise him have tried to justify the course taken. Whether right or wrong, the result has been bloodshed. Six American soldiers have been killed and 28 wounded up to this time. Some months ago there was an engagement in which there was little damage done to our men and great injury to the enemy. Since last Friday morning there have been two engagements resulting in the injuries stated above. Whether our part is right or wrong in interfering with the government of Nicaragua, let us hope that we will soon be freed from the obligation to engage in a war to support any party in Nicaragua. Who made us a ruler over Nicaragua? On what ground can we justly interfere in the internal affairs of that country?

—The art of saving people is the great art to be mastered by church members. It is the main business of church members to help make true church members of others. And when we say this we are thinking that there is much more involved in being a true church member than merely being voted into the church and having our names enrolled on the church register. We are not true church members unless we are members of the body of Christ, animated by the spirit of Christ. If we are thus related to Christ, we will prize our church membership above all other relationships, and we can not rest until our neighbors and friends have come to enjoy the same blessed relationship. How to make them realize what a great thing it is to be a member of the body of Christ and how to bring them into the same experience is indeed a great art. Let us try to improve in this art until we are workmen that need not be ashamed of our work and until we can be effective workers to bring our friends and neighbors to salvation.

"Be strong!
Say not the days are evil—who's to blame?
And fold the hands and acquiesce—O shame!
Stand up, speak out, and bravely, in God's name.
Be strong!"

It seems that there is a new interest in the true values of worship. This closer examination of what constitutes real worship is ruling out much haphazard, aimless digging of the cheaper type. It is now known that true worship is not a matter of exhibition. It is very sacred. Reverence and even silence is basic in worship. There must be time and opportunity for the Spirit to speak. Participating rather than spectating is the law of worship. And so, since only a few persons in the local church know or care anything about the jump of notes and the duration of rests, these few have the delight of wading through the two-page puzzles while the larger number sit in ignorance and spiritual starvation. This large number, therefore, come and go, try to fix themselves into the church but find it mighty hard since there is no easy, natural and satisfying expression of their heart's feeling.

It is impossible to develop a soul into the full love of church worship by feeding his soul on non-church music all the time. Often we have erected a church, employed a Methodist Protestant preacher, joined the conference and sailed under its banner, still failing to guard and cultivate the lives of that church for true church loyalty. One reason there are so many who drop out from church membership is because they found no expression there—no place to take hold. We bring them into the Kingdom but do not give them Kingdom food! Of course they will not mature. Our church does not stress an elaborate ritual. Perhaps it should not. But the least thing we can do is to follow some such recognized order and hymns of worship as the hymnal gives. We must have some way of connecting constantly our people to the meaning of the church. Their spiritual interests must not be scattered over every strange and barren field of musical novelty. So we want the congregational singing because it brings the spirit of worship. It acquaints the soul with the richest musical expression of the ages. Too, it binds us together in common experience and trains for loyalty and meaning in the great church of ours. In other words, it simply means that when the worshipper asks for bread we must not give him a stone.

EVANGELISM NOT ENOUGH

Evangelism is not enough. It does not matter how we may interpret it, it is not enough. It does not matter how we may operate it, it is not enough. It does not matter how widely we may conceive it, it is not enough. It does not matter how we may define it, it is not enough.

Evangelism is one of the words we repeat as a sweet morsel upon our lips; it is one of the favored concepts of the Christian believer. He speaks of it in many different ways. But it is only a word. It is almost a bauble today. It has been emptied of its content. We play with it; we use it as a decoration; we fondle it as something smooth and bright. Yes, we look upon it as crystal-gazers, expecting to find therein the confirmation of our faith.

Evangelism is something alive. As we know it today it is not enough. We are informed that it takes ten ministers in Protestantism today to make one convert. We are also assured that it takes forty members of a church working for a year to produce one convert. What is the meaning of all this? Are we at a standstill? Have we lost our Christian experience so that no longer we have driving power to send us out to help men in their seeking after God? What if we would acknowledge the same?

We are today preaching a standardized form of Christian experience and conversion. As a result, men weary of it. They are not attracted by it. Standardized calico or gingham may do for some folk, but it does not rise to the high level of registered value. The man who gets on in making converts for Jesus Christ is the man who has found a new experience which has enabled him to break away from the standardized form of conversion, which brings him something so fresh and so new, so vital and so remarkable, that because of its individuality, because of its distinctiveness, it becomes a source of attraction to other people.

The church fails today because it has nothing more than a standardized form of conversion to preach. Fit the mold and you have the thing. The new day will come, the new revival will be proclaimed, and some man or woman gets a new experience of God that breaks all standards, sends into discard all established forms, and proclaims by its own vitality a new discovery of the living God.

This was the reason why St. Paul carried the banner of evangelism of the early church into all parts of the Roman empire, making converts to the new religion of redemption.

This is the reason why St. Francis of Assisi lived his beautiful life, discovered new depths of Christian experience, and was used by the Holy Spirit in helping others to find the Christian secret of a happy life.

Yes, moreover, this was the reason why Savonarola, in his monk cell at San Marco, found himself with a burning message upon his lips. He had lived with the old form of faith; he had accepted the old standard; he had sought to press himself into the old mold, when suddenly he discovered a new experience of Christ which lifted him above the level of mediocrity; yes, beyond the walls of his monastery, until he became the voice speaking to all the community.

Cannot the same thing be said concerning Martin Luther? Did he not also find a new form of conversion? Did he not find a spiritual experience for himself that was not to be found in the confessional, neither in the monk cell, nor by acquiescing in the standardized spiritual forms then prevailing among his people?

Was this not also true of John Wesley and Charles Wesley? Did they not find a new experience? Were they not compelled to junk the old standardized forms of spiritual conversion? Did they not give themselves to an experience that was different from their friends and immediate associates? Verily, the evangelism of their day was not enough. They were under compulsion to find something new and vital. They found another experience that proved to be so different from the accepted form of conversion and of the spiritual life as then known and practiced that when they went out to proclaim their message they were attended by manifest spiritual power, and listened to by the multitudes because they had something new to give.

The great accomplishment of the church is the discovery of a new experience of God by faith in Jesus Christ.—Western Christian Advocate.

Now fall, and dwell as heavenly dew,
And flowers of grace and freshness start
Where once the weeds of error grew."

DENOMINATIONAL ENTERPRISES

FEBRUARY TO BE CENTENNIAL GRATITUDE GIFT MONTH

We are asking Dr. McCulloch to publish this week the Report of the Special Committee on Centenary Gratitude Gift Fund found on page 48 of the new conference journal that the matter may be fresh in our minds.

Pastors and delegates are thus reminded that the time is almost at hand to launch this campaign, so we should be getting our committees and other necessary organization. This is one of the undertakings in which we dare not fail. An early beginning will help to lead to success.

THE COMMITTEE.

Report of Special Committee on Centenary Gratitude Fund

(Report B)

To the North Carolina Conference.

Dear Brethren:

Your special committee on the Centennial Gratitude Gift desires to report as follows:

The General Conference at its last session made provision for the celebration of our hundredth anniversary at the general conference session of next May in Baltimore. A centennial committee was appointed and has in process at this time the preparation of a suitable program. A part of this anniversary is the raising of a Gratitude Gift of $100,000 for distribution among the boards of the church with a view of starting the new century free from debts and prepared for more extensive operations. The committee has made a distribution of this sum among the various annual conferences and are asking our conference for $12,000 as an appropriate sum.

Knowing that our conference would be meeting somewhat late in the year the president of the conference in consultation with various members of this body decided we should make some preliminary efforts to start the movement in North Carolina and so invited Rev. J. H. Straughn, D. D., director of the Gratitude Gift, to meet with our summer conference at High Point last July. Dr. Straughn came and after discussion it was decided to name a committee, which, while it was not authoritative, might study the whole situation and come to this conference prepared to make definite recommendations. The committee has had two meetings, one of them with the director.

We hail this centennial with happy hearts. We look back over these one hundred years and, marking the way that we have come, lift our hands in profound gratitude to our Heavenly Father for the marvelous providence that has attended us and to Him we give our deepest love and devotion. It is in our hearts to say with the psalmist, "What shall we render unto the Lord for all His benefits towards us."

With this in our minds we feel that it is most appropriate that we should celebrate this great moment, that we shall review the years and fix definitely in our minds the place that God has called us to occupy in the great family of the church.

We recommend therefore:

1. That we accept the apportionment of $12,000 asked of us by the Executive Committee and commit ourselves to the joyful task of laying this sum upon the altars of the church as a small expression of our gratitude to God for these hundred years.

2. We recommend that this conference raise up a committee charged with the promotion of this gift within our conference, with the president of the conference as chairman. That this committee shall have full authority in the premises to follow such methods as may seem wise and expedient.

3. That we designate the month of February as the time when our churches shall receive the gifts of our people for this purpose. That the time between the adjournment of this conference and December be employed in the dissemination of literature and information, the holding of group meetings, and the pursuit of other such methods as may be informing and stimulating.

4. That each of our churches be requested to appoint centennial committees who shall co-operate with the pastor in presenting the matter to our people. That the pastors be expected to preach centennial and denominational sermons and in every way prepare the minds and hearts of their members for this presentation. That all our churches shall use this great occasion for mutual inspiration and the quickening of love and devotion for the church.

5. That the Conference Committee have authority to appoint the young lady who shall represent our conference at the General Conference and shall have authority to decide all such matters as are not specifically mentioned in this report.

Respectfully submitted,

S. W. TAYLOR,
J. D. WILLIAMS.

A PLEA FOR THE ANIMALS

The stable at Bethlehem plays an important part in the story of the nativity. There were the Babe, His Mother, the shepherds and the wise men. They offered their adoration and their gifts to the Wonderful Child. But while for nearly 2,000 years they have been commemorated in countless ways, the dumb animals who looked upon this matchless scene have too often been forgotten.

Surely they were present for a purpose. For is not every creature of God holy? And those who share with man the mystery of sensitive life are emphatically near to him. There is not an alley cat which should not be sacred to us all on Christmas day; not a patient ox or burden-bearing horse and ass and mule which should not have a warm shelter and an extra feed of corn; not a dog whose tail should not wag from dawn till dark of this glorious festival. Let us see to it that the over-driven, little-considered and frequently ill-treated animal kingdom lifts up its head in gratitude for Yuletide. "The righteous man is merciful to his beast." It is a poor keeping of Christmas which does not cover with its protecting benevolence everything that has fur and feathers in home and on farmstead and field and in forest.—S. Parkes Cadman, in Boston Herald.

—Until we have come to appreciate the power of Christ in the uplift of our own lives we will not be able to impress upon others the need they have to seek the help of Christ in solving the moral problems of their own lives. But given in our own consciousness a demonstration of the saving power of Christ, we can recommend Him with such confidence that others will be led to seek Him and put their souls into His care as the Great Physician.

OUR STORY PAGE

BIRD O' GOLD

Little Prince Eric sat down by the white marble fountain in the palace court. His heart was very heavy.

He had just come from the royal presence of his aged grandfather, the King, and had heard that the Three Courtiers who had gone forth to find the whereabouts of his dear mother, had failed. Enemies of the happy kingdom of Euthalia had carried her away, and the old King, her father, was broken-hearted lest they had done her bodily harm.

Little Prince Eric did not understand it all, but he did grasp enough to know that everything would be all right if the beautiful Princess Alice could but be found and brought home.

Just then the cheerful notes of a lilting bird song attracted his attention. Prince Eric's eyes brightened. It was the bird o' gold which he had seen many times before. It seemed to be watching him eagerly, but when he would approach it, it lifted its shining yellow wings and flew straight out through the palace gateway.

Rowdee thrust his soft, cool nose into Eric's hand as much as to say, "I'm here, come and play with me," and away the snow-white puppy raced in the direction which the bird o' gold had taken.

Eric sat and thought a few minutes. He was not supposed to go outside of the palace grounds alone, but he knew where the heard gardener kept the key to the little side gate, and slipping Rowdee's leash into the dog's collar, he and the puppy were soon on the roadway beyond. Perhaps he could succeed where others had failed.

Rowdee raced straight ahead, then sniffed here and there, and pulled his master to the left. The roadway grew narrower and narrower. There was grass farther on and only a few tracks of cart-wheels. "Let's go back," cried Prince Eric. "We'll never find my mother off this way, I am sure! We must go to the big city and search where fine ladies are to be found." Just then Rowdee jumped and barked excitedly, and even Prince Eric stopped to listen, for there swaying as merrily as you please on the branch of a wild rose bush, was the bird o' gold.

"Come on! Come on! Come on!" he whistled.

How pleased Eric was to see him. It was like meeting an old friend in an unknown land.

The bird o' gold flew low to the ground, across the old roadway and to a tangle of bushes, every few minutes stopping to repeat his cry, "Come on! Come on! Come on!"—and Eric, overjoyed, dashed gaily after, still holding the slender, but stout, chain.

When the little boy reached the bushes, bird o' gold had disappeared, but he was beginning to be hungry, and he found himself face to face with a hedge of blackberry bushes laden with luscious fruit. Oh, how good they tasted! They were food and drink both, and right under the edge of the biggest bush, were some pieces of bread and meat, as though someone had eaten a lunch there and had thrown away what they didn't want. Rowdee feasted on these with pleasure.

The little prince and his dog now pressed on more slowly. Nightfall was approaching, and beyond they could see the shadows of a deep, dark wood. Prince Eric was a brave little chap, but he began to wonder where he and Rowdee would sleep when it came bedtime.

It was very cool and pleasant, and there were deligtful woodsy smells as the two travelers plunged into the forest path which now became a little more plainly marked, as if traveled now and again, and soon Prince Eric noticed footsteps in the moist earth—the tracks of bare little feet about the size of his own. He hurried on, and in a few minutes came to a small cabin.

He came near and knocked timidly. The door was opened by a little girl with the loveliest blue eyes he had ever seen, and a bright, flower-like little face framed in yellow curls. She had been crying.

"Oh, come in," she begged, "my grammy is so sick, and there is no one to get help for her."

Prince Eric stepped into a bare little room. The old woman on a pallet of straw in the corner eyed him anxiously.

"Who be ye?" she quavered.

"Prince Eric," he answered softly, "and I've set out to find my mother. If you'll tell me where to go for help, I'll do my best." He laid his hand upon her hot foreheard and stroked her hand gently.

"Give him Dobbin," gasped the old crone, "and hurry, lad, hurry."

Eric knew that he could not take Rowdee, so he fastened the chain around the latch of the cabin door.

The little girl led him to the enclosure back of the cabin where Dobbin was kept. And how glad Eric was that he had learned to ride in the palace parks!

"Dobbin most knows the way his own self," the little girl told him. "When you come to the village, ask for the old doctor, tell him that Hilda's grammy is terribly sick an' he must come as quick as ever he can."

As Eric started off, he was sure he saw the flesh of golden wings ahead, and he was comforted. There were times when the branches scratched his face; times when his heart stood still because of the sounds of strange animals in the wood; and once when he saw a pair of shining green eyes watching him from the velvet dark, he could hear distinctly the singing of a little bird somewhere near, and then he was afraid no more.

He didn't try to guide Dobbin. He just let the old mare find her own way, and as the dawn began to streak the sky, they stumbled into a quaint village street. A peasant going early to work, pointed out where the old doctor lived, and Eric soon told his story.

"I have no money," said the lad, "but this chain about my neck is of fine gold. Take it and buy food and medicine."

The old doctor did so and they were soon on the return journey.

"I've heard of a short cut," muttered the old doctor—"miles less than the wood road. Perhaps I can find it."

On and on rode the travelers.

"I'm afraid we're lost," the old doctor mumbled at length, stopping as if to turn back.

"No, no," protested the Prince. "I can hear a dog bark. It is Rowdee. Please go on."

At first the sound was very faint like a far-away echo, but it became louder until the two of them saw a little wisp of thin, blue smoke curling over the tree-tops. Hilda was at the door of the cabin to meet them.

"Hurry," was all she said.

The doctor gave medicine to the ailing one and food to Hilda. Soon the old woman was able to speak.

"I have only a little time to live," she whispered, "but I want someone to take word to the King, that his daughter, the Princess Alice, is held a prisoner in the dungeon of the old fort in this very forest. She is not harmed. The message is my gift to the brave—little—Prince."

"Come," said Prince Eric, taking Hilda by the hand and unfastening Rowdee's chain. "Come, we'll go to the palace, and soon my mother will be with us again, and I am sure my grandfather, the King, will always let you stay there, too."

Hilda slipped her little brown hand trustingly into Eric's, and as the children set forth, a bird o' gold fluttered across their path and poured forth a joyous burst of melody.—Selected.

A NEWSBOY PREACHER

A bright-eyed, shabby little fellow was working his way through a crowded car, offering his papers in every direction, in a way that showed him well used to the business and of a temperament not easily daunted.

The car started while he was making change, and the conductor, passing him, laughed.

"Caught this time, Joe!" he said. "You'll have to run to Fourteenth street."

"Don't care," laughed Joe, in return. "I can sell all the way back again."

A white-haired old gentleman seemed interested in the boy, and questioned him concerning his way of living and his earnings. There was a younger brother to be supported, it appeared. "Jimmy" was lame, and "couldn't earn much himself."

"Ah, I see. That makes it hard; you could do better alone."

The shabby little figure was erect in a moment and the denial was prompt and somewhat indignant.

"No, I couldn't! Jim's somebody to go home to; he's lots of help. What would be the good of havin' luck if nobody was glad? Or of gettin' things if there was nobody to divide it with?"

"Fourteenth Street!" called the conductor, and as the newsboy jumped out into the gathering dusk the old gentleman remarked to nobody in particular: "I've heard many a poorer sermon than that."—Forward Magazine.

THE MAN JOSEPH

And Joseph, with huge wonder in his eyes,
Flung in the doorway his torn cloak to ward
The chill from them, and whispered to the skies,
"I, Joseph, first doorkeeper to the Lord!"

Then when the shepherds and the kings had gone,
And they were sleeping quietly inside,
He watched the Star fade palely in the dawn:
"My wife! My Mary! She who is my bride."

"Jehovah! Father! Keep this hand from harm,
These eyes from dimming. All skill now be mine!
Thy help, O great One, who chose me to warm
And clothe and feed this body Child of Thine."

IF PREACHERS DISAPPEARED

No one can pretend that, as a class, parsons are popular. When a dramatist presents a clergyman on the stage he is nearly always a grotesque figure of fun—timid, eccentric and incompetent. Fiction writers take him more seriously, but even in the best novels he shows up none too well. A very clever woman novelist, trying desperately to be fair, has written two books about clergymen—in one he is a selfish, worldly, heartless egotist, and in the other he is almost too good to live; indeed, at the end he dies while writing a sermon. One distinguished novelist, who, seeing that he is the son of a bishop, may be trusted to know his subject, has written a story of the clergy in a cathedral town that is as repellant and disquieting as it is brilliant and authentic. Yet if all preachers and missionaries disappeared from the earth, mankind would not be long in finding its way back into the jungle. It came very near it in 1914, under the temporary eclipse of Christianity. The churches, more than any other institution, cleanse and sweeten the life of the country and save us from sinking into a deadening, brutal and despairing materialism.—British Weekly.

NO EXCUSE FOR WARS

A letter signed by 138,770 citizens of Great Britain, who pledged themselves never to serve or aid any government in conducting war, was presented by Arthur Ponsonby, former Labor under-secretary for foreign affairs, to Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin recently. The signatories said they signed the letter "not from fear of death or suffering, but because of a rooted objection to and a heartfelt loathing of the idea of inflicting, by new and diabolical methods, suffering, torture, and death on innocent populations" with whom they had no quarrel. As war would be impossible unless the people co-operated, the letter said, it would be possible for the ordinary citizen to force settlement of international disputes by arbitration.

—The old year is dead, the new year is born. Humbly, fearfully, we sink on our knees, and slowly, in answer to our prayers, comes back something of the old faith of our childhood, and we rejoice that we are granted one more New Year's Day on which to begin again—not in our childish way, with utter disregard of the past, but trustingly, patiently, knowing that we must ever carry with us our past, and rejoicing that with God's help, we may make the future better because of the past. Then, as we rise from our knees, we look bravely forward to the veiled future that stands at our threshold; we know nothing of what it brings, we know only that it is God's new year. May He bless it to us all!—Golden Rule.

O, tender Christ, bless Thou this year!
Bless Thou its dawn, and bless
Its noontide and its evening, Lord;
And let each heart confess,
As days and weeks and months go by
To help the year grow old,
That of Thy glory, King of Kings,
The half not yet is told.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

THE POSTAL CARD, W. F. Kennett, Editor

Christmas Cheer

Again our friends were very good to us at Christmas.

Granville Ct.

We had been away for a year and did not expect the people to remember us at Christmas. So many nice cards and good wishes came to us from Granville people that we are assured they have not forgotten us. Thanks, good people. We appreciate your good wishes. You were very nice to us while we were with you and you really paid us the best salary we ever received.

Poundings

From Mrs. W. C. York, of Giles Chapel, there came a nice lot of fresh meat. All of it was good; but the souse, or pressed meat, was par excellent. Mrs. York knows how to compound it like our mothers made it. It is almost a lost art. Thanks, Mrs. York. We appreciate your kind thoughtfulness and generosity.

From Maple Grove.

Then there came to us from Mr. and Mrs. Earle Bulla, of Maple Grove, a fine lot of fresh meat and a very generous pounding with the very best of pork sausage. Many thanks, Brother and Sister Bulla. We had thought poundings were things of the past with us, but you show us that it is not so. Billie and Hellen also brought us nice presents. Many other friends remembered us. We will not ask space to tabulate them all.

A Rich Gift

Last Christmas Bro. L. F. Ross, of Asheboro, sent us a very rich gift. With care and economy we made this rich gift last until now. It was a gift which made it much easier to get out of bed in the morning and start a fire in a cold room. We used it, some of it every cold morning. We really got the habit and feared that Mr. Ross might forget us and the habit would have to be subdued; but on December 22nd there came riding on the top of a large truck load of lumber a new and increased supply of this morning cheer. Three men carried the gift to the back lot where we keep it "under lock and key." The truck did not come just to bring this rich gift to us. Mr. Ross often sends trucks to our city loaded with home building material. If you are going to build a home with the Home Building, Inc., Asheboro, you can't do better, and then we are particularly concerned that trucks may continue to come and especially at Christmas time. What was this gift, did you say? Well, there is no infringement on the Volstead act. Mr. Ross and I are both staunch prohibitionists. Next Christmas, if we live and Mr. Ross does not forget us, we will tell you just what the rich gift is—it is and it is a really rich gift and appreciated on every cold morning. Thanks to you, my brother, and thanks to those who sent shirts—three of them—ties, four of them, and handkerchiefs and gloves and books, etc., etc. Thanks to each and a happy New Year to all our friends and to everybody.

417 N. Elm St., Greensboro, Dec. 29th.

Reidsville.—We are small in numbers over in this "neck of the woods;" but that does not argue that we are inactive. You may have observed that some of the most active things are small. What is more active than a flea? Do you know of anything as small that can make a lazy dog, or a lazy man for that matter, shake off a spell of ennui, whatever that is, so quickly as a flea? I do not. Now, wait a minute! I am not insinuating that we are like a flea except in just one particular, namely, activity. Now that I have saved my hide, I shall proceed to relate a few of the activities of our church here.

The Philathea class, the class that does things, held an enjoyable Christmas social at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Dixon a few nights ago. Mrs. Dixon and Mrs. Louise Smith were hostesses. At the close of the devotional and business session a delightful social hour was enjoyed. Santa Claus came in and presented gifts to each one present, and the hostesses served refreshments.

On Thursday night before Christmas the annual treat was given to the children. A short program was rendered, consisting of Christmas carols, readings, etc. Following the example of its Big Sister, the Junior Philatea class took an active part in the program. The Primary Department, under the direction of Mrs. L. C. Yount, added to the enjoyment of the occasion. The pastor and his wife were presented with a package containing green and yellow and white—greenback, gold and silver. The greenback matched the complexion of the pastor, and the gold and silver represented the sterling qualities to be found in all pastors' good wives. We hereby express our sincere gratitude to the friends contributing to this gift. May a kind Heavenly Father bless them, and give them abundant happiness and success in the New Year!

Our Woman's Home Missionary Society recently contributed ten pairs of pillow cases to the Children's Home.

On Monday after Christmas the pastor and his wife enjoyed a turkey dinner at the home of Rev. and Mrs. C. W. Bates, Greensboro. This is the reason we are able to "gobble" through the columns of the Herald this week.

GEORGE R. BROWN.

Albemarle.—The stationing committee saw fit to comply with request of the delegate of this charge and send me back to this charge for the second year, for which I am truly grateful.

The work started off in a very pleasant way. First, Mr. D. J. Hatley called me down to see a new white brick bungalow that he had just finished. After we had gone through and admired it he said, I want to present this place to you as long as you live here and preach for us, and we are not expecting that to be less than fifteen years and it's without cost to you or the church.

After we had recovered somewhat from our surprise and stammered our thanks, he said: I will have my trucks and a crew of men up and move you right in. So we were soon in our new home, and then the ladies' aid sent up a new parlor suit and fixed up that end of the house, and a number of the members of the church and the neighbors came to see us and each had a package containing something for the pantry, so they fixed that end of the house.

Our congregations have been good and our Sunday school has been holding up good so far this winter and we so far as we could see had a fine outlook for this conference year, but on last Thursday night our church caught fire and was burned down. We saved nothing. We had insurance to cover less than half of our loss. The building caught fire from the furnace just after the committee on the Christmas program had left the church.

We watched, and some of us through tears, the last thing we had in the way of a church go up in smoke and then turned away wondering what we were to do. We could not think of disbanding even for a little while, for we felt that would be fatal to our Sunday school, and a great loss of our congregation. There seemed to be no way out; just at the time that things looked the darkest our good friend D. J. Hatley again showed how big his heart is; he cleared out a big brick warehouse and said go in and use that till we can build, so we never lost a service. Even our faithful program committee was on hand with the children and put on a splendid program although they had but one day to get ready and all the fixtures to make again; they deserve much credit for their splendid work.

Our sister churches came to our rescue in such a splendid way, with seats, song books, pulpit, Bible and other things that were so much needed, for which we are very grateful.

We are to have a call meeting this week and make plans to begin a new church as soon as possible. We expect our new plant to cost between fifteen and eighteen thousand dollars.

Pray for us that in all things we may do the will of the Master.

J. R. ANDERSON, Pastor.

First Church, Thomasville.—Christmas with its happiness has come and gone, and in its wake can be found many who have felt the quickening of the Christmas spirit. Our Christmases have all been happy ones, and especially so since we entered the ministry of this great old church, which soon will be one hundred years young. Our lot has been cast in pleasant places, and it seems that each year those places and experiences are more pleasant.

Our children—50 in number—gave their annual Christmas program on Friday night, December 23rd. The church was filled, and the people seemed to enjoy the service from start to finish. The large congregation gave the best attention we have ever seen. Not only were the children made happy when the treat and gifts were delivered, but the parsonage family were made exceedingly happy. The first Christmas we were with these good people there were a number of gifts, then last year there were more, but this year there were as much as the two former years combined.

Three weeks before Christmas, Prof. E. E. Teague gave us our pork ham, wife wanted so badly, then during the week prior to Christmas day, Mrs. J. W. Baity gave us a hen, Brother Joe Hundley gave us two friers, Brother W. P. Carmichael gave another hen, and we thought we had enough for one time. Then came the Christmas tree at the church. At the conclusion of the program, Brother D. R. Connell came out on the platform with two big Kingan hams. He said one was for Mrs. Trollinger and the other was mine. One weighed nearly 12 pounds, the other weighed over ten, and woman-like, she took the biggest, and on Christmas morning—woman-like—she cut mine. Then Mr. and Mrs. Jason Hedrick gave us another hen. This one came off the Christmas tree, dressed, ready for the pot, and 'mother' put it in the pot Sunday morning.

The pageant, "At the Door of the Inn," was given on Sunday night to an audience that was too large for the house, several persons being turned away for lack of room. The music, the acting, the response of the people were second to none. This is the second pageant we have put on here, and I believe that the people were more co-operative in this one than they were in the one a year ago, and when I say that it is saying "a mouthful." And when the offering was taken they responded very liberally. This will be sent to the treasurer for the G. C. B.

I must say that I have never seen a people who, as a whole, were quite so loyal, and seemed that they wanted to do just what was the best, and what should be done. Times were hard last year, and yet they went after the thing like Trojans, and even though we did not get on the honor roll we have something to show for what was done. We are hoping that we will come out on top, and go over the top this year, and get rid of some debts and pay all claims as well.

We are facing the new year feeling that we are doing the Master's work, and since Christ is our partner, we must make our plans large, and in so doing we will reach higher heights, and conquer broader fields. Pray for us, brethren, for this church has had the hardest struggle in her history for the last four years, and if we can but keep faith a little longer, we will mount the battlements and declare the victory to the world.

J. L. TROLLINGER, Pastor.

First Church, Concord.—Owing to an epidemic of measles in our city, the attendance at our church was off considerably on Sunday. This disease has spread so rapidly during the past week that the city board of health in special session advised against children under twelve years of age congregating anywhere.

The opening of the city and county schools has been postponed.

At the morning service Sunday our pastor brought a very helpful message appropriate to the New Year, on the subject "Looking Backward and Looking Forward or Between the Years."

On Friday evening, Dec. 23rd, the Young People's Christian Endeavor Society held a Christmas exercise in the S. S. Assembly room of the church for the poor and needy children of our city, and several small children were made happy, who doubtless would not have had a visit from Santa Claus.

On Monday night, Dec. 26th, a young people's rally was held in our church, at which time Revs. F. L. Gibbs and Lawrence Little made addresses. Rev. N. G. Bethea, of Lexington, was also present and spoke for a few minutes, adding much to the meeting.

On last Friday evening, at the home of the bride on Fink Street, Miss Bernice Nash, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. G. Nash, became the bride of Mr. Hoyt McEachern. The ceremony was witnessed only by members of the immediate families, and was performed by Rev. Lawrence Little, former pastor of the bride and a schoolmate of the groom, they having attended Davidson College together. Mrs. McEachern is a valued member of our church, a teacher in our Sunday School and for the past few years was our church reporter. She has been an efficient teacher in Rocky River school, this county, for the past three years. Mr. McEachern is a member of Rocky River Presbyterian Church and holds a position with the Civil Service Department in this county. Both are popular with a wide circle of friends who wish them much happiness in life together.

On Christmas night Rev. D. A. Braswell peacefully passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. F. C. Garmond, on Kerr Street. We are grieved at his going but we rejoice in the fact that the long nights of waiting and suffering are over, for "There is no night there." The news of his death did not come as a surprise to those who had been privileged to visit him and be with him, for they knew that the end was near, as did Brother Braswell, for he talked of going home. Funeral services were held in our church and were in charge of Rev. W. F. Ashburn, assisted by Revs. G. H. Hendry, N. G. Bethea, Lawrence Little, Dr. A. G. Dixon and Pres. S. W. Taylor. Other ministers attending were Revs. J. H. Moton, J. R. Hutton, H. F. Surrat, J. R. Anderson, Fred Furr, C. H. Hill, F. L. Gibbs, Robt. Short and N. Britain. Brother Braswell is survived by his second wife, who before marriage was Miss Minnie Rollins, of Cheraw, S. C., and the following children: J. T. Braswell, of Hamlet; Mrs. D. M. Eudy, of Hamlet; Sheriff John Braswell, of Rockingham; Mrs. S O. Bundy,. Mrs. F. C. Garmond and Mrs. B. F. Waddell, of Concord.

Miss Dora Elza Bundy and Mrs. Ray Sides, who have both undergone operations at the Concord hospital, have greatly improved and have returned to their homes.

MRS. D. A. M'LAURIN, Reporter.

Randleman Charge.—Two Christmas services were held on this charge, one at Worthville, the other at New Salem. Both were well attended and everybody enjoyed the splendid programs. The tree at each place was well loaded and very attractive.

On Friday night before starting for Worthville, Bros. W. F. Ivey and Burton Brookshire conveyed to us from Mt. Lebanon friends a generous pounding, consisting of a variety of pantry supplies. Miss Ruth Brookshire, Bros. W. F. Matthews and W. L. Ward also pounded us with cash donations. Mt. Lebanon Philatheas presented to Mrs. Neese a pair of kid gloves. Friends from the same church, headed by Miss Nora Hughes, did the same for the writer. Bro. Julius Hanner's latest donations were meat for the body and wheat for the chickens. Various edibles and dry goods were donated by the following: Mrs. Belle Smith, Mrs. J. B. Lamb, Mrs. Rom Ward, Mrs. Ad Brown, Mrs. Chas. Hayes and Miss Roselle Smith. Our entire family has enjoyed an unprecedented good and glorious Christmas. May we be more worthy.

W. H. NEESE.

Henderson. During the holiday season we have had many extra and special services, from which we have also received many extra and special blessings.

Our first quarterly conference was held on Wednesday night, November 30th, and plans for the coming year were made, many reports given, and all committees appointed for carrying out the goals set by the conference. If every member will co-operate with the plans and strive to reach each goal, we will indeed have a most fruitful and progressive year.

On Sunday evening, December 11th, Rev. S. W. Taylor, president of the conference, spoke to a well filled church here. He was pastor here some years ago and still holds a warm place in the heart of each member of this congregation. He was also present the following afternoon at the Ladies' Aid Society meeting, which was held at the home of Mrs. F. R. Harris. In his ever pleasing manner he commended the Ladies' Aid on their untiring efforts and willingness to serve in that capacity. He also spoke encouragingly of the different organizations of the women of the church and yet expressed his belief that in future years they would all be united in one great organization, having all interests combined and serving each need as required. Mrs. S. R. Harris presided in the absence of the president, Mrs. S. R. Watson. The general business of the society was then discussed, dues paid and reports given in. The program committee gave its report, which was a Christmas story read by Mrs. Clyde L. Finch, "The Candle in a Tree," after which the hostess served refreshments.

The Young Ladies' League met December 15th. in the Sunday School rooms of the church, Mrs. H. A. Jordan, president, presiding. The business of the society was transacted and various reports given. The parsonage committee reported a new suite of furniture sent to the parsonage, and much appreciated by both our pastor and his wife. The program for the evening was a short Christmas poem, which was enjoyed by all present.

The Missionary Society met Dec. 19th at the home of Mrs. L. R. Gooch. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Gooch. Mrs. R. A. Hunter conducted the devotionals, using for the topic "The Christmas Madonna," taken from "The Jewel Box." Stewardship discussion was held by Mrs. John Edwards, using the Nov. Record. Mrs. Henry T. Powell gave a most interesting outline and comment on the second chapter of the study book. The question box was conducted by Mrs. Walter Grissom. The business period was then opened and many plans were worked out and voted on by the society. In closing the meeting, special praper was offered for those mentioned on the prayer calendar of the Record.

Sunday, Dec. 25, being Christmas day, the birthday of our Lord, there was a special sermon very appropriate in its sweet and simple meaning preached by our pastor, Rev. R. A. Hunter. A very beautiful anthem was also enjoyed by those present. Our Sunday School leaders and other members of the church decided to celebrate Christ's birthday by giving our gifts to others, instead of having the usual Christmas tree and treat. So the White Christmas was observed and a collection taken for the G. C. B. Two of our Sunday School classes, the Baraeca and Philathea, took needy families to help for the Christmas. That afternoon at five o'clock a union Christmas service was held at our church with quite a goodly attendance.

Many Christmas hymns and carols were sung by the choir and congregation, after which Rev. H. A. Ellis, pastor of First Baptist Church, told a most interesting Christmas story of the "Birth of Christ" and the "Three Wise Men." The parts of the wise men were taken by Messrs. J. Cooper, Alvin T. Barns, Wm. B. Harrison, who sang "We Three Kings of the Orient Are," after which the congregation was dismissed.

The eleven o'clock services January 1st were held by Rev. F. L. Gibbs, assistant of the Board of Young People's Work. A most inspiring and uplifting talk was enjoyed and many were made members of the Y. P. convention at the close of the service.

Among the college students who have come and gone again we mention Miss Martha Gooch, of Converse College; Miss Helen Hight, of N. C. C. W.; Miss Helen Hayes, of High Point College; Mr. Henry T. Powell, of Davidson; Mrs. Richard Gooch, of Fishburne M. Academy.

Wishing the editor and staff and all the readers a most prosperous and happy New Year. REPORTER.

Asheboro.—Our reporter has covered the ground so thoroughly in her reports that it has not seemed necessary for me to write very often so far since conference. While we are not going by leaps and bounds, yet things are moving. The weather has been so very irregular that it has interfered with Sunday School attendance. On the afternoon of Christmas Day the choir of the church rendered a beautiful musical program. This took the place of the usual entertainment by the children. An offering for the general conference budget was taken which amounted to nearly twenty dollars. The Sunday afternoon before Christmas Supt. Allman and the children from the Home were here and rendered a beautiful program.

During the month of December we had vesper services at five o'clock in the afternoon instead of the evening service. The people liked the hour so well that we are continuing through next Sunday anyway, and possibly longer.

On Tuesday evening, December 27, a rally was held in our church under the auspices of the Board of Young People's Work with Rev. F. L. Gibbs as the speaker. The purpose of the rally was to secure registrations for the Young People's Convention which meets in Baltimore next May. Thirty-four registrations have been secured here with more to follow.

Every few days some one here says, "I want the annual conference to come to Asheboro next year. You know I enjoyed the annual conference more than anything I ever attended before."

Mrs. T. F. Bulla, who has been sick for about three weeks, is considerably improved now. Billie Bulla, young son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl F. Bulla, who fell and broke his leg at Thanksgiving, is able to be out again.

It has been a great pleasure to have so many of our young people home during the holidays after being away at college and other places.

With all good wishes for a happy New Year to the editor and all the readers of the Herald, I am

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. C. L. Spencer, brought another one of his good sermons at the eleven o'clock service Sunday. As this was Christ's birthday, he preached a sermon for this occasion. Bro. Spencer based his sermon on two texts, one found in the Old Testament and the other one in the New Testament. We were very glad to have with us Sunday at the eleven o'clock service one of our boys, Mr. Willie Wood, who is a student of High Point College. He is one of our young ministers. We are always glad to have him worship with us.

Tuesday evening the pageant, "Christ, the Light of the World," was presented to a large and appreciative congregation. Much credit is due Misses Bell and Sallie Wood for preparing the program. A treat was given to all the members of the Sabbath school. Old Santa Claus was present and presented the presents. REPORTER.

Pleasant Hill, Why Not Circuit.—We feel very fortunate in having Bro. Joel B. Trogdon as our pastor for the coming year. Bro. Trogdon preached for us yesterday and gave us an interesting and helpful sermon.

We were also glad to have with us Mrs. Trogdon and daughter and son.

Our Sunday School is progressing nicely under the leadership of our efficient superintendent, Wm. Staley. It is not among the largest Sunday Schools, but we know that we have a band of faithful workers who never grow weary in well doing.

The old officers for the church and Sunday School have been re-elected. We wish for these officers a bright year, and they will have it, with God's help, if we as a church and Sunday School give them our best support.

We have painted our church inside and out and bought new matting and placed on the floor and made some other improvements that were very badly needed.

Bro. J. C. Lowdermilk had the misfortune to stick a nail in his foot one day last week, which has caused him much pain. We trust that he will soon recover from this injury.

Will close, wishing the editor and everybody a happy and prosperous New Year.

FLONIE COX, Reporter.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle Charge.—Our Christmas entertainment was attended by a full house.

Our children did their little part in great style. An offering of $8.75 was taken, after which old Santa Claus himself appeared on the scene and of course things became very lively among the children.

We had $39.20 to buy Christmas treat for Sunday School. Everybody seemed to have been well pleased with the entire program of entertainment.

"Granny" Mikels continues very sick at the home of her son, J. D. Mikels.

Mr. Roy Hunt and Miss Carrie Owens were happily married during the holidays. Mr. Hunt is the son of Mr. G. W. Hunt, of Seagrove, N. C., and Mrs. Hunt is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Owens, of Shoals, N. C.

Mrs. G. W. Hunt, of Seagrove, has returned to her home after spending the holidays with relatives and friends at Pinehurst and Shoals, N. C.

Here's a little poem I read I think should be read by every man that thinks anything about New Year's resolutions:

MY CREED

"To live as gently as I can,
To be, no matter where, a man;
To take what comes of good or ill,
And cling to faith and honor still;
To do my best and let that stand
The record of my brain and hand;
And then, shall failure come to me,
To work and hope for victory.

"To have no secret place wherein
I stoop unseen to shame or sin;
To be the same when I'm alone
As when my every deed is known;
To live undaunted, unafraid
Of any step that I have made;
To be without pretense or sham,
Exactly what men think I am.

"To leave some simple mark behind
That will inspire some other mind;
If opposition I must show,
To be an honest, generous foe;
To play my little part, nor whine
That greater honors are not mine;
This, I believe, is all I need
To put within my New Year's creed."

May this be the very best year for the Herald family. "What I am not, but aspire to be, comforts me." Let's work harder.

C. W. ALLEN,

Mebane Charge.—We wish to express through the Herald our appreciation to the good people of this charge for the many tokens of kindness we have received. Hardly a week has passed since conference that we have not received some substantial evidence of their kindness. And on Friday evening, Dec. 16th, they pressed into service Bro. Dunn's truck and sent a good supply of good things. Some did not make connection with the truck and came later. When we looked over the nice things we found we had enough things, too numerous to mention, to last us quite a while. We wish to thank each one who took part in this. We appreciate your kindness more than words can express.

The work here is going along fine. We have some fine workers and we are looking forward for great things for this church this year. EDWARD SUITS.

Enfield.—The Christmas season was recognied by the Enfield church by having a Christmas service Sunday night and a Christmas tree for the children at the Hut Monday night.

On Saturday before Christmas our hearts were saddened by the sudden passing of Mr. Frank H. Whitaker, which took place at the old home here in Enfield. He was the only living son of the late Dr. B. F. Whitaker. He had never married. He had lived alone most of his life since the old home had been broken up. A few days previous to his death he had spent a few days in the home of his sister, Mrs. C. E. McGwigan. Fearing that he might mar the happiness of some member of the McGwigans during the Christmas, he had returned to the old home just two days before he passed on into the beyond.

The funeral was conducted by the writer and the body laid to rest in the Enfield cemetery. For those who are grieved by the passing of this loved one our hearts are full of sympathy.

The pastor and his family continue to receive many expressions of good will from the people here. Our good brother, Mr. F. W. White, who in name is not exactly one of our folks here, being a member of the Eden M. P. Church, supplied the preacher's table with Christmas pork. Misses Susie and Mary Whitaker, eggs and chicken for the Christmas dinner. And Miss Mary Collins and mother played Santa Christmas morning by leaving a basket of many good things at the preacher's door. And finally, to make sure nothing was lacking, Bro. John Davis added a few pounds of nice country sausage. For these and all other kind remembrances we are truly grateful and hope to show our appreciation by the service we can render.

Sunday night Rev. F. L. Gibbs was with us and presented in a splendid and impressive way our young people's work. Although cold weather kept many from attending, yet those who were there gave a hearty response. Sufficient to say that Enfield will be there with her 'fifty registration fees' for the coming Young People's Conference in Baltimore.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

High Point.—Prefacing his inspiring New Year message to the congregation, the text of which was taken from the beautiful 21st chapter of Revelation, Dr. S. K. Spahr called attention to the fact that New Year's Day fell on the Sabbath, which was most fitting and happy. Standing at the portal, we are on the threshold of a great task and these days that are opening to us are full of mystery and full of joyous hope; we know not what awaits us, what blessings and what sorrows. Let us forget the errors and disappointments, the failures and heartaches, for "Behold! I make all things new." It is easy for us to despair in these days which have fallen on evil; the nations of the earth seem ready to spring at each other's throats; homes and families are being disrupted in divorce courts; individuals seem to have forgotten God and His laws in murder, drunken revelry, and riotous living; but how is it with the church? Thank God it is the best influence of all. There has never been a New Year Day when men were more generous and ready to make greater sacrifice for their fellows than today. If God makes all things new, He must have the whole-hearted co-operation of all those who have pledged their lives to His service. Will you help Him? Will you pledge yourselves anew to glorify Him during the coming days of 1928?

At this service Mrs. J. H. Allred sang "Repent Ye" very beautifully with organ accompaniment by Miss Mae Kirkman, and the choir rendered "Hear Thou in Love, O Lord" with fine effect. Mrs. John C. Whitesell is now the efficient choir director.

At the evening service the message was delivered by Rev. P. E. Lindley, who is extremely popular with our people, and they always listen to his messages most gladly. A mixed quartette sang "Now the Day Is Over" very beautifully, and the anthem by the choir was "Sing, O Daughter of Zion!"

On Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies met in joint session at the church. Mrs. E. L. Ballard read a very interesting leaflet by a worker, Miss Helen Marie Edick, which emphasized the conditions of living among the foreign peoples of our large cities, and more particularly in Pittsburgh, Pa., the seat of one of our missions. In our Home Society one phase of our work is stressed each month, and January is designated as the month for Pittsburgh mission. The sum of $6.40 was contributed for this cause.

Mrs. Ballard introduced as the speaker of the afternoon Mrs. W. C. Hammond, executive secretary of Board of Public Welfare of our city, and one of our own members, of whom we are justly proud. Mrs. Hammond in a very informal manner told us many interesting things of the great work which she is doing in High Point. She referred especially to the juvenile court, which is accomplishing splendid results for delinquent boys and girls of the teen age, of mothers' aid which is contributed by the state and county, of material relief, all of which cases are thoroughly examined and found to be worthy of help. At the recent Christmas time citizens of the city donated the sum of $1,400 for the worthy poor, and more than 250 baskets of meats, provisions, groceries and a present for each member were distributed to as many families. This great and splendid work of public welfare is one of the most worth-while institutions of our city, and surely redounds to the credit and generosity of its citizenry. There was an attendance of 22 members at this meeting, which was unusually good for so cold a day, and we can but feel that it is a most auspicious beginning for the tasks of the New Year. We were delighted to gain two new members, Mrs. J. T. Foister and Miss Elizabeth Welch, daughters of the late Mr. J. C. Welch, who meant so much to the First Church in its earlier days.

A social will follow the regular monthly meeting of the Sunday School Workers' Council this (Tuesday) evening.

We are pained to announce the serious illness of Mr. C. L. Gray, Sr., at his home on Lindsay street, but he is resting more comfortably today. A large number of friends are hoping for his early recovery. Much sympathy is expresed for Mrs. Gray, whose mother, Mrs. Jackson, of Groometown, is also quite ill.

Miss Lucille Pickens is spending this week with friends in Toccoa, Ga.

Classes at High Point College will resume work tomorrow morning (Wednesday) after a recess of two weeks. Students and faculty members are already returning.

South Lexington Church.—We have had so much to be grateful for during the past year. As the new year comes to us, it brings with it many opportunities, and may we each determine to take advantage of each opportunity. May the Lord be our guide, as to just how and when to grasp these opportunities. May we resolve to make this a better year than last. We can do it by the help of God. May our Sunday school take on new life. May each member make a new resolution, that he or she will try to win someone for Christ this year. We can do it, so why not do our best for the Master?

Our Sunday School is doing good work. There was a slight decrease in attendance last Sunday. We are looking forward to a good year, and may the Lord crown every effort with success.

The Christmas exercise was a success. The "Mothers' Class," with Bro. W. C. Gibson as teacher, presented a nice basket to each aged person in the community. This is a good work. It is like Christ.

The Sunday School had many who received gifts for perfect attendance. May the Lord bless every effort that is put forth for good, is the prayer of his servant.

REPORTER.

Charlotte, First.—Our reporter has been furnishing the press with the news from our church in a splendid way. However, there are some things which ought to be said by the pastor.

The membership in general received us cordially on our return from conference. Many expressions of kindness and co-operation have been given us. The new year has started exceptionally well. And our people are planning to make this the best year yet.

The holiday seasons have been observed with appropriate programs. Various causes were remembered with contributions. Local as well as denominational interests have claimed our attention. Thanksgiving afforded an opportunity to remember the Children's Home, while Christmas gave us another privilege to do so. White gifts to the King, a service presented by the church school. A Christmas cantata, "King All Glorious," by the choir was rendered on Sunday evening before Christmas day. The annual tree and treat came on Friday evening before Christmas. Christmas baskets of groceries, toys, etc., were distributed by the various organizations of the city and our church took some part in this special feature. Too, we are endeavoring to carry out the conference recommendations of observing certain months for specific undertakings. We desire here to make mention of the fact that all these special programs were well presented and we commend those who were responsible for them.

Our pounding has come in relay this time. Beginning on Wednesday evening before Christmas it has been coming in ever since. Many gifts most useful have reached us and we are profoundly grateful for them. Outside of the ordinary way of gifts of groceries and so forth, a radio came from Mr. B. W. Little, who is not a member of our church. Every expression, whether by word of mouth, by card or by gift, we deeply appreciate and wish for all a happy and prosperous life this year.

H. FREO SURRATT.

Haw River Ct.—Who said that folks always forgot the ex-pastor? It is not true with the Haw River people. We have been remembered continuously through the holidays with fresh meats, fruits, nuts and vegetables. It almost makes us forget that we are on our vacation, and feel that we are still pastor of Haw River Ct. Some good people, they are. God bless them.

Bro. Curry, busy as a bee, is getting the work well in hand. He is introducing up-to-now business methods that will insure the future success of the work. He is already getting things done. My opinion is that he is the hardest worker in our conference. The people admire his push. We regret that Dr. Johnson and his fine family are soon to go to Mt. Airy. We will all miss them. Great big folks, they are.

With kind greetings to the M. P. family, I am truly W. D. REED.

English Street.—Christmas day passed quietly here, as many of our people were out of town visiting; they are returning now, reporting a good time. But they could not have enjoyed Sunday services any better than the ones who heard our pastor, Rev. D. I. Garner, who preached two sermons that morning, first to the children on "Next Year's Life," which was simple and interesting; then he told "us" older folks how we ought to do.

New Year's Sunday School was fairly good for such cold weather, 116 present. The superintendent, M. L. Boswell, has set the goal for an average of 200 per Sunday before the close of the year. We can if everyone does his bit.

The Christian Endeavor elected their new officers Sunday night for the coming year.

The Ladies' Aid treasurer opened the birthday box for last year Sunday night after service and found $8.85.

MRS. J. A. LEE.

Bethel, Flat Rock Circuit.—We had a nice Christmas program and tree which I think all enjoyed. We were very sorry to have Mr. Trogdon and family leave this work; our prayers and best wishes go with them and we hope they will come back to visit us. Our new pastor, Mr. Pegg, has preached for us twice and was with us at the Christmas entertainment. We were very glad to have him with us. He seems to be a very promising young man; we welcome him in our midst and hope this will be the most prosperous year the church has ever had. There have been quite a number of weddings among the younger members of our church during the holidays, viz.: Mr. Troy Pegram and Miss Edna Brown, Mr. Melvin Jones and Miss Ila Parker, Mr. Donald Combs and Miss Roxie Alley, and Mr. Carl Pope and Miss Lillie Anthony. We wish for these young people a long, prosperous, happy Christian life together. The attendance at Sunday School is good though could be better, and I think will continue through the winter. Prayer meeting each Sunday night. There seems to be quite an epidemic of colds in the neighborhood.

Best wishes to all the Herald readers for a happy, prosperous new year and may we all do more good than ever before.

REPORTER.

Asheville. A good audience enjoyed Bro. Paschall's sermon Sunday morning. At night there was a snowstorm, and yet a few heard his helpful message.

He has seen most of our members, and will carry a full list with him as he returns to Westminster this Tuesday. A miniature annual conference is being held in Asheville today (Monday). President Taylor and Pastor Paschall and Bros. Casto and Cranford and Bell are having luncheon with Chaplain and Mrs. J. S. Williams.

In spite of the cold, a good attendance is expected at the quarterly conference and get together meeting tonight at the church. The affair will be in the form of a reception to Bros. Paschall and Taylor.

Two happy Christmas features were not reported last week. The primary department in our Sunday School was given a delightful party in the afternoon of the 23rd. The children were perfectly happy. The parents and teachers were just as happy to see the little folks enjoy themselves.

Prayer meeting in Christmas week was led by Bro. E. C. Fawcett. His talk was most illuminating.

Bro. L. E. Neville spent the holidays visiting relatives near Enfield, N. C.

Our church will miss Misses Elizabeth Carter and Novella McIntyre and Eudura Younginer, who have returned respectively to Duke university, High Point College and the schools of High Point.

Every one here keenly feels the loss of Bro. D. A. Braswell. His faith and efforts and prayers greatly blessed our church in Asheville and vicinity.

REPORTER.

Pine Bluff.—The old year is gone and another has come to replace it in our lives. The past has now in its bosom the sorrows and joys of bygone days. The experiences of the past can only benefit us to the extent that we are willing to profit by them.

Christmas was very peaceably observed in this community. A short program, appropriate for the season, was given at Pine Bluff.

Our church and community has been made to feel the hand of Providence in the death of two of our people. Brother Jack Barbee departed this life December 24, 1927. He leaves to mourn his loss a wife and a large family of children; one preceded him to the Glory World. Also there is a host of friends that will miss his presence here. Brother Barbee was a charter member of Pine Bluff Methodist Protestant Church, and remained a faithful member until his death. During his active life he was an inspiration to the church; especially did he enjoy and help out so much in the singing. He has now gone to join the angels in the Heavenly Choir, and our loss is Heaven's gain.

Jessie Turner, wife of J. S. Turner, died suddenly at her home here on December 28, 1927. She assisted in getting her small child safely in bed only a few hours before she died that night. She was a mother of twelve children, all of which are living. One son, who had for some years made his home in Texas, did not get to see her remains before burial. He wrote his mother only a few days previous to her death that he would be home to spend Christmas with her. He arrived two days too late to see his mother. Her body was laid to rest at Lane's Chapel M. E. Church. The funeral was conducted by Rev. J. W. Hulin, of the Midland charge of the M. P. Church. This good lady will be missed by her family and a host of friends. She always had a word of cheer for all with whom she met.

Men and brethren, let's make this year the best yet in Kingdom service for our Master. Time can only tell when we will be called into eternity; let's be prepared for that time, and meet God in peace!

Flat Rock, Flat Rock Ct.—Having been unable to attend my home church for several weeks, I have watched the Herald for news but there has not been much from there to satisfy a homesick body.

Our conference family might infer that we are "resting on our oars," but such is not the case. We have a very live Sunday School under the superintendership of H. L. Johnson. Prayer meeting is held on Sunday night. The church is active and is responding spiritually to the earnest preaching of our pastor, Rev. J. P. Pegg. He expects to move into the parsonage first of February.

We felt sure our president would not let our old mother church be superannuated for long. We heartily welcome Bro. Pegg and hope we can work together for the advancement of the Lord's Kingdom.

Plans for our new church are in the hands of the committee and as soon as the weather will permit the laying of the stone we hope to begin work.

The children, under the training of Mrs. H. L. Johnson, Misses Ruby and Joy Friddle rendered a nice program for Christmas, after which they received presents and a treat from a nicely arranged tree.

In the death of our good Brother Wm. N. Parish the church has sustained a great loss. Bro. Parish went to Asheboro to visit his son and to attend conference and contracted pneumonia and died before getting home. He was so interested in the church work and would tell me every time he saw me how much he wanted to live to see our new church built, but the Lord called him, and left the work to be taken up by someone else. He helped me so faithfully this fall in cleaning up the cemetery. As he worked he would tell me how he wanted to see the church prosper and how much he wanted to do for the Lord and how little he felt like he was doing. But he did what he could, and we believe the Lord knew what was in his heart to do and has already said "Well done" and given him a Crown of Life.

Six of our oldest members have gone home this year: John Tharpe, B. W. Johnson, Robt. Wray, John Simpson, Wm. Parish and Dinah Parish.

Mr. and Mrs. George Friddle gave a sumptious turkey dinner December 27 in honor of their grandson, Mr. Percy Friddle, who was married December 24 to Miss Frances McCollum. Mr. Friddle is a member of Flat Rock. We heartily welcome his bride into our midst, and wish them all happiness.

Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Blackburn spent Christmas day with Mrs. John Ogburn, who has been very sick with sciatica. R. L. Ogburn spent the holidays with friends in Maryland. Mr. Cary Friddle was slightly injured in an auto accident recently. We are glad he is not hurt seriously. The little granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Williams is slowly improving after a very serious operation about Thanksgiving. The friends here are sorry to learn of the illness of Early Williams, son of the late W. J. Williams.

I do not know who the Flat Rock reporter is, but I offer my apologies and I'll promise not to come again till I have some sure enough good news.

MRS. JOHN B. OGBURN.

Halifax.—On Christmas day we had our regular services at Hollister and Ringwood churches. We had a good congregation at each place.

We had our Christmas services at Bethesda church on Sunday at 11 a. m. Rev. N. M. Harrison gave a lecture here on the birth and life of Christ and what it meant to the world. On Sunday night Rev. Willie Wood, one of our young preachers who is in High Point College, preached for us at Bethesda church. We were not able to attend either of these services on account of services at other places, but the people here were highly pleased with both messages. Mr. Wood preached on the visit of the wise men and shepherds. It was the first time that the people here had had the privilege to hear Willie Wood. There was a big congregation present to hear him. Several from his own community, and Prof. Matthews and a number of the faculty of Aurelian Springs high school where he graduated, and a number of his school mates, all were well pleased with his message.

On Sunday night we held our Christmas service at Eden church, and on Tuesday night we held the Christmas service at Hollister. The program was just fine at each place, and the Sunday School children received a treat. All were highly pleased with the services at both places.

The pastor of Halifax and his family have been well remembered by the members of the charge during Christmas time. We want to thank the following for nice Christmas presents: Mrs. W. R. Neville, E. V. Neville, J. H. Vinson, Mrs. E. G. Glenn, Mrs. E. A. Perry, Mrs. J. T. Aycock, Mrs. N. M. Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Ellington, Mrs. W. A. Ellington and Mr. and Mrs. Galloway.

Mrs. L. B. Street remembered us with her part of the Bethesda pounding after we sent our report last week.

We were pleasantly surprised on the afternoon of Christmas day. After we had preached at Ringwood church and returned to our car we found it loaded with many good things to eat. Those who had a part in this were Mr. and Mrs. Spivey, Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Neville, D. W. Aycock and family, and E. H. Aycock, W. N. Aycock, I. M. Phelps and Mr. Porter.

On Christmas night we were remembered by Eden church. After the exercises were over we found that we had been remembered by a big pounding. Those who had a part in this pounding were Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hardee, Miss Blanch Hardee, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Rives, Mrs. J. R. Dickens, Miss Winnie and Miss Nannie Burt, John Burt, Mr. and Mrs. Phil Harlow, Mrs. Mary Ponds, Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Hammil, Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Willey, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Willey, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Williams, Mrs. S. A. Whitley, Mrs. Savannah Martin, Miss Lula Neville, Theodore Bennett, Mrs. Mamie McDaniel and Eugene Hammill. We want to thank every one who has so kindly remembered us during the Christmas holidays. C. L. SPENCER, Pastor.

Palestine, Flat Rock Charge.—Our new pastor, Rev. J. P. Pegg, filled his first appointment at Palestine third Sunday. The reporter was absent, but the following Sunday morning at Sunday School the Bible teacher said to me, "Why didn't you come to hear the new preacher? We have got the best young preacher you ever heard. I just love him already." The reporter had heard him preach his first sermon at Flat Rock and enjoyed his message.

Friday night before Christmas our Sunday School gave a tree and treated the entire school. The house was almost filled, and each little fellow enjoyed his bag of treat as well as the larger ones. The treat included 112 bags.

Did not have a program; after singing some songs, Supt. J. C. Tucker made a brief talk after which he gave out the honor pins to those that didn't miss a Sunday during the entire year. They were Supt. J. C. Tucker, Jem Payne, Bible class; Nannie Payne, Senior No. 1; Johnie Payne, Senior No. 2; Irene Payne, Cephus Payne, Ruby Albert, Leo Thacker, Junior class. We are real proud of the e and hope more will win honor pins next year. Sunday School going to run all winter. Friday afternoon, December 30, the first quarterly conference met at Palestine. Our pastor had with him President S. W. Taylor. We were all glad to have him with us and hope he will come again during the year. The meeting was held in love and harmony. All the churches on the charge were represented except Bethany. The pastor's salary reports were very good, while the other budgets were behind. Conference adjourned to meet in their next meeting at Gideon's Grove.

Mrs. Dolly Sharron, our Bible teacher, was sick Christmas Sunday. Mrs. Haily Anne Tucker is feeble. Mrs. L. A. Tucker, mother of the reporter, has been indisposed with colds. GRACE R. TUCKER, Reporter.

REMOVE WET GARMENTS

All of us at some time or other get caught in a rainstorm, fall into water, get our feet wet in falling weather, etc. These occasional "soakings" are harmless if the right thing is done afterward. Dr. R. S. Copeland says getting wet does no more harm than taking a bath if you do not stay in the wet garments. This, he points out, is particularly true of wet shoes. His advice is: Don't stay in wet garments. Get out of them into dry clothing. If you feel chilled after exposure it is a sign you have suffered from it and it is important to restore the circulation. The best way to do that is to take a good hot bath and go to bed.

THE PAPER CLEW.

A strange minister was about to preach as a candidate for a vacancy in a Scottish church, and the beadle asked him, "Are you a 'paper' minister?"

The candidate replied that he usually read his discourse.

"Oh, that's a' richt, then! When a man has a paper, we ken that he'll end where the paper ends; but when he has no paper, Heaven only knows when he'll stop."

Employer—So you didn't close that sale with Chandler's?

Salesman—No, sir.

Employer—What good did it do for you to take that course in 'The Power of Mind?"

Salesman—Well, you see, Chandlers had taken that coures too.

Man (to photographer)—Have I the pleasant expression you require?

Photographer—Perfectly, sir.

Man—Then shoot quick; it hurts my face.

"Hello, Rastus. How's yo' hawgs?"

"Dey's all right. How's yo' folks?"

THE EASTERN POPE

At the time when the pope of Rome is negotiating for a papal state absolutely independent from the Italian government the patriarch of the Orthodox church—the pope of Eastern Catholics—is fallen on evil days.

Vassilios III still has his spiritual authority but his political power has been completely shorn from him by the new Turkish republic. Bent with age and cares he still conducts solemn masses in the little church of St. George at Phanar, suburb of Constantinople. After many centuries of Turkish toleration the head of the Greek, or Orthodox, church has been removed from the place it was first established—Byzantium, now Constantinople.

A painting in the patriarch's residence commemorates an event of great importance in the history of the church. It shows Sultan Mohammed, the Conqueror, giving to the patriarch of the time, and to all patriarchs to come, the right of continued leadership over the church. Not only that but the sultan made large money grants to the patriarchs, whose political influence was appreciated. Thus it came about that Constantinople was for centuries the head seat of the Orthodox Christian and of the Mohammedan churches.

But the young republic expelled both the Moslem kaliph and the Greek patriarch.

Yet Vassilios manages to maintain some appearance of state in his small church at Phanar. After solemn mass at Easter the gospel is read in 10 languages to symbolize the universality of the church. The patriarch then gives out, with his own hands, painted Easter eggs. The number of eggs last time was 30,000.—The Pathfinder.

—Dr. J. I. Foust, head of N. C. C. W., is in ill health and has been granted leave of absence. Prof. Jackson takes his place temporarily.

—Rev. R. J. Tamblyn spoke to the Ministers' Association in favor of a broader fellowship among ministers. We regret our inability to be present.

—Rev. F. L. Gibbs was at Calvary church last Thursday night and made an effective appeal for the Young People's Convention to be held in Baltimore next May. He received quite a number of registrations. The fee of fifty cents will secure lodging and breakfast for five days it you go; if you don't go, it will help pay the expenses of the convention.

—A number of new uses for wild animals have been found. At Hillsdale, Michigan, a mud turtle was used to burrow through a drainpipe that had become clogged with silt; the Indians of Guerrero, Mexico, train boa constrictors sixteen to twenty feet long to kill rats, play with the children and guard the house; and in Venezuela a species of crane is used to guard sheep.

—Thermometers registered zero in Greensboro on January 2nd. In the western part of the state several degrees below zero was indicated. It was a freezing time for radiators and water pipes.

—A memorial church to commemorate the life and work of the late Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League, will be built at Little Point Sable, near Shelby, Mich., where he had his summer home and where Mrs. Wheeler was fatally burned last summer.

The folks of Haw River Circuit remembered us a few days ago with seven bushels of potatoes.

The church folks of First Church, Charlotte, recently donated us a nice box of groceries.

The Sunday School of the First Church, High Point, remembered the children with their usual nice treat of fruit and candy.

For all of the above contributions we are truly grateful and wish to thank all who had a part in them.

In my last report I mentioned the fact that the Rotary Club of High Point had given each child in the Home two dollars in cash. Now I must tell you how they spent it: In the first place practically every child in the Home obligates themselves to pay the pastor so much during the year; five or ten cents per month, or whatever amount they think they can raise; so I am glad to tell the readers of this report that this is the way they used it, by paying their church dues for the entire year. I have commended them in doing this, and feel like they could not have done anything deserving greater praise, in fact it is a good example for some of us older ones.

I am glad to report that our scarlet fever cases are doing fine, and we are hoping we may not have any new cases develop, and that the quarantine may be lifted before our next report.

Is One's Relation to the Church an Arbitrary Matter?

Religion is a voluntary matter and church membership is a voluntary matter. It is commonly agreed that the church membership should be made up of people who are voluntarily religious. If a man does not choose to be religious, he is not qualified for church membership. No one would blame a man for not joining the church if that man does not purpose to live a religious life. But still the question remains whether a man has a right to be irreligious and remain out of and apart from the church. Does it make it right to be irreligious because a man voluntarily chooses to be irreligious? Does it make it right to ignore the church because a man voluntarily chooses to ignore the church? Are right and wrong dependent on the human will or independent of the human will? Is it the end of the matter when a man arbitrarily decides that he will not join a church or will not live a religious life? What part or lot has God in human life?

We believe many people confuse the terms voluntary and arbitrary. Because religion and church membership are voluntary matters, it by no means follows that they are arbitrary matters. No man can absolve himself from the obligation to be religious and to join and support the church by any decision of his own mind. He may decide that he will not be religious, but he cannot decide that he ought not to be religious. We may set up our own wills as an authority equal to that of the wills of our fellowmen, but there is a Will that is above all human wills, and nothing we can do can free us from obligation to that divine Will. Does God will that men be religious? Does God will that men shall join and support the church? That settles it.

Men may try to persuade themselves that the church is only a human institution and therefore to be honored or not as we please, but if they will study the history of the church, if they will discern the true spirit of the church in our own generation, they will see that a man will ignore the church to his own great loss and infinite peril.

—The weather is never bad, but sometimes it is unpleasant and even disagreeable. Some winters have a long series of rainy or snowy or very cold Sundays. But this winter so far has been an open one for the most part. Since people have learned to ride in cars and learned to warm their churches, there is very little excuse for not going to church nearly every Sunday. The weather does not interfere with eating and not very much with sleeping. Why should it be allowed to interfere with worship? Gathered together in a warm church on a cold Sunday, the people should especially feel the goodness of God and rejoice together in the manifestations of His goodness which they may behold.

—Those who never retract their opinions love themselves more than they love truth.—Joubert.

Why Men Love the God of Nature and Do Not Love the God of the Church

There are people who never enter a church to worship who tell us that they worship God in the forests and fields. They are moved to worship by the sunshine and the flowers and the clouds of heaven. The beauties of nature awaken their souls to pleasant emotion and lead their thoughts to the Author of all. They love to worship the God of the fields and forests, but do not love to worship the God that is proclaimed from the pulpits of the churches.

We cannot doubt that these men are telling the truth. In the fields they find peace, whereas in the church their souls are disquieted. And we see the reason for the difference. We understand why they shun the church and flee to the forest or the field. In the church God is presented as a Moral Being displeased with human character and human conduct. In the church men are shown to be under obligation to repent and reform and live good and righteous lives. In the fields and the forests men do not hear the call to repentance; they do not hear predictions of the wrath to come upon the children of disobedience. These worshipers of the outer court delude themselves with the belief that they are acceptable worshipers. They realize not that they must "wash their robes and make them white in the blood of the Lamb."

Bethel Home a House of Prayer

High up on the mountain side in the town of Weaverville, N. C., is the institution known as Bethel Home. You know that it is a home for invalids, those afflicted with tuberculosis. Have you been thinking of this home as merely a house of invalids, a collection of people who spend their time in suffering and sighing and maybe complaining because of their hard lot? Then you must change your picture. You are altogether wrong. It is true these people are out of health, but they are not out of heart and hope. Nor are they given up to self-pity or complaint. On the contrary, they are active in sympathy for others in the world of labor as well as in the world of suffering. And they have a very active faith in God. They believe that God is trying to bless them through their afflictions and they believe that God is ready to bless the labors of men to the good of themselves and others. Hence these people of Bethel Home are much given to prayer, especially for Christian workers. They have a prayer-list of those for whom they pray daily and repeatedly. You may be surprised to learn later that they have been praying for you, that God will make your labors for Christ and the church more and more fruitful. Mrs. C. W. Bates, formerly of Weaverville, found out about this practice of prayer in Bethel Home and told about it in a Christian Endeavor prayer meeting she was leading last Sunday evening.

AN ANNUAL ASSEMBLY

By A. N. Ward, D. D.

A resolution, embodying the ideas contained in the following observations, will be introduced at the next session of the General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, to be held in Baltimore in May, 1928:

1. The Methodist Protestant Church, within its far-flung lines, has many interests and many, oft-times, differing viewpoints. This is to be expected, and cannot be entirely overcome. The church serves the people of many sections of our country, and reaches over, in its missionary activities, into foreign lands. It looks upon life and its service to mankind from many angles, and is fixed in its relationships into the traditional heritages established by the first settlers. It has a North and a South, and an East and a West, and it conforms naturally to the developed and developing traditions of the various sections where its service is given. Once there was a breach in the church, caused by the political and other causes that brought about the Civil War. Happily that breach was healed, and the two became one again. But no permanent policy of general church obligations and activities can be successfully arrived at without better understandings and a mutual give and take among the sectional divisions into which the church is necessarily divided. Nationally, in the realm of politics, there are dangers ahead which will tax the wisdom of our statesmen, and which never will be solved without good feeling and a sincere desire to understand the underlying motives which prompt the action that often comes, ill-advised, from conflicting economic and political interests. There are dangers ahead of us, in the Methodist Protestant Church, unless we can find a way to a better understanding and a greater love among our people from whatever section of the church they come.

2. As is the case among all denominations, the Methodist Protestant Church in its General Conference, held once in four years, makes a survey of its field of operations and approximates its responsibilities and its obligations to the furtherance of the Kingdom of God in the world. Its conclusions are arrived at after careful examination into all the elements that enter into the problems considered, and its findings are embodied in a program covering a period of four years, and to which it commits itself, often without a dissenting vote in the final roll-call, and which it presents to the church at large to carry out. This program, alas, often meets with indifference from many quarters; and we seem to think we have done well when we have half done our duty and when we pay out, in general benevolences, fifty cents on the dollar.

3. I venture the opinion that often the cause for our failure is to be found in our lack of understanding of our obligations to our denominational interests, and in a lack of a better understanding among ourselves as to the way of approach to our problems and to ourselves. We need education along all lines of denominational obligations and church activities. We need to be taught, through educational processes, just what our obligations are and just how to approach them.

4. From a financial standpoint, the conclusions of the General Conference are embodied in a General Conference Budget, which lays upon the church an assessment of $500,000 for the general work of the church and divides the same among the various boards of the church for the general work of the denomination. There are those who think that our budget is too high, and who think that a smaller budget, say of $250,000 or $300,000, would more likely be secured. Personally, I do not think the budget is too large. We are getting that much now, and it is impossible for us to do our work as efficiently as we can or ought to do it. With a better understanding among our people and with the application of more modern methods, I am strongly of the opinion that not only the entire budget of $500,000 could be raised annually, but that much more could be raised. Our budget is small enough when we think of the wealth of our people and the obligations laid upon us by Almighty God. A penny a day from all of us would bring in annually a total of $678,900, or $178,900 more each year than our entire budget calls for. Certainly, when we think of our obligations to missions, home and foreign; to education, for the training of our young men and young women for the ministry and for the foreign field, and for the education of our youth in Christian colleges, and for all the other fields where our responsibilities lie; certainly, when we think of what we actually give, as a denomination, to these highly important enterprises upon which the very life of the church depends, we have more reason to be ashamed than we have to be proud. May God help us to find the way to do our duty in the fields where churches rise or fall as they do or do not do what their responsibilities demand!

5. I would like to see the Methodist Protestant Church, when it celebrates its Centenary in May, make a most careful examination into its problems and into its obligations, and then, by the help of God, map out a program for the first four years of its second century that would really be a measure of our responsibilities to the day in which we live; and then put the forces at work that would bring to pass what we started out to do. We have the men, the field, the financial ability to more nearly approximate the programs we propose than we have ever done. As the General Conference approaches, I find myself thinking more of what the future demands of us than of what we have accomplished in our first century of denominational history. I am grateful for what has been accomplished, but I am more grateful for our chance to do more in the second century than we have been able to do in the first.

6. We meet once in four years in a General Conference. This is the legislative body of the church, and the most important of all our denominational meetings. In the General Conference matters of legislation take up our time and our thought, and we devise a financial budget to take care of our denominational interests.

But this legislative assembly, the highest body of the church, meets only once in four years. I would like to see come into being an annual assembly of the church for the remaining three years of the quadrennium. The assembly I have in mind would meet annually, except for the fourth year when the General Conference holds its sessions, and would be held in the interest of educating and inspiring the church in the program as outlined by the General Conference. It should meet in May, immediately following the annual meetings of the general boards of the church, and should continue in session for at least two full days. If the boards met on Monday evening and continued their sessions throughout the morning and afternoon of Tuesday, this annual assembly could begin Tuesday evening and continue its sessions through Wednesday and Thursday. The program provided for this assembly or conference should be the strongest and most comprehensive that the Methodist Protestant Church could provide, and there should be called in others from the outside to add emphasis to the importance of the program we have adopted. This assembly would not be legislative in character, but educational and inspirational; and should be open to all who would want to attend. I have one denomination in mind which holds such an assembly, and where fifteen to twenty thousand people, representing all the churches of the denomination who desire to participate, meet annually for inspirational and educational guidance. I would not restrict the attendance. Any member of the Methodist Protestant Church would be welcome at this meeting. A church could send none, or one, or all of its members. Each person attending would pay his own expenses, unless his local church should choose to provide otherwise. Reduced fares on the railroads and reduced rates for entertainment in private homes would make it possible for a great number to attend. A local committee, composed from the nearby Methodist Protestant churches, could attend to all matters of local entertainment, and a small registration fee would take care of the expenses of the program. The program should be in charge of a committee appointed by the president of the General Conference, or by the General Conference itself. This assembly should meet in the largest and most convenient centers, such as Washington, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Columbus, Indianapolis, Kansas City, and even as far west as Seattle. The largest assembly hall in the assembly city should be secured. I believe we could fill the largest hall in any of the big cities after we once got started on such an enterprise. Thousands would go, and they would catch a vision of the largeness of our denominational enterprises, and the Methodist Protestant Church would fall into step with movements that would greatly increase her power and her influence.

Such an assembly would not interfere with our other conferences and conventions. Indeed, our Christian Endeavor and Sunday School conventions could meet at the time and make a full week of it. Our annual conferences would not suffer, for we might be able to go back to them with renewed faith and energy and do better in half the time what it takes us a week to do. To bring our people, young and old, rich and poor, preacher and layman, men and women, into such an assembly once a year would, in my opinion, solve many of our problems. At any rate we would have a chance of getting better acquainted with one another, and that would be worth everything it might cost. Friendship and understanding, along with the love that never fails, are the foundations upon which the Methodist Protestant Church can best and most successfully build.

Happy the heart that keeps its twilight hour,
And, in the depths of heavenly peace inclined,
Loves to commune with thoughts of tender power—
Thoughts that ascend, like angels beautiful,
A shining Jacob's ladder of the mind!

AGAINST WAR

First, I do not propose to bless war again, or support it, or expect from it any valuable thing. It is an unmitigated curse, and with each change in modern life it becomes more unqualifiedly disastrous. So far as physical and moral devastation is concerned, it makes little difference who wins the war—victors and vanquished alike are involved in a common and monstrous ruin. War's motives, methods and results are essentially anti-Christian; no device of argument or trick of phrase can make war and Christian principles harmonious—I ought to know for I have tried hard enough to achieve that impossible task. The time to say this kind of thing is now. Let a man earn his right to refuse support to another war by explicitly dissociating himself in advance from any faith in war's methods or any willingness to compromise with them.

Second, while this attitude is important to the individual—may at any time become very unpleasantly important—it is not highly significant to the question of war as a whole. Refusing even to pay his poll tax because of the Mexican war, as Henry D. Thoreau once did, is not a very impressive act. Wars will not be stopped by individual conscientious objectors. So long as war continues at all, it will commandeer the sources of propaganda so overwhelmingly, will play on the emotions and motives of the populace so skillfully, will lie, as in the last war, so shamelessly and ingeniously that armies will be assembled and the conflict waged to the bitter end, though Leavenworth prison be filled to the garret.

The towering necessity is the creation of substitutes for war. . . . I believe in the league of nations, not because I think it ideal but because I think it the most promising nucleus of organized internationalism in the world. I believe in the world court, not because I think it a glorious finality leaping full statured from the head of the league, but because it is the most hopeful beginning we have around which to build up a codification of international law. I believe in the outlawry of war, not because I think that all the juridical agreements of all the governments on earth to outlaw war are in themselves sufficient to stop it, but because the outlawing of war is the very gist of what we are after and any approach which does not envisage outlawry as a goal and an important part of the method is in so far paltering with the issue.

Unless we can by established confidence in one another, by an intelligent organization of mutual interests, by an accepted codification of international law, and by consequet disarmament build up an assurance of security which the peoples of the world will trust, we will have another war. And then precisely how many conscientious objectors there are does not matter much. Civilization will go to pieces anyway.

Third, this question of war with its implied problems of nationalism, racial prejudice, and economic imperialism, presents the most crucial collision with Christianity that we are facing today. This generation, as history looks back on it, will be known chiefly by what we do about war, its causes and its prevention. Moreover, our present Christian churches will be judged by our children on this basis, as we ourselves judge the churches of two generations ago by their attitude toward slavery.—Harry Emerson Fosdick in the Christian Century.

FROM THE FIELD

KEY-WORDS

Optimism—Evangelism

Our mission as a church is not yet accomplished, and we may be assured that the God who has led us for 100 years will still lead on. Surely this is ground for OPTIMISM. The paramount need of the church is the spirit of evangelism. With only two converts per year as the average of all the churches of the country (I am told that this is according to statistics) surely no one can think that we are very earnest and active in the matter of soul-saving. And, with soul-saving as the one and only purpose for which Jesus came, certainly no one can doubt that evangelism should stand first in all the programs of the church.

OPTIMISM, then, and EVANGELISM are our key-words for 1928.

Zero

Zero, and below, is cold weather, even for the top of North Carolina; but this is what we found ahead of us upon our arrival at Asheville 8 p. m. Saturday, Dec. 31. The thermometer was down to four below zero at Weaverville this (Monday) morning. Despite the cold and the snow, we preached three times yesterday to attentive, though small, congregations. However, the attendance at Weaverville was very good. We were there with Bro. Cranford at Sunday School and the 11 o'clock preaching service. At 3 p. m. we were with Bro. Bell at Democrat, and at 7:30 with Bro. Cranford at Clark's Chapel. Tonight we are to be with Bro. Paschall and the Asheville church in their first quarterly conference. Tomorrow (Tuesday) we go back to Weaverville to be with Bro. Cranford and the Weaverville charge in their first quarterly conference. A part or all of Wednesday will be spent with the Weaverville charge in an effort to help with some matters that are vital to their work. We have been very kindly received by these people, and feel greatly indebted to them for their generous hospitality and their efforts to protect us from the cold. Bro. Cranford and his good wife have had us in charge at Weaverville, and today we are happy in the home of Brother and Sister J. S. Williams, with Bros. Paschall, Bell and Cranford as companion guests. After Sunday dinner, which was enjoyed in company with Bro. Cranford, at the Bethel Home, Bro. Casto wrapped me up in a fur coat, from heel to head, and with Bro. Cranford's cap to shield the tiptop of my pate, zero weather had but little bite for me. I have enjoyed my visit here, despite its cold, and for the concern of the people for my comfort, I am exceedingly grateful. In my report next week I shall have more to say about the work in this part of the state. I was glad to have Bro. Paschall as a travelling companion on my way up. He leaves tomorrow for Westminster.

Flat Rock

On Friday, Dec. 30, we were with Bro. Pegg and the Flat Rock people in their first quarterly conference, held at Palestine Church. The conference was well attended and the business transacted in harmony and with promptness. The pastor's salary is paid in full to date, and a small amount, we believe, on the G. C. B. A committee on finance was created which will apportion the financial obligations of the charge to each church, and also assist the pastor during the year in raising the budgets. We urged the spiritual needs of the church, and we expect that this, along with all of the other conference programs, will receive the earnest attention of this old and well-known charge. Bro. Pegg is entering upon his work thoughtfully and earnestly, and is liked by his people. We expect a good year on Flat Rock.

Herald

January is Herald month, and the goal for the conference is 3,000 subscribers. This is easily within the reach of our 231 churches, and is, in fact, a small expectation. The goal for each charge will be published this week. Please, brethren, push this, and let's make the undertaking complete.

A. C. B.

The first three months of the calendar year are the months for raising the A. C. B. We are very anxious that this be done because we are confident that it will mean more money for the budgets in the end. Every dollar raised now will make the closing up of the year much easier in effort and much more satisfactory in results. We need the inspiration of a few charges that will lead in this matter. What charge will be the first to help us by paying this budget in full?

College

We hope to have in our next report from Treasurer Idol a large number of charges that have paid the college assessment in full. December was the month set apart for this purpose; if your charge has not yet paid this claim, please, Bro. Pastor, make an earnest effort to get it now. The college must have the money, and there will be no better time in the year in which to raise it.

Budget Report

Because of absence from home we cannot run the budget receipts for November and December as we had hoped to do this week. This will appear next week.

Children's Home

We are urging churches everywhere to make monthly contributions to the Children's Home. About 180 of our Sunday Schools are now doing this. This number should be largely increased. The Home needs the money and our Sunday Schools need the blessing that comes from giving it. Bro. Pastor and Superintendents, get your Sunday Schools enrolled as regular contributing schools to this splendid institution.

Spiritual

In all of our thinking, and planning, and working, we must not forget that one thing is needful. If the spiritual life of the church can be intensified, all other needs will be more easily and more largely met. We are calling upon our people everywhere to pray that personal consecration, and love, and good will may abound throughout the conference, and that a pronounced spirit of evangelism may come upon the church. Surely this is God's will.

Announcements

Jan. 3. In committee meeting at Weaverville with Bro. Cranford and people of his charge.

Jan. 7 and 8. With Bro. Burgess, as announced last week.

Jan. 10. With Bro. Furr and the North Charlotte people —at night.

Jan. 11 and 12. We hope to be at Kannapolis and Spencer. Definite plans yet to be made.

Jan. 14 and 15. With Bro. Whitaker on West Forsyth, as follows: Union Hill, Jan. 14, 7 p. m.; Pleasant Hill, Sunday, 11 a. m.; Tabernacle, quarterly conference, 2 p. m.; Harmony Grove, 7 p. m. Monday, January 15, Stony Knoll, 2:30 p. m.; Baltimore, 7 p. m.

Fraternally,

S. W. Taylor.

WAR AND CRIME

Much has been written about "How to Prevent War." Nobody seems much interested, however. The fact is people want war, because war makes big fortunes. Let a law be passed requiring all men to fare alike; and war will end immediately. What sensible reason can there be in requiring young men to risk their lives, for a dollar a day, to protect some other man's money, when the other man does nothing but grow rich by the young man's slavery, called sacrifice. The instigators of war ought to be put in the front line of battle—property ought to be conscripted as surely as human life—all profit of war ought to be confiscated to public use —all legislators who think war is essential ought to lead the battle line. American holders of property in Nicaragua ought to be on the battle line. With such requirement all America, within a week, would be as peaceful as a zephyr in June.

Crime waves are just as unreasonable. When a man commits a crime, he ought to be dealt with very gently, but very firmly. He ought to know that he must obey the laws; or the laws will hold him. After a second conviction, he should never be turned loose to prey on an innocent public again. No politician ought to have the power to turn him loose.

A pardoning board, with all political parties represented on it, might be given power to parole a prisoner or criminal, on condition of some one assuming the responsibility of his future action; but not otherwise. It would cost no more to keep them under restraint than it does to run our courts, our jails, our bootleggers with their fine automobiles, and to furnish our locks and police and sheriffs and deputies without number. In fact such a system would be self-sustaining, to say the least of it.

Of course some one will say that Jesus recommended forgiveness, seventy times seven. He has not read it properly. Matthew 18:21-22: "Then came Peter to him, and said, Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? till seven times? Jesus saith unto him, I say not unto thee, until seven times; but, until seventy times seven." Peter's question was concerning one of a family—not one who was destroying family ties—not one who wanted no restraint—not a menace to society—not one who has no respect for law or order or decency. Forgiveness "has gone to seed," in church and family and state, until there is left little respect for law, divine or secular. S. R. H.

A GOOD PRAYER

Recently I heard a minister, leading the devotions of a great reform convention, include this petition in his prayer:

"Give us the sublime faith that what should be will be some day."

Let us patiently wait, and earnestly work, and set our houses in order for the coming of that day.—L. K. L.

THE GRATITUDE GIFT—HOW GOES IT?

We are far enough along now to begin to get a fairly good idea of things:

1. It has been presented to every conference in the denomination and so far as I know has not received a single negative vote. How could any one vote against such a proposition anyhow! Every conference accepted its apportionment.

2. Twelve conferences, the smaller ones, where we expected to encounter the most uncertainty, have been the very first to subscribe their amounts. Here they are; it was done right in the conference session and with such a joyous outpouring of love: Alabama, Arkansas, Col.-Texas, Ft. Smith-Oklahoma, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Mississippi, Tennessee, Virginia, Texas. Others are studiously at it.

3. I was particularly anxious for these six southern conferences which are my special work. They all made good with the exception of South Carolina, which closed its session very early and before I could get there. But they will meet their part. But I wish you could have seen Kentucky, and Georgia and Florida. Down in Florida a layman said, "If the churches don't pay it I will," and he can be depended on.

4. But the main dependence is on the seven larger conferences. They are the most heavily loaded with other things to be sure, but here is one proposition wherein no conference can afford to fail. The Gratitude Gift wins with Maryland, Pittsburgh, West Virginia, North Carolina, Eastern, Indiana and Ohio coming through in full. And they are hard at it and are determined to win. Maryland is well on the way; so is Eastern. West Virginia has been putting a fine enthusiasm into their effort with a splendid committee. Pittsburgh, according to Dr. Bromfield, will surely meet their quota. Indiana, North Carolina and Ohio are well set for their appeal beginning in February.

5. Several conferences, like Michigan, have the Gift in the regular budget.

6. I have discovered two things: (a) That one of the most fertile fields for gifts is in memory of those who have gone, memorial gifts. The Eastern conference proposes to publish with pictures where available all such gifts in their conference minutes. (b) That the status of the gifts is the measure of the enthusiasm of our pastors for it. This is the time to "bubble over." No such opportunity has or ever will come to us preachers to set our church before the world and to square ourselves with our own household. Oh, ministers of the church, get after this thing and by handsomely doing it make possible that first night of the General Conference the supreme moment of our history.

7. Now Kansas is going like a prairie fire. Each charge has its apportionment and the charge that raises the largest percentage will be permitted to name "Miss Kansas." One charge (I will mention it later on) has raised over 200 per cent. It is coming strong.

But what a picture when after twenty-six of these Misses step forward with full hands at the Lyric that wonderful night the whole great audience rises and sings the Gloria!

Denominational Enterprises

FOREIGN MISSIONS

The Detroit Student Volunteer Convention

It was my privilege to attend the Tenth Quadrennial Convention of the Student Volunteer Convention held in Detroit, Michigan, December 28, 1927, to January 1, 1928. Much time would be required and much space would need to be given if all were told that might be told of this great convention. I can only hope to touch the "high spots" and that but briefly.

The Personnel

There they were from all parts of the world beginning at Detroit and extending even unto the uttermost parts of the earth. There they were representing every class and practically every race upon the globe. There they were representing the leaders of the great missionary enterprise and those destined soon to become the leaders. There they were, the old, the middle aged and the young; the teachers and the pupils; those on the firing line—the missionaries—those in training—the student volunteers—those on the home base—the officers, the board secretaries and members of the boards. There they were with one purpose—world evangelization; one vision—world need and the churches' unfinished task; one determination—to meet that world need and to help finish the churches' task.

And what a sight met us at every service, morning, afternoon and evening. In that spacious auditorium of that magnificent seven million dollar Masonic Temple, at every session, we were met by that large group of sprightly, enthusiastic, zealous young people, from twenty-five hundred to three thousand strong, with the set purpose of carrying out that last great injunction of the Master—go, preach, win—for they too had the world vision, they too had heard the Macedonian call, they too were there to answer that call. Truly was one made to feel that here was a part of that great army which is even now getting ready to carry out the marching orders of our Christ in the next generation and thus propagate the church of the living God. Not with a gun-boat program or other armaments of destructive warfare but with the "shield of faith, the helmet of salvation and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God."

Christ Exalted

In practically every message delivered strong emphasis was laid upon the pre-eminence of the Christ. Never have I attended a religious convention in which Christ was more exalted from the platform than He was at this convention. It seemed to be the key-note of the convention. In none of the speakers was this more noticeable than in those from the foreign lands. Much, they would say, have we that is good and true in our religions, but they fall short of the full, the supreme, the essential truth; they are not good enough. To all that is good and true in any or all other religions must be added the additional good and truth that is found in Christ.

It seemed like the approach to a rediscovery of the Christ, in this day of infidelity and unscriptural teaching. As one of the foreign speakers, born a Mohammedan, so well put it: "Once Christ is born within, no one can doubt that He is the Son of God. Once Christ is born within, no one can doubt the Resurrection but that Jesus, though dead, is living—living right here among us today. No missionary, man or woman, ought ever to leave this country for the great foreign mission field unless he or she is born anew."

And Mrs. Kim, a Korean, so enthusiastically and impressively declared: "Christ is nothing but my life, my joy, my all." She accepted Christ when she was but five and one-half years old. Soon afterward her father and all her brothers died. Her mother took her to church. When old enough she dressed her in boys' clothes that she might have the advantages of school and secure an education. She acted the part of a boy well and went through school. Grown, she was imprisoned for five and one-half years, six months of which was in solitary confinement. She got so lonesome there that she began to pray and there she found Him. And to her He is now her life, her joy, her all.

Yes, Christ was exalted. Again and again it was made manifest in the convention that the foreigner, born of the Christ, is equally as good, if not a better, interpreter of the Christ than those who have been born and raised in a Christian environment. Many a so-called Christian might well go to the foreign Christian to have the Christ rediscovered to him.

THE HIDDEN TREASURE

Roy and Rae were delighted when their father and mother decided to take a cottage at Mirror Lake.

Mirror Lake is round and reflects the trees and banks just as though it were a looking-glass.

In front of the cottage, there was a fine, sandy beach where the children loved to play. Rae had lots of fun rolling her hoop, but Roy was more interested in building forts and houses in the sand. He had a little flag to stick in the top of the fort when it was done, and a small, stuffed dog which Aunt Susan had just made, answered splendidly for a sentinel on guard.

Rae could not see any sense if there was nothing inside of the forts or back of them, to defend.

"What's the use of having a fort," she protested, "if there are no Indians or enemies to keep away? And besides, we haven't any guns to put in the fort!"

Roy looked troubled.

"There are treasures inside this fort," he defended stoutly. "Way down so deep you can't see 'em. And—wait!"

He ran back on the shore and returned with some round sticks which he thrust into the sides of the little mound.

"There," he said, "those are guns, and if anybody comes around here trying to take this fort, I'll shoot 'em."

"You couldn't shoot very hard with a stick," scoffed Rae. "Let's dig a well and bring some water from the lake in our little sand-pails and fill it up."

"All right," agreed Roy, "the people in the fort might need a drink."

The children went busily to work.

"Oh, see," cried Roy, "the water is coming into our well of its own self!"

Sure enough, the sand at the bottom of the hole they were digging was getting damp.

"I wonder where it comes from," asked Roy.

Rae thought a minute.

"It comes from the lake, of course. It soaks through the sand. I know because the sand is like a sponge and takes the water up. It comes creeping, creeping along either on top or underneath."

The children waited, thinking that a lot of water would run into their well, but it didn't. So they took their pails and filled up the hole with water.

"There," said Roy, "now the people in the fort can drink all they want to."

"Oh," squealed Rae, "just look! The water is going down fast."

Sure enough, soon there was only a little puddle at the bottom.

"I know what's happening," Rae declared. "The water is soaking into the sand at the sides of the well. It runs out just as we thought it would run in."

Roy was frowning.

"If we could put some cement and stones inside the well like the one over at the farmhouse, the sand wouldn't tumble in, and the water wouldn't run out. I'll tell you what," continued Roy, his eyes sparkling. "I'll go and ask Muvver for that little piece of stove-pipe under the edge of the cottage. Then we'll put a lot of little stones in the bottom, and the water can't get away."

"Let's have the well right in the middle of the pile of sand where the fort is," urged Rae, for it is softer to dig there."

Roy looked disapproving, but he knew that Rae would have her own way, and it was going to be fun to see if the new well would really hold water.

Rae kept on digging. After awhile she stopped to rest as it was warm working in the sun. As she peered into the hole she had made, something sparkled and threw out tiny rainbows which made her blink.

She put her fingers down cautiously and picked up a handful of the fine, clean, white sand, and there lay a ring with a sparkling stone in the back of it, held by two little green-gold dragons.

Rae slipped the ring over her thumb but it was much too large. Perhaps it would make a bracelet for her doll. The sand was embedded in the prongs which held the stone, as Rae went down to the edge of the lake and washed it and rubbed it on her little checked gingham romper suit. The stone sparkled more than ever. She went back and polished it again on the fuzzy back of Ponto, the little canton flannel dog. Then she dropped it into her pocket.

The twins worked very busily, and after the piece of pipe was in place, they brought stones from Mirror Point where there were a lot of nice round ones. They stopped to throw some of them into the water. Whenever they found an especialy pretty stone, they put it in their pockets, for the little ones with white bands on them, they liked to play were money.

The water stood in the new well as they had hoped it would, and they were much pleased. By this time they began to feel hungry, and were glad to hear the lunch bell.

When they got back to the cottage, they found company, for their Auntie May had surprised them by arriving unexpectedly. They were overjoyed to see her, and were for taking her right down to the beach to see their well at once. But their mother said, "No, you must get cleaned up, for Auntie May is not used to eating with children who have been making mud pies."

"My," said Mrs. Foster as she slipped off Rae's dress, "what makes this so heavy!"

"It's my money," giggled Rae; "let me show you."

She tumbled out the stones on a chair, and there lay the ring.

"Where did you get that?" inquired Mrs. Foster, picking up the beautiful jewel.

"I found it when I digged the well," said Rae.

Mr. Foster came in at that minute.

"I believe," he said, "that it's the valuable diamond that was lost three years ago when we were down here. I'll get in touch with the Chief of Police at Mirrorville."

He went to the telephone at once.

"Whew!" he said at last, turning to the family circle. "You kids have done a good morning's work. This is the ring all right, for it has the two dragons at either side, and there is a reward of $200 for it."

"Two hundred dollars!" echoed the twins.

"How many ice cream cones and chocolate bars will that buy?" demand Roy.

"Enough to give you a lot of stomach aches," said his daddy. "But how about putting one hundred dollars in the bank for each of you?"

"I'd rather spend it now," pouted Roy.

Auntie May laughed and took out her pocket-book and gave each of the children a bright new dime.

"There," she said, "that ought to be enough for the present."

"It was a real fort, Roy," she nodded admiringly, "for there was a treasure hidden there after all."

"Of course there was," boasted Roy, "and that's why I took Ponto this morning when you wanted to leave him home."

"Roy Foster," accused Rae, "you didn't know anything about the treasure, and I was the one who carried Ponto. Now there!"

But Roy was taking his place at the table and didn't bother to reply to his sister.

"One hundred dollars isn't much good in the bank," he was saying.

"Not if it's a sand bank, young man," laughed his father. —Selected.

I WOULD, DEAR JESUS

I would, dear Jesus, I could break
The hedge that creeds and heresy make,
And, like the first disciples, be
In person led and taught by Thee.

I read thy words, so strong and sweet;
I seek the footprints of thy feet;
But men so mystify the trace,
I long to see thee, face to face,

Wouldst thou not let me at thy side,
In thee, in thee so sure confide?
Like John, upon thy breast recline,
And feel thy heart make mine divine?

—Selected.

—In the matter of personal character, the things to be most highly valued are Christ-likeness, spiritual power and wholehearted devotion to the service of Christ. When these things characterize the people of God we shall take the world for Christ. The failures and defeats that have been suffered by the Lord's people have come from their failure to be out and out for Christ. An out and out Christianity, utterly committed to Christ and His cause, will go from victory to victory. Halfhearted Christianity will go from defeat to defeat.—Selected.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Corinth, Littleton Circuit.—There were no services at Corinth yesterday as Rev. Mr. Crutchfield was away on a visit to his parents. He will preach for us Sunday at 2:30 p. m.

The first quarterly conference was held at Littleton on Dec. 13th with Rev. S. W. Taylor in charge; also our expastor, Rev. O'Briant, and Rev. N. M. Harrison and Rev. Shelton were present.

Yesterday right after Sunday School the stewards of this church met to make out the assessments for this year.

We are sorry to lose one of our most faithful Sunday School and church workers, Miss Fannie Barns, but she saw where she could be of better service somewhere else. Our very best wishes go with her and we hope to hear good reports from her at Winston-Salem.

Those visiting at Mr. M. J. Morris's during the Christmas holidays were Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Hardy and children, of Lynchburg, Va.; Mrs. G. F. Price and children, of Levi, Ky.; Mrs. J. L. Doxey and children, of Norfolk, Va.; Clifton Morris, of Lynchburg, Va., and Bonney Morris, of Davis Wagner College, Norfolk, Va.

Since our last report one of our Sunday School pupils, Sidney Walker, had the misfortune to fall from a school truck and break his hip. He was in hospital for three weeks, but has returned to his home and is getting along nicely.

We wish for the Herald and its readers a very happy and prosperous new year.

Mrs. B. F. MORRIS, Reporter.

Jan. 2nd, 1928.

State Street, Lexington.—Our Christmas entertainment was splendid and the offering was also good—$37.76. All expressed themselves as being pleased with the way the children acquitted themselves.

Our services have been well attended since conference notwithstanding the cold weather. In the services last Sunday we were glad to receive Rev. and Mrs. C. B. Way into our church here. They came from the Jerusalem Church where Bro. Way served last year. This gives us a good start for the new year and we are hoping that others who could be of real service to the Kingdom by uniting with the church here will see their way to join us soon.

We were delighted with the many kind remembrances received from old friends during the holidays. Cards to the number of 121 came all the way from Texas, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Illinois, and many in between these distances. Fruits and useful articles from California, and a number of useful articles from friends that we love inside our dear old State. We thank you every one.

The church here remembered us with a beautiful silver flower basket filled with pink carnations. Each Christmas since we came except the first they have remembered us with a silver gift which will last to be handed down to future generations if not destroyed in any way. We appreciate these lasting tokens, for in after years they will be with us to remind us of the unfailing kindness which has been manifest in so many ways.

Individual gifts came from Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Cox, Mrs. H. C. Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Lindsay, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Walser, and from Yadkin College a nice box filled with good things from Mrs. E. L. Owen. All these gifts either helped to appease the appetite or warm the body. We thank you heartily, friends.

We are planning now for an early revival in our church and in our next Workers' Council, which meets this coming second Sunday night, will decide on a date for this. We have the promise of that veteran revivalist, G. F. Millaway, to assist us. Will all who read these lines please pray for us?

We are planning now for a better year in every way and we are hoping soon to have our church finances clear up in such a way the budgets of the conference that we may get in some good work on our church debt.

If all the strong churches could see the opportunity here and the manful way our folks are working to get out from under the burden that is upon us I am sure that there would be greater effort to pay the annual conference budget so that not only this but other places that are struggling could have the help they deserve to have to make such churches self-supporting. If this church had its debt off they could support a pastor the way they are paying now.

If all our people could have heard the address of Dr. Dixon at conference I am sure that many would be moved to give to this cause as they have never been before and many of the pressing claims that are on us now would be relieved.

With prayers for a prosperous new year to all our workers,

Sincerely,

N. G. BETHEA.

Lineberry, Davidson Charge.—Rev. C. E. Ridge filled his regular appointment at Lineberry Christmas day with a good crowd present. There was also a large crowd at Christion Endeavor. After a portion of the program was presented, Mr. Winburn Hulin, brother of Rev. J. W. Hulin, of Midland, was with us and gave us a very splendid talk, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

Despite the severe cold last Sunday, Brother Ridge preached a fine sermon to a nice congregation.

Having with us Rev. J. W. Frank, our Christian Endeavor program was postponed. Rev. Mr. Frank lectured on the methods and living of the Japanese people. Rev. Mr. Frank, a missionary, has been stationed in Japan for several years.

Mrs. C. E. Ridge has been sick for several days but is improving, we are glad to know. Also Miss Inez Ridge, her daughter, has been sick, but is able to be out again.

Miss Maggie Reid, teacher of the Intermediate S. S. class, was taken sick Sunday afternoon, and is thought to have pneumonia. We hope for her a speedy recovery.

As we are on the threshold of another new year, we should be thankful that our lives have been spared, and that we have had the privileges and opportunities that we have through the past year, although no doubt there are some things we would like to be erased from our lives that have happened in the past, but now it is history; we can press forward and try to make the coming year a brighter and better year than ever before. May God help us to continue to scatter sunshine in the pathways of those who are broken-hearted, sick or distressed.

Christian people, we ask an interest in your prayers in behalf of the sick ones of the community. May we all work together in love, friendship and truth during the coming year.

Best wishes to the Herald.

ROBERT LANIER, Reporter.

Tabernacle Charge.—Christmas was observed by both churches on this charge with appropriate exercises. On Saturday afternoon, December 24, a pleasing pageant was given at Tabernacle church by the children of the primary classes. The children, attired in different costumes, carried out their parts well. At the conclusion of the pageant a beautiful tree was undressed, pastor and wife receiving a number of valuable presents.

Sunday afternoon, December 25, a splendid Christmas program was rendered at the Julian church. Here, also, the pastor and wife received several valuable presents. The people of Tabernacle and Julian have the sincere thanks of both of us for these gifts. It is really a pleasure to serve such people.

We were glad to have President Taylor with us in our first quarterly conference. Before transacting the business he made a very helpful talk, stressing the importance of cooperation on the part of every official member. His visit was an inspiration. Some forward steps were made at this conference, and we are working and praying for a good year in kingdom service.

The pastor went to Greensboro recently to visit Brother D. H. Hunter and Miss Angeline Causey, the oldest members of Tabernacle church, both being mare than 90 years old. They are loyal to their church and to their Christ. May the Lord smile upon them as they face the sunset of life.

Miss Elsie Deviney, who is teaching in Florida, and Miss Elizabeth Hanner, who is attending High Point College, spent the holidays with their parents at Julian.

Rev. T. F. McCulloch will preach at Tabernable the fifth Sunday in this month at 11 a. m.

H. L. ISLEY.

Gibsonville.—The attendance morning and evening on the second Sunday of the new year gave evidence of having thawed out from the freeze-up of the Sunday before, also evidence of recovery from the demoralized attendance the last Sunday of the old year on Christmas day.

As the Christmas season approached, we, in our church services, sang about Christmas, talked about Christmas, and prayed that we might imbibe the real Christmas spirit and also exemplify it.

The numerous expressions of good wishes though cards and substantial gifts from friends elsewhere and here, including a nice check from one of the local manufacturing plants, enabled the pastor and family to realize that it was Santa Claus time, giving a thrill, an abiding thrill, not inferior to that of childhood and boyhood days. Yet, some people say, "There is no Santa Claus."

Our real presentation of the Christmas idea was on Friday evening before Christmas in the giving of the pageant, "White Gifts for the King." This was so interesting and so impressive that for a time it was hoped we might have it repeated, but finally had to abandon the idea and content ourselves with what we had already received in the way of impression. A treat was given to the pupils of the Sunday school from the Juniors down.

A hopeful indication is that our young people are desirous, almost restless, to enlarge their activities through Christian Endeavor, and are planning to do so in the near future.

Our church is this week engaged with the other churches of the town in a series of union week-of-prayer services, in which we are praying for and discussing Evangelism, The Part of the Laity in Church Work, Christian Education, Missions, Benevolence and Welfare, Sabbath Observance, closing on Sunday night, the 15th, with a grand temperance rally celebrating the eighth anniversary of the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Our community has in store a treat scheduled for the 17th in the way of a religious service conducted in the school auditorium by "The Students' League of Many Nations," from a Training School in New York State. This is given under the auspices of the local churches.

Our people and pastor were glad to have as visitors in our congregation Sunday morning, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Summers, of Greensboro, and Mr. and Mrs. Chamblis Davidson, of Roxboro. Mr. Davidson occupied the children's period in the morning service, giving the little folks such things as will help to meet their needs. I wish to express appreciation of valuable suggestions made through the paper and by letter in response to my inquiry for help to find something worth while for the children who attend church. Any time anyone else has something to offer, I shall be glad to have it.

T. M. JOHNSON.

Siler City.—On Thursday evening, January 5th, the members of the Senior Christian Endeavor Society and a number of invited friends enjoyed a brief business meeting and a social hour at the home of Miss Sallie Smith, tendered under the auspices of Miss Minnie Cooper and Mr. Marvin Phillips. The Christian Endeavor Society was reorganized, the following officers being elected: President, Miss Pearlie Moore; vice-president, Mr. Marvin Phillips; secretary-treasurer, Miss Clata Andrew; pianist, Miss Minnie Cooper; assistant pianist, Miss Lebus Stone.

During last year the Senior C. E. Society raised in various ways $138.72. On the heating system they paid $70; for paving walk and repairing steps, $43; for outside people who assisted in entertainments, etc., $5; and Christmas treat for children, $5. For the future they have planned to raise a sufficient found to paint the church, and with the newly-elected officers we feel sure they will be able to accomplish this.

Not only has the Christian Endeavor Society been active, but the Ladies' Aid Society, Missionary Society, church and Sunday school have been wide awake as well. The Ladies' Aid and Missionary Societies have for the past year painted and papered the church auditorium, placed electrical fixtures in the auditorium and papered the windows. The Sunday school rooms have been papered and painted also, and a new rug placed in the pulpit. The church has been under-pinned and a new heatrola added (which probably has been reported previously).

The financial condition of our church is very good at this time. The Annual Conference Budget has been paid in full. The College Assessment has been paid in full. Our pastor has been paid for two months, and there is enough money on hand to pay him for the next half month. On the General Conference Budget we have paid $35.00.

We are very sorry to report at this time that our pastor is sick again. Last Sunday Mrs. Dixon filled his appointment at Liberty, thereby being unable to fill her appointment here. REPORTER.

Pinnacle and Mt. Zion.—We are now in the beginning of our nineteenth year as pastor of this charge, and these good people have as cordially received us as ever in the past years, if not even more so. For this we are very thankful, as it seems to make it much easier for us to serve them, and we trust that we may be able to do greater things for the upbuilding and progress of the church at large than ever before.

Many of our members, friends and neighbors have remembered us with lots of good things to eat, such as fresh meats, etc., also many nice presents from the different Christmas trees, etc. Three of our churches gave little entertainments, which we think did well considering the cold weather and the time we had to give to preparing the programs. We appreciate all the efforts put forth by the parents and children, and all these favors make us feel that we should try to give more and better service.

Our work seems to be starting off with the usual interest, and a part of the work seems to be taking a greater interest than in the past. The extreme weather has hindered some, but we are hoping and praying for the most successful year yet on this charge. May pastor and people have a broader vision of what should be done and be willing to give of their time and talent to carry out this vision. Let us all pray for each other, that we may live such lives as to be a great influence for good, and that many of the unsaved may be brought into the Kingdom.

We again say we are very thankful for all kindnesses shown us.

A. L. HUNTER.

Harris Chapel, Vance.—Rev. M. P. Chambliss preached at the 11 o'clock hour Sunday and also held the communion service. We held our C. E. meeting at 7 o'clock, Miss Nellie McSwain being our leader. She gave us a fine talk, her subject being prayer. Miss Fannie Smith also favored us with a good solo. Our Christian Endeavor is quite small in number yet, but we hope others will join. Miss McSwain invited all the members to her home next Wednesday night for a little social. I think it was understood that Miss Warren will be our leader for next Sunday night.

We are sorry to report that Mrs. J. E. Burroughs, one of Harris Chapel's oldest members, has been confined to her room for quite a while. We hope for her a speedy recovery.

With best wishes to the Herald and all its readers, A S. S. MEMBER.

Kannapolis.—With the beginning of a new year we are having a good attendance regardless of the measles epidemic in our community. So many of our children and older folks are being kept at home. We had a very good attendance at Sunday school on last Sunday, 46 being present. Our pastor, Rev. E. G. Cowan, was at his other charge at Fairfield. We have service every Sunday except the second Sunday.

We have a real lively Ladies' Aid Society here and are doing splendid work. We are finishing a name quilt and have collected about $40.00, and have several squares which have not been turned in yet. We are selling silverware polish; $9.00 was turned in on that last month. We are paying for a piano for our church and also furniture for the parsonage, a dining table and 100-piece set of chinaware, shades for all windows, and a bed outfit; with the furniture our pastor brought they have a very comfortable home.

Mr. Lawson Henderson was burned right bad; he struck a match about his ear and it exploded. He was burned in his face, but I don't think it is serious.

Our president, Rev. S. W. Taylor, will be with us Wednesday night, January 11. We are expecting a good crowd.

REPORTER.

Richland Ct., Charlotte Church.—We began the new year with preaching and Sunday School. We always have Sunday School through the winter months unless the weather is real bad. It snowed us out the first Sunday in December.

We have preaching service only once a month. Mr. Love preached a good sermon Sunday morning. Among those kept away from church on account of colds were Mrs. W. S. Crowson and Mrs. Love, the pastor's wife.

New stewards were elected Sunday. They are D. T. McCain, T. T. Redding and Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Bulla. The other church officers were re-elected. The stewards and all other church officers are requested to meet at the parsonage Wednesday night, January 4th, for a business meeting.

We are hoping for a better year in 1928 than we have ever had before and we know if we will co-operate and live as we ought we will have it. REPORTER.

Davidson Charge.—It is indeed a pleasure to be returned to the pastorate here for the fourth year. Our accomplishments and our failures are written in the pages of past history. While we are in the same field of labor we have entered upon the threshold of the new year 1928. The first quarterly conference was held at Pine Hill church on December 17th. Brother M. K. Surratt was elected secretary. The business of the conference was transacted in a spirit of brotherly love. Plans were made for raising finances on the charge. These people are to be commended for the splendid progress made last year in meeting their financial obligations, as the new Journal will show. I believe that this will inspire them to do fully as well this year or better.

I am convinced more and more that a church or a charge that is doing worth-while work in the Kingdom service is a church or charge that meets its financial obligations. You find a church where liberality and unselfishness prevail, and I think you will find a church where Christianity and spirituality prevail. It is not so much a question of how much we are able to do in Kingdom service. The real question is, "How much are you willing to do?" Selfishness with much can do little, but love with little can do much.

Well, the folks have not come to the parsonage in great droves to pound the preacher severely, neither have groceries come in by truck loads; but we have been the receivers of many useful articles since the Annual Conference. During the holidays the pastor and family have received quite a number of useful presents from the people here. We greatly appreciate every token of appreciation shown us in word or deed since our return, and pray God's richest blessings upon all the flock. Every charge has its problems. They should stimulate us and cause us to go forth to conquer with Him who loved us and gave His life for us.

Now that our plans are made, we must do our best to work our plans, knowing that our records of 1928 will soon be on the pages of eternal history.

Bishop McDowell had been traveling over the country for many years. One day he shared his seat in the railway train with a bright-looking young man who soon opened conversation.

After a few general remarks the young man said, "I am a traveling man." The Bishop thought of the thousands of miles he had traveled in his ministry and said, "So am I." "My line is jewelry," pursued the young man. The Bishop thought of Mal. 3:17, "And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels," and answered, "So is mine." "This is my first trip," said the young man. The Bishop replied, "I have been traveling for the same firm fifty years." "I represent my own house, for I travel for my father," continued the young man. "So do I," said the Bishop. Then the young man said, "I am determined to make good, for when I go home I want to carry father a good report." "So do I," replied the Bishop, prayerfully.

C. E. RIDGE.

Vance Charge.—I wish through the Herald to express my appreciation to the people of this charge for the good things received. Some one has said, "The message of Easter is 'Think of heaven,' the message of Thanksgiving Day is 'Think of your blessings,' the message of New Year's Day is 'Think on the passing of time,' but the message of Christmas says, 'Think of others.'" Yes, the spirit of Christmas is the spirit of good will. It is the spirit of service. This is at least a part of its message,—think of others.

While thinking of others many of them did not forget to think of their pastor. I wish to thank Mrs. H. G. Ellington for shirt, Master Seth Glover for necktie, Mrs. Lucy Basket's Sunday school class for stationery and two pair of hose, Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Basket for scarf, Mr. Stephen Greenway $1, Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Reavis $5, Mildred Jones necktie, and the writer has been informed that Mrs. J. B. Wiggins has a gift stored away to be delivered on his next round. I rather think this is a box of dry goods and notions. Of course a minister is subject to mistakes just like other men and may be mistaken in this particular case. The writer deeply appreciates and wishes for all a happy and prosperous new year.

M. P. CHAMBLISS.

State Street.—An unusually large attendance at the services Sunday marked the welcome contrast in the weather from that of the Sunday before. Mr. Lindsey, our superintendent, said he was so grateful to see almost the assembly room full when only a short while ago we organized with about 13 members.

Mr. Bethea began a series of sermons on the childhood and boyhood of Jesus. The beautiful and inspiring subject was presented in a very helpful and uplifting manner by Mr. Bethea. Many were heard to express their appreciation of it.

Sunday night the W. F. M. S. held their regular monthly meeting at the hour for the preaching service. The program was given at this time instead of on Thursday afternoon as usual, for the honorary members, almost all of whom are kept away from the afternoon meeting because of their business. A large crowd enjoyed this meeting.

Among the new members joining our Sunday school lately a very valuable one is Miss Cleo Spainhour, who is opening a class in music and expression at the home of Mr. F. J. Cox.

REPORTER.

Denton.—Due to the fact that the heating system was not sufficient to heat the church, a new up-to-date air blast heater has been installed.

The Christmas pageant entitled, "At the Door of the Inn," which was given here on Christmas eve, was pronounced a decided success. The children also did their part to make the program interesting, a very short program of songs and recitations being given by them.

There were 120 present at Sunday school January 8. We have prayer service every Wednesday evening, Christian Endeavor every Sunday evening, preaching service every first and third Sunday at 11 o'clock in the morning and 7:45 o'clock in the evening.

REPORTER.

Denton Charge.—Some of the churches failed to elect their reporters before conference, therefore we have not had as much news from Denton charge as as should have had. But the work in general is moving along fine, and we are expecting each church to report what it is doing.

So far we have not been able to arrange the appointments satisfactorily for Jerusalem church. We hope some arrangement may be made to take care of our Methodist Protestants at this union church. As most of the readers may know, this church was added to Denton charge at last conference. At present we can only offer them night appointments and fifth Sundays.

The first quarterly conference granted a raise of $200 on pastor's salary and proportioned it among the churches. This makes the present salary $1400, aside from Jerusalem church. The charge also paid for the moving expenses of the pastor and family. We thank all these good people for their support and co-operation.

Many from the different churches have remembered us with good things to eat as we pass among them, but on Christmas afternoon the Piney Grove members loaded down our car while we were in the church. It was a glad surprise to us. We will not try to mention all the articles or give all the names, but it was a good pounding for this little group of loyal workers. We thank each one of them for their gifts, and pray God's blessings upon them.

E. A. BINGHAM.

Roberta.—Rev. Mr. Short preached a fine sermon Sunday on "The I Will of the Lord." Almost everybody enjoyed it. There was no 6:30 o'clock service owing to the light being down.

Our Sunday school has started to growing now; it has been small on account of the measles.

The men at Roberta are causing things to happen. You would not know our church on the inside; we have four class rooms, ladies' rest room, and also have put up a gallery and beaver boarded all over inside. We are still planning to paint, put new carpet, and chairs for the choir, before work is stopped. If you don't believe Mr. Short can work, just come and see where you will catch him.

Louis, the 14-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Helms, died of double pneumonia at its home in Belmont and was buried Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at Roberta M. P. church, the funeral preached by Mr. Short.

Our community was saddened by the death of Brother Braswell, as he was the founder of our church.

The first quarterly conference will be held at Roberta next Saturday evening at 6:30 o'clock.

The school has not started yet since it stopped for Christmas holidays, on account of the measles.

Wish all of our readers a very successful year as never before.

MRS. C. W. W.

Pleasant Grove.—Yesterday was a good day for us in church and Sunday school. While the attendance was not perfect, yet it was good. We were pleased to note in the congregation some who are not regular attendants, yet their membership is with us. It is strange that some people are so hard to understand that when they join any church they promise allegiance to that church and not another church. This pastor has had his own members to speak to him of how they often attended a church of another denomination because it was a little nearer to their home and say, "Is not that just as good as to go to my own church?" His reply was, "When you joined the M. P. church, did you promise to support with your means and presence this church you attend of another denomination, or the church you joined?" Strong-minded men and women of fine character often do silly things in their church relationships.

While none of our members are very sick at this time, yet some were kept from church yesterday because of colds and perhaps other ailments. Mrs. B. E. Kennedy, Brother R. J. Kennedy, and others were away from church yesterday because of sickness. Mrs. Ethel Newby has also been in several weeks, but is now getting better. Mrs. J. R. Meredith's father who lives in Concord has been in bad health for quite a while. Mrs. Meredith spent the Christmas holidays and part of the time since then with him. We miss her from church and Sunday school, as she is one of our teachers. We trust the condition of her father may change for the better.

The Ladies' Aid Society held its regular monthly meeting last week in the home of Mrs. Vivian Cecil. The attendance was not as large as usual because of the cold weather, yet the interest was good. Mrs. Cecil served delightful refreshments at the close of the meeting. Three visitors were present—Bro. G. L. Hilton and Mrs. Cecil's two sisters. This society has done and is doing fine work. Our Sunday school rooms upstairs are now completed and paid for because this society took the lead in the matter. This preacher would hardly know how to carry out a real aggressive church program without the help of a Ladies' Aid Society.

For the last two years we have been having no night services at the church on Sunday nights during the rough winter months. Last Sunday it was decided to have our regular services right on through the winter, same as in summer. This was a wise decision as there are always a faithful few who keep the church going "both in and out of season."

Mrs. O. W. Cecil, Mrs. R. J. Kennedy, Mrs. Clyde Payne, and Mrs. S. L. Murphrey have been appointed to canvass the membership of the church for subscriptions to the Methodist Protestant Herald. At this church we have some who read our church paper all the time, but there are many who seem quite indifferent along this line. These ladies—like all other ladies—know how to talk, and we are expecting a successful canvass.

The new high school building which is to be erected this summer has been located about two miles from our church. The church has voted unanimously to sell our parsonage in High Point and move it to this community. This will place the pastor in the midst of his members and near one of the best high schools in Davidson county.

GEO. L. REYNOLDS.

Rockingham.—We are getting along fine with our work. We have an excellent Sunday school, even though it is not as large as we would like to see. Our attendance record for Sunday, January 8, was good. We had 116 on roll and 115 present.

Our prayer meetings on Wednesday night are still having joint meetings with Evangelistic club. We have very helpful meetings in this way. Each is a help to the other.

Our pastor has given us excellent service since his return. He has delivered some of the finest sermons I have ever heard. He makes his message so very clear and plain that any one can understand. We appreciate our pastor and wife in the highest.

We are very sorry to say that one of our faithful members, Brother R. F. Gardner, has moved away and left us. We regret to give him up. He was a very faithful member and meant much to us as a church. Brother Gardner, we extend to you a hearty invitation to come back and visit us at any time.

We held our first quarterly conference on Saturday night, December 31. The different officers gave good reports. At this meeting the secretary of the conference for another year was elected. The writer was elected to this office, with Miss Myrtle McCaskill as assistant.

At the end of the quarterly conference we held a night watch meeting. We had an excellent congregation and a fine service. The meeting closed ten minutes after 12 o'clock.

The same teachers of the Sunday school were re-appointed for another year. A new one had to be appointed for Brother Gardner's Bible class as he has moved away. Miss Evie Gillis takes Brother Gardner's place and Mrs. Sam Covington is teacher of the Bible class.

We were glad to have an old brother and wife, Brother W. T. Collins, back with us on Sunday, January 8. Brother Collins, a welcome awaits you at our church at any time.

We have our furnace in and it is doing fine work. We also have a nice room in the basement part of the church. The furnace is giving complete satisfaction. Brother C. E. Phillips, we are looking for you now. We have a nice warm place to welcome you. We also extend a welcome to any of the other brethren that would like to visit us.

With best regards to the Herald and all of its readers,

(Miss) BIRDIE CONNELL, Rep.

Gideon Grove, Flat Rock Circuit.—Our reporter has been sick and did not meet our new pastor when he was with us, but am sure he gave us a good sermon. If I did not get my part of it, that was my bad luck; for it is always bad luck for us to miss, even if we are not able to go. We may read our Bible in the home and pray God's blessings on all the conditions of humanity. But there is something in meeting the congregation and listening to a good, consecrated sermon that lifts upward and onward.

We had a splendid Christmas service prepared by our own talent. Quite a number of grown-up young people took part as well as the smaller ones, and did well. It is indeed encouraging to see our young people taking part in such services.

While we were loath to give up our pastor of the last three years, we can welcome our new one, and may we co-operate with him to the extent that he feels at ease and that he may be glad to be one of us, and may we have a great year. Pray for us.

F. J. L., Reporter.

Loves Grove, Midland Circuit.—First, we want to thank the Conference for sending Brother Hulin back. We would have been very much disappointed if he had not come back. We don't want to boast about him, but we think he is one of the best men in the N. C. Conference. He was with us yesterday, and his message was a soul-lifter. We are always glad to have Brother Hulin visit our home, for it makes me think Papa has come back to see us.

Our Sunday school is moving on nicely with our new superintendent. I want us all to stand by him, for in unity there is strength.

A new year has come with great privileges for us all to work for our dear Master. If we will only open our eyes and look around we may see what our Master wants us to do.

We had a Christmas tree at Loves Grove church on Saturday night before Christmas, and it was fine. There was a present on the tree for every one there was in the house, old and young alike, and many presents for people not present. We sent them as a token of love for our folks.

Yours in His name,

JOHN N. SMITH.

Greensville Circuit, Hobbs Chapel.—Pastor Powell gave us his best last Sunday on "The Open and Closed Book." He said that this book should contain these three things,—Bible study, prayer, and duty; or the life that practiced these daily would have an open book of clean pages. I wish it had been possible for this sermon to be broadcasted all over this land of ours.

The first quarterly conference will be held at Philadelphia Saturday before the fourth Sunday in this month. All officials are requested to be present; all others are invited to come.

May the New Year bells ring in much happiness to the Herald readers.

REPORTER.

Greenville Circuit.—Happy New Year to all! Christmas has come again and gone. Old Santa came with smiles and toys. The first of our Christmas programs was rendered on Christmas morning at Hobbs Chapel. A beautiful little exercise by the children, in charge of Miss Dora and Mrs. Willie Pair. The pastor was called upon to render his little part. A collection for the children in our Home at High Point was taken. Old Santa had arranged a beautiful little Christmas tree back in the pulpit and had spread toys and presents to gladden the hearts of little folks and some of us older ones too, for the pastor, the largest one of all, was not forgotten. A nice substantial gift came to him.

The second was at Wesley's Chapel on Christmas night. The ladies had gotten up a Christmas pageant. The wise men from the East and shepherdmen led by the star came to Bethlehem to see the child Jesus born in the manger. This was the most impressive, the most fitting Christmas service I ever attended. Old Santa had beautifully decorated and put a large Christmas tree to the right of the pulpit. A knock at the door, in stepped old Santa, a jolly old soul; this made the children all laugh. Old Santa commenced to unload. It seemed he had presents for every one; the pastor's name was called several times; for an hour and a half Santa was busy giving out his presents. When the tree was unloaded he commenced to pull out baskets, boxes from under the tree and pile down by side of pastor, things of many varieties, a real pounding for the pastor and family. The ladies said this was a slight token of their appreciation of their pastor's return to them for the fifth year. This made us very happy and thankful to serve so kind a people.

The third was at Philadelphia on Monday night. A nice exercise was given by the children. A beautifully decorated tree stood just behind the pulpit loaded with presents. Old Santa was on time but very tired; he showed much fatigue. I think he had been out with some of the boys hunting during the day. He unloaded his pack and distributed many presents to gladden old and young. The pastor came in for a share. Among the pastor's presents was a beautiful shiny five dollar gold piece from R. M., S. E.

and G. G. Pearson with the good wishes of the three brothers to change the pastor's luck for another year.

The fourth entertainment was at Mathews Chapel on Tuesday night. An interesting program was rendered by the children. A beautifully decorated tree was loaded with presents. Old Santa came in covered with snow. He must have come from the north, for we had had no snow here. He showed age and seemed somewhat crippled. He managed to unload and jollied the crowd, giving out many presents.

The fifth was at Ebenezer. The pastor was delayed by auto trouble and when I arrived the exercise was well over. I was told the exercise was very fine. A nice tree loaded with presents. Old Santa came in fully recovered and went to his job making happy hearts all over the large crowd. Here the pastor was not forgotten and came in for a share. Fine order at all the churches. I hope we will not forget the Christ and will make him real in all of our lives throughout the year. For us it has been a good Christmas. We have been kindly remembered by hundreds of our friends in many states. For ten days before Christmas the mail man brought us cards and presents, sometimes ten to fifteen a day. Some packages said, "Don't open till the 25th." For 26 years of married life stockings were hung for Santa to fill till this time there were no stockings hung on account of the little absent stocking of our baby. We could not look upon the absent stocking. Somehow somebody must have thought by so many remembrances coming to us.

We truly thank every one who so kindly remembered us at this Christmas time. May God bless every one. H. L. POWELL.

To the officials of Greenville Ct.: Our first quarterly conference will convene at Philadelphia on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in January. Preaching at 11 o'clock, lunch, business session at 1 o'clock p. m.

H. L. POWELL.

Halifax.—On the first Sunday we preached at Eden church at 11 a. m. A very good congregation for the beginning of the new year. We had with us Mr. Lee S. Neville, of Asheville, and his sister, Pearl Neville, of N. C. C. W., Greensboro, N. C., and some others who were visiting in the community. In the afternoon we preached at Union. After the services here at Union we found our car loaded with sugar, dried fruit, canned fruit, corn flakes, eggs, etc., and instructions to call at a certain home in a few days and get my chickens. We decided that it was another real Methodist pounding.

We want to thank the following for this pleasant surprise: Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Neville, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Cousin, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Lewis, Mrs. W. T. Smith, and probably some others whose names were not found on the packages.

We want to thank every one on the charge for the many Christmas cards and presents and poundings we have received. It has been a real Christmas for the pastor and family, but we had better be careful what we say, or some other preacher will be wanting my charge next fall, or even the editor will be tempted to quit his job and come down here and serve these good people.

C. L. SPENCER, Pastor.

Asheville.—Sunday was another good day for us here. Bro. Casto gave us a most helpful message in the forenoon. He told us how to forget the unnecessary things—how to "leave them behind.' Our hates and hurts and dislikes and prejudices and sorrows and failures and evil habits and sins; how that God will take all these from us, if we let Him; that the high calling in Christ Jesus should be our only goal. Sunday night Dr. A. F. Purkiss, of the Christian Layman's movement, Pittsburgh, gave us a heart-searching message on "confessing sin.' He especially interested our young people, inviting their questions and giving instances of joyous service by young people, who have given up sin for Jesus. Prof. VanMeter added much to the enjoyment of the occasion. He will conduct the prayer meeting this Wednesday night, and will continue to teach us in soul-winning and in personal living. On Thursday night of last week he led us in a delightful meeting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Meriwether, Lake View Park. There were 25 present, and every one was blessed.

Pastor Paschall left us Tuesday, January 3. He carried with him the confidence and grateful blessings of all our people. It is the regret of all that he must be away from us until May, but every one is determined to do his best for the church in the absence of our pastor. President Taylor presided over our quarterly conference on January 2. He gave us many timely suggestions. Bro. Paschall set a worthy goal in each department.

Our Christian Endeavor Society gave a delightful social after the quarterly conference adjourned. Miss Flossie Stout was the chairman in charge, and was supported by the entire society. We regret the illness of Mrs. C. C. McNeil. She has been in the French Broad Hospital for ten days. She is improving, and hopes to be at home soon. Mrs. Thad Carter is also in the French Broad Hospital. Today Mrs. S. V. Pickens' funeral is being held in the M. E. Church in Hendersonville. She and her late husband are remembered as loyal friends of our denomination. Mr. and Mrs. Roy Schreyer have a new member for our Cradle Roll. Our church here is much indebted to Bros. Hiatt and Hanner and Charnock for overhauling the furnace, and thus insuring comfortable Sundays for our worshipers.

There were several new members in Sunday School last Sunday. The C. E. meeting was very interesting and helpful. Mrs. McNeil has appointed Mrs. J. S. Williams to act as president of the Missionary Societies during Mrs. McNeil's illness. REPORTER.

Hebron, Orange Circuit.—We had a nice Christmas program and tree and I think it was enjoyed by all. Much credit is due Mrs. W. B. Jones and Misses Nannie McAdams and Velma Sykes for training the children.

Our pastor preached Christmas Sunday. The congregation was small, and the ones absent missed a good sermon.

There seems to be an epidemic of colds in the community. Hope it will soon pass over.

Mrs. Jerome Steele has been sick, but is improving.

On January 4, 1928, Hebron lost one of her charter members in the death of Mrs. J. A. Steele, aged 73 years, three months and 13 days. She was married March 29, 1877. To this union two sons were born, G. Lawrence and Jerome.

In early womanhood she professed religion and joined Hebron M. P. Church, and remained a consistent member till death. She was a regular attendant at church as long as her health would permit, and was always interested in church work. She was a good woman, liked by every one.

The funeral services were conducted by her pastor in the home January 5, in the presence of a large crowd, and the remains were then taken to the cemetery at Hebron and placed beside her husband who preceded her a little more than one year ago.

The large concourse of people gave testimony to the esteem in which she was held by the community.

She has come to the end of her journey.
Her sickness and sorrow are o'er.
She has entered the beautiful city.
She dwells on the golden shore.

Her spirit is hovering o'er us.
Her memory dwells in our hearts.
For I know that some day we shall meet her,
Never, no never, to part.

MRS. LELIA GILL, Reporter.

Tabernacle.—Our Sunday School is doing well considering the weather, but we are not having as large attendance as we would like.

A good audience enjoyed Brother Isley's sermon Sunday morning. His subject was "A Walk With God." Enoch was used as an example.

A banquet is to be given at the home of Mr. E. T. Coble Friday evening, January 13, at 6 o'clock, for the fathers and sons of Tabernacle Church. It is hoped all fathers and sons will be present. REPORTER.

REPORT OF TREASURER OF COLLEGE BUILDING FUND

Amount previously reported	$181,601.99
Mrs. Ella J. Mitchell.....	10.00
C. C. Robbins	1,000.00
R. L. Allred	25.00
	$182,636.99

Endowment Insurance Fund

Amount previously reported, $$9,012.21. No receipts since last report.

The handsome amount credited to C. C. Robbins is a payment on one of the new pledges secured by Messrs. Penny and Millikan. Our best thanks are tendered to Bro. Robbins and to others for their aid.

Correction.—Last week we made S. R. H. say, "The activity of the young people is the topic of the church," whereas he wished to say, "The activity of the young people is the activity of the church." The only excuse we have is that Bro. S. R. H. does not write with the typewriter degree of legibility. We beg his pardon.

—On January 1, 1928, the 65th anniversary of President Abraham Lincoln's emancipation proclamation (January 1, 1863), slavery was abolished in the British Protectorate of Sierra Leone, in West Africa. On that date a quarter of a million natives of "Darkest Africa" were given their freedom. Many of the slaves that were brought to America in colonial times came from Sierra Leone.

This report is made by charges and not by individual churches. It seems impracticable to make it otherwise. However, in case of Liberty and Siler City, according to an arrangement that these two churches have among themselves, it should be noted that the credits given to this charge go to the Siler church.

In the number of charges listed for budget credits up to this time, this report is highly gratifying. Out of a total of 92 charges, 49 have credits on the budgets. This is certainly an encouraging beginning, and if we can rely on this as an index to what is to follow, there is a good year ahead. Thirty-one charges report Christmas offerings, though only 14 are included in this report. We expect that others will yet report, and this number, we hope, will be considerably increased.

Henderson leads the list by a good margin, and Spencer, Union Grove, Haw River Mission, Fountain Place, and West Forsyth tie. High Point, Spring Church, Burlington, Liberty-Siler City, Grace and Orange are all beyond the one hundred mark, and Granville, Asheboro, Mebane and Alamance are close to it. We wonder which one will be the first to reach it, and how long Henderson will hold the lead, and which one of the tying charges will break the tie. We predict some interesting happenings in this list during the next three months, and we certainly feel very grateful for what seems to us a splendid beginning.

Let us urge again, brethren, that you push collections now. A failure to do this can not but result in hurt to our budget interests. And let us remember always that a praying church is a paying church. The Lord make grace abound toward us that we may respond to the financial needs of His kingdom.

Fraternally,

S. W. TAYLOR.

—Yale University's drive for $20,000,000 additional endowment has passed the goal, according to a report by the chairman of the fund, the total subscriptions amounting to $210,578 more than the sum asked, with pledges still coming in. This makes Yale, at least on paper, the richest university in the United States.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONVENTION

To every Methodist Protestant the year 1928 has a blessed meaning. Every year brings sublime privileges and golden opportunities for kingdom service, but this year brings a peculiar blessing to our people. Our thoughts go back through the years and we think of the adversities, the hardships, the persecutions of our forefathers. We think of their courage, their heroism, their faithfulness. As such thoughts as these flood our souls, our hearts fill with joy and in our musing there seems to be a great cloud of witnesses who hover about us. These witnesses bid us go forward in kingdom service with the same spirit, with the same courage, with the same faithfulness that characterized their service. In the midst of the group is Jesus, the great head of the church, and He too bids us go forward.

Of course we will raise the Centennial Gratitude Gift; we will bring more money than ever to the church; we will strive to grow daily in the grace and knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ; and the deepest desire, the great passion of our souls will be to win souls for Him. We are also looking forward with great earnestness and delight to the Young People's Convention and the General Conference to be held in Baltimore next May. May these two meetings receive such splendid co-operation from every member of our church that they will be a glorious success and prove to be a mountain top experience, where we shall get a broader vision of kingdom service, where we shall realize more keenly the world's needs, and where we shall receive power for our tasks.

But this article is to deal only with the Young People's Convention. This convention will be held in Baltimore, Md., St. John's Church, next May 10-16. Some of the most prominent speakers of America have been secured for this convention. The program is most worthwhile and vital and you can not afford to miss it. Let the slogan of every Methodist Protestant be: On to Baltimore in May.

We are conducting a pre-convention registration campaign. Have you registered? If not, now is your opportunity to do so. If you register and attend the convention, you will get free lodging and breakfast. If you register and do not attend, you will get a detailed report of the work done in the convention and more than that you will be aiding a great and most worthy cause. The registration fee is 50 cents. The registration agent for the North Carolina Conference is Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, High Point College, High Point, N. C. Let him have your registration at once! Thank you!

Rev. Lawrence Little, the general secretary of the Young People's Board, asked that North Carolina be responsible for 300 registrations. Let's get a thousand! We can easily do it. It will be of interest to note that about 200 people have already registered. Rev. F. L. Gibbs visited several of our churches the week following Christmas and met with great success. He did a splendid work and the board is sincerely grateful to him for his earnest efforts.

May every one have a very prosperous and happy year and you will be more so if you register for the Young People's Convention.

FRED W. PASCHALL, President of Board.

NOTICE TO MISSIONARY RECORD AGENTS

The missionary year is rapidly passing by, and we have just three months in which to finish up all parts of the work before the next branch meeting. As your Missionary Record agent of the branches, I am requesting each auxiliary Record agent to do her very best to secure just as many new subscribers as she can from now until March 1st. Also collect from those whose subscriptions have expired and send in. Mrs. Amos, the editor of our splendid Missionary Record, is in need of funds, and is calling on me to present this matter to the auxiliaries, and I trust you will respond as quickly as you can. If I can assist you in any way in this work, let me know.

MRS. J. E. PRITCHARD, Record Agent.

Notice to Executive Committee of the W. H. and F. M. S.

The Executive Committee will meet Thursday, January 19, at 10 o'clock, with Miss Velna McCulloch on Broad Avenue, Greensboro, N. C., instead of with Mrs. C. W. Bates, as previously announced.

GOOD FOR THE WASHINGTON STAR

Daily papers are now, and probably will be for some time to come, well supplied with gruesome details and guesses concerning the crimes of Hickman, the confessed murderer of two persons in California. The Washington Evening Star, using material on this subject sent out by the Associated Press, places a sensible note at the head of the dispatches. This is the statement:

"Certain details of the Hickman confession which today have been made public are omitted from the report as printed in The Star. This policy will be continued on the basis that with the criminal in the hands of justice, the obligations of a family newspaper are fully discharged when it prints the legitimate news and omits the revolting incidents to an unspeakable crime."

There are other dailies of the type represented by the Washington Star. Such papers should be bought and read. L. K. L.

—Representative Charles Manly Stedman, of Greensboro, N. C., the oldest member of Congress, will be 87 on January 29. He has been a member of the House since 1911. George H. Combs, Jr., of Kansas City, Mo., the youngest member of Congress, is only 28. He is serving his first term.

—The floods in this year of floods have shifted to England. Londoners have been much alarmed and inconvenienced by the rising and overflow of the Thames.

The publisher regrets that he cannot give the number of subscribers by charges. We classify by postoffices with a view to mailing. Perhaps pastors aided by their congregations can ascertain how many current subscriptions there are. Those just expiring, of course, should not be counted. Those running six months yet should be counted as halves. To the current number and number of renewals add the new ones. We will gladly correct any errors pointed out to us.

State Street church, Lexington, goes beyond its goal this week, thanks to Brother Bethea and some lay brethren there.

—President Coolidge is doing something this week that is very unusual for a President—he is leaving the United States. His trip—to Havana, Cuba, and back—will keep him away from Washington about a week. He is traveling from Washington to Key West, Fla., by train; from Key West to Havana on a battleship. He will arrive in Havana in time to attend the opening of the Sixth Pan-American Congress next Monday, January 16. He will make a speech before the Congress, remain in Havana two days, and then return to Washington over the same route. He is the first President ever to attend a Pan-American Congress.—Current Events.

—President Coolidge is not going to Cuba on a pleasure trip. He is going because he considers the Sixth Congress the most important Pan-American Congress that has ever been held. The chief purpose of these congresses is to increase good feeling between the 21 American republics.—Current Events.

—Leading statesmen of all nations are agreed that the outstanding world question is this: How can permanent peace be attained among nations?

MARRIED

Payne-Riddle

On the night of the 24th of December, Mr. Sherman D. Riddle and Miss Iola Payne were united in marriage by the writer, who is a former pastor of the bride. The ceremony was performed in the presence of only the necessary witnesses.

Mrs. Riddle is the accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Payne, of near Saxapahaw. She is a loyal member of Salem M. P. Church. For some time she has held a position in Burlington.

Mr. Riddle is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Adolphus Riddle, of Burlington, and is a young man of sterling character.

Mr. and Mrs. Riddle will reside in Burlington. H. L. ISLEY.

Williams-Teague.

On Thursday afternoon, December 22nd, at the home of the bride, and in the presence of the family, Miss Mildred Ella Teague became the bride of Motte Andrew Williams. The ring ceremony of the Methodist Protestant Church was used by the writer, pastor of both bride and groom.

Mrs. Williams is the youngest daughter of Prof. E. E. Teague and wife, of this city. She is one of the outstanding young people of the First Church, Thomasville, and is president of the C. E. Society. For about two years Mrs. Williams has been employed as stenographer in the office of H. R. Kyser, prominent attorney of this city.

Mr. Williams is a native of Montgomery county, and has lived in this city for about two years. He is at present employed by the Maurice Mills Co., manufacturers of high-grade hosiery.

It was the pleasure of the writer to receive both of these young people into our church, and they carry with them the good wishes of both pastor and people.

J. L. TROLLINGER.

Harris-Ballard

At five o'clock on Friday afternoon, December 23rd, Miss Sally Ballard became the happy bride of Grant Harris, the ring ceremony of the church being used by the writer. This ceremony was performed at the parsonage of the First Church, of Thomasville, in the presence of only a few friends.

Mrs. Harris is the daughter of Mrs. Blanche Ballard, of this city, and a member of our church, having united since the writer became pastor. Mr. Harris is the son of Mr. Hammett Harris, one of the charter members of the First Methodist Protestant Church in Thomasville, of which church Grant is a member. They will make their home at the old Harris home place, on Warner and Wood street. J. L. TROLLINGER.

Gordon-Dorsett

A wedding, which came more or less as a surprise, was that wherein Raymond Gordon took Miss Corrie Dorsett, our Junior C. E. superintendent and teacher in the Beginners Department, as his bride. Of course we thought they would marry, but never did we think it would happen just when it did. Coming to the parsonage about 4:30 in the afternoon of December 24th, and in the presence of only a few friends we used the ring ceremony, and pronounced them husband and wife.

Mrs. Gordon is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Dorsett, and a grand-daughter of the late Hammett Harris, of our church and city. She is loved and respected by all who know her.

Mr. Gordon is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ivey Gordon, of Fullers, N. C., and for some time has been holding a position with the Thomasville Chair Co. of this city. They will make their home with the bride's parents on Julian Avenue.

J. L. TROLLINGER.

Butts-Fuller.

In the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. O'Briant, Rosemary, N. C., Dec. 31st, 1927, Mr. Edward F. Butts, of Littleton, N. C., and Miss Addie Pauline Fuller, of Rocky Mount, N. C., were united in marriage, Rev. J. B. O'Briant officiating. J. B. O'BRIANT.

THE M. P. C. G. G.

A case of "flu" has kept me in the bed for the last three days, and I am writing this sitting up in the bed. I am doing it that the matter of our share in the M. P. C. G. G. may be kept before our attention.

The time is almost upon us to put the actual campaign on in our local churches.

See report of special committee on page 48 of new conference journal; or see same report on page 5 of the Methodist Protestant Herald.

In that report the conference said: "We designate February as the time when our churches shall receive the gifts of our people for this purpose." The conference also said: "We recommend that each of our churches be requested to appoint centennial committees who shall co-operate with the pastor in presenting the matter to our people. That the pastors be expected to preach centennial and denominational sermons, and in every way prepare the minds and hearts of their members for this presentation."

Pastors and Delegates Please Note.

Pastors and delegates will please note this conference action and proceed to appoint the committees in local churches and to get their people in readiness for this appeal.

It is an appeal for a gratitude gift to God for His blessings and His leadings upon the Methodist Protestant Church for 100 years.

February the Month.

We are directed to put on this campaign in February, and we are hoping it will be finished in February.

All stations should finish it on the first Sunday in February.

And all larger circuits should plan to finish the campaign on that Sunday in February when your pastor visits your church.

Surely this is one cause to which every member will contribute.

The child, the youth, the middle-aged and the aged surely will all bring their gifts, be they small or large, and lay them upon the altars of our beloved church in gratitude to God.

Take Pledges?

Yes, take pledges, but take them with the understanding that they are to be paid by April 1, 1928. Mr. J. D. Ross, Asheboro, N. C., is campaign director for the North Carolina conference. So as soon as your church has subscribed its quota, get word to Mr. Ross, and we will keep the matter in the Herald in the order reports are received in his office.

Send all money for this fund to Mr. J. D. Ross, Asheboro, N. C.

Let's make a record job of this. We can do this during February, 1928, if we will. Come on, let's say, "We can do it during February, and we will." To do this every pastor, every Sunday School superintendent, every steward, every delegate, and every Methodist Protestant who loves the Lord, and who is loyal to his church will have to get busy.

The Methodist Protestant Church was organized in Saint John's Church, Baltimore, Maryland, in May, 1828, and will celebrate the centennial of its organization at its General Conference session to be held in Saint John's Church, Baltimore, in May, 1928.

OUR CENTENNIAL

At Saint John's Church in Baltimore
By old Atlantic's stormy shore,
'Twas eighteen-twenty-eight in May,
When a band of freemen knelt to pray
For guidance in a cause most dear,
For wisdom and a vision clear,
To Him who sacrificed and gave
A perfect life a world to save.

And while they thus our King adorn
Our dear old M. P. Church was born,
And we, with all our joys and cares
Are living answers to those prayers;
How thankful then we all should be
That by God's love we were made free;
Then shall we not this very day
Even as they just kneel and pray—

Dear Father, thru thy loving grace,
Our fathers' prayers gave us a place
Where we can serve and worship thee
In a land by sacrifice made free;
O keep us faithful since they've gone
As we thy will still carry on
'Til that grand time in glory when
By thy great love we meet again.

For all the blessings of these years,
Dear Lord, we thank thee thru our tears;
With gratitude our gifts we'll bring
And place them at thy feet, O King!
When once again we kneel and pray
In nineteen-twenty-eight in May
At Saint John's Church in Baltimore
By old Atlantic's peaceful shore.

F. E. STOTTLEMIRE.
Cambridge, Ohio.

Knowing Bro. Stottlemire at Cambridge, Ohio, and knowing his purpose in writing the above poem for our Sunday School literature, I have taken the liberty of quoting his splendid poem in this connection.

May God bless in this worthy undertaking while 28,000 Methodist Protestants in North Carolina co-operate in doing this one thing during February.

"They Presented Unto Him Gifts"

"Give and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom."

God bless and direct all of us.

Faithfully yours,

—A telegram received last Saturday from Hon. Michael Schenck, of Hendersonville, reported that Mrs. S. V. Pickens died that morning and would be buried on Sunday. Her husband, Col. S. V. Pickens, died some years ago. We knew both and esteemed both highly.

—The Prohibition Amendment will be eight years old January 16. It is proposed to celebrate the anniversary in an enthusiastic way. We must not allow ourselves to depend too much on the prohibition law, expecting it to accomplish what no mere law can accomplish, and on the other hand we must not underrate the power and value of the law. The law is an engine that can do great things if properly manned and used. Let us thank God for the law and pray to him for courage and wisdom to use the law effectively.

—North Carolina to the front again! The policeman who arrested Hickman in Oregon was born in North Carilina. That is better than if Hickman had been born here.

—A gas explosion in an Illinois mine destroyed the lives of more than 20 miners. Mining is a hazardous occupation. The miners ought to have our regard. Think of the widows and orphans caused by this one accident.

—American production of cotton goods is running 23 per cent greater than last year.

"Evolution Disproved"

Many people have become sick and tired of the evolution discussion. They have no great interest in the question as to how God produced the world. However it was, they feel that it was all right, and they are not curious to know the precise way, and have a feeling that they could not understand the way even if it were explained to them. It is one of the deep things of God which they are willing shall remain unknown throughout the present life. But the chief reason for a revulsion of feeling against the discussion is in the spirit and temper of those engaging in the discussion. So-called scientists show anything but a scientific spirit in their utterances on this subject. They show a temper which utterly disqualifies for the discovery or perception of the truth. And many of those who oppose the evolutionists do so in a similar spirit. Because of the unfairness of the "scientists" who are propagandists and not scientists and because of the spirit and temper shown by many who oppose the doctrine of evolution, many people have turned a deaf ear to the whole discussion. They do not want to read or hear about it further.

The editor confesses that he sympathizes thoroughly with those who have become disgusted with the discussion of evolution. The thought of descent from inferior beings is not so repulsive as the spirit shown by members of the human race in their controversy with each other. We heard of two old people in Michigan who quarreled with each other as to which was better prepared to die; the old man insisted that he was, the old woman that she was. This quarrel over evolution seems similarly out of place.

Yet it is a subject that will not down because some people become tired of it. It has moral implications if it has no bearing on any practical art of civilization. There is a vague notion that evolution displaces design and therefore tends to atheism. This is false, of course; but people must be guarded against the fallacy, and somebody must face the question and speak the truth.

We have received a new book, entitled "Evolution Disproved," which gives us a new interest in the controversy. Heretofore it has been thought sufficient to say the burden of proof is on the evolutionist. Until he proves his hypothesis, the hypothesis can be ignored. Logically that is correct, but psychologically it fails. An unproved hypothesis may do much of the work of a proved one because many will accept it as proved and proceed to draw the consequences. The vast harm done by the corollaries of evolution demands that something be done to overthrow the hypothesis. The author of this new book, Rev. W. A. Williams, D.D., former president of Franklin College, Ohio, has thought it incumbent on the friends of truth to show the falsity of evolution as applied to man, and in this book he has produced a series of arguments the force of which it will be hard to evade. We heartily recommend this new book to all interested in the question. It is a live book from beginning to end. Send one dollar to the author, 1202 Atlantic Ave., Camden, N. J., and he will mail you a copy, or two copies if you will agree to become agent for the sale of the book. It is a book of 125 pages with not a dull page in it.

The Sabbath Was Made for Man

Yes, it was! Made for man's use, not his abuse. It is not an extra day given to man to be used as he pleases, but an extra day to serve a purpose in the Creator's mind that the other six days can not serve so well. We may say the Sabbath was given to man to serve a higher purpose than the six days of toil can serve. The six days of labor contribute to man's material support and are sufficient for that. But God saw in man a need greater and higher than his need of food and raiment. This greater and higher need of man's nature demands for itself a special day and God gave it in instituting the Sabbath. The purpose of God in instituting the Sabbath determines the proper use of the day. No man can prostitute the Sabbath to selfish personal uses and justify himself by quoting Jesus' statement that the Sabbath was made for man. God's special purpose in making the day must be recognized in accepting and using the day. The Sabbath was a great gift of God to man, we realize when we come to appreciate the spiritual purpose of the gift. If we regard the Sabbath as simply so much time thrown in for the kinds of labor we are accustomed to perform on the other days of the week, it does not appear to be a very great gift.

The divine purpose of the day it is that sanctifies the day and makes it holy. If we forget God and His thought and purpose for us, we cannot remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy. The Sabbath is a sanctuary, it is a spiritual refuge, it is a realm of growth for the soul. If the Sabbath is not promoting the moral life, it is not being properly kept. It must be not only a day of physical rest but a day of spiritual exercise and growth. If we will walk true to God's purpose in giving us the day, we will find ourselves developing keener spiritual insight and more active sympathies for those who need our help.

Let us beware of desecrating this holy day by using it as we use the other days of the week—merely to minister to our bodily needs. Instead of desecrating the Sabbath, let us rather consecrate part of every day to the same noble uses that God had in mind when He gave us the Sabbath.

—Instead of the usual sermon last Sunday night Calvary Church had a service of song. This was conducted by Pastor Bates who gave some account of the songs used, all of which were written by Charles Wesley. Some were sung by the choir only or members of the choir; in the case of others the congregation was asked to join in the singing. The service called together more people than does the usual service.

ROBBERS OF OUR COUNTRY'S GREATEST ASSET!

By Georgia Robertson

Have you heard the story of the man who had been a helpless invalid for twenty long years, his food even having to be placed in his mouth for him. In mild weather friends wheeled his bed out under the trees before going to work, and there he would lie all day. He was horrified one day to see a snake coiled on the topmost branch directly above him. Slowly it uncoiled and dropped to the next lower branch, then to the next lower, until it hung by the tip of its tail right over him. In an instant had dropped where he had been lying! But he was running down the road! He had received such a powerful incentive to act that new strength went surging through those flabby, paralyzed muscles and he sprang in terror and fled to safety.

"Nothing is ever accomplished without an adequate incentive." We may not be conscious of the incentive without careful search; nevertheless it is the motive power which prompts, or stays, our every act.

Recall what you did yesterday. The incentive may have been provision for the necessities, comforts, or luxuries of life; love of friends or humanity; sense of duty; or force of habit which "binds us with cords of steel for woe or weal"; love of power or position; fear; hatred; vanity; jealousy; anger; selfishness. Deeper down there was a more powerful incentive that had laid the foundation of your character, developing these better traits and curbing the baser ones. That power is belief in God and in a hereafter.

This same powerful incentive sustained our country through many dark days when nothing else could have sufficed, and enabled the founders of our nation and their successors to carry on. That incentive, a firm belief in God and in a hereafter, is the greatest asset of our nation.

Can your imagination paint, or even your mind grasp, what the result if successful would be of that regularly chartered organization in New York whose purpose is said to be to "put over" atheism in the United States, and to undermine the churches? This society is the "American Association for the Advancement of Atheism," or "The 4 A's," as they call themselves. It was only chartered in November, 1925. An earlier effort to secure a charter had been unsuccessful: but power and influence, according to reports (World's Work, May, 1927, page 18), were brought to bear on the judges until at last they yielded and granted the charter, unnoticed by the public. Already it is said to have branches organized in 20 of our colleges and universities all the way from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Canada to the Gulf! They are also working in the high schools and in the Canal Zone, in Alaska, and on the United States steamships (the U. S. S. Whitney, a destroyer tender) in the Navy. (World's Work, May, 1927, page 19). Those at the head of the organization are surprised at their success and say it is going to be much easier than they supposed.

No church is tolerated by them, whether Protestant, Catholic, Jewish or Christian Science.

They are constantly agitating through their literature the following: to do away with chaplains in the Army and Navy, in Congress, and in state legislatures; to prevent the Bible being read in the public schools, also its use in administering an oath; to do away with the Christian Sabbath, and Christian morality, and to put natural morality, as they call it, in its place with "equal rights and impartial liberty"; and take "In God we trust" off our coins.

They publish their own large, flourishing weekly paper, The Truth Seeker. They work quietly. They find a person who does not believe in God and who is willing to work against the churches, and give him special training to help carry on the work of organizing societies, and influencing others to become atheists; or get him to distribute their literature of which they have an enormous variety, for both young and old, with illustrations ridiculing God and sacred things.

There have been a very few outstanding persons in the history of our country who claimed disbelief in God and in immortality; but never before has there been as much interest manifested in the spread of atheism. They claim in this country they have no connection with politics but accept persons of every political belief in order not to hamper the spread of atheism. There are and have been for some time, we are told, regular Bolshevist Sunday Schools teaching Bolshevism to our little children.

Many of the young people of today present a fertile field for this kind of propaganda. The lack of parental supervision; freedom to do as they please; their jazz; their motor cars; their cigarettes; their contempt for modesty and conventionality; their restlessness and desire for self-expression, and to shock their elders; and for some new sensation, some new thrill, certainly make them susceptible to the teaching of this organization. In the Junior Atheist Leagues they have debates on various subjects, such as marriage, which some already scoff at and would abolish. The boys and girls discuss marriage relations freely with each other.

They are encouraged in selecting such names for their societies as "God's Black Sheep," "The Damned Souls," "The Circle of the Godless," "The Legion of the Damned," "His Satanic Majesty."

These Junior Leagues are for those from 7 to 17. They have picnics, outings and entertainments. Those over 12 receive instruction in oratory from their orator.

There is also an Anti-Bible Society organized in New York City. Its object is to discredit the Bible. They plan this year to spend $83,000.00 in tracts and literature that is anti-Biblical.

In less than ten years from now the boys and girls in our high schools and colleges will, to a very great extent, influence the policies and make the laws governing our country. What will the trend of those policies and laws be if those making them have no belief in God and a hereafter, and declare that "this life holds all there is, so get all you can out of it."

Would you like to live in such a country? Would you feel that life and property were safe? Would you like to bring up your children in such an atmosphere? Would you feel public officials who had no belief in God or in a hereafter would be true to their trust if pressure were brought to bear on them? Would you feel that justice and fair dealing would prevail in our courts?

We are told that the people have a right to protest against the formation or continuation of charters for atheistic, bolshevistic, or radical organizations which will undermine the government.

The list of the colleges and universities in which the "4 A's" are said to have regular organized societies for the advancement of atheism contain names of those that were founded by various church denominations, and also names of many state universities for which the funds for building and maintaining were, and are, raised by public taxation. What right have state legislatures to allow atheism to be propagated in institutions of learning supported by public taxation?

We are also told that the atheists have quietly "planted" atheistic teachers and professors in our public schools and higher institutions of learning. It is also said that student atheistic clubs sometimes meet in the homes of the professors.

Miss Christine Walker is represented in the Herald Tribune of September 18 to have said, "We shall make a poll of the schools and institutions in the country to determine how many atheists and agnostics there already are, and then send literature to them, showing what religion really is. Of course, we work secretly in many cases, because if we didn't we'd be stopped off short."

How much thought and attention are people of great wealth giving to finding out just what the trend of teaching is in those colleges and universities to which they are contributing such magnificent gifts? Might they not discover that they are "financing their own ruin" in many cases, if instructors in those very institutions are teaching atheistic and bolshevistic principles. Would it not be worth while for those who help support these institutions of learning either directly by their gifts or indirectly by state taxation to investigate the matter and find out. Should not the trustees of institutions of learning be informed in no uncertain tone that atheistic and bolshevistic teachings among the students would not be tolerated, and also should not a movement be started for weeding out the teachers and professors who have a baneful effect on the youth in these institutions. Will you call this to the attention of the church organizations and clubs to which you belong?

It is quite enlightening to see a chart showing the interlocking directorates of many nationally known organizations with those of pronounced destructive socialistic organizations! This interlocking should be rectified by those organizations themselves if they hope to retain the confidence and financial support of Christian and patriotic persons.

Belief in God and in a hereafter was, and is, the very foundation stone of our government.

Will you sit idly by and do nothing, or will you tell others who may not know of these conditions and try to arouse them? Let every one of us do our part to stop this fight against our God and our country.

CALL TO WORLD DAY OF PRAYER
February 24, 1928

There is something very inspiring in the thought that on February 24, 1928, we may have fellowship with those of virtually every country under the sun, who love Christ and whose dominating purpose is to establish His Kingdom throughout all the earth. For many years the women and girls of the United States and Canada have had this annual fellowship of prayer, but a year ago for the first time was the circle widened to include the whole world, and the invitation sent to other lands was accepted with keen joy.

In 1927 the day was observed in rural, town, and city communities of every state in our country. Women and girls of many races joined in these union meetings. Some communities held special meetings for children to pray for the children of the world.

From Kobe, Japan, where one of the many meetings in Japan was held, came the word, "Praying for the needs of the whole world brought a new vision of the privilege and power of prayer to our women." From far off Tenghsien, China, they wrote: "I imagine we were the first to start the Day of Prayer. Japan and Korea got the sun before us, but we began long before the sun. When I entered the church at 5:00 a. m. the pastor was already there upon his knees on the brick floor in a cold church. About 100 attended this service." Pastor Ding-Li-Mei, China's great man of prayer, led one of the many meetings held in that country. Fine publicity was given to the day by the Chinese press.

Many groups met under the hot tropical sun of Africa—not only in coast towns but in interior villages where little or nothing has been known of the outside world.

The women of Syria, India, Burma, South America, Mexico, Europe, and many other lands joined the hosts of those who fellowshipped around one common mercy seat, praying that the Kingdom of God might come in fullness.

If you have not yet secured your supplies, lose no time in doing so. Program, $1.75 per 100; "Call to Prayer," free; retreat, 10 cents; seal, $1.75 per 1,000, 25 cents per 100. All should be ordered from your denominational mission board headquarters.

"Hurryitis"

In some verses written by Mr. Grenville Kleiser which we print elsewhere we have an impressive warning against the disease known as "hurryitis." But it is a disease that rarely yields to warning and reason. It is a sort of distemper that seems to have to run its course and it usually leads to disaster if not death before its course is run. But if it is an incurable disease, there is the greater reason for warning men against contracting it. It is a preventable disease, fortunately. But in order to ward it off, we must be on our guard and avoid the course that leads to the disease.

This disease fully developed is a great fever, burning out the life. The man afflicted with it cannot rest. He may try to take a vacation and relax his nerves and his brain, but the habit is too strong; the over-excited nerves drive back to work and on to death. The victim all too late realizes his danger. He sees the falls before him and is horrified, but he can find no deliverance from the destruction just ahead.

How do men get into this dreadful state of unrest? They do it in pursuit of something they deem of great value. Often it is in a race for wealth. They have an exaggerated conception of the value of riches. They do not see the truth Jesus declared, that a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of things he possesseth. Other goals that stimulate men to mad pursuit are fame and position. Every mad chaser after unworthy ends has the disease. O if men would only stop and think before they dash away in pursuit! Reason, the great guide, is ignored and men yield to passion which leads on to disaster and death.

—President Coolidge in his speech in Havana, Cuba, last Monday stressed two points especially: First, that the American republics are free and should be careful to preserve their freedom, their democracy; second, that they are dwelling in peace and should maintain their peaceful relations. Evidently the President does not regard our part in Nicaragua troubles as a violation of peace. There are two opinions about that, however. We are reminded of what an old writer said regarding the Roman conquest of some parts of England: "They lay a country desolate and call it making peace."

OPTIMISM | FROM THE FIELD | EVANGELISM

Our report of the work beyond the Blue Ridge was only partial, as our visit there had not been completed when the report was sent in.

On Monday night, January 2, we were with the Asheville church in their first quarterly conference. A goodly number were present, and the business of the conference was promptly and harmoniously transacted. The trustees were instructed to either repair the old furnace or install a new one. Pastor Paschall was present, and outlined in his report a splendid program for the year's work, all of which the conference heartily adopted. He has already won his way to the hearts of the people, and will, no doubt, have their earnest support when he returns in the spring to take up the work. His zeal and optimism for the work is running high. Rev. J. S. Williams, the Good Samaritan of Asheville, and one of the best known citizens of the city, is deeply interested in the church, and is doing all possible to keep the work going until Bro. Paschall can come to the field. A Pulpit Committee is making arrangements for services twice each Sunday. Perhaps the one thing that is being stressed most in the church at this time is evangelism. This is a hopeful sign. We expect a year of earnest endeavor and gratifying results at Asheville.

On Tuesday we returned to Weaverville and met with this charge in their first quarterly conference at Mt. Zion Church. Despite the cold weather, the conference was well attended, and full of interest, both from the standpoint of spirit and of business. Monthly offerings are to be made by all of the churches to the Children's Home, and the assessment for college is to be promptly paid. The budget was apportioned to the different churches, and a committee on finance created. The conference agreed, also, to make an earnest effort to pay the pastor at least three-fourths of his salary each month. The spiritual needs of the church were emphasized, and this, along with all of the conference programs, will have the earnest attention of this charge.

On Wednesday night a meeting was held at the parsonage in Weaverville to discuss consolidating Weaverville church and Clark's Chapel. Each church was well represented, and after an earnest and prayerful consideration of the matter the committee decided to recommend the merging of the two churches. Each congregation will vote on the matter, and if it is approved, a new building will be erected midway between the two churches. In that case Clark's Chapel will be retained as a funeral chapel and burying ground. This seems to us a necessary and a hopeful movement; we feel deep concern for the outcome. Pastor Cranford and his family are popular with the people, and if this merger carries, we believe that it will mark the beginning of a new era for our church beyond the ridge.

Bethel Home

It was our privilege, while on this trip, to visit Bethel Home. Bro. Casto is doing a splendid and commendable humanitarian work here, and doing it in the name and the spirit of Jesus. We most earnestly commend this institution to the hearty support of our people.

Alamance

On Saturday and Sunday, January 6-7, we had a very delightful visit with Bro. Burgess and the people of his charge. At 11 a. m. Saturday we preached at Center Church, and after dinner, which was served on the church grounds, the first quarterly conference convened. Bro. Whitehead—I am sorry that I do not have his initials—was elected secretary for the thirty-fourth consecutive year—a very worthy tribute to his worthiness and efficiency. This was decidedly one of the best quarterly conferences that we have ever attended. Each of the four churches was represented, and some of them largely so. The business that was transacted, and the spirit in which it was done, bespeaks a year of gratifying progress for this charge. The budget was apportioned to each church, and readily accepted. The per capita assessment for all purposes was found to be but $5.00. Plans were made to distribute this to the membership of the different churches. We are highly hopeful that every dollar will be raised. The expense of the delegate to the annual conference was ordered paid. On Sunday morning we attended Sunday School at Center and preached again at 11 a. m. At the close of this service the people were given an opportunity to contribute to the college assessment, and in a few minutes it was overpaid.

In the afternoon we were at Bethel for preaching service at 3 o'clock. Here the balance on the college assessment was raised, and also amount for representatives' expenses to general conference. Bro. Herbert Foust, the efficient steward at this church, announced that most of their A. C. B. was in sight. The charge is considerably behind on pastor's salary, but the brethren assured us that they would not let their pastor get much thinner. We suggested a motto for this charge—FIRST. They head the counties of the state; they are first in the list of conference charges; and we are confident that they can be first in all conference programs. Our eye is on Alamance. Pastor Burgess is popular with his people, and we expect this to be a banner year for this charge.

Fountain Place

It was our good pleasure to be with this church Sunday night, and to renew the pleasant fellowships of recent years. The congregation was gratifying in numbers and pleasing in interest. This is a faithful and heroic band, and Pastor Loy has their earnest support in his wise and zealous leadership. They had a very encouraging growth last year, and we are hopeful of another year of steady progress. Burlington is regarded by outsiders as one of the best of the small cities of the state. It is a growing community, and our church must keep pace with the progress. It should be easy for us to expand here. Over a hundred Methodist Protestants are living in Burlington, and holding their membership elsewhere. Every year increases this number. Surely we can have two strong churches in a community like this, full of our people, and surrounded by Methodist Protestant territory. But we must help Fountain Place. The people there have incurred heavy financial obligations in their efforts to go forward, and the conference must help them wtih this obligation for a few years. This church is destined to become a leader in our conference.

Herald

All of the charges now have the allotment for subscription increase to HERALD, and we trust that earnest attention is being given to this matter. A reading church will be an interested and a responsive church. Circulating the HERALD is big business. Push it, brethren. And report to the editor as your allotment is raised. It will be interesting to have the list published. Urge our people to take the Methodist Protestant also. This is a great paper, and our conference should give it larger support.

Gratitude Gift

This matter is soon to be before us. The committee is maturing plans for raising the amount allotted to our conference—$12,000. Every one, of course, will want a share in this, not as an obligation, but rather as a privilege. When the committee is ready with the plans for raising this allotment, let's let them know that 28,000 Methodist Protestants are ready with heart, hand, and pocketbook.

Conference Maps

Several subscribers have not yet gotten the conference map. Let us attend to this, brethren. Unless these maps can be delivered to the subscribers, the balance due the printers will have to be paid out of the budget. But we subscribed for them, and of course we expect to take the number that we ordered. We are asking Bro. J. L. Trollinger to continue to handle the map. Please address him at Thomasville, N. C.

Report Blanks

These will be in the hands of the pastors by the 25th of this month. They should be returned not later than the 5th of February. The brethren will help us by being prompt.

Music Committee

This committee will find an important recommendation on page 56 of the Journal, paragraph 5. We shall no doubt hear from them very soon. Music is an important factor in worship, and all help given in this direction will serve a most necessary and worthy purpose. We trust that this committee may be able to render valuable service.

A. C. B.

Please, brethren, press this during these three months, January, February and March. To get this out of our way will mean much for the remaining months in budget receipts. Every dollar paid now will mean more money at the end of the year. And this is the secret of doing it: Plans made, and plans worked.

Appreciation

The comments of "Reader" on goals for the year, announced recently through the HERALD, were cheering. We hope that his attitude may be shared by a great host of our people; and we believe it is. It is just this kind of endorsement that will make these goals possible. Thank you, "Reader."

Assignment

On January 13, Rev. J. B. O'Briant was assigned as pastor of Chase City charge. This was done by his endorsement and that of the people. We believe that this is a happy arrangement and that it will be fully justified by the results of the year's work.

Key Words—Optimism, Evangelism

Let no one be faint-hearted. We are well able to go up and take our spiritual and ecclesiastical heritage. And let us not forget that the heart and life of the church is evangelism. Pray earnestly and constantly that God will fill the church with that spirit.

Appointments

Jan. 18.—Pittsburgh, to attend meeting of Gratitude Gift Committee.

Jan. 22.—Glen Raven and Fairview.

Jan. 28-30.—With Yarborough charge. We hope to visit the churches on Anderson charge during this week also. Definite announcement will be made later.

S. W. TAYLOR.

THE CENTENNIAL GRATITUDE GIFT

Because the committee has asked me to do it, because I like to do such work, and because it is a glorious undertaking into which we are pushing, I am again writing to call your attention to the fact that February is almost here. And that we ourselves, in annual conference assembled, said that we would appoint our committees, inform our people, and get ourselves all set to receive the Gratitude Gifts of our people during February.

Why a Gratitude Gift?

Well, just because we are 100 years old. That wouldn't be much, if that was all, but it is something to have lived a hundred years. That within itself would not merit any great gift. It would simply call for a remembrance. But through one hundred years God has permitted us to live and prosper as a church, in service for Him. From a small beginning, with just a few people scattered over several states, He has led us on until we have conferences in twenty-six states, and number nearly 200,000 people. He has wonderfully led us and blessed us. For this we are grateful. And for this our 28,000 members in the North Carolina Conference are asked to say "Thank you" to God with their gifts during February. We believe our "Thank you" will be a worthy one. Let us plan to reach every member. Every member, from the children to the grandparents, should be given the opportunity to give. Let no one be overlooked.

Memorial Gifts

Some of us have loved ones who gave their lives to the Methodist Protestant Church in its earlier days. It will be a fine thing to honor them by making our gifts in their memory. At any rate, when we make our gifts to this worthy cause we will be doing honor to the memory of our fathers and mothers, who builded better than they knew.

By April First

We are asking that all money for the Centennial Gratitude Gift be paid on or before April 1. It is to be a quick, rapid-fire campaign, and is to be completed during February, if possible—and it is possible—with the understanding that all money is to be sent to Mr. J. D. Ross, Asheboro, N. C., by the first of April.

As soon as your charge has pledged its quota, please notify Mr. Ross, and we will report that fact through the HERALD. Then as soon as your charge has paid its quota, notify him, and we will give credit in the HERALD.

Here's wishing everybody a real, genuine happy time in making this Gratitude Gift. Surely there is no burden in this. It is just a joy to give because we are thankful. Yours in His blessed service,

A. G. DIXON.

Denominational Enterprises

FOREIGN MISSIONS

THE DETROIT STUDENT VOLUNTEER CONVENTION—(Concluded)

The Worth and Value of Missionary Effort

Much is being said these days that the money spent and the effort put forth in the great missionary enterprise do not pay. Some are loudly acclaiming that missionaries are despised and are no longer wanted on the foreign fields, especially in China. This is not what the missionaries and those from those lands, save the anti-Christians, are saying.

But recently I heard Mrs. C. G. Soderbom make the statement that one of the last things that the Chinese said to her and Rev. Soderbom on their last trip to Kalgan before leaving on their furlough was that they should be sure and tell the people of America how much they appreciated what had been done for them and their country, and that we should send them just as many missionaries as we could. And then to Rev. and Mrs. Soderbom they said, "And you come back to us just as soon as you can, for we need you."

Now in the Detroit convention not a single foreign voice was raised against the missionary and the great missionary enterprise. Instead, each and every foreign speaker had the finest word for the missionary enterprise and considered its worth and value to their nations inestimable and could by no means be dispensed with. And each one, in turn, repeatedly stated that the time had not yet come when the foreigners could get along without the missionary.

Dr. Robert E. Speer said, "I cannot give a single instance of any of the mission churches where such a sentiment has been expressed. On the other hand, from every land still comes the Macedonian call. Not all the unoccupied fields are in Asia and Europe. There are still vast unoccupied fields of Jesus Christ. Great areas are waiting for you and me today in Jesus Christ."

So the missionary with his invaluable gospel and work is still not only wanted but is needed—needed because of the worth and value of his work in the past and its import for the growth and development of the foreign Christian church of the future.

The Need of Inter-Racial Betterment

No such convention could be held without having to deal with the race question, looking toward inter-racial betterment. This was not only brought out in the different addresses but were acted out in the attitudes of one naionality toward another in this convention. The Red, the Yellow, the Black, the White sat together, thought together, conversed together, ate together, worshipped together.

Over and over again was sung that beautiful missionary hymn,

"In Christ there is no East nor West,
In Him no South nor North;
But one great fellowship of love
Throughout the whole wide earth.

"In Him shall true hearts everywhere
Their high communion find;
His service is the golden cord
Close binding all mankind."

One of the most striking and impressive numbers of the entire program was the pageant entitled, "The Color Line." It can be secured from the Missionary Education Movement, 150 Fifth Ave., New York City. It makes a splendid missionary entertainment.

Interdenominationalism and the Indigenous Church

The foreigner never has and, I suppose, never will understand denominationalism. They are not caring for it. And this was very definitely shown at this convention. But they are wanting an indigenous church—a church that they can think of as their own, with native customs and forms of worship, suitable to them and their tastes, as we have in America. They want it to be Christian but are not concerned about it being Methodist, Presbyterian, Baptist, Congregational, etc., etc. And this is what all denominations must face in the building of the church in the foreign lands for the future. And this certainly will not be difficult for any to accept if we have the Father's vision and conception of the world's salvation. It may not be denominational, as such, but it must be Christian. And yet I believe that all are agreed that this indigenous church is not one that can be instituted overnight but will take time, patience and much prayer, coupled with the Spirit of the Christ to come to completion.

S. W. Rosenberger, Executive Secretary.

STOP ABNORMAL HASTE AND STRAIN

Learn to relax, to let go, to do things quietly and confidently. Cultivate cool-headedness, prudence, deliberateness, and self-control. Stop abnormal haste and strain. Take the tension off your body by dropping it from your mind. View things in right perspective. Put a proper estimate upon your work and interests, but do not overestimate their value and importance. Do everything with an inner sense of peace and poise. If you have a fault in your character or method of working, which is retarding your best progress or holding you back from success, resolve at once to examine such fault, to face it fearlessly, and to take special means to eradicate it. Growth in character depends upon intelligent elimination and correction.—From Inspiration and Ideals by Grenville Kleiser (Funk and Wagnalls Co., New York).

LET YOUR GOOD HABITS SERVE YOU

Work with enthusiasm. Cultivate laughter and good cheer. Be tolerant of other people's opinions. Constantly apply the Golden Rule. Have a daily play-time. Breathe deeply. Be systematic and orderly in the details of your work. Avoid the desire to set other people right and to reform the entire world. Aim to influence other lives for good by the force of your example. Have a definite daily program. Avoid waste movements, such as foot and finger tapping, rocking, and nervous clearing of the throat. Keep your mind constantly filled with wholesome, uplifting, healthful thoughts. Be ready to adapt yourself to the unexpected and uncongenial. Form good habits and let them work for you automatically.—From Inspiration and Ideals, by Grenville Kleiser (Funk and Wagnalls Co., New York).

I have always been a quarter of an hour before my time, and it has made a man of me.—Nelson.

OUR STORY PAGE

THE DELAYED TRAIN

"How long do we stop here, conductor?"

"About an hour, I'm afraid, sir; the freight ahead is pretty badly wrecked, and it will take some time to clear the tracks."

The passengers grumbled and swore, as passengers mostly do, but John Pendleton thought it was fun to stay out in the deep woods for an hour. John, being a city boy, thought the woods a fine place.

"Please let me go out, father," said John. "I want to play wild Indian awhile."

"Don't get out of the sound of my warwhoop, then," said his father; "mind, now, keep close to the car."

It was more fun because it was getting dark rapidly, and it was easier to pretend that Indians were hidden behind the trees and panthers and wolves lurked in the shadows. But in a few minutes John was back at the car window.

"Father," he said, "I can see a little cabin through the trees; they have just lighted the lamp in it; may I run over to it? I want to see who lives there."

His father consulted his watch. "I can give you thirty minutes," he said; "here, take my watch along and don't be a minute later than half an hour in getting back."

John dropped the watch in his pocket and sped away through the trees. When he reached the door of the log cabin, he stopped for a minute. What excuse had he for knocking at the door?

"I'm thirsty," said the breathless runner to himself. "I'll ask for a drink of water." He rapped loudly.

"Come in," said a voice in tones of surprise, and he opened the door. There was only one person in the cabin, a black boy about John's size, and he was laid up in bed.

It did not take our young traveler long to get a drink, nor to find out that the boy's name was "Jake," that his father was a wood chopper and that he himself had his leg broken by a falling tree some weeks before.

"Daddy generally gits home by this time," said Jake, "but I reckon he's gone to de sto' to get some victuals. Mammy she cooks for de Herrisons, 'bout mile from here, and she don't git home till arter supper."

"You must be lonely," said John.

"I don't mind it so much in daytime," said Jake, "but that one hour arter it gits dark is wus' an all de rest."

John felt his heart swell with pity for the poor, bedridden boy. What could he do for him? He had only a few minutes to spend. He had no money in his pockets, but he took out a handsome knife and silk pocket handkerchief.

"Here, Jake," he said, "keep these to remember me by."

As he passed them over the bed the shadow from the little lamp Jake had lighted threw a great picture on the wall.

"Oh, look here!" cried John, "do you know how to make a wolf's head? Put your two hands together, so, thumbs up; now curl the three first fingers of your left hand a little, and stretch your fourth finger wide; now move it up and down—see?"

The lame boy burst into a merry laugh as the shadow of a wolf's head with moving jaws fell upon the white wall.

"Here's another," said John, eagerly, "but it is harder to do. Put your right hand over the left, leaving the first and fourth fingers bent this way for a snout, two fingers off the left hand for lower paw, thumb and other fingers for the legs—there!"

Another peal of laughter greeted the shadow of a pig sitting upright.

"Now I must run," said John. "I wish I had some money to give you."

Jake's father came in just then and looked ready to cry with pleasure; and as John bounded away he left the lame boy eagerly showing him his new amusement.

"I envy you the chance, my boy," said John's father, as the train moved on, "of lightening that poor creature's weary load."

"Father," said John, softly, "maybe that is just what God stopped the train for."

"It would be just like Him," answered his father in the same tone.—Selected.

DRINKING AT HOME AND ABROAD

The Saturday Evening Post remarks that while bootlegging in this country is bad enough, it makes a small showing when contrasted with the drink bill of Great Britain. This drink bill last year was in round figures three hundred million pounds, or one billion, five hundred thousand dollars. Great Britain, of course, does not have half the population of the United States. The economist is quoted as saying in regard to the maintenance of brewery prosperity during 1926, despite strikes and unemployment, "It seems as though many households which were forced to economize in 1926 preferred to maintain their spending on drink and to reduce expenditures in other directions."

The Saturday Evening Post calls attention to the fact that in 1926 we are supposed to have purchased goods under installment buying to the extent of some six billion dollars, on which our population owed three billion dollars at the end of the year. In Great Britain with a population less than half ours, there had been spent nearly half that much for drink. The many millions of Americans, who feel the sincerest and deepest friendship for Great Britain, which is in a very vital sense our mother country, cannot help but feel pain at the contemplation of such drink expenditure in a country which is facing so many difficulties. At least we are confirmed in our determination not to pay tribute at such an enormous cost to a licensed drink trade.

WITH GOD

To talk with God no breath is lost;
Talk on!
To walk with God no strength is lost;
Walk on!
To toil with God no time is lost;
Toil on!
Little is much, if God is in it;
Man's busiest day not worth God's minute.
Much is little everywhere,
If God the business does not share.
So work with God—then nothing's lost;
Who works with Him does best and most.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Macedonia, Fallston Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. J. M. Morgan, brought another one of his good sermons Sunday; he always brings a good one but this one was a little extra. Our Sunday School is improving, if it is cold weather. The attendance is better and the interest seems to grow. One eause I think is our study is in the New Testament and also our superintendent, Bro. Huss, is so faithful. He lives about four miles from the church, but he comes every Sunday.

Another thing, we have our church painted now at a cost of $150 and almost paid for.

Pray for us that we may have a prosperous year in the Lord's service.

MRS. EMMA HOYLE, Reporter.

Concord, Saxapahaw.—The children gave a good program Christmas Eve. Quarterly meeting was held at Orange Chapel with a majority of our church officials present. Bro. Loy filled his appointment Sunday, bringing a wonderful message to a good audience. Some of our people are afflicted now. Miss Julia Pickard hasn't been able to attend in some time. Miss Josie Ferguson, Mr. C. W. Johnson, Mrs. Rosa Lewis, Mrs. Roxie Roberson; and Mrs. M. W. Curl swallowed iodine last Friday night for cough syrup, which was a very painful mistake. Mrs. T. H. Moore still has to take treatment at Wesley Long Hospital.

Mr. Lewis Madden has moved his family from this community. We are sorry to have them go; they are members of our church.

Death entered the home of Mrs. W. M. Lewis and claimed her oldest son. Let us not forget our suffering and bereaved members, but ever remember them at the throne of grace. REPORTER.

Anderson Charge, Liberty Hill Church.—The people of Liberty Hill Church are very much pleased with their new preacher, Rev. Gurney Ferree. There have been many statements made like this, "We have a preacher now that can't be beat."

Sunday morning and evening, January 8, good congregations enjoyed the sermons very much.

Bro. Ferree came down on this charge Thursday evening, January 5. He visited in 16 homes before Sunday and had prayer in most all the homes.

MISS RUTH PEARSON.

Kernersville.—The following churches on this charge had Christmas exercises: Kernersville, Sandy Ridge and Pine Grove. The two first named made a small offering for the General Conference Budget. Church registers have been ordered for each church on this charge. Some of our good members have been bringing us fresh meats, fruits, milk, butter and other good things, all of which is much appreciated. Many of our good friends during the holidays remembered us with nice letters, booklets, and cards, each of whom has our many thanks.

Mrs. Mode Barrow, a good, faithful member, has been quite sick for a number of days. Mr. Tom McCuiston, whose voice came back to him after being speechless seven years, recently conducted prayer meeting for us. His many friends enjoy hearing him talk after being deprived of so great a privilege so long. He is a member of the Baptist Church of this place.

E. G. LOWDERMILK.

High Point.—We are pained to announce the death of one of our members, Mrs. Joseph C. Johnson, which occurred on January 3. She had been ill for several months. Born Miss Daisy Hicks, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Hicks, of Randolph county, she was united in marriage to Mr. Johnson in August, 1919, and soon after came to High Point to make her home. Death at all times and under all circumstances is sad and leaves grief and loneliness in its wake, but it is particularly sad for the young in the heyday of hope and promise, for Mrs. Johnson was but 33 years of age. She is survived by her husband, for whom the hearty sympathy of the congregation is expressed. Three brothers, three sisters and two half-sisters are also left to mourn her passing. Funeral services were conducted in the First Church by Rev. E. Lester Ballard, and the body was interred in Oakwood Memorial Park cemetery.

The Ladies' Aid Society held an unusually pleasant meetting at the church on Monday afternoon with the following ladies acting as hostesses: Mrs. S. D. Shelton, Mrs. W. C. Lyndon, Misses Pearl Leonard, Mary Hough, Xannie Stowe, and Mary Lyndon. After the business session, delicious refreshments were served.

Dr. S. K. Spahr filled the pulpit in his usual acceptable manner on Sunday morning last, and chose for his subject "A Glorious Church." An interesting feature of this service was a beautiful violin solo, rendered by Miss St. Claire, of the faculty of High Point College. Rev. J. D. Hardy, of the college, brought the message on Sunday evening, and his subject was "The Greatest Power in the Universe." During January we shall be pleased to listen with interest to the evening messages by Prof. Hardy, who is the popular teacher of the Baraca class.

The Denominational Young People's convention will be held next May in Baltimore, and a large number of registrations is desired from every church. Mr. Earl Bulla is trying to obtain 100 from this church at 50 cents each. Every member is requested to see him and help out the young people.

We were delighted to receive Mrs. R. S. Russell, nee Miss Mabel Williams, her son, Robert, Jr., and little daughter, Anna, as additions to our membership on Sunday, January 1, and we welcome them most cordially to our fellowship. Mrs. Russell was one of the founders of our Children's Home, is a sister of Rev. J. S. Williams, of Asheville, and is well known to many of our people.

Dr. and Mrs. A. A. York have returned from a trip to Florida and we are pleased to know that the former's health is much improved.

Everybody was delighted to see Capt. A. M. Rankin at church Sunday morning.

We are pleased to announce that Mr. C. L. Gray is improving, and also Mrs. W. P. Pickett says she is gaining slowly.

Friendship Station.—It has been some time since we have been heard from but we have enjoyed reading the others' letters so much that we believe no one has missed our report. Especially do we enjoy the letters from our former pastors, and we were very much impressed with the greatness of those people who were so thoughtful of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Reed. He was one of our good shepherds. Our church work is moving on smoothly. Mr. and Mrs Hill are growing dearer to this community every day. Surely their examples of right living can safely be followed. We have right much sickness: Miss Myrtle Almond, Mr. J. A. Herlocker and Mrs. W. A. Hatley are all in serious conditions. Mrs. Hatley undergoes an operation this morning at the Yadkin Hospital. We earnestly ask the prayers for our sick ones.

MRS. D. W. SIDES.

Denton Charge, Canaan Church.—We are getting along fine. We are very much pleased with our new pastor, Bro. Bingham, and family; are fine people. We have already learned to love them. His sermons are always interesting and uplifting to all. If we do not have a good year and serve our Master better this year it will be our own fault.

We hope that this may be the year that we will break the record in the history of our church in bringing boys and girls into the service of our Lord and Master. Our Sunday School is about average for this time of year. We have good teachers for all classes—Jeff Ward, Otis Ridge, Mrs. Martin, Mrs. Mattie Garner, Mrs. Dora Harris; secretary, Wesley Sexton; superintendent, J. M. Galimore; class leader, J. S. Harris.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

GRACE GALIMORE, Reporter.

Liberty-Siler City.—It seems awfully late to be saying so, but I can only plead physical inability as cause for the lateness. So, even though it is late, we wish to thank our many friends on the charge, and throughout the conference for the many kind remembrances at Christmas. It cheers our hearts to be thus thought of, and to be so kindly remembered by such a multitude of friends. From Democrat to Creswell, and from Pinnacle to Cross Anchor, and from Baltimore, Maryland, to Tehucana, Texas, the cards came, beautiful cards, cards with Christmas cheer and New Year's greetings, and cards with friendship's deep meaning. We were made happy, and were encouraged to carry on anew for the uplift of our fellowmen. God bless everyone who thus contributed to our happiness and good cheer. Like Edgar A. Guest—

"I would somehow my influence could be
So fraught with help and comfort and delight,
As that of friends who have encouraged me
And sent me brave and smiling to the fight."

The New Year

The new year with all of its privileges, its opportunities, and its possibilities, is now getting well on its way, and our churches here seem to be eager to make the very best of all these for the advancement of God's kingdom during the year. The Sunday school attendance at both places was fine on yesterday. Our goal for the year is an average attendance in the Siler City school of 100 for the year, and an average attendance of 125 in the Liberty school for the year. That may seem small to some larger schools, but it has never been done before, and we are struggling to do better in every way, as churches, than has been done before. Yesterday we had 103 in Siler City and 111 in Liberty. Other departments of the church life are just as encouraging, we think.

The Parsonage

The parsonage is shaped up now so it begins to look very much like a preacher's home. It is a seven-room, one-story house, with a good basement where the furnace is to be placed so that each room will be heated by steam. The study is on the east end of the front porch with a door opening off the porch into the study. Within about a month now, if all goes well, we will be living in this new home, so come to see us and look it over.

The Centennial Gratitude Gift

We have our committees appointed for the Centennial Gratitude Gift, and plan taking that gift at an early date. We are confidently expecting each church to do well in this splendid undertaking.

Good Reports

It does us good to see so many good reports from the charges in the Herald. It all indicates that our people have a mind to work, and that great things will be done for the Master this year. Let every charge earnestly endeavor to keep President Taylor's heart glad by responding to his every call for greater evangelistic efforts and for prompt payment of budgets, and other financial obligations.

Yours in His blessed service,

A. G. DIXON.

High Point.—It is with keenest sorrow that we announce the death of Mr. J. Clyde Cox on January 16th at 5:30 o'clock at High Point Hospital. He was one of the most popular and well known of High Point's younger citizens, and numbered his friends by the hundreds. He underwent an operation for appendicitis about ten days ago, and gangrene and peritonitis set in, and his condition had been critical for several days.

A son of the late Mr. O. R. Cox and Mrs. Sarah Whitely Cox, he was born in Cedar Falls, Randolph County, 29 years ago. The family moved to Asheboro, where Clyde grew up. He attended State College, Raleigh, and came to High Point to engage in business in 1919. In October, 1920, he was happily married to Miss Juanita Moffitt, the pretty and attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Moffitt, and they have one little daughter, Sarah, aged three years. For the past five years he has served as secretary for the Moffitt Underwear Company. Besides his young wife and daughter, he is survived by his mother, Mrs. Sarah W. Cox, of Asheboro; one brother, Tagg Cox, of Asheboro, and four sisters, Mrs. T. V. Rochelle, High Point; Mrs. J. O. Walker, of Charlotte; Mrs. Tom Wiles and Mrs. Clarence Cranford, of Asheboro. Funeral services will be held either at the home on Parkway or the First Methodist Protestant church of this city on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and Dr. George R. Brown, of Reidsville, and Rev. E. Lester Ballard, associate pastor here, will be the officiating ministers. Mr. Cox was a member of Asheboro Methodist Protestant church from boyhood. A large circle of friends and family connections extend cordial and loving sympathy to the sorrowing relatives, and especially to the heart-broken young wife.

First Church, Concord.—The attendance at Sunday school and church is getting back nearly to normal again. The children who have been banned from church and school were allowed to attend Sunday. School opened this (Monday) morning after being closed for four weeks.

The pastor preached a very impressive sermon at the morning hour Sunday from the subject, "The Lure of the False."

The monthly meeting and supper of the Men's Brotherhood was held on last Thursday night in the dining hall of the new Sunday school building. Rev. J. R. Anderson, of Albemarle, was the visiting speaker for the evening and his message was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

The Christian Endeavor Society held its monthly meeting at the County Home Sunday afternoon and a splendid program was given.

On next Friday night Rev. N. G. Bethea, of Lexington, will give a lecture in our church on his trip to the Holy Land. We are expecting a large crowd to hear him.

We are very fortunate in having Miss Bettie Brittingham, formerly of Salisbury, Md., in our midst. She is secretary to Rev. Lawrence Little, and aside from her duties in the office finds time to help in our church work and is a valuable addition to our ranks.

MRS. McLAURIN, Reporter.

Spencer.—We gave our Christmas program December 21 at 7 o'clock. The program was a delightful one and was enjoyed by a large congregation. The offering went for general conference budget.

President S. W. Taylor made us a visit Thursday evening; he made a splendid talk and gave us some new ideas on building a church. Rev. T. Glenn Madison filled his appointment Sunday and gave two helpful sermons. A large congregation was present at the evening services.

The Christian Endeavor meets every Sunday at regular hours. Sunday school every Sunday morning at 9:45.

Our members who have been real sick were able to be out at services Sunday.

There will be preaching the fifth Sunday morning at 11 a. m. REPORTER.

Enfield.—For the last two Sundays our congregations have been the largest since coming to this work. We can make plans but it is almost next to the impossible to carry them out until you get your people to attend church.

Our Sunday school is doing well. The second Sunday in this month the enrollment was 84. Our superintendent, Mrs. H. C. Whitaker, last Sunday asked each person present to try to bring some absentee of his respective class with him next Sunday.

The first Sunday was our first time to be with the Whitakers Chapel people, the first Sunday appointment in December having been rained out. We had a good congregation and a splendid service.

The Sunday school attendance has been rather small, yet it is the hope to continue it, trusting with the coming of good weather the attendance will improve.

Our people at Whitakers Chapel have been very kind to the pastor's family. From the Misses Susie and Lizzie Whitaker we have received gifts of eggs and chickens. Also by Brothers Stanley and Lawrence Whitaker we have been kindly remembered.

We are very sorry to report the serious illness of Mrs. Alice Whitehead, a member of the Whitakers Chapel church. She had the misfortune to be seriously injured by a fall a few weeks ago. She is now in the Parkview Hospital at Rocky Mount. We shall hope and pray for her recovery.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Shiloh, North Davidson Charge.—Rev. R. S. Troxler filled his appointment January 15 with a large crowd present. He preached a very appropriate sermon for the new year. His appeals were fine.

Our people and pastor were glad to have as visitors in our Sunday school and preaching services Sunday morning the Erlanger Quartet. They rendered several selections, which were enjoyed by all.

The Workers' Council meets with our Sunday school superintendent, Mr. H. A. Leonard, every Monday night after the third Sunday. These meetings are helpful to our Sunday school and church.

Brother Ed Leonard, who has been suffering for eight or more months with cancer, continues quite ill. He is gradually growing weaker. Our prayer is, "God's will, not ours, be done."

Mr. Baxter Leonard has been in the Davidson Hospital for a week or more taking treatment. We hope his condition will not prove serious, and that he may soon be back in Sunday school and church with us again.

We were glad to have Mr. and Mrs. Joe Sink with us again in Sunday school and church after being out several Sundays with measles. MRS. N. L. EVANS, Reporter.

English Street.—Our Sunday school is progressing nicely for the time of the year. It is not among the largest in number, but we know that we have some faithful workers who never grow weary in well-doing.

We feel more encouraged with the outlook for the coming year. Our pastor preaches forceful sermons, and every time you hear him you have a great desire to hear him again. The congregation is growing in interest and number.

Last Sunday night the pastor preached to a well filled house one of his wonderful sermons, from the subject "The Value of Little Things." A special message to the young folks, and those who heard could not help but realize if they overlooked the little things they would not be able to see the big things.

The Christian Endeavor met with Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Little last Tuesday night for a business meeting, after which a social hour of games and good things to eat was enjoyed by all present.

On Tuesday night after each second Sunday the Ladies' Aid meets each month for the purpose of paying dues and making plans and, of course, some work, too. The last meeting was at the home of Mrs. John Robbins. The devotional part was led by our pastor; then the ladies looked after the business and then—well, you folks weren't there, and I can't tell you how well Mrs. Robbins knows how to serve. But it was mighty good.

Mr. P. M. Caudle returned to his work at Greenville, S. C., Sunday night after a visit home with his family and to see his new son, who had arrived since he was at home.

We are glad to announce that Mrs. Ring, who has been sick for more than three months, and was not expected to live, is able to be up in her room. Praise the Lord for answered prayer!

With best wishes to the Herald and its many readers for a prosperous year in the Master's work.

MRS. J. A. LEE, Reporter.

First Church, Burlington.—The reporter tells me that he has been working 18 hours a day and that he has had little time to report, but he further tells me that he is hoping and expecting shorter hours soon. Meanwhile, I suppose the pastor will have to keep the readers of the Herald informed as to what is happening here.

A large group of our young people enjoyed the young people's conference that was held here last week in the First Christian church; also a goodly number of our Sunday school workers enjoyed the Sunday school institute that was held at the First Baptist church.

On last evening at the hut our women-folks together with a good size delegation from Fountain Place church had the pleasure of hearing Mrs. W. C. Hammer and Miss Esther Ross make two good addresses on Missions, Mrs. Hammer speaking on Home Missions and Miss Ross on Foreign Missions. We were delighted to have these visitors as guests at the parsonage.

A week ago a new 1928 model Chevrolet sedan was left standing in front of the parsonage. Since then the preacher has been trying to "limber it up" a bit. All who had any part in making it possible for us to have this car have our sincere thanks. Of course we can be of greater service to the church with the car than without it, and it shall be our endeavor to show our appreciation of this and all other favors by rendering the best possible service.

And still there is more to report. The "preacher woman"—and preacher man and children, too—all of us, are delighted with a beautiful overstuffed four-piece living room suite that has recently found its way into the parsonage. Thank you, good ladies, thank you! We are always under obligation to do our best, but when you are so careful to look after the comfort and convenience of your pastor and family, that obligation is emphasized.

The six-hundred mark has been passed in S. S. enrollment. Four hundred and eighteen were present Sunday. Large congregations were present for both preaching services. The work seems hopeful.

L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.

Asheboro.—We had a very good attendance at both the Sunday school and the 11 o'clock service. The pastor preached an interesting sermon, his subject being, "Go home to thy friends and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee."

The vesper services have been well attended and people have enjoyed them; however, as it seems to be more difficult for people to remain for Christian Endeavor after the church services, it has been thought best to return to the evening hour.

Thursday evening at 7:30 in the social room of the church there will be a meeting for the purpose of organizing a Boy Scout troop for the church. We are sure the boys will be delighted to belong to such an organization.

We are beginning to make plans for the Annual Daily Vacation Bible School which will be held again this summer. The one last year was such a success we must have another.

We are sorry to report that one of our members, Miss Annie Gilbert Ross, has been very ill, but at this writing she is improving. We wish her speedy recovery, as we miss her smiling face in the Junior Department of our Sunday school, of which the writer is superintendent.

MISS EXIE CALICOTT, Reporter.
January 16, 1928.

Henderson.—The Philathea class held its business meeting at the home of Miss Katie Cook December 29th. In the absence of the president, Mrs. C. F. Tankersley, Jr., presided. The devotionals were conducted by Mrs. Clyde L. Finch. During the period of old business many reports from special committees were given in, and showed much work being done by the class. The period of new business was taken up, at which time the new officers were elected. It was also voted by the class to serve no refreshments the next three months and have all class meetings in the class room at the church. After other plans and discussions the meeting was dismissed by the class platform. Fruit was then served by the hostess.

January 5th, the Christian Endeavor Society held a business meeting with the president, Miss Katie Cook. This was a most interesting meeting, and many important plans were made for the coming year. One of the main features of the Endeavor meeting was to put on a six weeks' program of missionary work, one to be given on each Wednesday night at the usual prayer meeting services. One other important plan was to observe denominational day. A special program is being arranged to be given one Sunday night soon. A campaign for new members is also on and much interest is being shown toward this important work of training our young people. After the meeting the hostess served refreshments.

Wednesday night, January 11th, the first missionary program was given by Mrs. L. R. Gooch. She used for her topic "Our Work in Japan." In a most interesting and enlightening manner she told of the origin of our foreign missionary board, of its early works, and struggles, the pioneer missionaries, and the gradual growth, giving at the close of her talk the present number and names of our missionaries, the fields of labor and the colleges and churches now at work in Japan. Mrs. F. R. Harris then read an interesting article from the Record, on "Does It Pay?" speaking about the profits from our work, and the great privileges to serve over there. Mrs. Harris also told the story of a certain Japanese girl who wanted a Christian education and because the school was then crowded and no funds to be had for more, a special appeal was made to our local Missionary Society. Mrs. Harris provided for this girl's education. Mrs. Harris had with her a beautiful painting done by the Japanese girl; also her graduation essay, which she had sent Mrs. Harris as a token of her appreciation for the kindnesses she had received. At the close of this, special prayers were offered for our work in Japan. Mr. George B. Harris then read a very interesting letter from Mr. J. Baxter Coghill, a former member of this church, now a resident of Charleston, W. Va. Mr. Coghill enclosed in his letter a gift of $500.00 to be used to beautify the church. This was indeed much appreciated and the pastor, Rev. R. A. Hunter, was selected to appoint a committee to make such improvements that will add beauty to our church.

The Sunday school was much better in attendance yesterday than it has been for the past few Sundays. We are hoping this not only continues, but that it improves and will grow, both in attendance and in spirit. The 11 o'clock services were well attended. A splendid sermon, as usual, was enjoyed. Rev. R. A. Hunter preached about the Christ-like spirit, and gave us indeed much food for thought. The music of the service was indeed beautiful, a special anthem by the choir and an organ selection, accompanied by the piano and violin. Rev. Mr. Hunter announced at this service the committee he had appointed for the J. Baxter Coghill gift. They are Messrs. B. Frank Harris, Clyde L. Finch, Dr. F. R. Harris, Mesdames Henry T. Powell and O. O. Young.

The Christian Endeavor had a denominational program at their regular meeting Sunday night, January 15. The services were opened by a hymn, followed by prayer. The different departments were represented by the following: Jasper T. Hicks, superintendent of the S. S., gave a talk on that special work; Mr. E. C. Kittrell gave a talk representing the church. Mr. Hunter then spoke of "How We May Serve Our Church Better." Several musical selections were then given and greatly enjoyed. A vocal solo by Mrs. W. B. Hight, accompanied by Mrs. F. R. Harris; a violin solo by Lawrence Harris, accompanied by Mrs. Harris. A special offering was taken to be used for payment on the new piano. The meeting was then dismissed by prayer by Rev. R. A. Hunter.

Randleman Charge.—A new church at Worthville is now a certainty. Mr. W. L. Ward and his business associates have donated the most ideal site in town. It was the church's original plan to build a brick structure, but funds in the treasury did not seem to justify carrying out that plan, and necessarily incur a heavy debt. A wooden structure will be built having in addition to auditorium several Sunday school rooms.

A splendid audience worshipped at Mount Lebanon last Sunday. A number of visitors were present. A special feature of the hour was a solo by Miss Grace Brown, member of Randleman high school faculty.

Since our last report Mrs. J. F. Dosier and Mrs. C. L. Harden supplemented the recently reported pounding. Bro. W. A. Wood, delegate to last conference, gave us potatoes and a bag of flour a few days ago. Good in them and good for us.

W. H. NEESE.

Randleman, January 17, 1928.

West Forsyth.—Since conference we have been more or less busy. Pastor has met all appointments except the snowy first Sunday in December. Nearly all the Sunday school observed the birthday of the Savior with appropriate services. The pastor attended three, and all comments heard by me were favorable.

Four of the Sunday schools are still having regular sessions, with very good attendance.

President Taylor has just been with us for a 30-hour visit. All of this time except a few hours spent in sleep and a few minutes in eating the good things the good housewives had prepared. He visited four churches. His earnest preaching of the Word and his eloquent presentation of the program of the church through the General and Annual Conferences ought to, and no doubt will, bear fruit. He presided over the first quarterly conference, which was more largely represented than any on this charge since I have been here. And the members present seemed more interested and more enthusiastic.

Brother Taylor insisted that the High Point College fund and the A. C. B. be paid at once. Union Hill and Pleasant Hill paid the former in full, and Pleasant Hill paid nearly half of A. C. B.

This is "fresh meat season" over here and the parson's table has been kept supplied since soon after conference until this good day. Not only so, but a number of other things have found their way in. Both sides of the river have shared. If I mentioned all it would sound like the calling of the Long roll in more senses than one; the number of families represented and the number of times the name of the Long family appeared. Besides that name there were Hunters, Speases, Doubs, Whitmans, and perhaps some that at the moment I have overlooked. For the present, Brother Henry Doub has topped it off with a load of dry wood all ready for the heater. May the Giver of all good reward each once.

C. H. WHITAKER.

West End, Greensboro.—Just a few words to let the readers of the Herald know we are not asleep. The Woman's Home Missionary Society held a very interesting meeting yesterday, (January 16). We had a very good attendance and Mrs. S. E. Ratlege explained the fourth chapter in our study book, entitled "Adventures of the Church." This is a very interesting book. Dr. Williams gave us some very helpful suggestions from time to time.

Our finances were not so good as should be at this time, but we expect to have all claims paid ere the Branch meeting.

As I am recording secretary for the Ladies' Aid also, I will give a little praise to this work. We are still busy trying to help with the little needs of the church and hoping to make this new year one of the best in our history.

With all good wishes to our Herald readers.

REPORTER.

Asheville.—Another good day at the Asheville church. Rev. Homer Casto gave us a fine inspirational message Sunday morning, his subject being Psalm 51: "Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation." The congregation increases each Sunday. There were 15 new members at Sunday school Sunday; nine last Sunday. We feel very much encouraged at our increased attendance. Those who attended the service Sunday night, conducted by Rev. Van Meter, reported that it is the "best yet." Our community and church have been blessed by the messages of this group of spiritual men: J. Sprole Lyons, J. O. Van Meter, of the Asheville School, and Mr. Purkiss, of Pittsburgh.

Miss Xannie Stowe, of High Point, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. C. C. McNeal, has returned home.

Mrs. McNeil, president of the Missionary Society, who has been in the hospital, continues to improve and we hope will soon return home.

Rev. J. S. Williams, who is in the hospital, is recovering nicely from an operation and will return to him home on Saturday.

REPORTER.

Shiloh.—The Sunday school here is progressing nicely. There was an attendance of 79 last Sunday. New officers and teachers were elected, as follows: Superintendent, W. H. Hemphill; assistant, J. S. Pickett; secretary and treasurer, Grace Garrett; assistant, Charlie Hemphill; teachers: Adult, Mrs. J. H. Hinshaw; assistant, Mrs. Grady Hemphill; Senior, A. L. Kime; assistant, W. R. Hemphill; Intermediate, Mrs. Wade Payne; assistant, Mae York; Junior, Mrs. Charlie Hemphill; assistant, Mrs. J. S. Pickett; Primary, Mrs. A. L. Kime; assistant, Mrs. G. L. Whitaker; Beginners, Mrs. Clyde Jones; assistant, Margaret Pickett.

The pastor, Rev. A. O. Lindley, preached an excellent sermon last Sunday.

Inez Burrows was appointed to canvass the church for subscriptions to the Methodist Protestant Herald.

We were very glady to have Miss Gladys Pickett out again after being confined to her room for some time with measles.

We are very sorry to note that one of our most active members, Mrs. W. P. Pickett, has been confined to her room for some time. We wish for her a speedy recovery.

Little Frank Brown is seriously ill with pneumonia at this writing.

The next regular appointment will be the fourth Sunday evening at two-thirty o'clock.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

REPORTER.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—Lumber and brick are being placed on the ground for our new church, and in the near future we are expecting to see the foundation laid, and work begin in earnest. We ask all who are interested in this church to remember us in your prayers; and also remember us with your money; we will need both.

Our new pastor, Brother Curry, has filled all his appointments and has filled them well. Everybody seems to be well pleased, and if the people on Haw River Circuit will co-operate with him we are sure this will be a successful year.

Our Sunday school is still moving along nicely. We have good attendance and the interest is good, though there are some in our community who should go to Sunday school who do not go. Can someone suggest a way to get them interested?

Our Christian Endeavor is still doing nicely, not as many attend these meetings as should, but we have a faithful few and we hope there is much good being done.

Pray for us.

MRS. G. W. APPLE, Reporter.

Pine Hill, Davidson.—Brother Ridge preached a good soul-stirring sermon the second Sunday. We are glad to have Brother Ridge back on our work. We are having good prayer meeting every Saturday night and good Sunday school every Sunday. There is some sickness in our community. Mr. I. R. Coggin's little girl is very sick with tonsilitis. W. D. Smith is sick; hope they will soon recover.

F. L. SMITH.

Moriah Church.—Our pastor, Mr. H. C. Carmichael, delivered his Christmas address at the 11 o'clock service on Christmas Sunday. At the close of the service the members of the Sunday school were treated to fruit and the children were given an extra treat of candy. The members of the Sunday school and church presented Mr. Carmichael with a suit of clothes as their Christmas gift to him. Mr. J. C. Coe, the retiring superintendent, was given a set of cuff links.

At the evening service a special Christmas program was rendered. It was chiefly composed of scenes representing the Christmas story and the singing of Christmas carols by the choir. During the service Miss Lorraine Keller, pianist, and J. C. Coe, Jr., violinist, rendered several special selections.

On Sunday, January 1, Rev. H. Grady Dawson, who is now a student at Duke University, delivered the evening message. His subject was "Friends," and although the cold weather kept many from attending, those who were present enjoyed his talk very much.

We have enjoyed having a full-time pastor with us during the past year very much and feel that we have been much benefited by his work with us. Our church seems to be getting along fine and we are looking forward to a prosperous new year.

REPORTER.

Friendship, Chase City Charge.—We were very glad indeed to have with us Sunday, January 8, 1928, Rev. J. B. O'Briant, who preached a wonderful sermon at 11 and 8 o'clock, which all seemed to enjoy very much.

We are glad to know that he will be our pastor for this year. We welcome him in our midst and hope this will be the most prosperous year the church has ever had.

The attendance at Sunday school is good and prayer meeting each Sunday night is well attended.

Everyone here keenly feels the loss of Rev. C. W. Saunders. His faith, efforts and prayers greatly blessed our church and vicinity.

J. F. G.

Pleasant Grove.—Brother Reynolds delivered a fine sermon Sunday morning from St. Mark 1:18: "And straightway they forsook their nets and followed him." No doubt many of us church folks lose many blessings by not forsaking everything that hinders our work for the Master. He also preached another good sermon Sunday night on "The Curse of Uselessness." In this was brought out that the greatest sin in most of our lives is doing nothing or neglecting so many things we should do. I fear we all expect too much of the work to be done by someone else. May we all realize no one else is responsible for the work intended for us to do and discharge our full duty.

The attendance at church is still held up some on account of sickness. Mrs. W. S. Cecil and others have been kept away for some time.

We hope the attendance at the mid-week prayer meeting will be better this week.

MRS. R. J. KENNEDY, Reporter.

Democrat Charge, Pleasant Gap Church.—As this is our first report this year, we are glad to say that we have our same pastor back with us again, Rev. H. W. Bell.

We are hoving some bad weather, but our faithful pastor filled his appointment Sunday and the few who were out heard a wonderful sermon. We are hoping that this year will be a great year, and much good accomplished.

On the night before Christmas a number of people gathered at the parsonage and pounded the preacher. Before they left the pastor read and had prayers. All enjoyed the night.

REPORTER.

Saxapahaw Charge.—We have held our first quarterly conference, and now have our plans very well fixed for the year's work. The business was carried on very peaceably, each member appearing to have an aspiration for a greater year's service than ever before. It is pleasant to work with a people who are not satisfied with present conditions, however good, but are aspiring to nobler things.

Some of the results of the conference are inevitably remote, however, it was not without its immediate results. The quarterly conference instructed the parsonage trustees to put a nice living room suite in the parsonage. This has been done and the pastor and his wife are now greatly enjoying the use of it. Also, the parsonage is to be painted on the inside and the well cleaned out. The pastor and his wife feel very grateful toward the big-hearted people of Saxapahaw Circuit for these acts of generosity. They mean pleasure to our home.

We have received many other tokens of love and good will from various individuals on the circuit since we have been living in the parsonage, such as fire-wood, canned fruit, fresh meat, chickens, honey, etc. I would like to name the givers but it would take too much space. Our prayer is that God may help us to so live before these splendid people that they may never regret what they have done for us.

God has blessed us with good people since I first began to preach; I found them on Denton charge; I found them on Guilford charge, and I have found them on Saxapahaw. May God ever strengthen the cord of love that binds us to them.

O. C. LOY, Pastor.

Mt. Hermon Charge.—The work is beginning to move along nicely. The four churches are using the envelope system in collecting finances. So far, Mt. Hermon church is leading the group.

The churches got a surprise off on their pastor when they raised the expenses for his trip to Detroit during the Christmas holidays. Many thinks to those big-hearted folks. Rev. P. E. Lindley filled two appointments, and Rev. H. L. Isley one appointment in the absence of the pastor.

Miss Marie Hargin, Miss Nannie Coble, Mr. Lee Moser, and Mr. Herman Coble attended the Alamance County Sunday School Convention which was held in Burlington January 12-14. The three former delegates gave very fine reports of the convention.

The Albright Township Sunday School Convention will convene at Bellemont church January 29, at 2 p. m. The name of a High Point College professor will most likely appear on the list of speakers for the occasion.

The Mount Hermon charge C. E. Union will meet at Bellemont church January 27, at 7 p. m. This will be the third quarterly meeting since this organization was formed.

J. ELWOOD CARROLL, Pastor.

Shiloh C. E. Re-organized

The Christian Endeavor Society of Shiloh Methodist Protestant Church held its first meeting January 8, 1928, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Leatherman. A very large crowd was present, and much interest was shown.

Officers for the new year are as follows: President, Mrs. Protus Koontz; vice-president, Miss Rena Sink; secretary, Mrs. Ray Leatherman; treasurer, Mr. Ray Leatherman; pianist, Mrs. Ray Leatherman; reporter, Miss Lena Hedrick; program committee, Miss Emma Berrier, chairman, Mr. Protus Koontz, Miss Lena Hedrick, Miss Mary Mize; flower committee, Mr. Lyman Troxler, Miss Louise Mize, Miss Ruth Sink; critic, Ora Koontz; social committee, Mrs. Protus Koontz, chairman, Mrs. Ray Leatherman, Mr. R. S. Troxler; lookout committee, Mrs. Ora Koontz, chairman, Mr. Kyle Sink, Mrs. Cleno Koontz, Mr. Hugh Lanning, Mrs. Jim Kepley, Mr. Floyd Leatherman.

Steward Essay Contest

In order to interest our young people in stewardship, the stewardship department of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society is planning an essay contest The following rules will govern the contest:

1. Any Methodist Protestant young man or woman 16, 17, or 18 years of age is eligible to enter this contest.

2. The essays submitted shall not exceed 2,500 words in length.

3. All essays shall be in the hands of Mrs. F. W. Stephenson, 91 N. Jackson St., Bellevue, Pennsylvania, not later than March 1, 1928.

4. Each contestant shall make three typewritten copies of his or her essay. The names of the writer shall be omitted from the copies of the essay and placed upon a separate slip of paper enclosed with the essay.

5. The judges of the contest shall be appointed by the Executive Committee of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.

6. A prize of five dollars in gold shall be awarded the winner of this contest.

MRS. F. W. STEPHENSON.

FROM ANDERSON TO LITTLETON

This scribe has not been all the time from the close of the Annual Conference until now getting to his new work and getting located. It is always hard to leave a group of friends with whom we have been privileged to work and whom we have learned to know and love. The year was very pleasant for me on the Anderson work with many hardships and problems. However, in leaving I feel confident of a large group of faithful friends and regretted to leave the faithful people on that field of increasing progress. It was the best year I think in many ways, if not every way, I have witnessed since entering the ministry. I trust that it will continue to press on toward the goal and I am sure that the good people there will do their best.

Arriving on my new work for the third Sunday in November, preaching three times the first Sunday on the work, I found a kind-hearted people. I am and have been well received at all the churches and have finished the second round on the work. Five churches are a lot of work for a little preacher but with good help nearby I am hoping to have a good year. The work has started off well and the prospects are good for the future.

The first Quarterly Conference was held in the Littleton M. P. Church early in December and I have been expecting a report from someone, but the secretary took unto herself a helpmate the day of conference and has not reported the results of our meeting.

Bro. Taylor was present and presided over a very interesting and enthusiastic conference. The reports were very good, but showed that only two of the five churches have Sunday School running now. The churches are not very well organized and a great deal of work in perfecting the various organizations is to be done. A fine spirit was manifested during the conference and from the discussion forward steps were taken that we hope will mean a great deal to the work and the Kingdom. The conference voted to raise the A. C. B., college assessment and assessment for representatives' expenses to the General Conference by April 1. Some has been subscribed and a small amount paid in. It is the earnest desire of the pastor that these claims be paid by that time and he requests the interest of every member of the charge to that end. Fifteen officials representing the five churches were present for the conference and every one showed that they were vitally interested in the work. More will appear later from the writer.

We were indeed glad to have our new President with us to preside over the conference. We hope he will come again soon and as often as he can. We are always glad to have Bro. Taylor with us. We were glad to have with us Rev. J. B. O'Briant, of Rosemary, who is not serving as an active pastor, but from his report he is still busy and always interested in the work. The writer is indeed fortunate in having a man like Bro. O'Briant nearby. Rev. N. M. Harrison, Jr., and Rev. A. D. Shelton were both present; we were glad to have them. To all these brethren a cordial welcome to Littleton is extended. Come when you can.

Yours for the best year in His Service,

M. IVEY CRUTCHFIELD, Pastor.

CHURCH EXTENSION REPORT

The report which follows did not reach the Journal in time to be published, owing to the fact the usual meeting was not held during the sitting of conference, and owing to the further fact that after conference a pressure of business and other matters delayed the report. It is, therefore, submitted here.

Spring Valley	$ 4.00

This was all carried in the report last week for November and December, but these charges were not singled out for having met the above obligations in full. They are entitled to this recognition, and we most heartily commend them for having met these obligations with promptness and gladness. We know of other charges that are ready for this list, though their official report has not yet reached us. We hope to run this list regularly in the Herald, and there will be delight and inspiration in watching it grow.

NEXT! S. W. TAYLOR.

—Mr. Grenville Kleiser, American man of letters, has returned from Europe and is now sojourning in Battle Creek, Mich.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Royal

Miss Sarah Ella Royal was born September 16, 1879, and passed from this life December 23, 1927. She was converted and united with Tabernacle Methodist Protestant church when a young girl and remained a faithful member until death. Those who knew her well say that she was a good woman. For several months she was greatly afflicted. It was a relief when her spirit was released from her frail body.

One brother and one sister survive: Eli C. Royal and Mrs. John McMaster.

The funeral was conducted at Tabernacle church on Christmas day by the writer, assisted by Rev. T. F. McCulloch. Her body was then laid to rest in the church cemetery.

H. L. ISLEY.

Steele

Mary Elizabeth Thompson was born September 21, 1854. Married Jacob Steele March 29, 1879. Died January 4, 1928.

Sister Steele lived to be more than 73 years of age. Her husband preceded her to the glory world about 18 months. She was the mother of two sons, W. G. and Lawrence Steele. These, with four grandchildren and one brother, constitute her nearest relatives who survive.

In early life she confessed Christ and joined Hebron M. P. Church, where she remained a consistent member until death.

Notwithstanding the severe cold weather, a large company of her relatives and friends assembled at the home January 5, where the writer conducted funeral services, after which the remains were placed in Hebron cemetery to await the Resurrection morn.

May God comfort the bereaved ones.

Sincerely,

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Hauser

Addis Ray, infant son of Oliver F. and Lucy Allen Hauser, died November 9, 1927, aged 15 months and nine days. Besides the father and mother, he leaves three brothers, one sister, and a host of relatives and friends to mourn their loss; but we feel that our loss is Heaven's gain, for he was a precious flower which budded on earth, to bloom in Heaven.

May this dispensation of providence serve to draw all of his friends nearer the blessed Saviour, in whose arms he is now safely resting, and may Heaven seem dearer to us when we remember that little Addis is one of its inmates.

"Rest on, little one, with thy head upon His breast;
We loved thee well, but Jesus loved thee best."

Funeral services were conducted by the writer, after which the remains were laid to rest beneath a mound of beautiful flowers in Shoals M. P. cemetery. The bereaved have our deepest sympathy in this sad hour.

A. L. HUNTER.

Barbee

Adam Jackson Barbee was born Jan. 9, 1862, and died Dec. 24, 1927.

He was twice married; first to Virginia Cox on Dec. 1, 1887, with whom he lived happily till her death, July 3, 1901. The second marriage was to Laura Coley, on March 8, 1906. From the first union there were born six children and from the second were born three children.

He leaves a faithful wife, six children and 18 grandchildren, to whom, we believe, if he were able to speak, he would tell not to grieve for him because he is now enjoying perfect rest and happiness. He was a charter member of Pine Bluff M. P. Church and was faithful until death. He was laid to rest in the presence of a large congregation at Center Grove M. P. Church.

J. W. HULIN.

Beam

John Polcy Beam departed this life January 2, 1928, having reached the age of 75 years and 28 days.

In the year 1873 he was married to Julia A. Bess. To this union were born eight children, three of whom are living, namely: J. Lee Beam, Thomas L. Beam, and Austin A. Beam. Five children and their mother, Julia A. Beam, preceded him to the grave.

In the year 1917 he was united in marriage with Mrs. Julia Hudson.

In early manhood Mr. Beam professed faith in Jesus as his Savior and became a member of the Lutheran Church at Bethpage. About 35 years ago he moved his membership to Bess's Chapel Methodist Protestant Church, where he became a faithful and active member with others of his family.

He kept the faith to the end. Only a few days before his last he called one of his boys to his bedside and said, "I'm prepared to go. Meet me in Heaven."

He leaves to mourn their loss a devoted wife, three children, 34 living grandchildren, 16 great-grandchildren, and a host of relatives and friends.

Cranford

William Murphy Cranford departed this life January 3, 1928, aged 62 years, four months and seven days. Brother Cranford was converted in 1916 and joined Liberty Methodist Protestant Church on Davidson charge during the pastorate of Rev. J. W. Hulin. He was faithful to his church as long as he was able to attend.

During the last few months he had been very feeble in body and mind, and on January 3 God called him home.

He leaves a wife, two daughters, three grandchildren, a large circle of friends and relatives. The funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Bro. Charlie Cranford, at Liberty Church, on Wednesday, January 4, at 2 o'clock. The congregation was not large because of the extremely cold weather.

Our hearts go out in sympathy to the bereaved ones and may they trust in the dear Heavenly Father who doeth all things well, and who alone can give the so much needed comfort in this hour of sore bereavement.

C. E. RIDGE, Pastor.

Winfrey

Mary Virginia Jones Winfrey died January 3, 1928, aged 58 years, four months and seven days. Some 37 or more years ago she was married to James Winfrey, who survives. The latter part of last September, during her sickness, she was happily converted, and in a few minutes looked up into the face of the writer and said, "You put my name on your church book," which I did with great pleasure. She was voted a full member of the Kernersville M. P. Church on the night of September 28. She told her visiting friends about her conversion and asked them to pray for her husband. She suffered much, but was patient and faithful unto the end. Her funeral was conducted by the writer in the Kernersville church on January 4, after which she was laid to rest in the Kernersville cemetery in the presence of a number of friends and relatives to await the resurrection morn.

May God greatly bless the bereaved husband and all relatives and friends.

E. G. LOWDERMILK.

Lewis

Alfred, the oldest son of Mrs. W. M. Lewis, died in Watts Hospital, Durham, N. C., January 4, 1928, after an illness of only six days. He is survived by his mother, three sisters and two brothers.

Alfred was a friend to every one and he was loved by all who knew him. He had only reached the 38th milestone. He was laid to rest Friday, the 5th, in the cemetery at Concord Church. Services were conducted by Rev. H. L. Isley, assisted by the pastor.

Alfred, you have gone and left us,
How our hearts are bruised and torn,
And the anguish shows in faces
That were bright, now sad and worn.

You were always kind and gentle,
Speakings words of hope and cheer
To a sad, discouraged brother,
Struggling on his journey here.

Long

John McKendree Long was born February 26, 1846, and in the stillness of the night on November 30, 1927, he departed this life. As the poet says, He liveth long who liveth well. The soul of man was never built to stay here, so God's finger touched him and he slept. He professed faith in Christ at the age of 17 years. He told me in the evening before he passed away at night, that hour was still sweet in his memory. In later years he joined with the M. E. Church at Elm Grove. He loved his church. In last May his companion fell and painfully hurt herself, so they could not keep house by themselves and they came in our community to live with their daughter, Mrs. J. H. Snotherly. He would come to church every time he was able. He said he had learned to love our church as his own. One Sunday he was at church service, and I took my text Psalms 23:2. After I had finished my discourse he said the fourth verse was his favorite. So I asked him to give us a talk on that verse; before he finished I don't think there was a dry eye in the house. Time after time our souls would be lighted in conversation with this servant of God. On November 4, 1869, he was united in marriage to Elizabeth Jane Doub. To this union were born five children, three sons and two daughters. One son and one daughter preceded him to the grave some years ago. He leaves his companion with his daughter, Mrs. J. H. Snotherly, of Friendship, Stanly county. Two sons, Mr. Arthur Long, of the home place in Forsyth county; Dr. Everett, of High Point; ten grandchildren and two great-grandchildren to mourn the departure of one that was so true to them, and to his Heavenly Master. My prayers to the bereaved is to invite them to look upon him as being in the land of the living. His life is not ended but just begun.

When the word came to my ears that while alone God had called him away, the thoughts that arose in my mind were, Servant of God, well done!

Thy glorious warfare's past. The battle's fought, the race is won, and thou art crowned at last.

We peacefully laid his body to rest beneath a mound of beautiful flowers, in the cemetery at Elm Grove Church, to await the Resurrection morn.

C. H. HILL.

Trolinger

James Henry Trolinger departed this life December 4, 1927, aged 80 years, eight months and 17 days. He was the father of Rev. James H. Trolinger, Jr. He leaves eight children and widow to mourn his loss. He was a kind and I think a good man. I have visited his home many times. He was always kind to me; a good husband and father is gone. May the Lord comfort sad and lonely hearts The funeral was conducted in Haw River M. P. Church by the writer in the presence of a large congregation. He is gone but not forgotten. T. A. WILLIAMS.

Turner

Mrs. R. A. Turner was born Jan. 13, 1878, and departed this life Dec. 27, 1927. She leaves a husband, 12 children (7 girls and 5 boys) to mourn their loss. She was a good mother and a faithful wife, was loved by all who knew her; those who knew her best loved her most. J. W. HULIN.

Hartsell

Jeeerson Davis Hartsell was born July 4, 1861, and died Dec. 12, 1927. He leaves to mourn their loss a wife, 9 children (5 girls and 4 boys), 32 grandchildren and 3 sisters.

—Brother J. C. Andrew was kept from church last Sunday by a throat ailment. He is a faithful attendant when he is well and is missed when he is absent.

—Preparations in Los Angeles for the 10th convention of the World's Sunday School Association, which will be held in that city July 11-18, 1928, are going steadily forward.

—The beekeepers of North Carolina will meet at State College for their annual short course on January 26 and 27.

—The sixth annual short course for practical poultry growers will be held at State College during the week of January 23 to 28.

—Peach trees give best returns when large limbs are thinned out to admit sunlight and air and the small branches are slightly tipped.

—In pruning young apple trees, remember that severe pruning reduces the size of the tree and delays bearing.

IT IS NOT TOO LATE

To give something toward the purchase of those hymn books for the Children's Home boys and girls. We still need ten contributions of from three to five dollars apiece. Will you be among those ten? Respond promptly, now, so that we may make this the last appeal.

Already we have delivered to the Home 25 copies of the hymn book, and have placed the names of every one who contributed enough to purchase one or more in the front of each of the books. The boys and girls are proud of them, and are grateful to their donors.

How fine! We have received gifts from Philadelphia, Pa., and Newark, N. J.! Aren't we happy that folks so far from us are interested in these children? These two are Rev. C. C. Day, pastor of our St. Luke's Church, Philadelphia, and Mrs. J. Smith, a member of our First Church, Newark, N. J. Thank you, folks!

The list now stands: Rev. and Mrs. Little and family, $3.75; Mrs. R. T. Pickens, 50 cents; Miss Emily Floyd, $2.00; Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Douglas and family, $4.50; Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Neese and daughter, $2.25; C. E. Bulla, $1.00; Mrs. J. J. Crawford, $1.00; Mrs. Lizzie Jones, $1.50; Rev. C. C. Day, $1.00; Mrs. J. Smith, $3.00.

TITHING LITERATURE AT LESS THAN COST

During the last five years, the Layman Company has circulated more than one hundred million pages of pamphlets advocating tithing, either free or at less than cost.

They now offer to send, postage paid, a package containing 38 of these pamphlets, aggregating 500 pages by 33 different authors, for 50 cents. They include "Thanksgiving Ann" and one other in playlet form; also a "Tithing Account Book" with plain directions for use, and "Adventures in Tithing," a 96-page book. The price is less than the cost of production.

Please mention the Methodist Protestant Herald; also give your denomination.

HE HADN'T TIME

(Commended to Persons Afflicted With Hurryitis)

He hadn't time to greet the day,
He hadn't time to laugh or play;
He hadn't time to wait a while,
He hadn't time to give a smile;
He hadn't time to glean the news,
He hadn't time to dream or muse;
He hadn't time to train his mind,
He hadn't time to be just kind;
He hadn't time to see a joke,
He hadn't time to write his folk;
He hadn't time to eat a meal,
He hadn't time to deeply feel;
He hadn't time to take a rest,
He hadn't time to act his best;
He hadn't time to help a cause,
He hadn't time to make a pause;
He hadn't time to pen a note,
He hadn't time to cast a vote;
He hadn't time to sing a song,
He hadn't time to right a wrong;
He hadn't time to send a gift,
He hadn't time to practice thrift.
He hadn't time to exercise,
He hadn't time to scan the skies;
He hadn't time to heed a cry,
He hadn't time to say good-bye;
He hadn't time to study poise,
He hadn't time to repress noise;
He hadn't time to go abroad,
He hadn't time to serve his God;
He hadn't time to lend or give,
He hadn't time to really live;
He hadn't time to read this verse,
He hadn't time—he's in a hearse—
He's dead!

—J. Clyde Cox, of High Point, is dead and his death brings a painful shock to many friends. He was a son of the late O. R. Cox and the son-in-law of Bro. H. A. Moffit.

—Bro. D. H. Hunter, aged over 95, walked to Calvary church last Sunday morning and was an attentive hearer of the sermon and songs. It is one of his regrets that he cannot find spectacles with which he can read as he has done heretofore. Fortunately he can hear well.

—President Coolidge created a great sensation in Cuba. The inhabitants struggled with each other to get a glimpse of him. We are reminded of the crowd that gathered about President Hayes in Michigan and of one woman's remark: "Why, he has on coat and pants just like any other man."

—Rev. R. A. Hunter was recently elected president of the Henderson Ministers' Association.

—We are shocked this morning to hear of the death of Paul Rawlins, of Grace Church. Peritonitis was the cause. This was preceded by appendicitis which was not thought dangerous. Bro. Rawlins was the husband of a daughter of Bro. W. S. Jones. He was circulation agent of the Greensboro Daily News.

—Our venerable brother, J. S. Speas, of Pfafftown, is one of the Herald's most appreciative subscribers. He does not like for his subscription to expire. He sends by President Taylor his renewal before his time had expired. We thank him for his interest in the church paper.

VOLUME XXXIV GREENSBORO, N. C., JANUARY 26, 1928 NUMBER 12

Progress in Sin

All sins are not equally culpable. There are no small sins, but some sins are smaller than others. Adam's first sin was greater than Eve's first sin because he was more clearly conscious that he was doing wrong. Our earliest sins seem to be of the same variety as Eve's. Our moral perceptions are weak and confused. Our consciousness is taken up with a sense of curiosity or an anticipation of a new pleasure rather than with a regard for the moral relations involved. We do not much think of God's interest in our conduct, so taken up are we with the thought of our own supposed interest. We sin and become morally sensitive afterward. This is the lowest grade of sin, a mere missing of the mark, a moral transgression with no clear conception of moral lines. There are some who try to reduce all sins to this first and least culpable variety.

But there are sins that are far more than mere failure to recognize moral principles. Adam was not deceived in the first transgression and could not offer the excuse that Eve offered. He sinned because Eve led the way and asked him to follow her. He yielded to the enticement of another. Social influence drew him into the terrible vortex. Many sin against light and knowledge today because they are socially led. This is puttting the creaturee before the Creator and is more culpable than the sin of the variety illustrated by Eve's case. Eve ignored the Creattor in her confusion, but Adam did not ignore the Creator; he chose to do Eve's will rather than God's will. Social enticement is a great force leading to evil. Many a drunkard has taken his first drink because socially enticed. Many a boy smokes his first cigarette because associates lead him into it.

A third grade of sin is the sin of rebellion against God. This sin repudiates the authority and rule of God. It enthrones self, one's own will. This is a most offensive sin. There is no excuse for it and it calls forth the severe condemnation of Heaven. The nearest approach to an excuse for it is in the consideration that it originates in recklessness, want of thought. Men who know God cannot disregard His right to rule unless they have lost all right feeling, unless they are morally insane.

Still more advanced in the course of evil is the monstrous sin of apostasy, a deliberate turning away from the way of salvation after having experienced its helps and its joys. This is sinning against the light of Christian experience. This is an insult to Christ and to God of the most offensive kind. And yet so great is the mercy of God that He is willing to save even the worst of sinners that will come unto Him through Christ. Even the apostate may repent and find salvation. Wondrous grace of Heaven!

But Jesus taught that there is one sin that hath no forgiveness, either in this world or the world to come; the dreadful sin of blasphemy against the Holy Ghost. The thought of such a sin should make us tremble at the thought of any sin, even the least and most inoffensive. Just think of the heinousness of any kind of sin against such a Being as God is!

Are You a Millionaire?

Millionaires are thought to be very highly favored. This is the thought of many who are far from being millionaires themselves. By this thought they reveal themselves to themselves as mammon worshipers. Yes, you are a mammon worshiper if you have great respect for the man of wealth because he is a man of wealth. Millionaires themselves do not think of wealth as the covetous poor do. They know by experience that the mere possession of wealth, even great wealth, is not sufficient to satisfy. Their souls have longings that are not met and cannot be met with riches. More than that, they not only realize the insufficiency of wealth, but they also realize that wealth is a hindrance to the pursuit of better things. They understand what Jesus meant when he said, "With what great difficulty shall they that are rich enter into the Kingdom of Heaven!"

If you are not a millionaire in the ordinary sense, you may rejoice in the fact and thank God that you have not the millstone of great wealth hung on your neck.

But perhaps you are a millionaire in a better sense. What did Jesus mean (Mark 10:29) when He said: "There is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, (one of these), for my sake, and the gospel's, but he shall receive a hundredfold now in this time, houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions; and in the world to come eternal life" (all these).

Does He not mean that to the man who is a devoted servant of Christ this material world and this social world will contribute more than it would have contributed if he had held on to the world and turned his back on Christ? It is true that He lists persecutions among the things gained by the devotee of Christ, but this is immediately offset by the greatest possible gain, "in the world to come eternal life." Is not this parade of wealth enough to constitute you a millionaire and more than a millionaire? And the promise of eternal life is not an empty promise, simply an assurance of continued existence. It is a life rich in all the fullness of God. You are to be joint heir with Jesus Christ, even sharing His throne with Him. Yes, if you are Christ's and He is yours, you are more than a millionaire.

—The Ohio Conference has on a campaign for The Methodist Recorder. This general organ of our church has always been popular among those who read it, but it should have had many more readers all the years. We wonder whether the masses of our people in the west realize how good a general organ they have. It has been specially good under the editorial management of the present editor, Dr. Lyman E. Davis. Few editors wield a more facile pen than does he.

LEE'S AND JACKSON'S ABHORRENCE OF WAR

By H. H. Smith

As the birthdays of Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson come only two days apart —January 19th and 21st—they may be celebrated at the same time. Suppose we commemorate their anniversaries this year by considering their attitude toward war.

If Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson were with us today, with the same spirit that possessed them when their names were on the lips of multitudes and extolled as mighty masters of warfare, there is one thing of which we are quite certain: they would not be on the side of those who glorify war. Both of these great masters of warfare were peace-loving men, and did all in their power to prevent war.

General Hunt says that, while in Mexico, Lee earnestly strove "to heal the differences between General Scott and some of his subordinate officers. He was a peacemaker by nature."

"War, of which he was so supreme a master, was to him abhorrent, only possible as a dire necessity, in defense of home and fireside," says a writer. When the Federal hosts were driven back from the heights of Fredericksburg, an officer said to him: "Isn't it splendid?" He replied, "Yes, but it is well that war is so terrible, or we might become too fond of it."

In one of his letters during the war, he said: "The loss of our gallant officers and men throughout the army causes me to weep tears of blood, and causes me to wish that I could never hear the sound of a gun again."

On Christmas day, 1862, just after his great victory over Burnside, at Fredericksburg, he wrote to his wife: "But what a cruel thing is war to separate and destroy families and friends and mar the purest joys and happiness God has granted us in this world, to fill our hearts with hatred instead of love for our neighbors, and to devastate the fair face of this beautiful world! I pray that on this day when only peace and good will are preached to mankind, better thoughts may fill the hearts of our enemies and turn them to peace."

Stonewall Jackson's abhorrence of war is well known to all students of his life. When the war clouds were gathering he was anxious for the maintenance of peace. "He held, however, that the responsibility for peace or war rested upon the administration at Washington. He believed in the right of the states to secede. During his period he signed his name to an 'Appeal' that was sent out to the Christians of the country, urging them to pray and work for peace. In this paper it was proposed to ask the North . . . 'whether she would yield to us a generous and fair construction of our equal rights, and in the future punctually observe it, or whether she would force us to an unwilling but necessary self-defense outside the Union.'"

When all compromises were rejected, and it "became more evident that Lincoln's administration intended to use force against the Southern commonwealths, Jackson said that if the Federal government at Washington 'should persist in the measures now threatened, there must be war. It is painful to discover with what unconcern they speak of war and threaten it. They seem not to know what its horrors are. I have had an opportunity of knowing enough of the subject to make me fear war as the sum of all evils. Should the step be taken which is now threatened, we shall have no other alternative; we must fight. But do you not think that all Christian people of the land could be induced to unite in a concert of prayer to avert so great an evil? It seems to me that if they would unite thus in prayer, war might be prevented and peace preserved.'"

Jackson's wife says: "However it may surprise those who knew him only as a soldier, yet it is true that I never heard any man express such utter abhorrence of war. I shall never forget how he once exclaimed to me, with all the intensity of his nature, 'Oh, how I do deprecate war!'"

Writing to his wife during the war, he said: "To destroy so many fine locomotives, cars and railroad property was a sad work, but I had my orders and my duty was to obey. If the cost of the property could only have been expended in disseminating the gospel of the Prince of Peace, how much more good might have been expected!"

While others were excited when war appeared inevitable, Jackson was undisturbed. Says a friend who visited him a few days before he was called into the field of war: "Walking with God in prayer and holy obedience, he reposed upon His promises and providence with a calm and unflinching reliance beyond any man I ever knew."

When called to Richmond with his cadets at the breaking out of the war, he first went to his home and held worship. "There," in the presence of his wife only, he read the fifth chapter of Second Corinthians, beginning thus: 'For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle be dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.' He then knelt, and with a voice almost choked with tears, prayed that 'if consistent with His will, God would still avert the threatening danger and grant us peace.'"

WHY STRENGTHEN THE VOLSTEAD LAW

Much is being said these days by the noisy wet minority in Congress about modifying or weakening the Volstead law. More than 50 such bills have already been introduced in Congress, most of which are absurd or unconstitutional. Their purpose is to keep the temperance forces on the defensive.

The noisy one-fourth wets in Congress, well organized, with able leadership and plenty of money for publicity, are trying to confuse and stampede the three-fourths who are dry into voting for their vicious bills to weaken the Volstead law, and nullify the Constitution.

It is time for the drys of the nation, who are in an overwhelming majority, to speak in thunder tones by letters, petitions and telegrams to their Congressmen and U. S. Senators, demanding the prompt passage of some important amendments to strengthen the Volstead law, making it easier to enforce.

When the Volstead law was introduced in Congress in 1919 a mighty howl went up from the wets all over the nation that this was the most drastic and unreasonable bill ever introduced in any session of Congress, and they have been clamoring ever since for weakening modifications of that law and have thus been able to keep the prohibition forces on the defensive and under the delusion that all they can hope for is to hold what they have now. This gives the "wets" time to find more loopholes in the law or to create new holes through which the law may be evaded, violated or nullified. This of course is the object of the wets.

We were assured by the temperance leaders of the country while the Volstead bill was pending in Congress that all the best provisions of the state prohibition enforcement laws were being incorporated in that bill, and when passed it would be as easy to enforce as the splendid state prohibition laws of Iowa, Kansas, Indiana and other such states. But the people have been bitterly disappointed in this law, as many of the best provisions of the state prohibition laws were shamefully mutilated or omitted altogether.

Even the two best provisions of the Volstead law are much weaker than similar laws of most prohibition states and have fallen far short of our expectations; that is, (1) the Search and Seizure provision, and (2) the Injunction and Abatement provision.

The section providing for the search and seizure of liquor as evidence of law violations was a great advance over the old method of having to send men into saloons to get evidence and prove the whole case by the testimony of witnesses who sometimes could produce a bottle of liquor in court as evidence and sometimes could not. Under the old laws where they did not have any such Search and Seizure provision, it was necessary to have two witnesses go into a saloon together and make a buy of liquor, in order to get sufficient evidence for conviction. Even then sometimes the liquor man would produce several persons in court to swear they saw one of the two liquor detectives in another city at the very hour they claimed they bought liquor at the defendant's saloon, and thus would lose the case.

Further, many saloon keepers would not sell to two strangers who came in together, and hence it was hard to get sufficient evidence to convict. But under the Search and Seizure provision of the Volstead law one person can go into a saloon and buy a drink or a bottle of liquor and on that purchase a search warrant can be issued and the place raided, and often a large quantity of liquor is seized and brought into court as evidence against the law violator, which evidence, together with the testimony of the officers who raided the saloon, makes a strong case, and it is thus usually easy to convict him even before a jury.

Another failure of the Volstead law is in not making it mandatory on the court to abate the nuisance and padlock the building for one year. As it is the whole matter is discretionary with the court, and he may padlock the place for any short length of time, but not more than one year, or not padlock it at all.

Unfortunately both of these two best provisions of the Volstead law are very much weaker than similar provisions in many state prohibition laws, as shown by Mr. John B. Hammond. Mr. Hammond spent a whole year studying very carefully the Volstead law and every state prohibition enforcement law in the country, and the facts which he presents, when generally known, we believe will arouse and startle the temperance people of the nation, and explain why they have been so disappointed in the operations of the Volstead law, that is, why it has been so hard to enforce.

After a long war and many hard fought battles between the wets and the drys, covering many years, in which the wets mustered every last resource at their command, they were overwhelmingly defeaed by the drys in the last great battle —the battle for the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment. But when they came to draw up the terms of capitulation for the defeated enemy—the Volstead law—the wets outgeneraled the drys and in defeat accomplished to a considerable degree by their legislative strategy in Congress what they had utterly failed to accomplish in the past on the field of battle. This fact is clearly proven by Mr. Hammond. In saying this we do not mean to reflect upon our dry leaders at that time. Their opponents were lawyers skilled in nullifying state laws and knew how to insert jokers in the Volstead law which the dry leaders had not had experience enough in actual law enforcement work to detect or suspect.

We are encamped at the border of the promised land of splendid prohibition enforcement. Shall we go up at once and possess the land by demanding and securing passage of various amendments needed to strengthen the Volstead law, making honest, efficient prohibition enforcement easy to secure? Or, shall we take counsel with our fears, as did ten of the twelve spies sent by Moses to spy out the land of Canaan, and say with them:

"The land surely floweth with milk and honey. Nevertheless we are not able to go up against the people, for they are stronger than we, and the cities are walled and very great. All the people that we saw are men of great stature. We saw giants, the sons of Anak: we were in our own sight as grasshoppers, and so we were in their sight."

Or, shall we say as did the two faithful and courageous spies, Caleb and Joshua:

"The land is an exceeding good land, a land which flows with milk and honey. If the Lord delight in us, then He will bring us into this land and give it to us. Fear ye not the people of the land, for their defense is departed from them and the Lord is with us. Let us go up at once and possess the land, for we are well able to overcome it."

Let us humbly confess our sins, our cowardice and our lack of faith in the past, and pray God's forgiveness for the same, and ask His help that we may "quit us like men" and go forth to our servants, not our masters—the United States Congress—and demand what we need, and then in the name of the God of hosts and the churches of the land, insist that the Volstead law shall be promptly amended in every particular just as it should be, and make no concessions whatever to the wets.

The National Civic League was organized and incorporated in 1922 for the purpose of securing the enactment and enforcement of laws along all lines of moral reforms—especially against bootleggers, vice promoters, gamblers and Sabbath desecration. The league co-operates with all other organizations doing similar work. Mr. John B. Hammond, the splendid legislative superintendent of the National Civic League, formerly of Des Moines, Iowa, one of the greatest legislative experts in this country, is devoting his whole time, day and night, to the limit of his ability, drafting bills for introduction in Congress, interviewing as many as possible of the more than 600 members of Congress and doing everything he can to secure passage of the bills and to expose and defeat bad bills. —The Civic Forum.

—By the way, we must do for High Point College the same thing the western conferences are doing for Adrian College—raise an adequate endowment. The institution will not be safe, to say nothing about the greatest efficiency, until this is done. Colleges are like banks; they must have a head of capital or they will fail in some emergency. This matter ought not to be long delayed.

—Prof. Paul S. Kennett, of High Point College, preached to Calvary congregation last Sunday morning while Rev. C. W. Bates preached to the Winston congregation. We heard one of the two sermons and found it good.

OPTIMISM | FROM THE FIELD | EVANGELISM

Charlotte, Kannapolis, Spencer

January 10th, 11th and 12th was given to these three charges. Our impressions on this first visit are favorable. At each point we were with the pastor and people in devotional service and business meeting, and found them deeply interested and much in earnest. A lot in a splendid growing section, unchurched, has been secured in North Charlotte; at Spencer a lot has been purchased and paid for, and the location appears well; at Kannapolis a lot and parsonage have been bought since last June and a tabernacle erected on the lot for temporary purposes. At neither place is there a large membership, though we are confident of its growth, if churches can be built. Kannapolis may need to be relocated. This matter is now under consideration, and a decision will probably be reached very soon. The conference committee on Church Extension and Survey is to visit these three places on Friday, January 27. Their visit will be of value, we believe, in determining the policy to be pursued at these points. We enjoyed seeing our old friends,, the Thompsons and Kirkmans at Spencer, and also being in the home of Brother and Sister Surratt at the First Church, Charlotte. We shall watch with deep interest and earnest prayers, our work at these points. The pastors, Brother Furr, Brother Cowan and Brother Madison, are zealous and hopeful, and we trust that they may have the great joy of seeing the work in these three importaant fields go forward.

Greer's

Just off the hard surface road, on the left, going south, I observed a church in process of construction—a brick building of creditable size and appearance, and nearing completion on the outside. Upon enquiry I was told that it is Greer's church—one of our newest enterprises. We congratulate Pastor Troxler and the people upon their good beginning, and at an early date we hope to meet the people and to see the church at close range.

West Forsyth

January 14-16 were to be given to this charge, but our visit was interrupted by a call to a committee meeting in Pittsburgh. However, we were with them Saturday night and Sunday—four appointments—during which we enjoyed the kindness and fellowship of the pastor and that of his people. On Saturday night, January 14, we were at Union Hill and preached to an attentive congregation.

At the close of the devotional service the conference interests were presented and the people were asked to pay their assessment for college maintenance. The total amount, $5.00, was all in hand in a short time. We are grateful to the people for this response. And may the Lord abundantly bless them in all of their church activities during the year.

On Sunday, January 15, it was our good pleasure to worship with the people at Pleasant Hill. Another "Hill" and both good names—Union Hill and Pleasant Hill. The Pleasant Hill church is located in a prosperous little community known as "Dosier," named in honor, I understand, of our good brother, Rev. J. F. Dosier. We had a delightful winter morning for this service, and it was indeed pleasant to be there. The people were worshipful, and their interest in the service was pleasing and helpful. The college assessment was presented at the close of the service, and promptly paid. The amount, I believe, was $20. This is the church of Bro. C. G. Hunter, who so frequently represents his charge at the annual conference. We were pleased to see him again. It was a pleasure, too, to see Brother and Sister Wesley Speas in the service and to find Bro. Speas superintendent of the Sunday school. We served them as pastor several years ago, and have remembered them pleasantly during the intervening years. Our visit to this church brought back fond memories of bygone days—memories pleasant, but mixed with sadness. Sleeping in the burying ground of this church are the mortal remains of Louie Speas (Mrs. Holloway) and Will Speas. We speak of them in the familiar terms of school-days, because it was then that we first knew them and learned to love them. Blest be their memory! Their aged father, Mr. John Speas,, lives near the church. It was our privilege to be entertained in his home for supper, Sunday evening, in company with Pastor Whitaker.

After the morning service we had a delicious dinner with friends on the church grounds, and then went to Tabernacle church for the adjourned session of the first quarterly conference. A large delegation was present, with all the churches represented by two. Much business came before the conference, and for more than two hours we gave earnest, and we trust, well-guided attention to these matters. This charge is made up of splendid people, and we doubt if they have discovered themselves. They are capable of larger local programs, and of a more generous response to the work of the conference. When they become alive to their strength, the charge will begin to have the growth of which it is worthy. An itemized budget statement was given to each church, and adopted by the conference. The total financial budget is only $3.30 per member, certainly not a large amount for a charge so able as this one. Pastor Whitaker has been making repairs on the parsonage, and the trustees were ordered to make still other repairs, and prorate the expense to the different churches. Special days, monthly offerings for Children's Home, and other conference interests were stressed before the conference. We trust that earnest attention will be given by the officials to all of these interests.

Sunday night we were at Harmony Grove, and enjoyed worshiping with the congregation there. Only a little could be seen of this church, as we were there at night, and only for a short time. After the sermon the conference interests were stressed, and one subscription secured to THE HERALD. This church is on a public highway, and a marker on the roadside tells the passer-by what church it is—a good example to other churches.

Pastor Whitaker is alive to the interests of his charge, and is anxious to serve in the most helpful way. We hope and pray for him and his people a fruitful year in Kingdom service.

Journals

According to act of conference, pastors are to remit for Journals in 30 days after receiving them. (See Journal, page 25). Send check to Rev. C. W. Bates, Greensboro, 1113 Bellevue Street. And, brethren, please attend to this promptly, so Bro. Bates may pay whatever bills are to be met out of this money.

Stewardship

By order of the conference, February is Stewardship month. We are calling on pastors to stress this from every pulpit. Nothing can be more important than for our people to have a scriptural understanding of their obligation to God, as his stewards. He expects of us, Self, Service, Substance. Our religious happiness and success can be realized only when we render to God our dues. The standing committee on Stewardship will be found on page 79 of Journal. We hope that this committee will be active in keeping this matter before the church during February.

Herald

Asheboro is the only charge reported so far as receiving the allotment of HERALD increase subscriptions. Other charges say that they can be counted on for their totals. We trust that the report this week may show a gratifying increase. THE HERALD should be in every M. P. home in our conference, and surely more copies of the Methodist Protestant should come to North Carolina. Push the work, brethren, until you secure your allotment.

Budgets

Is it necessary to put off until the end of the year the paying of church obligations? Is it good business? Is it good religion? Why, then, do we do it? I suppose it is just because we have gotten in the habit of doing it, and habits are hard to break. But it is not impossible to break them—even one as long standing as this. Won't some charge prove it to us, several charges, let us say, that the proof and the inspiration may be all the greater, by paying the A. C. B. during these three months, January, February and March? We are not going to neglect the G. C. B. It is just as important as the other. But our idea is to get the A. C. B. out of the way, and then we will have all the remaining part of the year to collect the General Budget. Brethren, please let us urge that you help in this matter. Get your collections now, if you want large returns at the end.

Pastors' Salaries

We have been surprised at the small amount some of our pastors have received to date on salaries. We do not believe that this is a lack of appreciation, on the part of the people, of the pastor. A poor program of church finance, I think, explains it. The people have just gotten into the habit of doing this way, and the pastor is the unfortunate victim. Bro. Steward, won't you see to it that your charge gets out of this habit? You will be happier, and your charge will be more progressive when you do. Try it, won't you, please.

Gratitude Gift

We have just returned from Pittsburgh where we attended a meeting of the Gratitude Gift Committee. Dr. Straughn reports that several of the smaller conferences have already paid their allotments, and a general feeling of hopefulness prevails regarding all the conferences. Of course this does not mean that there are no difficulties, but rather that the difficulties will be surmounted. The allotment for North Carolina is $12,000—less than 50 cents per member. Surely we shall not stagger at this! Love does not stop to count the cost; and this is love's gift that we are asked to make. When the committee is ready to give us an opportunity to show our love, let us be ready with open minds, hearts, and pocket books. Dr. Straughn, the campaign manager, will be with us during the first of February for some group meetings and larger inspirational meetings. All of the conferences throughout the connection are setting up their campaigns, and there is no place for doubt about the outcome. It must be done, and some of the conferences have already done it. In due time we must be in that list.

Appointments

Jan. 27. With committee on church extension and survey at Spencer, Kannapolis and Charlotte.

Jan. 28-29. Yarborough.

Feb. 1-5. With Dr. Straughn.

Feb. 3. With Young People's Board in meeting at High Point.

Feb. 9. With Concord Church Brotherhood.

Feb. 12. With Connelly Springs charge.

With an abounding interest in every pastor and every charge, and with earnest prayers for the guidance and power of our Great Head, I am,

Fraternally,

January 25. S. W. TAYLOR.

MY MOTHER'S GOD

At a fashionable party a young physician present spoke of one of his patients whose case he considered a very critical one. He said that he was very sorry to lose him, for he was a noble young man, but very unnecessarily concerned about his soul, and that the Christians increased his agitation by talking with him and praying with him. He wished Christians would let his patients alone. Death was but an endless sleep, the religion of Christ a delusion, and its followers were not persons of the highest culture and intelligence.

A young lady sitting near, and one of the gayest of the company, said, "Pardon me, doctor, but I cannot hear you talk thus, and remain silent. I am not a professor of religion; I never knew anything about it experimentally; but my mother was a Christian. Times without number she has taken me to her room, and with her hand upon my head she has prayed that God would give her grace to train me for the skies. Two years ago my precious mother died, and the religion she so loved during life sustained her in her dying hour. She called us to the bedside and, with her face shining with glory, asked us to meet her in Heaven; and I promised to do so. And now," said the young lady, displaying deep emotion, "can I believe that this is all a delusion? that my mother sleeps an eternal sleep? that she will never waken again in the morning of the resurrection, and that I shall see her no more? No, I cannot, I will not, believe it." Her brother tried to quiet her, for by this time she had the attention of all present. "No," said she, "brother, let me alone; I must defend my mother's God, my mother's religion."

The physician made no reply, and soon left the room. He was found shortly afterwards pacing the floor of an adjoining room, in great agitation and distress of spirits. "What is the matter?" a friend inquired. "Oh," said he, "that young lady is right. Her words have pierced my soul." And the results of the conviction thus awakened were that both the young lady and physician were converted to Christ, and are useful and influential members of the Church of God.

Readers, stand up for Jesus at all times and in all places wherever you hear His name reviled, or His counsel set at naught. Rather let the language of your heart be, "God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ." C. W. SAUNDERS.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

Letter From China

The following letter was sent to Rev. C. G. Soderbom, since his arrival in America, to be given to the Union Board of Foreign Missionary Administration. I pass it on down to the whole constituency of the Methodist Protestant Church. This is just as it was written. No correction of words or phrases.

Tung Shih Pu of the Methodist Protestant Mission.
Kalgan, China.
August 23, '27.

Board of the Methodist Protestant Mission
U. S. A.

Dear gentlemen and ladies:

We have not written you directly during these years, but we never forget in prayers. Heartily thank you for having planned and spent much money and thought to make our China Church better.

We regret to say that our Civil war continues for several years and we although had some suffering directly and indirectly but we can stand still among such bad influence. Fortunately we still have this working opportunity for Christ. Beside Civil war we also have earthquake and flood. Is the end of the world coming soon? Does Jesus Christ come again soon? We should urge each other and prepare to wait our Christ.

Nowadays as the influence of society, the tendency of the human mind, the development of the material and the progress of the science some young men are mistaking that religion is not suitable and the hindrance of science. Therefore they begin to oppose religion. But we are sure such troublsome comes from the mistaking of the oppositionists. It will come out clearly at the end. We also believe that God wish make China Church purer by such influence. In some of the southern provinces of China they had greater suffering but they also had many new members at the same time. Once two thousand people were baptized. We just make you know much clearer the true condition of China Church. It is not as bad as the paper told. We hope you don't be discouraged in the Holy work in China and ask you earnestly to help us upon the want we have in China.

Rev. Soderbom has been in China more than thirty years and he knows the Chinese very well and has had a good record already. By the way of his return to America he will report the particulars of the China Church. Mrs. Soderbom came to China not as long as her husband but she helps the women and girls much and every one loves her. We hope that they two come again as soon as they can.

Now we are more enthusiastic in our duties in order to lead the oppositionists to come to Jesus. We do hope you send more men and ladies to come over to help us as it needs.

We were safe during this summer. Hoping God be with you.

Sincerely yours,
TUNG SHIH PU.

As explained in the articles containing the reports from the various fields, the Tung Shih Pu is a sort of Executive Committee which has been selected by our missionaries and the workers on the field to look after the interests and to carry on the work in the absence of the missionaries from the field during the war. They are very attentive to and faithful in these responsibilities thus thrust upon them.

Certainly the above letter is a Macedonian call for help on the part of those who see the situation and have the great work of saving China at heart. It goes to show that the need is still there and, though there will be more or less change in the carrying on of the work after the war and even in the years to come, yet there is still the cry and the need for foreign missionaries in this populous country with its millions still unsaved.

No, let us not get discouraged, or feel that there is no more need for missionaries or money, but let us rather prepare now for more men and money that when the added opportunity comes for real service at the close of this dreadful Civil war we may be ready to respond to their clarion call to "send more men and ladies to come over to help us as it needs."

S. W. ROSENBERGER, Executive Secretary.

ATLANTIC CITY GLEANINGS

The annual sessions of the Council of Church Boards of Education and of the Association of American Colleges provide an opportunity for those interested in Christian education to come in touch with the leaders of other denominations and to consider together problems common to all. The meetings this year were held at Atlantic City and proved very helpful. It is next to impossible to survey adequately conferences of this character in a brief article. Possibly some of the more striking things which were said may be of interest.

Dr. R. L. Kelly. The colleges are giving what we believe are the fundamentals of a liberal education. In a certain great state institution 84 per cent of the students are in the freshman and sophomore classes. Of the 16 per cent found in the junior and senior classes 40 per cent came from some liberal arts college.

Dr. W. C. Covert. The Christian college is the only educational institution meeting the modern educational needs. Its atmosphere is more favorable to the unique service of the small Christian college.

Miss Mary B. Brady, director of the Harmon Foundation. Seventy-five per cent of the correspondence with college students shows carelessness. Defective grammar and sloppiness are universal. Our return payments are on the average better from the students coming from the smaller colleges.

Mr. Trevor Arnett. State institutions have increased their fees 100 per cent while privately supported institutions (which includes church schools) increased heirs 69 per cent. These facts were found in a survey of 149 institutions.

Dr. Floyd W. Reaves. A survey of 32 schools in the North Central Association reveals some such facts as the following: First, a college should have $5,000 endowment for each student enrolled. Second, the average annual cost of educating a student is $266. Third, the student tuition and fees provide for 62 per cent of his education. Fourth, the average salary paid in the accredited institutions is $2,464. Fifth, the cost of educating a student during his junior and senior years is 70 per cent greater than during the freshman and sophomore years. Sixth, it appears that the present financial requirements of the standardizing agencies do not guarantee an adequate expenditure for the education of the student. Neither do these requirements result in a satisfactory salary scale for the teachers.

Dr. Gilbert Lovell. Many Christian students are actuated by other than Christian motives in the choice of their life work.

Dr. Thomas J. Jones. Our theological seminaries are among the most ineffective of any of our educational agencies. We are not close enough to realities in our educational program. The missionary goes to the foreign field to share his experience with his brothers and sisters of other lands.

Dr. R. L. Kelly. One of America's leading college presidents said to me, "I am discouraged about getting the right kind of men and women for my faculty." He seeks the highest type of Christian character for all places, whether they are to teach chemistry, language, mathematics or religion.

President Murray Bartlett. The problem is not to make a student study but to make him want to study.

Dean H. E. Hawkes. The ideal college course is the one that fits the student's needs.

Professor Mark A. May. Personality is the first fundamental factor in character education. Children who go to private schools seem more honest than those who go to the public school. Investigations reveal that 40 per cent in the latter were dishonest and only 11 per cent in the former. The school of high morale shows a high per cent of honesty. When there is a conflict between school authorities and students there is a high per cent of cheating.

FRANK W. STEPHENSON.

THE GRATITUDE GIFT—WHY MAKE IT?

Because We Are 100 Years Old

It is a great thing to have lived and served for a hundred years, so just because we are 100 years old something should be done about it, but that within itself would not call for any very great gifts of gratitude. It would simply call for a remembrance. We should celebrate because we are 100 years old, even if there were no other reasons; but there are greater and deeper reasons for our gifts of gratitude to God.

Because We Believe in the Methodist Protestant Church

We should make our gifts because we believe in the Methodist Protestant Church. The Pilgrim Fathers sought religious freedom, as well as political freedom, when they came to America. That same spirit actuated our Revolutionary Fathers. John Wesley, the father of Methodism, came to this country preaching and teaching justification by faith, experimental religion, and church government by the people. When Methodists drifted away from this one teaching of church government by the people, our fathers sought to bring the church back into freedom of action and freedom of thought. Because of their struggles the Methodist Protestant Church was formed, and for a hundred years it has steadfastly stood for the mutual rights of the ministry and the laity in the government of the church.

It is not too much to say, I think, that the principles of church government set forth by our fathers and fostered by the Methodist Protestant Church are permeating every Protestant ecclesiastical body in America; for when the spirit of America gets hold of individuals they must have freedom in church government as well as in state and national government. So with all our hearts we believe in the Methodist Protestant Church, and we want our children and other young people about us to have the privilege of living, worshipping and serving in such a church, so we gladly make our gifts for her perpetuation.

So We May Begin the Second Century Unhampered

We should make our gifts so that we may begin our second century of service unhampered. We have truly been blessed of God in the splendid development and progress of a century. From a small beginning with a few people scattered over several states, God has led on under the smilings of His providence until today we number nearly 200,000 strong in America, with a constituency of certainly 300,000 people. And also with missions in Japan, China and India, and with our splendid institutions at home and abroad which are caring for hundreds of young people in their preparation for larger things in life. Under our rapid progress, and facing a lack of liberality on the part of many of our people, our boards have become hampered with their obligations. By the grace of God the next century must be a hundred fold greater century for our democratic church in a democratic country, so we are to make our gratitude gifts that we may be free in the opening years of the second century to do greater things for God and for humanity.

Because We Are Glad and Happy

We should make our gifts of gratitude because we are glad and happy in service for Him who has so wonderfully and so beautifully led us during one hundred golden years of service. We praise God today for our church with its principles of freedom. We praise God for our fathers and mothers, who, amidst the hardships, and privations, and heartaches of the early days of our church, stood fast in the liberty wherewith Christ had made them free, and who thus gave to us so splendid a heritage. We praise God for the promise of the future, and in our gratitude gifts we pledge Him anew, that our lives shall be given with new zeal to the promotion of His Kingdom through the Methodist Protestant Church. We thus gladly and joyfully bring our gifts of gratitude to Him because of His goodness, and because we love Him. May God bless the gifts and the givers.

Make Pledges Early

Since February has been designated by our conference as the time to make our gifts, every church in the conference should be planning to secure cash and subscriptions early in February.

When you have pledged your quota please notify Mr. J. D. Ross, Asheboro, N. C., and we will report same in the THE HERALD. Then just as soon as you have collected all the money notify him again and yours will be changed from the "pledged" column to the "paid" column.

Send all money for this fund to Mr. J. D. Ross, Asheboro, N. C.

Faithfully yours,

A. G. DIXON.

WHAT A SMILE OR TOUCH MAY DO

A smile, a word, a touch,
And each is easily given;
Yet one may win
A soul from sin
Or smooth the way to heaven.
A smile may lighten a falling heart,
A word may soften pain's keenest smart,
A touch may lead us from sin apart—
How easily each is given.

OUR STORY PAGE

JOLLY JACKIE

Jackie dearly loved fun. He was nearly always laughing and frequently in mischief. His last name was Jolly, but Jackie's playmates loved to call him Jolly Jackie, and he didn't mind it at all.

Sometimes Papa Jolly would say to his small son, "Jackie, it's all right to have fun, but you must use your head and think in advance whether you are going to hurt anyone's feelings or injure anyone's property."

And Mamma Jolly would say, "Oh, Jackie Jolly, when will you learn that what may seem like a good joke to you may be very distressing to someone else? Real fun, my dear, means that everyone must be able to enjoy it and no one be annoyed in any way."

Jackie would listen, and to do him justice he really meant to be thoughtful and to act like a grown-up person, but he often forgot.

A nice new bungalow had just been finished across the street from where Jackie lived, and a new family with a little girl about his own age had come to live there. Her name was Verna, and she was rather a timid little thing, as she had no brothers and never had played with boys before.

She looked with a great deal of admiration upon Jolly Jackie, and Jackie just loved to show off. It pleased him immensely to see Verna throw out her hands and to hear her say, "Oh, Oh! You just better watch out," at the same time opening her blue eyes very wide while the dimple deepened in her cheek and the pink flush mounted to the edge of her curly yellow hair.

This particular afternoon, Mamma Jolly was giving a little party and she had invited Verna's mother to come over and meet the neighbors. It was agreed that the children should stay at Verna Reed's home, and Mrs. Reed assured Mrs. Jolly that Martha, the cook, would keep an eye on them.

Jackie was in his element.

"See what a big man I am," he exclaimed as soon as he arrived, and promptly turned a somersault, almost upsetting the little table near the window with the bowl of gold fish on it. Verna ran to get her new box of paints so he wouldn't turn any more somersaults, and Jackie was all ready for the paints.

"I'm one fine artist!" he boasted. "Want to see me do it?"

Martha looked in at the door and smiled at the children.

"Have a nice time," she said, "and if you are good and will let me finish my ironing, I'll make some nice frosted cakes for supper, and you children shall have some."

"Get some water," ordered Jackie. "We's got to have water to paint with."

So Verna May went and got a cupful, and Jackie poured far more than he needed into the little water cups.

"I've got to have lots of colors," he said, and suiting the action to the word, he began to soften up a lot of the different little cakes of paint.

"This," said Jackie with a flourish of his hand, "will be very nice to paint on, and everything I make will look lovely. I think I'll paint a house first," and without waiting for any remarks from Verna, he climbed upon a chair, and soon the smooth, white wall of the bungalow was decorated with a bright green house, with a pink roof, with orange colored smoke coming out of a red chimney.

"I don't think that's nice at all," Verna pouted. "Whoever saw a pink roof? You better rub it out!"

"Rub it out!" frowned Jackie. "I should say not!" and he leaned his paint-covered hand against the wall right at the corner of the house.

It was so funny that Verna laughed and laughed, although she was wondering whether her father and mother would like that kind of a picture on the wall or not.

The laugh was enough applause for Jolly Jackie. He hopped down off the chair and pushed it out of the way.

"I'll paint a man next," he said. "This is the man who lives in the house, and he has his pockets full of money and can buy whatever he likes. He lives mostly on ice cream cones."

The man was soon finished.

"What has he got his arms stuck out like that for?" inquired Verna. "I never saw a man go around like that," and she hopped up and down with glee.

"Oh, that's easy," grinned Jackie. "He is trying to catch a greased pig, and here's the pig."

Sure enough, a purple pig with a fat body and very slender legs and a curly, orange-colored tail appeared. Jackie touched up the man's hat with some light blue paint.

"There," he beamed, "what do you think of that?"

"I don't believe I think much of it," remarked a man's size voice.

The two children turned to see Mr. Reed standing in the door and eyeing the working of the young artist with disapproval.

"Young man," demanded Verna's father, "if you are going to cut up such didoes as that, I don't believe we will let you come over to play with Verna any more. I'm surprised at you!"

"Oh! Oh! Oh!" cried Martha, coming in from the kitchen with the frosted cakes. "Did anybody ever see the like of that—and I thinkin' what quiet little angels they were. It's no frosted cakes they'll be gettin'. I'll take them right back."

Jackie burst into a loud wail. He loved frosted cakes, and if he couldn't play with Verna any more, he would never have another ride behind her Shetland pony. And then an idea struck Jackie. Poor little Verna was being punished by not being allowed to have frosted cakes, or to play with him —and he had done all of the mischief! The world seemed like a very desolate place, and it was entirely possible that if his mother learned of it, he would have nothing but bread and milk and be sent to bed at once.

There were steps in the hall and Papa Jolly came in.

"I've come for Jackie," he said. "The party is nearly over."

He looked from one to the other and then at the wall. Jackie still had the box of paints in his hands. A very stern look came over Papa Jolly's face.

"Did you do that, Jackie?" he demanded, but before Jackie could reply, Verna had run across the floor and clasped him about the knees.

"Please don't be cross," she pleaded, "he's an artist," and acting on a sudden impulse, Jackie put the box of paints over on a chair and ran and seized Mr. Reed's hand.

"Please don't be cross with Verna," he begged. "She didn't do a thing wrong, and I didn't think about spoiling the wall. If you'll just let us play together, I'll give you every penny I've got in my bank, and I'll try never to do another wrong thing if I can help it as long as I live."

"That's quite a big promise," remarked Mr. Reed, winking at Papa Jolly, "and if you think you can keep that promise, we'll see about letting you have some more rides behind the pony."

"That's very generous of you," said Papa Jolly, "but I am very, very much ashamed that my son has done such a thing as that. Of course I'll pay ——"

Mr. Reed drew a paper out of his pocket.

"Read that, and have a comfortable chair," he invited. "The party is just beginning to come out of your house now. You'll notice that the paper I have handed you is a contract to have every room in this bungalow redecorated. It was signed about an hour ago. Neither my wife nor I like plain white walls—it looks much like a hospital. So I thought I would surprise her by telling her tonight that all she had to do was to pick out the kind of decorations she wants, for I have found a man who will do the work at a very reasonable figure."

Jackie didn't quite understand why it was that both men laughed just as though they were boys themselves, but somehow or other the children knew that the storm had blown over, and everything was all right once more. The relief was great, to Jackie at least. He returned to Mr. Reed.

"I'll be a really and truly good boy after this," he promised earnestly.

"I believe you mean it," nodded Mr. Reed, and Jackie surely did.—Selected.

"I CANNOT AFFORD TO LOSE"

It was evening, the time when the offices and stores closed and an army of people flood the streets. Newsboys were busy calling their papers on every street corner. On one corner a man was seen searching his pocket for the proper coin with which to buy the latest news, while a small salesman held a paper in outstretched hand. The man, still fingering his pennies, suddenly said, "Sonny, I'll toss you whether I'll give you five cents or nothing for your paper."

The little fellow, as if not quite understanding, only stared.

"Say," continued the man, "I'll toss you to see whether I am to give you ten cents or nothing for the paper."

The boy withdrew the proffered paper, as if half afraid of the stranger and his unusual offer, and remained silent.

"What do you say, my boy? I'll toss you whether I give you a dollar for your paper, or nothing. Will you do it?"

By this time there was a crowd gathered around. The interest was intense, and the silence unusual for a city street corner. At last the boy spoke, "I cannot afford to lose, sir." And he turned away.

He was tempted; all could see that. But his thin cheeks, tattered coat, and perhaps a vision of his toiling, widowed mother who depended on his meager earnings, restrained him. He dare not risk his scant possessions even to the extent of three cents.

The man was deeply moved, and quickly reaching his side, thrust a generous bill into a cold little hand. Others did the same.

"I cannot afford to lose," the small boy had said. But how truly wise he was! And what boy or girl can afford to lose Christ? "What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole word and lose his own soul?" Make sure you are saved.—Selected.

THE PERIL OF CARD PLAYING

The late Dr. Wilbur Chapman used to relate an incident which shows the danger of trying to mix worldly things with religion. It is as follows:

A tramp once entered an evangelistic meeting. At the close it was thrown open for any one to speak. The tramp arose and said: "This is the chapel I used to attend when I was a little boy. My father was an officer of this church. He used to sit in that pew. There were seven of us boys in a Sunday school class, and we loved and respected our teacher very much. She used to take us to her home on Saturday afternoons, where we had music and refreshments and then a look over the lessons for the next day. After a bit, in order to keep us interested, she introduced us to cards. She taught us how to play them, and showed us a number of tricks with the cards. We soon began to ask her to show us a few more tricks, and to give us a little less of the lesson and a little more of the cards. Shortly after that we stopped going to her house, and we took to cards and cigarettes at other places. Then we learned to gamble, and as a matter of course we left the Sunday school and her evening class altogether.

"I want to tell you what has become of those boys. Two of those seven have been hanged; three others are in state prisons for life; the sixth one, if the police knew where he is, would be there, too; I am the seventh, and if the police knew I was here, I would be behind the bars in double quick time. All I have got to say is that I do wish my Sunday school teacher had never taught us how to play cards."—The Boy's World.

—Typograpichal errors are easily made and easily overlooked by the proof-reader, but we never expected Dr. Broomfield to appear in The Methodist Recorder as Dr. Brownfield.

—Gipsy Smith, Jr., preached for ten days in Greensboro under the auspices of the First Presbyterian Church, closing last Sunday night. He is a very earnest preacher with a dramatic manner and does not fail to get attention.

—Adrian College, the editor's alma mater, has been engaged for some months in an effort to raise an endowment fund of $500,000. We are glad to read that over four-fifths of this amount has already been pledged and that there is good hope that the entire amount will be subscribed.

—Senator Borah expresses the judgment of many when he declares that the program for the construction of a big navy is an insane policy leading probably to war and certainly to increased taxes. He calls on those opposed to it to make their opposition known before it is too late.

—"The Victorious Christ" was the theme of a Christian Endeavor convention held recently in India. Excellent speakers brought fine messages of victory, such as "Victory Over Money," "Victory Over Pride," "Victory Over Uncleanness," "Victory Over Satan," "Victory Over Temper," and "Victory Over Death." The average attendance at the sessions was three hundred and fifty.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS

Lesson for January 29, 1928
THE GROWING FAME OF JESUS

Scripture Basis.—Mark 3:7-12; 6:53-56.

Golden Text.—"The common people heard Him gladly." Mark 12:37.

THE PLACE

As we study New Testament history, we need to get a clear conception of the land where the various and varied events occurred. In our childhood, and many of us have the same idea since we have become men and women, we obtained the erroneous conception that Palestine is as large as the United States. This is probably due to the many places where important events happened being mentioned in the Bible, and to the large-sized maps used in our Sunday schools to show clearly the places of sacred memory.

As a matter of fact, New Hampshire or Vermont, with a little more than 9,000 square miles, would cover the extent of this country. A glance at a map of the world, or even of Asia, will reveal its insignificance geographically. Dr. Fosdick, in his book, "A Pilgrimage to Palestine," says, "From Dan to Beersheba has come to sound like a long way; as a matter of fact, it is about 150 miles; and as one moves north the distance narrows until the Sea of Galilee is a little over 25 miles from the Bay of Acre."

Hence, when the lesson tells us that the people came to Jesus at the Sea of Galilee from Jerusalem and Judea, Idumaea (south of Judea), beyond (or east of) Jordan, and about Tyre and Sidon (in Phoenicia on the coast of the Mediterranean), we may conclude that the distances are not far. Not far? Not to us today, who travel hundreds of miles in a day by means of automobile, train or even aeroplane. But what must it have been to the weak and diseased people, who had to travel on donkeys, or camels, but mostly on foot? Do you think they wanted to see Jesus very badly? Did they have very much faith to believe that He was able to heal their afflicted bodies, or those of their relatives and friends, whom they brought to the Christ? How much faith do we exercise today in the power of Jesus, of whom it is said, "He is the same yesterday, today, and forever?" These questions are worthy of serious consideration.

The Popularity

That Jesus became popular is without question. Who isn't popular who exerts healing power over physical diseases? Let a faith healer, as they are called, whose reputation precedes him, come to town; people will flock to see and hear him for miles around, and will permit him to experiment on them and their loved ones in an effort to cure them of their diseases. Let a medical doctor get a reputation of being able to effect permanent cures for various stubborn and dangerous diseases, and folks in all walks of life and from all places will seek him. How precious has health been to humanity all through the ages!

Jesus was a Healer of bodily ills, 'tis true, but He was more than that. He had a winsomeness that was different from any other man. He had a message far above that of the Scribes and Pharisees—so different, so appealing. He had a power that excelled all others, and when He touched their afflicted bodies, He likewise spoke peace to their sinful souls, and they went on their way rejoicing in the new knowledge of the God of Love.

"Jesus! the name high over all,
In hell, or earth, or sky;
Angels and men before it fall,
And devils fear and fly."

WHERE DO YOU FIT?

Where do you fit in this world of ours,
With its hustle and bustle and work;
Are you one of the throng that helps it along—
Or are you with those who shirk?

Do you hit the job with a smile or frown;
Do you carry a grouch all day;
Are you one of the flock that watches the clock;
Are you workin' for more than pay?

Is your job man-sized and worth the while,
When you've tallied up your score;
Are you keepin' fit and doin' your bit,
And perhaps a wee bit more?

Are you one of the average just drifting along;
Are you listed as Profit or Loss;
Are you stallin' for time or startin' to climb;
How much are you puttin' across?

Just pull in your slack and count up your score,
Locate what you're aimin' to hit—
Don't waste ammunition and all your ambition
But find out just where you fit.
—FRANK A. COLLINS, in Forbes Magazine.

YOU WILL NEVER BE SORRY

For living a pure life.
For doing your level best.
For being kind to the poor.
For looking before leaping.
For hearing before judging.
For thinking before speaking.
For harboring clean thoughts.
For being generous to an enemy.
For stopping your ears to gossip.
For standing by your principles.
For asking pardon when in an error.
For being square in business dealings.
For giving an unfortunate person a lift.
For promptness in keeping your promises.
For putting the best construction on the acts of others. R. L. L.

ITEMS OF INTEREST TO MISSIONARY WORKERS

A leaflet on "Books and Graded Material for Missionary Education" (1928-1929) can be obtained for the asking from our own Methodist Protestant book concern, 516 N. Charles Street, Baltimore, Md. Just ask for "Preliminary Announcement Books and Graded Material for Missionary Education, 1928-1929." This folder is issued by the Missionary Education movement and Council of Women for Home Missions and the central committee on the United Study of Foreign Missions.

If you don't know what to do with any group of young people from the beginners through the adult and young people's department, this folder will give you valuable suggestions.

Those people who are on the lookout for a good play to give in connection with their thank-offering program will not go wrong if they get "The Color Line," by Irene Taylor MacNair. This is a remarkably strong play of present-day China. Characters are: president of an American college, three college girls, two college boys (one a Chinese). Simple setting (president's office), and no special costumes except one military uniform. Time, 30 minutes. Price, 25 cents. Three books are all any group would want and the play could be given with one book.

I saw this play given at the Student Volunteer Conference in Detroit during the Christmas holidays and know it is not only easy to give but extremely effective. This also can be obtained from our own book concern but it might be quicker to order directly from Missionary Education Movement of U. S. and Canada, 150 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

NOTICE—ATTENTION

$500, $300, and $200 in cash, and gold, silver and bronze medals are offered as prizes by the Committee in charge of the "National Oratorical Contest on Outlaw-War Treaties."

The contests may be held at any time until World Goodwill Day, May 18, 1928. Contestants must be of high school age. Nearly a hundred outstanding educational and church leaders in all parts of the country constitute the sponsoring committee. Full particulars may be secured from the secretaries, A. C. Watkins, 532 17th Street Northwest, Washington, D. C., or S. L. Gulick, 105 East 22 Street, New York City.

A teacher was giving his class a lecture on charity. "Willie," he said, "if I saw a boy beating a donkey, and stopped him from doing so, what virtue would I be showing?"

Willie (promptly)—"Brotherly love."

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

State Street Church.—At the 11 o'clock hour last Sunday morning the sacrament was administered. At the opening of the service Mrs. Bethea presented the church the second section of the communion service. Each section holds 37 glasses. Mrs. Bethea gave the first section some time ago and as this had become too small she gave the additional one Sunday. Mr. Curtis Koonts, as spokesman for the congregation and entire membership, expressed our gratitude in beautiful and well chosen words.

On Wednesday night of last week the Christian Endeavor Society gave a social that was much enjoyed by all who attended. A pleasing feature of this was a reading given by Miss Cleo Spainhour. Refreshments were served in the basement.

Mrs. Harkey's Sunday school class of young ladies met with her at her home last Tuesday night for the discussion of plans for enlarging and the general betterment of the class. Combined with business was a delightful social hour of games, music and fun. Mrs. Harkey served delicious refreshments which were highly praised by all who partook.

The Missionary Society will serve an oyster supper next Friday night in the church basement.

Mrs. Wilcox and her children are visiting at the parsonage. REPORTER.

Reidsville.—Pastor Brown brings us splendid messages every Sunday. Our congregations are not as large as we would like to have. Several of our regular attendants are sick and we miss them. At yesterday morning's service the Lord's Supper was observed.

We have good attendance at the Intermediate Christian Endeavor services and a Senior Christian Endeavor has been organized and will hold its first meeting tonight (January 23) at the parsonage.

Our Foreign Missionary Society is planning to hold a thank-offering service in February. Our Home Misionary Society recently sent some pillow cases to the Children's Home at High Point. The Ladies' Aid met with Mrs. E. L. Somers last week and made plans for a chicken pie dinner.

Our Sunday school is doing nicely with C. R. Reed as superintendent.

Dr. and Mrs. G. R. Brown and Mrs. J. H. Allen attended the Executive Committee meeting of the missionary societies in Greensboro last week.

Mrs. S. J. Kernodle is still confined to her room, and Mr. C. H. Rogers is also on the sick list. Mrs. G. M. Reed is in Long's hospital, Greensboro, for treatment. We wish for them speedy recovery. REPORTER.

High Point.—Examinations were finished at High Point College last Saturday, and registrations for the new semester were made on Monday, January 23. A number of students went to their homes to spend the week-end and to visit friends.

On Sunday morning at 1 o'clock the pulpit was occupied by Dr. S. K. Spahr, who brought us a beautiful and comforting message on "The God of All Grace," from I Peter 5:10. Dr. Spahr said that he has never preached a sermon from this text before, but one of the things that he has coveted in his long ministry is that he might comfort men and women in their hours of sorrow, and bring to their burdened hearts the God of all grace, turning their faces to the morning.

"Every day is a fresh beginning,
Every morn is the world made new;
You who are weary of sorrow and sinning,
Here's a beautiful hope for you,
A hope for me and a hope for you."

At this service the choir rendered the anthem, "Like As a Hart," Miss St. Claire, of the college, played a lovely violin solo for the offertory, and Mrs. John Whitesell and Mr. Clarence Schultheiss sang an unusually beautiful duet, "Rose of Sharon," with fine effect, their voices blending beautifully. At the evening service Prof. J. D. Hardy brought an interesting message on "Present Proofs That Life Is Eternal."

The Junior Mission Circle held its usual monthly meeting on Monday afternoon at the church. Mrs. R. M. Andrews and Mrs. J. C. Whitesell are the fine and efficient leaders for this group of bright, interesting boys and girls from six to twelve years of age. There was an attendance of 19 at this meeting. These children sing, draw birds and flowers, make scrap books for the sick, and Mrs. Whitesell tells them stories from "Brave Adventures" and other books. Their dues of 10 cents per month are divided between the Home and Foreign Missionary work. These children are being taught to lead in prayer and to preside at any kind of a meeting. This is indeed a live organization and worthy of the support of the grown-ups. Miss Dorothea Andrews is the president of this interesting circle, and Miss Julia Elizabeth Coe is secretary-treasurer.

A Boy Scout Rally will be held at the church this (Tuesday) evening, when Mr. Hackney, Scout executive for this city, is expected to make an address.

We are very sorry to announce the illness of Mrs. S. S. Coe, who is suffering from sinus trouble. A great many friends join in the hope that she may have an early recovery.

Congratulations are being extended to Mr. and Mrs. Ross H. Davis on the arrival of a little daughter in their home on January 22.

Mr. J. W. Hinkle and family have moved into their handsome new home on Woodrow Avenue.

Mrs. Lewis Teague has as her guest for a week Mrs. Hilda Long Adkins, of Salisbury, Md., who was a school friend at Western Maryland College.

Mrs. D. A. Neese has been going to Greensboro nearly every day to see her niece, Mrs. Sockwell, who is ill in Wesley Long hospital. She is a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Bowman.

We are much pleased to see Mr. C. L. Gray out again after his recent illness.

Orange Chapel, Saxapahaw Charge.—Christmas with its joy and song has come and gone, and with it have gone for a while happy faces and familiar voices; while that January feeling that every one experiences and no one can express has settled down upon us. We are planning, hoping and praying for the best year in the history of our little church at Orange Chapel.

Our pastor, Rev. O. C. Loy, filled his appointment third Sunday, and as usual gave us a very good sermon. The communion service was also observed at this time.

Our Sunday school is not what it should be through the winter months, though a faithful few keep it going.

Our church and community have been made sad by the passing of one of our oldest and best members, Mrs. John A. Thompson, who quietly passed away last Sunday night, being 76 years old. Her funeral was conducted at Orange Chapel on Tuesday by the pastor, O. C. Loy, and former pastor, H. L. Isley. We feel very keenly the loss of this good woman and extend our sympathy to her children; may they follow in mother's footsteps, for we feel and know that in her passing a good woman has gone. M. J. F.

Maple Springs, Forsyth Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. R. C. Stubbins, filled his appointment Sunday night at 7:30. He preached a most helpful sermon from the subject, "Backyard Religion." We all enjoy Brother Stubbins' sermons very much.

We have a very good Sunday school. It is not as large as we would like to see it, but our regular attendance is good.

Since coming to this charge Mrs. Stubbins has been elected teacher of the Mothers' Bible Class. They all appreciate having her as teacher very much.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies met at the church Thursday, January 19, at 2:30, with Mesdames Long, Hine and Baity as joint hostesses. After an interesting program was rendered, delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses. Our next meeting will be held with Mrs. I. W. Baity, February 23.

Our Ladies' Aid is planning to give a supper on Valentine night, proceeds to go to the church.

Pray for us that our church may make progress and that we may work together for God and the Kingdom this year.

IDA M. LONG.

Pleasant Grove.—The fifth Sunday we expect to be with Bro. Trogdon at Lovejoy Church on Why Not circuit. We appreciate the kindness of the people at the Grove in allowing us this privilege. Last summer the Lovejoy people had the misfortune to lose their church by fire. The new pastor, Rev. J. B. Trogdon, has planned an all day service for the fifth Sunday, at which time it is hoped that enough enthusiasm will be aroused to insure the erection of a new modern church building. Under the shadow of this old church and among the hills that surround it, Rev. J. W. Hulin, now pastor of Midland circuit, and this preacher first saw the light of life. It was here amidst the shouts of her godly members, many of whom are now in heaven, that we were born into His Kingdom.

We are pleased to say that Prof. Paul S. Kennett, of High Point College, will preach for our people at the Grove at the 11 o'clock hour Sunday. Our people there will be delighted to hear him. There will be no services at night.

Our first quarterly conference will be held on Tuesday night, January 31, at 7:30. Report blanks have already been given to all official members who will make written reports to the conference.

The Church Brotherhood will hold its January meet in the home of Bro. S. L. Murphrey Saturday night, January 28. The pastor regrets his inability to attend because of his going to Lovejoy Church, but feels sure the Brotherhood will have its usual good time. Bro. I. W. Burton has been the Brotherhood's president since its organization over a year ago and has worked hard for its success.

In closing we want to thank Mrs. S. L. Murphrey for a fine lot of fresh meat which she placed in our car Sunday.

GEO. L. REYNOLDS.

Forsyth Charge.—All five of our churches rendered excellent Christmas programs. Those who made them possible deserve much credit. Christmas brought us greetings of cheer from many places. From our good friends on the Enfield charge; from a number of other charges we have heard, and from friends on our present field.

We have not been pounded after the fashion of some, but have been the recipients of a number of gifts of different kinds from Mr. and Mrs. John Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Gid Smith, of Oak Grove Church; Mr. R. M. Cox and family and "Grandma" Mary Cox, of Hickory Ridge Church; Mrs. Dicie Shamel, Miss Ida Long, Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Long, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Baity, Mrs. T. L. Speas, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Kiger, Mrs. J. F. Baity, Mrs. W. G. Henning, of Maple Springs Church.

The Mt. Carmel Church has recently placed a very beautiful walnut bedroom suite and rug in the parsonage. Of course we deeply appreciate the thoughtfulness and kindness of such people—what pastor would not.

The Sunday schools are doing fine at all the churches except in extreme weather. Cold churches are not inviting. We all like a warm welcome in the winter time. The Christian Endeavor Societies at Mt. Carmel are among the best we have seen and they offer their services to the pastor in any capacity they can possibly serve. The missionary societies of the charge seem to be a little slow at present, but we see signs of new life. We are expecting Rev. Mr. Ballard, of High Point, to give his illustrated lecture on the Holy Land next fifth Sunday night, January 29, at Maple Springs Church.

We are busy now with our church paper, College Special, Journal selling, Anti-Saloon League we believe that's all we are expected to emphasize this month. When you preach at some churches once a month you can see what happens—four "specials" in one day. But why worry? We will doubtless have four brand new ones next month and perhaps still more interesting.

R. C. STUBBINS.

Enfield.—On January 22 the attendance was good considering the extremely cold day. We had two good, practical and profitable sermons. In the evening service Mr. Auman brought us a message about prohibition and the advancements made in industry, commerce, social and moral conditions since the passage of the 18th amendment eight years ago.

Mr. Auman brings us splendid and useful messages each time he comes before us. Let's more of us take advantage of hearing him.

It is a pleasure and inspiration to see at every service Mr. Clay Matthews and Mr. B. R. Kimball. These two men are nearing four score years, yet are in their places every Sunday for Sunday school and for church.

We are sorry a number of our members have been on the sick list and hope each will soon be well.

We have missed Mr. and Mrs. Spivy from Sunday school and church. We are glad Mrs. Spivy is back from the hospital and is better. Mrs. Julian Gray has been sick for quite a while. We hope she can soon be back with us in our services.

We had a nice group of people from Whitakers to worship with us on January 15. We are always glad to have the Whitakers folks, as well as any and all visitors to our services.

Davidson, Pine Hill Church.—Rubie May Coggin, daughter of Robie Coggin, departed this life January 18, 1928, age 10 years. She leaves a father and a mother, five brothers and one sister and a host of friends. A little flower budded on earth to bloom in heaven. She was one of our little collectors in Sunday school. She was loved by all who knew her. Bro. Ridge and Bro. Abram Hill conducted her funeral.

Our prayer meeting and Sabbath school are good. May we all work together in love and friendship and truth during the coming year.

F. L. SMITH.

Pleasant Hill, West Forsyth Charge.—Our Sunday school is progressing nicely; the attendance is very good. New officers and teachers were elected the second Sunday as follows: Superintendent, Prof. W. B. Speas; assistant, Mr. R. G. Holder; secretary and treasurer, Mr. A. R. Long; teachers—senior, Mr. J. D. Anderson; intermediate, Mr. R. G. Holder; assistant, Mrs. W. B. Speas; junior, Miss Lucille Sprinkle; assistant, Miss Lillie Whitman; beginners, Mrs. J. F. Hunter.

We gave our Christmas program December 25. It was heard by a large number of people.

President S. W. Taylor was with us the third Sunday; he preached a splendid sermon. I am sure all present enjoyed the service.

At the Christian Endeavor meeting Sunday night the topic discussed was, "What difference does it make what we do on Sunday?" We had a very interesting meeting. The meetings are held every Sunday night. We have very good attendance but we are hoping to get more members this year. We are planning for a successful year.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies will meet Tuesday evening, February 6, at the home of Mrs. C. G. Hunter.

MRS. ARZIA DAVIS, Reporter.

West End.—The Senior C. E. Society held a business and social meeting Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. V. C. Stockard. A good number were present and plans were made with enthusiasm for future work. A membership campaign will be put on and a committee was appointed to get subscriptions to the M. P. Herald. Following the business discussion, fruit was served by little Miss Marjorie Stockard.

On Thursday evening, January 19, the Philathea class held a most interesting business and social meeting with its teacher, Miss Gladys Routh, at her home on the Randleman road, where she is convalescing from a recent operation. Plans were discussed for an oyster supper to be held in February, the proceeds to be used for our new Sunday school building now being erected. Approximately two hundred dollars have already been raised by them for this purpose. Following an amusing social hour, ice cream and cake were served.

MRS. S. H. STAPLETON.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—Brother Spencer delivered a fine sermon Sunday morning. It seems that his sermons are better every time he preaches. The congregation was very small at the morning service Sunday, owing to the extremely cold weather and sickness in our community.

On the fourth Sunday morning in February we are going to receive the gifts for the centennial campaign. We are hoping to secure a large sum for this gift.

Our Missionary Society met at the parsonage with Rev. and Mrs. Spencer on January 10. A very good meeting.

KATHLEEN SHEARIN, Reporter.

Flat Rock, Vance.—Our pastor, Rev. M. P. Chambliss, continues to give us good soul-stirring sermons. Last Sunday, using as a text "As ye go, preach," he gave some splendid points and much food for thought. After service an effort was made to raise remainder of college assessment, about $3.00 being realized, making total amount raised about $8.00.

There is now on a campaign for subscriptions to the M. P. Herald. We hope to go beyond our conference quota.

As we have sent no report since December, will say the Christmas program was good and very much enjoyed. Offering was over $7.00, which has been forwarded to conference treasurer. A treat of fruit and candy was given each member of the Sunday school.

The interior of the Sunday school rooms has not been completed and attendance has not been as good as before it was so bitter cold.

The weekly prayer meeting met last evening in the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. White, with Miss Mary V. White as leader. Miss White used as her subject, "God, the Owner; Youth, the Steward." A splendid paper prepared by Mrs. A. H. Davis on "Ye are not your own; ye are bought with a price," was read at the meeting. Among other things stressed at the meeting was the M. P. Herald. Our pastor greatly urged that it be read as well as subscribed for, calling attention to several articles of interest to all.

Plans are being made to organize Christian Endeavor. We hope to have both senior and intermediate societies.

The Ladies' Aid Society held its January meeting at the church the first Sunday in January. Very few members were present, owing to zero weather.

The Woman's Home Missionary Society held its January meeting with Mrs. B. W. Jones. Work of society is progressing nicely. Treasurer reported only 75 cents due branch treasurer on this year's apportionment.

Death has again invaded our membership and called from work to reward Mrs. Peter Hester. Mrs. Hester was a member of Flat Rock Church for many years. She had been unable to attend often in recent years, having been ill more than three years. She leaves her husband and two sons, members of our church. They have been and will continue to carry on the work for God and His Kingdom that she began years ago.

It is also with regret we recall the passing of Mrs. Tom Parham. Although an Episcopalian, Mrs. Parham was interested in our church, having at one time taught in our Sunday school.

There has been much sickness among our membership, but most of the sick are on the road to recovery.

M. V. W., Reporter.

First Church, Concord.—The usual services were held Sunday with good attendance. The pastor preached impressive sermons.

The interest in all departments of the Sunday School is increasing. The Young People's class has purchased a piano for their department which adds much to heir worship program. The Intermediate department held its opening program with the Young People Sunday. Misses Ethel Blackwelder and Mettie Brittingham had charge and a splendid program was carried out. We are planning to have instruments in all departments soon.

One of the most interesting and enjoyable meetings was the lecture on last Friday evening by Rev. N. G. Bethea, of Lexington, on his trip to the Holy Land. Mr. Bethea is a most interesting speaker and gave a thrilling description of the entire tour, much to the delight of his entire audience. The lecture covered about an hour and a half, but he did not allow the interest to weaken. He carried also a fine sense of humor which gave sufficient pleasantly to tide over the more dry and informatory ranks of his address. Many who have heard other travelers of the Holy Land said this was the best yet. Mr. Bethea has been heard often by our congregation but never with more relish than Friday evening. A Tithers' League was organized at the parsonage Sunday afternoon and a campaign will be launched for new members.

A Young People's banquet, sponsored by the Young People's class which has 82 members on roll, is planned for Thursday evening, February 2. They are hoping to have 200 young people present, and a fine program of fun and fellowship has been arranged. The Cowell-Ramsay evangelistic party will begin a meeting in our church on Sunday, February 12.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pinion, a daughter, on January 13, 1928.

MRS. D. A. M'LAURIN.

Bessemer City.—As this is the pastor's first report from Bessemer City church, we feel like we have many good things to say about our people. I think we have as good a Sunday School as there is in the conference, according to our membership, and we also have a splendid congregation for our preaching services. Since conference we have received 15 members into our church at Bessemer and we have prospects of several more. On December 24 the children gave a splendid Christmas program which was enjoyed by all; after the program the entire Sunday School was treated and they did not forget their pastor and family. They loaded our car with many good things to eat. On the first Sunday night in January one of our good sisters, Mrs. Annie Stert, gave to our church a communion set which was greatly appreciated by all. Brethren, pray for me that I may lead this people on to greater usefulness in Kingdom service.

MARION C. HENDERSON, Pastor.

Tabernacle Charge.—Our father and son banquet for Tabernacle Church was held at the delightful and hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Coble Friday evening, January 13. Although it was something new to us all, it was a decided success, there being 39 present. After partaking of a sumptuous six o'clock dinner, Mr. W. T. Hanner spoke from the topic, "The Biggest Needs of the Home," and Mr. Worth Trogdon on "The Value of the Church to the Community." Rev. W. M. Loy, pastor of Fountain Place M. P. Church, Burlington, was the visiting speaker. "Fellowship and Service" was his subject. These addresses were interesting and instructive. Appropriate songs were furnished by members of the Tabernacle choir. We are all grateful to Mr. and Mrs. Coble for their hospitality.

A large congregation was present the third Sunday afternoon at Tabernacle for the preaching service. Among the visitors were Misses Anna and Elizabeth Hardin, of Julian, and Rev. H. C. Carmichael, pastor of Moriah Church. We hope they will come again.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Hanner were among the recent callers at the pastor's home, and agreeably surprised us by leaving a fine quantity of home-raised pecans.

A number of our faithful members are kept from church because of sickness. We trust that they will soon be restored to normal health. H. L. ISLEY.

Lincolnton.—We are having good attendance at both Sunday School and preaching. We are having a smallpox epidemic and this is keeping some away from church. Some seem to be as afraid of zero weather as they are of smallpox; this is keeping others away. With all this handicap the attendance in Sunday school will average over a hundred and twenty-five. The Sunday school offerings will average more than eight dollars. When the weather warms up a bit and the smallpox scare is gone and the different industries start running on full time, we are expecting to have a much better report for the Sunday school. The people seem to be more interested in the Sunday school work than thy have been for some time.

The attendance at preaching is very good and Pastor Carson at each preaching service brings us some splendid gospel message.

After the sermon this morning we had a class meeting. There were several testimonials and a reconsecration service which seemed very uplifting and beneficial to all.

We are planning to have a revival in the spring and request the prayers of the people that it might start in Lincolnton and go out blessing the world.

Our Christian Endeavor is also growing in both attendance and interest.

Success to the Herald and its readers.

REPORTER.

Spring Church.—As this is our first report this year, we are glad to say that we have our same pastor back again, Rev. A. D. Shelton. He has preached some wonderful sermons since his return. He makes his message so very clear and plain that any one can understand. He has delivered some of the finest sermons I have ever heard.

The Sunday school was much better in attendance yesterday than it has been this year. We are hoping this not only continues, but that it improves and will grow, both in attendance and in spirit. The same teachers of the Sunday school were re-elected for another year.

Our prayer meetings on the first, third and fifth Sundays are a great help. We are glad to say that most of the people take some part.

With best wishes to the Herald and its readers for a prosperous year in the Master's work. VIRGINIA MASSEY, Reporter.

LOVE

By Robert Lanier

As this great subject has been on my mind for some time, I feel impressed to write a few lines to the Herald. As I am no writer, however, I feel very weak and unworthy to write such a worthy paper, but I feel that my ignorance and weakness do not seem to take this great subject off my mind.

For the past seventeen months the love of Jesus has been on my mind. In a revival meeting on Davidson charge this great love came into my heart as some of my friends and my pastor came to me and asked me if I didn't want to be a Christian. They seemed to be so much interested in me. It was not until then that I saw myself as a sinner. As the tears trickled down my cheeks and my body trembled like a leaf, I soon found myself down on my knees asking God to have mercy on me, a poor sinner. Then that Godly love entered into my heart which has followed me from that day until this, and I have never found words to express this love, for it is greater than I can tell. It has caused me to realize and know what the love of my dear friends has meant to me. It has caused me to know the love of father and mother as I didn't realize what friends and father and mother meant to me until this Godly love entered into my heart, which I trust will ever remain through the few remaining days that I have to stay here.

May we be more determined to try to get this great love into those that do not have it manifested in their hearts. May we never be ashamed to own this love regardless of where we are.

Where did love start from? "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life." (John 3:16.) I have wondered sometimes how He could love me, as wretched and indifferent as I have been, but that love is for all that believe in him.

Time is but a brief space in eternity, and as we count its cycles in days, months and years we are reminded that time with us will soon be no more. So may our speech be always with grace. Time is important with us and we should so consider it.

All that read this, please pray that this great love may always have right-of-way in my heart.

May God ever remember us in much love and tender mercy, and may we all hold up the banner of Jesus who loved us and gave His life for us.

From a Weak and Unworthy Being but Trusting in the Lord.

Payments through missionary societies are not given this week. We hope to give that in full for first quarter in our next report.

This report is encouraging in the number of charges paying to date, 53. It is noticeable, however, that the number paying on the annual conference budget is very small—only 20. The larger number on the G. C. B. is due to Christmas offerings. This should be a suggestion of the value of our special days.

The total amount received for all purposes to date is $1,940.18. This is not a very large showing on a budget of $70,000. The brethren, we trust, will push collections, and very rapidly increase our receipts. It is our earnest hope that every charge may soon have credit in this report.

We are very grateful to both pastor and people for their help in this necessary part of our conference work.

S. W. TAYLOR.

Jan. 25, 1928.

DOES YOUR CHURCH USE THE METHODIST PROTESTANT HYMNAL?

In a recent edition of the Herald, President Taylor suggests that the Music Committee appointed last conference should be heard from soon. Doubtless evidence of its activity should have been observed ere this, but the old plea, lack of time, may be offered as an alibi.

The committee has not been unmindful of its duties, nor has it been entirely inactive. Some effort has already been made to inaugurate a campaign to interest pastors and church members in placing Methodist Protestant hymnals in our churches, in accordance with the action of the Asheboro Conference in adopting the recommendations of the committee of the preceding year.

To declare that our church hymnal should be the one in use above all others is to make a statement of which all of us are aware. Yet, we may ask, have we made any attempt to practicalize our conviction on this matter? Have we been content to purchase any song book that makes its appeal because of its cheapness in price? To do the latter is eventually an expensive proposition.

In the first place, cheap books—or cheap anything else, for that matter—do not last as long as the more expensive. Usually two or three lots of the former have to be bought during the life and usefulness of the other. In the second place, cheap books contain cheap songs, which have a detrimental effect upon the singers and worshipers, whether they realize it or not.

Why not equip your church with Methodist Protestant hymnals? You say the church cannot afford it? Let us ask, could you afford to buy a more expensive food product for your child, when the cheaper thing you have been using keeps him delicate, or makes him sick? What is implied in this crude illustration regarding the physical being is analogous with what occurs in the spiritual life of those who feast upon cheap songs in some of the popular song books. It would be better to buy ten or fifteen or twenty-five of our hymnals to start with, than to have twice or three times that number of other books. Yes, they can be used in the Sunday school, too, for they contain hymns that children and young people like to sing, as well as those precious to the saints of God of advanced years.

Write a brief article for publication in this paper, stating your reasons for believing that the Methodist Protestant hymnal should be used in all of our churches, and declaring that the churches you serve, or of which you are a member, are using, or will soon purchase a quantity of this hymn book. If our accommodating editor can spare the space, he will be glad to publish your article for the inspiration it will give to others to become interested in this matter.

COLORED METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH

The Department of Commerce announces that, according to the returns received, there were in the United States three churches of the Colored Methodist Protestant Church in 1926, with 533 members. All of these churches were located in urban territory.

The total expenditures, as reported by the three churches, amounted to $6,685, including $5,660 for current expenses and improvements and $1,025 for benevolences, missions, etc.

The value of church property (church edifices, furniture, etc.) as reported by the three churches, was $36,000.

Sunday schools were reported by the three churches of this denomination, with 18 officers and teachers and 98 scholars.

All figures for 1926 are preliminary and subject to correction.

Significant Statement

"I desire to regard the Monroe Doctrine as representing the noble action of a President of the United States who prevented the reconquest of America at the time of the Holy Alliance. The Monroe Doctrine was, and ought to remain, the common defensive policy for the territorial integrity of America. The Monroe Doctrine is not only compatible with the sovereignty of America below the Rio Grande, but it is a doctrine giving the greatest force to that right."—President Machado, of Cuba.

DR. ABBOT IS APPOINTED SMITHSONIAN SECRETARY

The famous Smithsonian Institution, at Washington, D. C., has a new secretary. He is Dr. Charles Greeley Abbot, who has been assistant secretary since 1918 and acting secretary since the death of Secretary Charles D. Walcott, last February. The appointment was made by the board of regents of the Smithsonian, of which Chief Justice William Howard Taft is chairman. Dr. Abbot is 55 years old and is a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is an eminent scientist who is recognized as an authority on the sun's radiation.

What the Smithsonian Is

Curiously enough, it was through the generosity of an Englishman—James Smithson—that the Smithsonian Institution was founded. When he died, in 1829, his will provided that his fortune of about $50,000 should go to "the United States of America to found at Washington under the name of Smithsonian Institution an establishment for the increase and diffusion of knowledge among men." It was not until 1846, however, that Congress passed a law accepting the gift and providing for the founding and development of the Smithsonian Institution.

A Private Institution

Many persons think that the Smithsonian is a government institution. It is not. As a statement issued by the board of regents says: "The Smithsonian Institution is not a government bureau. It was privately founded and privately endowed; it is privately directed and privately financed. The government has never made any grants for research directly to the Smithsonian."

However, the government recognizes part of the researches of the Smithsonian Institution as public necessities and appropriates money for their support. The wonderful National Museum in Washington, although a government affair, is under the control of the Smithsonian. The Weather Bureau, Fish Commission, Geological Survey, and many other government establishments are outgrowths of the researches of the Smithsonian Institution. Its researches extend into nearly all the fields of science. It seeks ways and means to make the soil more productive, to increase plant and animal life for food purposes, and to make living conditions better in every possible way. In short, the Smithsonian Institution is a big scientific laboratory for the benefit of the people.

Only Five Secretaries

Since the Smithsonian Institution was established, more than 80 years ago, it has had only four secretaries, besides Dr. Abbot. The first was Joseph Henry, the outstanding American physicist of his time, who has a place in the Hall of Fame for Great Americans. The second secretary was Spencer F. Baird, a great naturalist. He was succeeded by Samuel P. Langley, noted astronomer, physicist, and pioneer in the airplane field. The fourth secretary was the late Dr. Walcott, an eminent naturalist who specialized in geology.—Current Events.

—Bro. J. W. Dixon, superintendent of Calvary Sunday school, is much interested in the work of the school and consequently the school is looking up. It has its mind set on a goal of 200 in attendance each Sunday.

World's Largest Building

Plans are almost completed for the construction in Boston, Mass., of the largest building in the world. It is to be known as the New England Building, Inc. In total floor space it will exceed the General Motors building, in Detroit, Mich., now the world's largest building. It will contain a great department store, a mammoth exhibition hall and hundreds of business offices. There will be two sub basement (basement under a basement) parking spaces for 5,000 automobiles.

—Two women walking in the street were knocked down and one of them seriously hurt by passing autos. Pedestrians as well as drivers must be more careful to avoid collisions. You may have the right of way, but that does not insure your safety. You would better sacrifice some of your minor rights than to sacrifice your life.

—Bro. J. W. Curtis, of Liberty, has been brought to Wesley Long hospital for an operation.

—The Baptist Church at Mebane was burned Sunday morning just at the Sunday school hour. The fire companies of Burlington and Graham were called to assist in controlling the flames. It was so threatening not a service was held in the town. Nothing else suffered at all.

—Bro. J. C. Andrew continues ill.

—Calvary Sunday school had an attendance of 180 last Sunday. The orchestra adds to the attractiveness of the school. This is a new feature.

—Are you thanking God for the good Sunday weather we have been having? Hasn't it been just splendid!

—Calvary people were glad to express appreciation of the services of Miss Vivian Sullivan as organist in a special Christmas gift of money. Miss Vivian is a great help in the music of the church.

Who Wrote the Book of Ecclesiastes?

The casual Bible reader will at once answer:

"Solomon, of course. The first verse of the book reads: 'The words of the Preacher, the son of David, king of Jerusalem.' Solomon was the only son of David who was king in Jerusalem."

But this answer of the casual reader does not convince or satisfy the great Bible scholars, men who can read the book in the original and who are versed in Hebrew literature. They have reached a very different conclusion, or at least many of them have.

They call attention to the fact that the word "son" in the Bible often has the more general meaning of "descendant." Thus in Jesus' account of the rich man and Lazarus, Jesus makes Abraham address the rich man in torment as "son," whereas he was only a remote descendant of Abraham. The writer of Ecclesiastes may have meant to claim only descent from David.

In the 12th verse of the first chapter, the writer says: "I was king over Israel in Jerusalem." Solomon would not have written that, for he was king up to the day of his death.

In the 15th verse the writer claims to have gained more wisdom than all (the kings) that had been before him in Jerusalem; but only David had been king in Jerusalem before Solomon, and had Solomon been the writer he would not have used the word "all."

Then the scholars point out that the social conditions described in the book do not agree with those that prevailed under the reign of Solomon. In I Kings 4:25 we read: "And Judah and Israel dwelt safely every man under his vine and under his fig tree, from Dan to Beersheba, all the days of Solomon." But in the Book of Ecclesiastes we see injustice and oppression prevailing.

But the argument of perhaps greatest weight with the scholars is one that the mere English reader cannot appreciate at all except on the testimony of others. The scholars tell us that in the original of the book appear many words and expressions borrowed from foreign languages, the languages of the people among whom the Jews mingled in the days of their captivity. As Solomon does not employ foreign words and phrases in the two books to which his name is attached (Proverbs and Song of Solomon) it is difficult to understand why he would do so in the Book of Ecclesiastes, even if his linguistic acquirements had qualified him for the task. A more probable supposition, say the scholars, is that the book was written after the captivity or during the captivity, several hundred years after the time of Solomon. Scholars see in the book a poem written for the encouragement of a people under misrule and oppression. The writer for the sake of effect represents himself as a king, wealthy and powerful. He was evidently a man of extraordinary wisdom, a real sage. It is remarkable that in the Book of Ecclesiastes we find the clearest intimation of a future life to be found in all the Old Testament. The conclusion reached after a survey so wide and so prolonged is a most wholesome one: Reverence and obey God, this is the great thing. Nothing else matters much.

Evils That Never Come and Evils That Never Fail to Come

There are two great classes of evils. One class are the products of our own imaginations, a very large and formidable class. The sky is dark and threatening with them. They fill us with dread of a coming storm. They alarm us by day and give us troubled dreams by night. And yet there is never any real danger from them because they are unreal, only figments of fancy. They are hatched out by the mind in our evil moods. Some people are more given than others to the production of imaginary fears, but all of us are more or less guilty. Like snakes that bite and poison themselves, we inject into our own minds the poison gas of evil suspicion. We make ourselves really unhappy by anticipating evils that cannot come.

On the other hand, we go on in stupid indifference to evils that are inevitable, the real consequences of our evil conduct. We use the same power of imagination that fills the air with illusory and unreal evils to clear the air of the real evils that are certain to come in the train of our own deeds. We say to our own souls, Peace, when there is no peace.

How much wiser and better it would be to see things as they are, to recognize dangers that exist and see the unreality of the others. We may find the world harmless and pass through it unhurt, or we may give to the world a mighty advantage over us which it will use to our great hurt if not our utter undoing.

—George Bernard Shaw's view of religion, according to an interview by George Sylvester Viereck in an issue of the Liberty is as follows: "This much I know, looking at life at 70; men without religion are moral cowards, and most physical cowards too, when sober. Civilization cannot survive without religion. Without religion, life becomes a meaningless concatenation of accidents. I cannot conceive of salvation without a religion."

—Darwin, the scientist, could never master any language, his father accused him of being interested only in dogs, shooting, and rat catching and he said he would be a disgrace to the family.

—Reporters may help us by studying brevity in expression. So many other people want space that no one should spread his matter out over unnecessary space.

—Jesus said: Blessed are those who hunger and thirst for goodness, they will be satisfied!

LIBERAL CHRISTIANITY

There is no such thing as liberal Christianity. The term is a misnomer. There is only one Christianity; the so-called liberal Christianity is an adulteration, or counterfeti. It is a case of "stealing the livery of heaven to serve the devil in." In the very nature of the case there can be but one Christianity. Like its Founder, it is the "same yesterday, and today, and forever." So-called progressive Christianity is another misleading term. The more "progressive" it is the more un-Christian it is. When it becomes "progressive" it becomes human, robbed of its supernaturalness and its divineness. The only way to be progressive in the true sense, in religion, is to be reactionary. Go back to first principles. "Inquire for the old paths and walk therein." But this is very offensive to the "liberalist." With him, everything must be in a flux, in religion. Nothing ever settled. They are the crowd that is "ever learning and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth." There is a statement of one of their prominent writers, in a book, Liberal Christianity, in which he says that a "liberalist never considers anything settled." Any one can see that his statement is true, from their writings; but the above quotation is his positive unqualified statement. And then call such a conglomeration of uncertainty Christianity is an absurdity. Christianity is composed of certainties. Deals in certainties—the eternal verities. The idea of a cult, creed, or whatever we choose to call it, that never considers anything "settled," calling itself Christianity, and also "liberal," "progressive," and all such high sounding nonsense, is an offense to the true saints of God. The real facts and doctrines of Christianity are as unchangeable as God himself. And this crowd that never considers anything "settled," wanting to, and doing all they can, to supplant real, traditional, orthodox Christianity, with this adulteration of the devil, is a situation that demands the most earnest, uncompromising, fearless treatment from those "who do know their God." The attitude of this "liberal" crowd is sickening to the last degree. Claiming that they are "ahead" of everybody else, even of Jesus Christ himself, and yet, with them, nothing is ever "settled." "Professing themselves to be wise, they become fools."

Claiming that traditional, orthodox Christianity is a failure, but that their adulteration, or counterfeit, of the real and the only Christianity, is the Eureka of the ages!

The term, "liberal Christianity," is a camouflage and smoke-screen to try to hide their real infidelity. A people who reject all the supernatural in the Bible have no right to call themselves Christian. Reduce the Bible to a merely human book, and Jesus Christ to a mere man. Deny the fall of man, the awful and fearful fact of original sin, the need of the new birth, the divine inspiration of the Bible, the Deity of Christ, the personality of the Holy Spirit, the resurrection of the body, the second, personal coming of Jesus Christ, and, of course, the blood atonement, etc., etc. Such persons have no right to call themselves Christians, as they deny, reject, and repudiate everything vital in Christianity.

They make a great noise about the "young people." That orthodox Christianity has been a failure. That it does not appeal to the "young people," but that their counterfeit, adulteration humbug does. The whole effort is to prejudice the young people against real Christianity. Carries the implication and insinuation that children and young people have never had any attention shown them by the real orthodox church, which is wholly untrue. The older denominations have "brought their children up in the church," instructing and catechizing them in the doctrines of Christianity. While the Methodisms have endeavored, as well as some others, to get their children "converted," brought to repentance, and to the experience of regeneration or the New Birth. So this whole chatter by the liberalist that orthodoxy has neglected the children and young people, is absolutely false. It is a vile slander on real Christianity and deserves sharp rebuke.

This thing called liberal Christianity is a "refuge of lies," for, as has already been seen, it repudiates everything vital and fundamental in Christianity, from the fall of man to the resurrection of the dead. No fall, no sin in the real original sense, and, of course, no blood atonement, no redemption, no propitiation, no regeneration, no miracles, no supernatural, divine inspiration of the Bible, no personal, divine Holy Spirit, no eternal, omnipotent, pre-existent, divine Christ, co-equal and co-eternal with the Father. Time and space would fail to go further into details. To call this aggregation of denials, repudiation and unbelief Christianity is the blackest falsehood conceivable. It is a tissue of falsehood from beginning to end. How any set of persons, otherwise intelligent, can have the hardihood to call such an aggregation of unbelief Christianity is a mystery. It is not Christianity, but a gigantic humbug of the devil, in which to catch fools. And this kind of counterfeit, adulteration, and humbug, is being industriously and persistently, in some of its forms and phases, peddled all over the country, from some pious, harmless looking type of modernism, all the way into and through Unitarianism to downright rationalism and infidelity. Beware! Look sharp, lest you be caught in some of its snares!

We repeat, there is no such thing as "liberal Christianity." Whenever it becomes "liberal" it ceases to be Christian.

The term "liberal," what can it mean? It can only mean that the believers in this kind of thing take the "liberty" to reject anything and everything in the Bible that does not suit them. And, of course, that is precisely what they do. And the term "liberal," as used by them, seems to carry the insinuation that real, orthodox Christianity is illiberal, hard and exacting, which is false. Jesus said, "My yoke is easy and my burden is light." So-called liberal Christianity is so constructed as to be well-pleasing to the carnal, fleshly mind —the unregenerate. Gives "liberty" to "love the world," enjoy the world, have a "good time," as it requires no contrition, godly sorrow for sin—no real evangelical repentance. Like those of whom the apostle speaks: "While they promise them liberty, they themselves are the servants of corruption."

True, orthodox Christianity gives liberty from sin, but not liberty to sin. There is a world of difference in the two liberties. The first is a real freedom, the latter a real slavery. They call it liberty, but it is liberty to "do as you please," recognizing no authority but their own selves. Any and all of the Bible is eliminated that does not agree with their own theory of religion. As has already been stated, miracles do not happen, sin is just a lack of growth, or development, the Bible is not inspired different from other books, the blood of Jesus is no more than the blood of another man, no regeneration is needed, and, of course, according to their notion, does not occur; and no resurrection of the body, nor personal return of Jesus Christ, and such like things. That is a part of what its propagators are pleased to call liberal Christianity. A sweet, soft-sounding euphemism calculated to "take" with a certain type of mind. Their purpose is to make the impression that this brazen counterfeit is Christianity, and that of an improved type. In fact they do not hesitate to assert this very positively, and with quite a degree of bumptiousness.

This is the crowd that is "worming" themselves—or endeavoring to—into our schools and colleges, Sunday Schools, young people's societies, and the entire young people's movement. Much "boring from within"—honey-combing the entire educational movement with their falsehoods, often dressed in nice plausibilities that take with the superficial, unthinking and poorly informed. Their purpose is to capture the entire educational outfit, pulpit and all, and if the real, true, orthodox Christianity does not get its eyes and ears open—wake up and shake itself—put on its fighting clothes, and use a little old-fashioned common sense and "stem this tide of hell," as our boys did at the Hindenburg line, they are going to succeed. Much damage has been done already. Inroads have been made. They begin, generally, in a negative way, by failing to teach the most vital truths of Christianity, such as original sin, repentance, regeneration, etc., leaving the soul to starve in spiritual darkness. Later, when it is thought to be safe, they will deny and denounce these, and all doctrines of real Christianity. At first it's "Walk into my parlor, said the spider to the fly,

'Tis the prettiest little parlor that you ever did spy."

And we all know the result to the silly fly if he heeded the siren voice of the spider. And so it will be with our young people, and older ones, too, as to that matter, if they heed the voice of these religious charmers—these shrewd, educated, well-trained deceivers. We hear at Sunday School conventions something about "accepting Christ," but little or nothing about the conditions that must precede and accompany this acceptance.. We do not remember ever having heard repentance so much as named at a Sunday School convention, or any Young People's convention. We remember attending two Christian Endeavor conventions in Baltimore. One was an interdenominational convention, the other an international —a world convention—but I do not remember hearing repentance or the New Birth named. There were many fine addresses, by famous speakers, some of national, and some of international, reputation. But the great fact of the fall, and the resultant condition, known as original sin, repentance and regeneration, I do not remember hearing so much as named. These great basic, fundamental facts seem to be ignored in these great gatherings, or touched very lightly or indifferently. More waving of handkerchiefs, a kind of braggadocio of noise and of salutes, than of emphasizing the real absolute conditions of salvation. "O," you say, "in these large conventions it is taken for granted that every one has already passed the kindergarten experiences of repentance and regeneration, rendering it useless to emphasize them." Granting all this to be true, still, I don't remember ever to have heard these basic, absolutely fundamental things of the Christian experience and life named, much less emphasized, in any young people's convention of the smallest type, such as township and county Sunday School conventions. I do not know what others have heard. I only speak of my own observation. Neither have I ever seen these things emphasized in the literatures of the different phases of young people's work. We would not go so far as to say that these first principles are never insisted on in Sunday School class work, nor in Christian Endeavor meetings; but we do not remember ever to have heard them insisted on. But what we have in mind mainly is our large Sunday School, Christian Endeavor, and other combined mass conventions, conferences, and assemblies, where a great deal of spread-eagle, sky-scraping oratory is indulged in. In these great assemblies, so far as our observation extends, these great, basic, fundamentals of Christianity—without which, Christianity is but an empty name—such as original sin, repentance, and regeneration, are not insisted on to say the least, and so far as our hearing has gone, not even named. Why is this? "Liberal Christianity" (?) is doing its deadly work. It's as imperceivable by the masses of our people as the deadly monoxide gas that kills without warning. The influence of this deadly, lifeless counterfeit of Christianity is in the very air as a deadly miasma, or gas, that comparatively few persons perceive, but it's doing its deadly work just the same. But men, women, boys and girls are falling all over the country from its deadly effects. As the most deadly gas may be carried on the most spice-laden zephyrs through our doors and windows into our rooms, and we are dead, so this false Christianity—Satan's counterfeit—is stealing into schools, colleges, universities, Sunday Schools, young people's meetings, the pulpit, and everywhere. And if we do no put on the "gas masks" of God's truth we will go down under its deadly influence.

Repentance is a fundamental running all through the law and the prophets, the burden of John the Baptist's preaching; and the beginning of Jesus' ministry was a clear, clarion call to repentance, and it rang through His entire ministry; and when He sent out His disciples to preach, it was that "men should repent." And after his resurrection, the commission was that "repentance . . . should be preached in His name, among all nations;" and "except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish." And this call to repentance was not to any special class or classes, but to all, young and old, wise and unwise, moral and immoral alike—to every one capable of repentance. But God is the one to draw the line between the capable and the incapable. But it is man's duty to "cry aloud and spare not"—sow the seed and leave the result with the hearer and his God. John M. Mead was a clear case of conversion at three years of age. So it is not for us to judge or decide at just what age, in any given case, that a child is capable of repenting. Of course, repentance does not mean just the same in every sense to a young child that it does to a youth or an adult; but in essence it is the same: a definite turning from all known sin, and turning wholly unto God.

Repentance is the sub-stratum, bed-rock foundation of the whole Christian superstructure, so far as man's agency is concerned, and to build on anything else is to build on the sand. This absolute, all-essential condition of salvation—there being no salvation without it—is being largely ignored in our popular young people's movements today, and in the church at large. The idea seems to be to "round them up," as we would a herd of calves and colts, and "break them in," and "put them to work," and somehow they'll be Christians. But repentance, regeneration, and saving faith are not insisted on. These should be the initial steps, and then work afterward. We do not become Christians by working, but by repenting and believing. We believe the custom of having unsaved persons to sing in choirs, and putting them to doing that which Christians only are supposed to do, and never reminding them that they are sinners, and that unless they repent they will surely be lost, is a hardening process, and does more harm than good, especially to the young. Treating them as if they were Christians when they are not has a tendency to cause these same unsaved persons to try to persuade themselves that they are Christians when they are not. And they thus become hardened, and it becomes very difficult to bring such persons to repentance. Salvation, or "religion," does not soak in through the pores. Not absorbed by association with those who are saved. It comes through the mind, will and heart. When Jesus shall tell some in that day, "I know you not," these same persons will express surprise by saying, "We have eaten and drunk in thy presence, and thou hast taught in our streets. Lord, we have been associated with thee, and heard thee teach, why is this? Going to turn us away, Lord? We've not only been closely associated with thee, but we've even prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils, and in thy name done many wonderful works.'" "But he shall say, I tell you, I know you not whence you are; depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity." This shows that mere religious association, and doing religious works, let them be ever so great and wonderful, are not a passport into the kingdom. It's through the "strait gate" of repentance, faith, and the New Birth. There is no other way, and this so-called "liberal Christianity" that ignores, repudiates, and even denounces these necessary, fundamental things, is a delusion and a snare. In dealing with the young, begin at the beginning—repentance; and do not stop short of regeneration and the witness of the Spirit, and then "go on unto perfection," and do all the "good works" you can, not to secure salvation, but to glorify God and receive a "full reward."

To sum up: this so-called "liberal Christianity" denies every fundamental of the Bible: the fall of man, original sin, the inspiration of the Bible, miracles, the Deity of Christ, his blood atonement, the personality and Deity of the Holy Spirit, the resurrecion of the body, the second coming of Christ, and by necessary implication, the judgment, and an eternal hell.

Eliminate all this from the Bible and Christianity, and all that remains is "sounding brass and tinkling cymbals."

J. F. Dosier.

"GENTLE"

By Elizabeth H. Emerson

Sometimes a single word is sufficient to describe a person. With the thought of "Aunt Sarah" who "went home" not long ago, there always comes to my mind the one word, "gentle."

There is in the family an old tin-type which shows Aunt Sarah as a girl with long curls and a rarely sweet smile. I am sure she was gentle then. But it was in her home on the Illinois prairie that I first knew her. With her family about her and the care of an aged invalid added to her responsibility, in my childhood memory, she was gentleness itself.

In the little country meeting where she taught her "little class" and served as elder, even those who suffered "eldering" at her hands would say that she was gentle about it. In her neighborhood service where there was sickness or trouble or death her soft voice brought comfort, and there are motherless children who to this day will tell you how like a gentle mother she was to them.

In the changing fortunes of middle life, the removal to a city home, the yearning for the far views and wide spaces of the country, and watchful care over her boys grown to manhood—always gentle. Through the long periods of illness when she nursed a son and husband to their deaths, how gentle were her ministrations! In her own great affliction, extending over months of time, to her family and friends who tenderly cared for her, gentle, gentle, always gentle.

I remember reading one of Edgar Guest's essays on "Don't Be a Door Mat." Perhaps there is such a thing as too great gentleness, but surely in this day it is a rare fault. How many there are to be efficient and self-reliant and successful and cock-sure; and how few to be "gentle unto all men, apt to teach, patient." Aunt Sarah left it to others in the large family of which she was a part to acquire a little name and fame, and she was only gentle.

This gentle soul knew and loved poetry. Stored in her memory were many complete selections from McGuffey's and other books of her childhood. Though during her life-time few knew it, often her poet's tendency found expression in verses of her own. The following of her composition, dated nine months before her death, was read at her funeral service:

GATHERING THE CHILDREN IN

In a visit to memory's garden,
Through a long life nearing its close,
There are bright little flashes stand outward
Like the morning dew on the rose;
To my mother heart the most precious,
In a world so tarnished by sin,
The dearest and best of all the rest,
Was gathering the children in.

Through the busy cares of the morning,
And the hurry and rush of the day,
They were left to their own devices,
To roam at will in their play;
But when the day's toil was over,
And the wanderers were gathered in,
There was plenty of noise and confusion;
There was plenty of tumult and din;
There was racket and clatter, but that didn't matter
To me, when the children were in.

There were often wrongs to be righted;
There were scratches and bruises that hurt;
There was vigorous rubbing and scrubbing,
To remove the grime and the dirt;
But when the rush was over
And darkness o'ershadowed the night,
To get them all fed and tucked into bed
Was to me a mother's delight.

When lured by the love of pleasure,
They often were tempted to roam;
And sometimes there were thrilling adventures
Encountered before they reached home;
Yet, to me it didn't matter,
The purpose, or where they had been,
I would linger and wait till the click of the gate
Assured me the last one was in.

And now while I'm waiting my summons,
My loved ones, I'm hoping that you
Will forget the mistakes and failures,
And cherish the worthy and true;
When the portals of glory are opened
And my triumphant victory I win,
Just inside the gate, perhaps, I shall wait,
Till the children are all gathered in.

REPORT OF CHAS. M. FILLMORE
General Secretary of the No-Tobacco League of America

To the Officers and Directors of the No-Tobacco League:

Seven years ago you honored me by electing me general secretary of the No-Tobacco League of America. We all realized then that we were engaged in a stupendous task. Seven years have not materially changed the fundamental character of the situation. They have rather emphasized it. Our task is bigger and harder today. The growth of the tobacco habit and the tobacco business since the beginning of the present century has been phenomenal. It has been especially notable in the development of one of the ways of using tobacco, i. e., in the form of the cigarette, of which we are now consuming more than one hundred billion annually.

Press dispatches a few days ago reported what they called "one of the largest tobacco deals on record." And such it was. We must not overlook its significance. In this deal, we are told, "The newly organized Union Tobacco Company acquired from the American Tobacco Company several of its brands." We are further informed that the Union Tobacco Company "controls some five thousand stores and agencies in the United Cigar Stores and the Schulte chains." Also, we learn, "There is a floating consumption of approximately thirty-four million cigarettes a day that can be concentrated into a few of the brands." Yet again, "It is proposed to spend $10,000,000 in an advertising campaign in the next year or two."

Perhaps the most significant part of the story will be overlooked by most readers. It is generally thought that there is intense rivalry among tobacco companies exploiting different brands of tobacco. Don't be fooled. The negotiations between these two "rival" (?) organizations were carried out in a most amicable way. The report tells us that the Union Tobacco Company "by relieving the American Tobacco Company of these brands makes it possible for the American to concentrate on its present leaders." So the Union Tobacco Company will not spend its $10,000,000 fighting the American Tobacco Company. The new deal was put over to "relieve" the American so that it may be able to do a bigger business by consecrating "on its present leaders." Behold how beautifully these tobacco dealers work together to deceive and despoil their victims!

The organized opposition to tobacco seems, by comparison, so insignificant that many friends, as well as foes, consider it inconsequential if not actually contemptible. Tobacconists caricature us, cartoon us, curse us. Many good, sincere people, who do not approve of the use of tobacco, hold aloof from us because they believe we are engaged in a hopeless task.

Quitters

Shall we give up the struggle? Shall we quit? Shall we dissolve the No-Tobacco League?

If the tobacco plant is a noxious weed; if the tobacco habit is a bad one; if nicotine is a habit-forming drug in the same category as alcohol, opium, morphine, cocaine and other narcotics; if an overwhelming majority of those using tobacco are doing so because they are victims of a dope—slavish addicts to a narcotic drug; if the tremendous growth of the traffic in tobacco is largely due to the annual expenditure of millions of dollars in a widespread propaganda, psychologically and artistically prepared to deceive and mislead the public—if any considerable number of these indictments can be proved before an unprejudiced tribunal (and we believe that all of them can), we dare not quit our task because it is big and hard and apparently impossible.

Seven years of diligent study of the problem; seven years of close observation along various lines of investigation; seven years of laborious experience in many phases of work in connection with the practical features of the question, have but strengthened our conviction that the problem not only can be solved, it must be solved to prevent national deterioration and racial degeneration. What patriot or lover of humanity can quit such a task because it is big and hard? We must not think of quitting. The fight must go on to a finish.

And it will go on and on and on till righteousness prevails. The tobacco problem is no fictitious figment of a perfervid fancy. It is no chimera of a cracked cranium. It is a serious reality. Whether we like it or not, we are forced many times a day to feel its poisonous sting upon our eyeballs; we are compelled to choke and cough over its unpleasant irritation of our throats and lungs. Willy-nilly we might take it second-hand with our meals even though it gags us and turns our stomachs.

The tobacco problem is inescapable, unavoidable, inevitable. It cannot be evaded. It is a perennial, persistent, perpetual problem. It will exist so long as tobacco is raised and exploited as a commercial commodity.

You and I may play the coward and quit. That will not end the matter. Others will keep up the agitation, and still others and others and others will espouse it until the truth about tobacco prevails and is ineradicably established in the minds and hearts and consciences of the race. Whether you and I live or die, surrender or keep up the fight, this righteous cause can neither be shunned nor shunted. It will demand the right of way till it reaches its proper destination. The Schoolmaster of Destiny will keep us working at the problem until the correct solution is found. Our task may be incalculably difficult. It is not insurmountable. It is unsuppressible. We must master it, not yield to it.

The solution of the problem, according to the idea of the tobacconists, seems to be: universal nicotinization, tobacco habitually in the mouths of every one. The solution of the problem according to our organization is: TOBACCO HABITUALLY IN NO ONE'S MOUTH. Which idea will ultimately prevail?

In reviewing the work of the past, it is but just to express, in the first place, my personal appreciation of the loyalty and fidelity of the officers and directors. During my seven years of service, three men have been president: Judge U. Z. Wiley, J. Knox Montgomery and F. M. Gregg. Each has proved eminently fitted for the position and has reflected honor upon our cause. Others deserve credit but time forbids mentioning them in detail. I count it one of the choicest experiences of my life to have had the honor and distinction of being associated with the select spirits who have sacrificed so much to give counsel and direction to this cause. May posterity crown their memory with the laurels they deserve.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

The Foreign Missions Conference of North America

The annual session of the Foreign Missions Conference of North America was held in Atlantic City January 10-13. The chief topics of discussion were: "The future of missionary work in China; the backgrounds of thought in churches of the United States and Canada that affect the presentation of foreign missions; administrative problems; consideration of conditions on the foreign mission fields; and the forthcoming enlarged meeting of International Missionary Council at Jerusalem in April."

One of the most encouraging features of the conference was the announcement by Dr. A. L. Warnshuis, secretary of the conference, that "It is quite possible that active negotiations for the revision of treaties between the United States and China will be under way at Washington within the next three months. In fact," Dr. Warnshuis added, "I am informed that at least three leading Chinese have been named by a Chinese government to take part in the negotiations." This announcement was regarded by missionary leaders of all denominations as one of the most important that has been made on the question of the relationship of China to the United States government.

The conference adopted a motion expressing "gratification at the declarations of the British and American governments of their readiness to consider a revision of the existing treaties with China whenever the Chinese agree to a commission representative of China as a whole." The resolution also expressed the hope that advantage would be taken at the earliest opportunity to begin negotiations.

The council instructed its Committee of Reference and Counsel to appoint a commission of twenty-five members to be known as a Commission on Missionary Policy and Methods in China to study the conditions affecting Christian work in China and questions of policy and method on which mission boards are now seeking light and guidance. The commission will ask the National Christian Council of China to recommend representative members of the Chinese delegation to the Jerusalem Conference, who will return to China by way of America, to meet with the commission.

Much in the conference was said about indemnities and missionary protection by the governments in China.

Of the former, Dr. Hodgkin, out of years of experience in China, said: "As missionaries or mission societies, we should make no claims for indemnities of any kind. But if the Chinese government freely offers compensation, such offer should be considered upon its merits."

Of the latter, missionary after missionary, in open conference and in group meetings, stated that they did not want government protection. They felt that it was a real hindrance to them in their work. So much was this proposition before the conference that at the business session on the morning of January 13, after a prolonged discussion, the following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved, that in the judgment of this conference the use or threat of foreign military force for the protection of missionaries is in general a serious hindrance to missionary work and that the effort should be made to secure for those missionaries desiring it the privilege of waiving their right to such protection."

It was pointed out that the missionary enterprise is and will be one of the great builders of good-will and understanding between the Orient and the Occident. It therefore should be as unhampered as possible for carrying forward the gospel that will create a better understanding and a closer fellowship between the east and the west, and this cannot be done by a gun-boat program.

The whole missionary program is going through a great reconstruction period, it is true, but the hope and even prospects are that following the reconstruction the borders of Christianity will be extended farther and more rapidly than ever. Even in China, with everything so apparently unfavorable to missionary enterprise, a new day is dawning and with a new China will come a new day for the Church of the living God.

EDUCATIONAL INTERESTS

The enrollment at High Point has reached a total of 325, a thirty per cent increase over last year.

There are more than twice as many college students enrolled at Westminster College, Tehuacana, Texas, this year as compared with last.

Under the directorship of Bishop Theodore S. Henderson, the Methodist Episcopal Churches of Ohio will raise one million dollars for Ohio Wesleyan University.

Those located in the Publishing House at Pittsburgh are collecting books to be sent to Westminster College, making the selections from their own libraries.

Albion College, Michigan, has the unique distinction of enrolling triplets in its freshman class this year.

Each of our colleges reports a substantial increase in the number of ministerial students enrolled, the number at Westminster College being double that of last year.

The Board of Education is giving financial assistance to the largest number of students in its history, 37 through the Ministerial Fund and 21 through the Student Loan Fund. This places an obligation upon the board of nearly $11,000.

Adrian College is now engaged in a campaign to raise $200,000 in the city of Adrian and Lenawee County. This money is to be used for new buildings, the first of which will be the physical education building. By erecting this first it will release space in the science building for the enlargement of the science department.

There has been a 20 per cent increase in student enrollment at Westminster College, Tehuacana, Texas, for the second quarter. Dr. G. O. McMillan considers the prospects for another year very bright. The attitude toward the college has improved not only among our own people, but especially in the surrounding communities. He looks for two hundred students next year.

The success of the denominational campaign for the endowment of Adrian College has given impetus to the effort now being made in the city of Adrian and surrounding territory. The failure of the church five or six years ago brought a similar campaign to an abrupt and disappointing end.

The income of the general boards this year has been distressingly inadequate, being the smallest of any year during this quadrennium. The Board of Education has been particularly hard hit, the receipts from the Undesignated Budget being but $4,300 and from Rally Day only $11,000. And $1,000 of the latter was from offerings received by the churches

15 months or more ago. Our income for 1924-25 was $40,000, for 1925-26 $29,000, and last year $31,000. We have been compelled to notify our schools that they will receive but half of the proposed appropriations unless the General Conference Budget receives better support during the next three months.

Judge Florence E. Allen, of the Ohio Supreme Court, gave the address on Founder's Day at Baldwin-Wallace College. She commented upon the changeless character of ethical ideals that conserve the social and personal values of the past and make possible a new and worthy achievement in the present and future. "In the long run," she said, "just as in the days of our fathers, honor and success will come to men and women just in proportion as our work is good, as our heart is kind, and as our ideals are high."

Offerings from Rally Day received by Treasurer H. C. Staley to January 1, 1928, were as follows:

Ohio	$2,731.38	Illinois	$ 181.99
Maryland	2,712.80	Iowa-Missouri	164.28
Pittsburgh	1,413.02	Texas	50.00
Eastern	829.12	Onondaga	40.96
Indiana	764.41	Mississippi	22.15
Michigan	679.78	Louisiana	10.75
West Virginia	652.82	Colorado-Texas	6.57
North Carolina	565.98	Florida	2.55
Kansas	299.35

Unworthy Objectives

The lives of many people seem devoid of any high and worthy purpose. If they were confronted with the question, For what are you living? they could scarcely name any higher purpose than that of finding their own pleasure. It has never entered into their minds that this is an ignoble life. It seems to them the natural life. And it is "natural" in the sense that an instinct of nature leads them to such a life. Self-preservation is said to be an instinct of nature, and it seems that self-satisfaction, self-gratification, is equally so.

But this human nature of ours has other impulses and instincts, and among them we find the impulse to act and live for others, for their happiness and well-being. Those under the sway of this power of our being realize that they are living a nobler and better life than they were when they were living unto themselves and for themselves. They now have a more worthy objective and a feeling that life is higher. They have entered upon the noble life of the philanthropist.

And our human nature under the grace of God is capable of still higher things. We may rise from the degree of philanthropist to the high station of men of God. We may live unto God, to do His will, to please Him, and find in His approval the highest joy. Without ceasing to live for men, but really living for them as we could not before, we hold as the great object of our living to accomplish that which God has given to us to do. We become sons of God and servants of God and can conceive of no higher rank or better life.

—The crowded condition of our columns has put us behind in the publication of death notices. We ask the forbearance of those who have written. We would also ask those who write death notices hereafter to avoid extending them to an inordinate length.

M. P. HYMNS—AN ACROSTIC

M-ethod. Each church led by the pastor or some wise layman secure the co-operation of the church folk, and purchase enough of hymn books for the church services. This should be done as soon as possible.

P-rice. Within the bounds of the pocketbook of our membership, and they have a better appearance. Does not cost any more than two or three cheap books and lasts just as long. Cheap books have cheap music. You get what you pay for.

H-ymnal of the Methodist Protestant Church, carefully selected hymns, compiled and printed by our own people and for our own use. Why ask our church to go to the trouble and expense of doing this and not support this action?

Y-ears of testing have revealed to us that these hymns are still living, that they are worthy of our consideration and are capable of moving untold numbers into a closer relationship with God. Why discard the tried for the untried?

M-ethodist experience, born out of a wonderful religious awakening, a heart-felt emotion under the supervision of the glorious Spirit from above, and expressed by the human tongue or pen in witnessing to it. A real Christian experience has produced our hymns.

N-ecessary then for true spiritual worship. There is a need today for cultivating more and more this sadly neglected feature of song in our public worship. Each person ought to express in some way this heretofore restrained, spiritual emotion of praise to Him who has done so much for us. Sing, therefore, you people.

S-uitable for the various services conducted within the church. These hymns are properly indexed, setting forth to the person desirous of doing so, an opportunity to select hymns carrying out the trend of thought in sermon or subject discussed. Too, a very valuable feature is included for congregational participation, as to responsive reading and the proper observance of the ordinances required of us as a Christian people and denomination. Use M. P. Hymnals in your church.

CHEER THEM ON

You have heard the story of the child who was rescued from the fire that was raging way up in the fourth story. The child came to the window, and as the flames were shooting up higher and higher it cried for help.

A fireman started up the ladder of the fire escape to rescue the child. The wind swept the flames near him, and it was getting so hot that he wavered, and it looked as though he would have to return without the child. Thousands looked on, and having their hearts quaked at the thought of the child having to perish in the fire, as it must do, if the fireman did not reach it. Some one in the crowd cried:

"Give him a cheer!"

Cheer after cheer went up, and as the man heard them he gathered fresh courage. Up he went into the midst of the smoke and the fire, and brought down the child in safety.

If you cannot go and rescue the perishing yourself, you can at least pray for those who do, and cheer them on. If you do, the Lord will bless the effort.—Moody Bible Institute Bulletin.

OUR STORY PAGE

ONLY A LITTLE GIRL

By J. L. Glover

The library of Judge Gordon's handsome house was warm and comfortable; the whole house, beautifully furnished, and warm as summer, despite the bitter cold outside, seemed an abode of happiness; but there was no happiness written on the stern, dark face of its owner, as he sat in the luxurious room, heavy lines of trouble on his brow, and read over once more the letter which had reached him that afternoon. It was dated from a far western city, and was written in a faint, trembling hand, as if the writer had had scarcely strength to hold the pen. As he read he seemed to see, between him and the paper, a sweet, childish face whose dark, tender eyes smiled into his, and the words seemed spoken instead of written.

"Dear Father," the letter ran, "You were angry with me when I went away from you, and I deserved it, for I deceived and disobeyed you. But I never repented marrying Tom, for we loved each other, and he was good to me always. And now you must forgive him, father—forgive us both, for he is dead, and I am very desolate. I shall follow him soon; the doctor says I cannot live much longer; but I cannot bear to go without your forgiveness. You will come to me, dear father, as soon as you get this, will you not? And you will not be angry any longer when you see the legacy I am leaving you—my little daughter, my only one.

"Before this reaches you, perhaps, I shall not be here, for my time is very short. If I die, she will be sent to you at once, for there is no one here to take care of her. The landlady is kind, and she has promised to see to everything for me.

"Dear father, take my little girl and let her be to you all that I should have been, and was not. She has not sinned; you will not visit my sin on her innocent head. I am not afraid to go. God is very merciful. I have asked His mercy for the sake of Christ, and found it.

"Dear father, goodbye! Your Helena."

Below in another hand, less educated, was writen:

"Mrs. Maynard died today. At her own request, she will be buried by her husband's side in the cemetery here. The litle girl is on her way to you. Sarah Smith."

He looked at the date. It was three days earlier. He could not possibly have reached the place in time. All was over—and the child was on her way to him. He must be at home to receive her.

He turned again to the letter in his hand. What a letter for a man to receive on Christmas Eve! His head bent low, the luxurious room vanished, and before his closed eyes floated a vision of a long ago Eve. A little gold-haired child clasped his knee with soft dimpled arms, looking up into his face and laughing—his little Helena, who had just died, far away from him, among strangers—who lay now in her grave, thousands of miles away. She would never laugh again. The child-vision changed as he gazed at it into a lovely girl, slender and fair, with smiling eyes and lips. One picture followed another, so swiftly and lightly that the room seemed filled with floating, airy shapes, misty as cloud-wreaths, clasping him, touching him, yet always dissolving as he tried to clasp them.

He would have gone to her, on the bare chance of finding her living, but for that postscript written by the landlady of the poor boarding house where she had died: and but for the message about the child, who was even now on her way to him.

It was too late—too late for his love and forgiveness to solace Helena's last hours on earth, when she had reached a trembling hand to him across the years and the miles, with piteous plea. And there was the child, coming to him even now.

A child! What a mockery it seemed! A little happy child in that great, empty, echoing house; in his empty life.

Suddenly he realized the time. Why, the train from the west was nearly due now. The child might be at the station, waiting for him; alone and frightened, in the great crowded station.

He rose and rang the bell. His housekeeper came; a kind-faced, middle-aged woman who had kept his house for years. She stood awaiting his orders, a little puzzled at the summons.

In a few brief words he told her what had happened. She clasped her hands, and the tears flooded her kind, motherly eyes, and ran down her cheeks.

"Miss Helena! Our little Miss Helena! Dead!"

He waited a moment for her grief to spend itself; then he went on. "There is more, Mrs. Markham. Her child—a little girl—is coming. She will probably be here directly. I am going now to meet the train she should be on. I sent for you to ask you to prepare for her. A bed; some clothes—I do not know how she may be provided. You will see that she is comfortable."

He moved to get his hat and coat, and the housekeeper returned to her own quarters, weeping with joy and sorrow blended.

"A child in this house! Miss Helena's little girl! Will the master love her? No one can tell, he's that cold and hard-seeming. But maybe, underneath it, he's sorry, and glad, as I am this night. 'See that she is comfortable,' indeed! Miss Helena's child!"

And she hurried to open a long-unused nursery, to look out tiny garments, to air little sheets and blankets, and prepare for the coming of a little child.

The storm blew fiercely outside. The wind whistled, the sleet tinkled sharply against the windows, Judge Gordon shivered in anticipation, as he buttoned his fur-lined overcoat and prepared to set forth. His hand was on the door, when the bell rang sharply. A visitor! On such a night! And the train due now!

He frowned with annoyance as he opened the door, words of apology and excuse on his lips. He must not be delayed.

A tall figure stood there, with a bundle in his arms.

"Is this Judge Gordon's?" the indistinguishable figure inquired.

"Yes; but I am just going out. It is important, I must meet the train—"

"Yes? Oh, I am glad we caught you in time. Is this the young lady you were going to meet? I thought so. She had the address in her little bag, all right. No one was there to meet her. We were fellow-travelers on a long journey, and we made friends. So I thought I'd see her safe to its end. No—no thanks are needed. It's been a pleasure. Goodbye, my dear."

The stranger kissed the bundle, transferred it to the Judge's arms, and vanished into the darkness; and the Judge was left standing in his hall with his daughter's legacy in his arms. A pair of small arms came forth from the bundle and clasped themselves around his neck.

"Grandfather," said a small, sweet voice, and suddenly the swathed object in his arms assumed a personality of its own. It could talk—and walk. He carried it into the library and placed it on the rug before the fire; then, turning it round and round, unwound the long shawl that enveloped it, chrysalis-wise, and revealed a little gold-haired, blue-frocked girl, standing before him. A lovely child-face smiled confidently into his.

"Grandfather, mother sent you her love—and a kiss—I'm to give it to you. And me. I'm come to live wif you. She told me to come. And a happy—kissmas. And—I'm so—sleepy."

The golden head drooped. Overcome with weariness and the sudden warmth, she seemed to crumple before him. The Judge stooped and drew the little figure into his arms. Unconsciously the dimpled arms went once more around his neck, and she whispered—"happy kissmas."

He bent his proud head and kissed the drooping eyes, the rosy lips, more than once—for her mother and herself. Then, still holding her close to him, soft and warm and sleepy, he carried her up to bed, the ice melting more and more about his heart, and the Christmas joy entering in.

A MAN WHO DOES NOT LIKE CATS

Fred Cornelius

Ten miles straight out into the desert from Deming, New Mexico, stands a lonely cabin, in which lives an old man, Mr. Tom Crosby, better known as "Old Tom." Old Tom makes his living by panning gold and doing odd jobs about ranches and mining camps. Save for another prospector's cabin, six miles north of him, the nearest house is at Deming, ten miles away.

Tom Crosby has no pets, nor does he want any. He says that if he takes care of his saddle horse and two pack burros, he has done a plenty. He does not care for dogs; and as for cats, well, he just can't stand their presence. Yet the old man is a kind-hearted fellow. He has been known to risk his own life in climbing to the top of a telegraph pole to rescue a black cat that had kittens under a ranch house.

The old man does not go to town any more than is necessary; and when he goes it takes the best part of a day for him to ride his horse there and back.

One morning he awoke to find a nice black and white cat scratching at his front door. He tried to drive her away, but the cat had definitely decided to make this her home; so she went out to the barn and made her a bed in the hay-loft. The old man found her there when he went out to feed his stock. He tried again to run her off, but she only ran back to the cabin.

The next day she was again in the hay-loft. Tom Crosby could stand no more of her, so he caught her and put her into an oat sack. "I'll take you to Sally Gray's in Deming," he said, "she is foolish about cats, and will be glad to give you a home."

Twenty minutes later he was riding his horse toward Deming with the sack hanging across his shoulder. It was a hard trip, for the weather was hot and the sand was deep, making it hard going for the horse. Just the same, Pussy had to have a home, and that was the only way to get her one.

Now Sally Gray owns the boarding-house, and she was badly in need of a good cat, for the rats, as she said, were about to eat her out of house and home. So when Tom Crosby rode up and presented Sally with a fine black and white cat, she was very happy. She gave old Tom a hearty hand-shake and said that he was the best old desert rat in the desert, and for him to come right in and have dinner with her before starting back. Gladly the old man accepted her invitation, for he knew that she was the best cook in the state, and, too, he was very hungry.

For two hours after dinner the man and woman talked, but when the shadows began to lengthen, old Tom bade Sally good-bye and mounted his horse for the long ride home. The return trip was made more quickly, for it was not so hot now, and the horse wanted to get to his comfortable quarters where he could rest.

When they arrived at the cabin, old Tom unsaddled the horse and put him in the stable, then went up in the hay-loft to get some hay. As he stooped over to get the hay, he heard a sound that almost caused him to tumble out of the loft. It was the meow of a kitten. Looking under one side of the hay-mow, he saw three kittens not yet old enough to open their eyes.

"Well, what do you know about that?" the old man said in a loud voice. "Three kittens and ten miles away from their mother. Sure wish old Pussy had a-told me she fetched kittens up here. It sure would have saved me a long, hard trip."

It was almost sunset when old Tom mounted his tired horse to make a second trip to Sally Gray's that day. "I sure hate to make you do this," he told his horse, "but these here kittens must get to their mother, and this is the only way to get them there."

It was two hours after dark when the horse stopped at Sally Gray's boarding-house. You should have seen that lady's face when old Tom handed her the three kittens!

"I still say you are the best old desert rat in this part of the country," she said, laughingly, "and now get right down and put up that tired horse, for you must not go back before morning."

The old man gladly accepted her hospitality for he, too, was tired.—Our Dumb Animals.

A MOTHER'S LOVE

Truly, a mother's love never dies. The animal loves its offspring till it is able to care for itself, but the human mother's love grows with increasing years, because it is immortal.

One of Admiral Dewey's sailors at the battle of Manila accidentally dropped his coat overboard. It contained a photograph of his mother. He was forbidden to rescue it. But he jumped overboard and saved it. After he had been put in irons for disobedience, the admiral asked him why he risked his life to save his coat. When told about his mother's photograph, the eyes of the admiral filled with tears and he clasped the boy in his arms. Orders were immediately given for his release. The great Dewey said, "A boy who loves his mother enough to risk his life for her picture, cannot be kept in irons on this fleet."—From The Bible Champion, Reading, Pa.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

Senior Topic for February 12.—Ideals for Choosing a Life Partner. Prov. 31:10-31.

I

Plans for the Meeting

A. Have some father and mother who have lived together and maintained a Christian home to sit in front of the society's meeting with the leader. In the discussion period let the younger members ask questions regarding "Choosing a Life Partner." The two who have been successful in meeting the problem may be called upon to answer the questions.

B. Plan your music to suit the topic.

C. Have the various members to name characteristics of an ideal life partner.

II

Hints for Leader

1. One's success or failure in life depends largely upon how one makes decisions. Young people must make decisions regarding religion, associations, a life's work, friendship, etc.

2. Name some of the chief characteristics that you think a companion in life should possess, such as health, beauty of character, patience and tolerance, good judgment, economy, Christian ideals, compatibility, pleasing personality, etc.

3. Name ways of discovering these ideals, such as associating together under proper conditions; exercising proper respect for each other, and in other ways.

III

Correlation With Sunday School Lesson

The home plays a large part in advancing the "Kingdom of God" or in retarding its progress. To have a home in which the Kingdom of God finds a place is conditioned upon the right kind of companions in the home. The parents should be Christian. The way to have this arrangement is to be Christian and to choose a Christian for a partner in life.

IV

Have these read and comments made:
Fidelity—Ephesians 5:33.
True-Hearted—Prov. 4:23.
Good Sense—Prov. 11:22.
Reputation—Prov. 22:1.
Love—Eph. 5:25.
Diligence –Prov. 10:5.
Kindness—Prov. 19:22.
Obedience—Eph. 5:22,23.

V

Discussion

The topic is of much importance and interest. Important because the choosing of a life's partner is one of the greatest decisions one has to make. Interesting because every young man and young woman in our country makes the decision.

One should choose wisely and slowly. An unwise choice leads to unhappiness in the home and a too hasty choice often brings dissatisfaction. Wide acquaintanceship should be encouraged. In school and college, in seminaries and universities, and in travel, etc., one learns people and is more able then to choose a partner. Unwise and too hasty choices lead to separation. In some states there is a separation for every three marriages. In Chicago alone, there is a divorce for every ten marriages.

This subject demands serious study. Too often we hear light remarks about young peoples' associating together. Good common sense words should be employed and young men and women should be directed to associate under the most wholesome circumstances.

Many qualifications go to make an ideal partner. A Christ-like personality should be required. From this comes all the other ideals, such as a clean record, unselfishness, love, kindness, industry, economy, thoughtfulness.

Of course it is difficult, one will say, to find such a partner. That is true since every partner is human whether one thinks so or not. Love in the real meaning of the word should be the dominant factor in the decision. Because it is love that covers a multitude o f human defects.

VI

Questions for Discussion

1. How does a Christian home promote the Kingdom of God?

2. Why would a Christian make a better life partner than a non-Christian?

3. What ideals should one possess to be a good life partner?

4. Would you require more in the personality of your partner than you possessed in your own?

5. Give some of the reasons for choosing wisely and slowly.

VII

Have pastor or some experienced person to speak five minutes on "A happy home conditioned upon choosing wisely and well the life partner."

Poetry to the Point

Somewhere she waits to make you win, your soul in her firm, white hands—
Somewhere the gods have made for you, the Woman Who Understands!

As the tide went out she found him
Lashed to a spar of Despair,
The wreck of his Ship around him—
The wreck of his Dreams in the air;
Found him and loved him and gathered
The soul of him close to her heart—
The soul that had sailed an uncharted sea,
The soul that had sought to win and be free—
The soul of which she was part!
And there in the dusk she cried to the man,
"Win your battle—you can, you can!"

Helping and loving and guiding,
Urging when that were best,
Holding her fears in hiding
Deep in her quiet breast;
This is the woman who kept him
True to his standards lost,
When, tossed in the storm and stress of strife,
He thought himself through with the game of life
And ready to pay the cost.
Watching and guarding, whispering still,
"Win you can—and you will, you will!"
This is the story of ages,
This is the Woman's way;
Wiser than seers or sages,
Lifting us day by day;
Facing all things with a courage
Nothing can daunt or dim,
Treading Life's path, wherever it leads—
Lined with flowers or choked with weeds,
But ever with him—with him;
Guide on—comrade—golden spur—
Then men who win are helped by her!

Somewhere she waits, strong in belief, your soul in her firm white hands;
Thank well the gods, when she comes to you—
the Woman Who Understands!

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS

Feb. 5: Jesus Misunderstood and Opposed
Scripture Basis—Mark 3:19-35; 6:1-6.

Golden Text—"He came unto His own, and they that were His own received Him not. But as many as received Him, to them He gave the right to become the children of God, even to them that believe on His name." John 1:11, 12.

What People Thought of Jesus

His Friends—"He is crazy." (3:19-21). To come right to the points of the lesson, first, Jesus' friends endeavored to reach Him and take Him out of the throng of people that pressed upon Him to see Him, hear His message, experience His healing. We may imagine we hear them consulting among themselves: "Come," says one, "let us get Him out of this crowd and talk sense to Him." "Yes," says another, "let us show Him what a fool He is making of Himself, for the people are come to see Him out of curiosity, or for the purpose of ridicule." And a third, "We don't want Him to be classed with the other impostors who have sprung up for a little while, and when the people found them out, either drove them out of their midst, or stoned them to death."

What kind friends! O yes, they meant well, but they didn't understond. So do the friends of those today mean well, who try to discourage young men and women, who have heard and felt the call of Christ to enter into His harvest fields, from going, believing that their talents may be put to better use in the business or professional world. We whose visions are much wider, and whose devotion is much deeper, may well pray the prayer Jesus used as He looked down upon His persecutors, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."

The Scribes—"He is an emissary of Satan." (3:22). How this group of know-it-alls, with some others, learned to hate Him! Of course, "for He taught them as one having authority, and not as the Scribes." They were losing their popularity, and that was more than they could stand.

But notice what absurd arguments they use against Him. (You and I do the same, my Christian friend, toward those whom we dislike or think have offended us.) And see how logically and completely he overthrows their unreasonableness. "How can Satan cast out his own emissaries, and thus establish his kingdom?" Jesus asked. "Or how can a family maintain peace and harmony and influence if the members are divided against themselves?" For example, how strong was our country during the Civil War? Had another nation attacked us during that struggle, doubtless we would have succumbed. Or how strong are those families where the demon Divorce has assumed control? Their prestige, influence, power, has departed. Furthermore, Jesus implied that Satan would have to be conquered before his residence in human hearts could be destroyed. The Scribes were embittered; the people were enlightened.

His Townsfolk—"He is impertinent." (6:1-6). Jesus went into His home town, hoping He would be graciously received and could help them. The synagogue into which He entered on the Sabbath day still stands, according to natives there today. But they knew Him too well—nothing evil of Him, mind you; only that He worked in the carpenter shop with his father during his adolescence. He was too ordinary a fellow in their estimation to be preaching a new gospel and doing wonderful works. And so they were the losers thereby.

Was it not a pity that He was not as well received by all as was our great General Pershing recently, when he went back to the town of his boyhood days? And it is indeed a pity that we do not appreciate our own more than we do—our own parents and kinfolk, our own friends, our own musicians and orators, our own ministers. It has been commonly said, "Distance lends enchantment," and this is true in more ways than one. The members of the families of others are more devoted than ours. Artists from other states and countries are more attractive. The pastors of churches of other denominations are more capable than those serving us. And we always have to send out of our church and conference to get speakers for Young People's Conferences and the like. These facts, though true, are not usually fair. Let us appreciate our own most of all, and we will profit thereby.

Space only permits a short paragraph on the unpardonable sin. In fact, not much need be said, for this is a simpler matter than most of us make of it. It is simple because those who fear that they will commit this sin show by that fear that they will not. Jesus was talking to His opponents, those hard-hearted Scribes and Pharisees, whose determined rejection of Him and the influence of the Spirit of God was the unpardonable sin. The men today who continue to turn a deaf ear to the pleadings of the Spirit will eventually discover to their horror that God has finally withdrawn His Spirit and they are without hope.

Serve Jesus faithfully. Implore the Divine Spirit that He may reveal His truths to you, so that you may understand Jesus; and your love for Him will grow stronger and stronger as the days come and go.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

Miss Esther Ross, Editor

Address matter for immediate publication in this department to Miss Mary C. McCulloch, 1705 Asheboro Street, Greensboro, N. C.

REPORT OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING, W. F. M. S.

The executive committee of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society held a delightful meeting at the home of Rev. and Mrs. T. F. McCulloch, Greensboro, N. C., Thursday, January 19. 1928, with Misses Pearl and Velna McCulloch and Mrs. C. W. Bates as hostesses.

The meeting opened at 10 o'clock in the morning with Mrs. George R. Brown, president, in the chair. Those answering to roll call were Mrs. George R. Brown, Mrs. J. W. Boyles, Mrs. E. Lester Ballard, Mrs. M. P. Harrell, Mrs. S. W. Taylor, Mrs. J. E. Pritchard, Miss Mary Young, Mrs. M. H. Waynick, Misses Velna and Pearl McCulloch, Dr. Joy Harris Glascock, Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, and Miss Mary C. McCulloch.

Mrs. C. W. Bates led the devotionals, reading a part of the 17th chapter of Exodus, and likening the hands of Moses to those of our missionaries. She urged that we hold up the hands of our missionaries just as Aaron and Hur held up the hands of Moses. Rev. T. F. McCulloch offered a beautiful prayer.

Our faithful and efficient corresponding secretary, Mrs. M. P. Harrell, gave a splendid report from the blanks that had been filled and returned to her. It was encouraging to note that more auxiliaries than usual responded to Mrs. Harrell's request to report the work they were doing, but still a number did not heed. With two exceptions all the societies reporting are doing good work. During the quarter 27 new members have been added to our ranks, and one Sunshine Circle has been organied at Bethesda, North Davidson Charge. These children meet with the adult society and are given some part of the program each month. A Young People's Society was organized at Gibsonville in May, 1927, but no report of the organization was sent to the corresponding secretary. We hope to hear from them later, when they give a full report of all the work they are doing.

Mrs. M. H. Waynick, secretary of native workers, read a letter from Mrs. W. E. Pettitt and showed the pictures of two native workers, one in Japan and one in India. In her report, Dr. Harris Glascock, secretary of Tithers and Intercessors, urged the people to teach stewardship to the young people in our churches.

A committee, appointed at the Branch meeting in April to review the field in regard to the young people's work, reported that it met and decided that the young people needed a set of standards by which to award the banners each year. A copy of the Efficiency Standard was submitted and adopted, and the secretaries of young people's work in both the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies were requested to mail one to every young people's missionary society in the state, and to also put them into the hands of every Sunday school superintendent and Christian Endeavor president with the urgent request that they report the work being done in missions by the young people. We hope that prompt attention will be given to this important matter and the young people will be aided in their work.

The Jubilee program was presented and Miss Mary C. McCulloch showed a banner she had made for her local society. Plans for Thank Offering services were also exchanged and a number of good programs suggested.

The meeting adjourned with prayer by Mrs. A. G. Dixon. A delicious luncheon was served by the hostesses, assisted by Mrs. Coble and Mrs. H. A. Garrett.

MRS. E. LESTER BALLARD.

HOME MISSIONS

Notice to All Pastors and Sunday School Superintendents

Sample copies of the program for the Easter service are being sent out this week to all of our pastors and Sunday school superintendents, as far as we have their names and addresses. An earnest effort has been made to get a complete list of these. This has been found a difficult task as so many fail to reply to letters of inquiry sent them. Then changes take place after the Annual Conference Minutes are printed and confusion is the result. If any pastors or superintendents fail to receive a copy of our Easter service kindly notify me at once.

After receiving the sample copy please send your order for a full supply at once. They are furnished free of charge. Many delay sending their orders until the last hour and are disappointed in not getting the supply in time.

The paper on which the sample copies are printed is a thinner and cheaper grade than the regular supply will be. This is done to lessen the postage charge.

I will write more concerning the Easter service later. This is to inform you that the sample copies are being sent and to urge those who may not receive copies to communicate with me without delay.

WAS YOURS THE FIRST?

Who organized the first Christian Endeavor Society in the Methodist Protestant denomination? This would be of real interest to our church at large. Several churches have claimed the honor of having the first society. Of course, there could be only one real first!

Any church having claim to this priority will please send information concerning date of organization, names of any leaders and any further information concerning the work and activities of the society, to the following address:

REV. LAWRENCE LITTLE, Exec. Sec'y
Board of Young People's Work,
193 Odell Street, Concord, N. C.

—Mr. John Holder, pressman in the office of the Methodist Protestant Herald, was called last Saturday to the bedside of his mother. She died on Monday and was buried on Tuesday of this week. She lived in Durham, N. C.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Grace M. P. Church.—The Hunter-Kimball Memorial Class has something to be proud of. We have pledged $5.00 a month toward music lessons for one of the girls at the High Point Children's Home. We were told that this girl was very talented in music and although we don't know her yet, we are glad to help her by pledging this amount.

There has been much sickness this year in the class. Miss Pauline Haltom, who has been sick since August, is now a patient at St. Leo's Hospital.

Mrs. A. Wills Staley, who underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Clinic Hospital, is now at her home on Wright Avenue and will soon be able to be out.

Mrs. Warren McCulloch, who had a slight operation at the Clinic Hospital, has been removed to her home at 1705 Asheboro Street.

Miss Wilsie Jobe has been ill at her home on Tate Street for a few days.

We hope they all will soon be able to come back to us. F. T.

St. Paul Church.—The attendance for January 22 gives evidence that a number of people are abiding by their New Year resolutions. There were 140 present, including ten new scholars, which we added to our roll. We have set as our goal 200, and with the aid of the Supreme Being we feel assured of success.

Prayer meeting is held each Wednesday evening, and a new plan has been devised by means of which our number may be increased. Those attending regularly were divided into two teams—the white and gold, with captains at their heads. At our last service the gold side won by a score of 24 to 16, there being 40 present in all. But the gold had better be careful because the whites have resolved to strive harder.

The "Willing Workers," composed of the young ladies and gentlemen of our churrh, held their monthly class meeting Thursday night, January 12, at the home of Miss Opal Kennett. The meeting was called to order by the president, Miss Lillian Wade, and a motion was made, seconded, and carried out, that a scheme was to be adopted whereby interest in our class might be increased. Plans for a play were discussed; it will be brought up before the class at its next meeting the first Thursday night in February.

St. Paul extends to all within the conference a hearty greeting, and we hope that this year is to be the greatest in your history for the advancement of God's kingdom. We ask an interest in your prayers, and good-bye, until the next edition of the Herald.

LEONARD LINEBERRY, Reporter.

West End, Greensboro.—The Foust Bible Class met in its monthly business session on Thursday night of last week at Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Cooper's new home on Walker Avenue. There was a splendid attendance of the active members with honorary members and visitors present. After the business was transacted officers for the next six months were elected, as follows: Mrs. Lee Rice, president; Mr. J. S. Ferree, vice-president; Mrs. M. H. Waynick, secretary; Mrs. R. M. Johnson, assistant secretary; Mrs. Florence Watt, treasurer, and Messrs. Foust, Ratledge, and Stafford were elected teachers.

The hour of fun and frolic, directed by Dr. Joy Glascock and Mr. Pinchback, was very enjoyable. From this feature of the monthly meeting the class expects as much inspiration as it does from the business session. The hostess served Neapolitan cream and cake.

Work on the Sunday school annex of the church is going on quietly and before long the children's division expects to move in. There will be departmental rooms, and an assembly room for general Sunday school use, with a nice stage where the special day programs may be rendered. The Senior and Young People's departmental rooms will be in the church basement with the Adult division in the church auditorium. A room for the central heating plant is being built between the two main buildings, and over it a nice kitchen for the Ladies' Aid. After that comes a remodeling of the pulpit and the choir loft.

All of you come to West End! We already have the best a church can crave—a beloved pastor. REPORTER.

Lincolnton.—A fine Christmas program was rendered by the children and young people on Saturday evening before Christmas. We have as fine a young people here as you will find under the stars and stripes.

Many thanks to Miss Daily Hartman and Miss Hester Johnson for lending their efforts in training children to give us such a fine program. Many thanks to Bro. E. E. Eury and wife for the fine table for the pastor. Also for $5 Christmas present by Brother "Dutch" Deitz, of Gastonia. Brother Deitz is one of the finest young men who walk the black dirt of North Carolina. He is a loyal member of the church. We would not forget Brother Ward, whose wife and daughter are members of our church, but he is not. Yet he loves us as well as his children, because every time we go to see him he and wife give us something; and he gave pastor $5 as a present.

Something new in 1928 in Lincolnton! On the first hour of the first day of the first week of the first month of 1928 there was born in the home of Brother E. E. Eury a fine girl by the name of Joyce Elliott Eury—a fine little girl because she partakes of the genial disposition of her father and mother, for Brother Eury and wife are very loyal members of our church and very much of our success for the last two years has been due to their energetic efforts.

Wait one minute! Pastor and wife would not forget the nice purse presented as a Christmas gift. W. L. CARSON.

High Point.—At the 11 o'clock service last Sunday morning Dr. Spahr delivered a very forceful sermon on "Life's Triangle, or The Great Scheme of God's Purpose in Every Life." In view of the fact that February will be Stewardship Month, this sermon was timely and appropriate. Dr. Spahr emphasized the duties that a man owes himself, his neighbor, and his God. How great a responsibility rests today upon the leaders of the great army of young people in our public schools, our colleges and our universities! May God's richest blessings rest upon the teachers of youth in our land. We cannot, if we would, shirk our duty to our neighbors; we cannot separate ourselves from other peoples. We cannot get away from the fact that we are all brothers, and God loves the black man, the Chinaman, the Hindu, Italian and Esquimaux, and we owe duties to all of them. We do not yet know just what a man owes to himself, but to God he owes gratitude, worship, and adoration throughout life. At this service the choir sang the beautiful anthem, "More Love to Thee, O Christ," and "Night Sinks on the Wave" was sung by a trio of ladies, Mrs. John C. Whitesell, Mrs. J. H. Allred, and Miss Elizabeth Welch, with splendid effect. At the evening service the message was brought by Prof. J. D. Hardy, on The Business of a Church in a Community.

At the Christian Endeavor meeting Monday evening Mr. Ralph Vance was the leader for the topic, "How Our Church Does Its Work." These young people are studying the history of the denomination, how and why it was organized, and who were the first leaders, its different interests and the heads of each one. This would be a profitable study for some of the grown-ups for several months.

The second quarterly conference is called for Wednesday evening, February 8, and this will be the time for nominations for delegates to annual conference next fall.

Last Wednesday afternoon Mrs. R. T. Pickens entertained the Theta Phi Society, which is composed of girls of the college. This is an honor society, and membership therein is elective. No girl is asked to join unless she maintains an average grade of 85 or more on all studies. The following members were present: Mrs. W. B. Street of the faculty, Misses Vista Dixon, Helen Hayes, Lillian Buckner, Spencer Cutchin, Leona Wood, Dorothy Haskins, Virginia Pickens and Pauline Elkins. After games and a business session, the hostess served fruit salad in jello, coffee with whipped cream, saltines, and stuffed dates.

Wyatt A. Pickens, who has been to New Orleans, will stop off here to see his mother Tuesday night en route to Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Charlotte, First Church.—A number of our church people have been sick, some seriously ill with pneumonia and measles in almost every home. We are glad to report they are all on the road to recovery and we have much to be thankful for.

The second quarterly conference will be held Thursday evening, February 9, at 7:30 o'clock.

The W. F. H. S. and the W. H. M. S. are moving along nicely and quietly, also the Ladies' Aid Society.

The Interdenominational Missionary Union met Monday afternoon in the new First Methodist Episcopal Church.

A pageant was given by about 50 ladies of the First Baptist Church.

Mr. Surratt is giving us some splendid sermons. Last Sunday morning his subject was "A Righteous Man." We are glad to have Mrs. Hunter sing in the choir.

Mr. Link is not so well. He has been indisposed for some time at the home of his daughter, Mrs. R. C. Millaway.

The mid-week prayer services are interesting, studying the outstanding Bible characters. This week the discussion will be on "Moses," led by Mr. J. M. Muse.

Mr. and Mrs. George Ross and sons, of Jackson Springs, were recent visitors in our congregation. We are always glad to welcome all visitors and friends of the church.

REPORTER.

Stallings, Mecklenburg Charge.—We like our new pastor, Rev. W. C. Hall, and his family just fine. They are taking a lively interest in the different organizations of the church, and each one is glad to have their help.

Our Christmas program was fairly successful. The children enjoyed the tree, old Santa, and the treat.

Our C. E. society is holding on with determination and even though we are few in number we feel confident of growth.

The Ladies' Aid Society has accomplished much, but is still working and praying that it may be a great benefit to the church and community.

Brother Hall is very enthusiastic over midweek prayer meetings. We are holding them in the homes during the winter months, and even though the interest is fairly good we are anxious for more. Pray for us.

REPORTER.

Piney Grove, Denton Charge.—As there has not been a reporter elected from Piney Grove for some time, no one takes the responsibility of reporting. Not that we are sleeping, but we have a band of faithful ones, although not so large in number; but we have the promise of Jesus being with us: "If two or three meet and agree together in my name I will be in the midst to own and bless," and we hope we have that number.

I think our Sunday school is growing, but we hope to see it much larger and more interest taken.

This world would have no charm for this writer if there were no Sunday school or preaching, where we may meet and study more about Jesus and His love for us.

Our pastor, Brother Bingham, brought us a very interesting and uplifting sermon the fourth Sunday. We believe Brother Bingham feels and practices what he preaches and is a peace-maker, and we hope that we may all taken the words to our hearts and may we make this year the best year of our lives.

Yours in His service,

REPORTER.

State Street Church.—Rev. C. B. Way filled the pulpit Sunday morning and gave us a good sermon. There was no service at night.

The chicken and oyster supper given by the ladies of the church Friday night was a most enjoyable occasion as well as a success financially. Miss Cleo Spainhour gave two readings in her very pleasing way and an original play and song was given by the Junior C. E. Society directed by their leader, Miss Pauline Low. Miss Low gave a humorous reading that was much enjoyed by all present.

The Junior Society is doing fine work and growing rapidly under Miss Low's very efficient leadership. About $46 was cleared at the suppér. This will go toward buying equipment for the kitchen and dining room of the church.

We are all very grateful to the Piedmont Furniture Company for the gift of an oil stove and to the Kirkman and Penniger Furniture Company for two tables.

Dr. Straughn will be with us Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock to talk to us about the Gratitude Gift and other interests of the denomination.

Master Vance Bethea, young son of our pastor, is confined to his home with measles.

REPORTER.

Chase City Charge.—Being appointed by Rev. S. W. Taylor, our president, to serve this charge, we have entered the field and begun work. We feel that we were never received more kindly by any people. We find here a splendid people who are working hard to keep a Methodist Protestant church alive in their community. They hold prayer meetings Sunday nights when they have no preaching. Sunday school is held every Sunday. Many of these people moved here from North Carolina and were Methodist Protestants without a church home. They desired a church home according to their liking. This is why this M. P. church stands away so far from any other M. P. church. We feel that there is a good field here in which to work. These people seem now to be taking new courage. They are planning now to paint their church building.

We met with them the second and fourth Sundays in January and held our first quarterly conference, preached four times and visited several families. We are praying that God may use us in helping these people in their effort to maintain an M. P. church for their home where they can raise their children under the influence of the Methodist Protestant church. They are proud of their church and justly so. People who have religion and church pride will succeed.

May the good Lord greatly bless these people.

J. B. O'BRIANT.

Jan. 25, 1928.

Democrat Charge.—I was very glad to be sent back to the Democrat charge. Our people remembered us with many useful articles Saturday before Christmas. We also received many cards from friends. I feel like saying with the psalmist, "The Lord has cast our lot in pleasant places."

Our first quarterly conference was held at Democrat church in December. Brother David Carter was elected by the conference as a committee to canvass the work and take pledges to repair the parsonage. We want to get this done as soon as weather will permit. We also want to get our mid-week prayer meeting started as soon as spring opens. We want to organize our Sunday school at Pleasant Gap church.

President Taylor came over and preached for us at Democrat. As the weather was very cold there were not many out. His sermon was very much enjoyed by all present. We hope we will have the pleasure of having him with us again when the people can get out to hear his messages.

As we have entered a new year let us all be new in spirit, in hope and faith, looking ever to Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our salvation.

REPORTER.

Littleton Charge.—Our work is moving on. The writer filled the appointments at Vaughan on the fourth Sunday. Marks of progress are noted there in that a new metal shingle roof has been put on the church. Painters are at work giving the outside a new coat and making the building look much better. The writer was told by those who do things that electric lights are going to be installed there soon. All these improvements will add a great deal to our church building and help make our work move with greater progress.

A good-sized congregation greeted the pastor at the evening service hour and it is a pleasure and inspiration to preach to the people there. The people of the Baptist church attend our services regularly at night and are a great help in our work.

The people at Weavers Chapel have taken a forward step in that they have purchased some new pews for their church. I have heard that they are contemplating laying a new floor soon, both of which will add a great deal to the appearance of the church building.

Plans are in the making whereby the pastor hopes to be able to be among the people more soon and the work is, without any big things being done, moving on very well. Some has been paid and more pledged on the A. C. B. We hope to secure and hold a good standing in the amount paid on A. C. B. and other claims in the Herald soon.

. M. IVEY CRUTCHFIELD, Pastor.

Vaughan, Littleton Circuit.—We are very glad that we have gotten our church covered after a long time.

Sunday was our regular preaching Sunday. Mr. Crutchfield delivered very good sermons He announced that on the next fourth Sunday we will observe the Lord's Supper, and would like for all the members to be present.

We are very glad to have with us at our church Mrs. W. C. Porter, mother, and other visitors.

REPORTER.

Love Joy, Why Not Charge.—There was an all-day service here Sunday, January 29. Owing to the severity of the weather, there were not as many present as was expected. Services were opened by the singing of the hymn, "How Sweet the Name of Jesus Sounds."

The following ministers were present and participated in the day's exercises: Rev. Joel Trogdon, Rev. J. W. Hulin, Rev. George L. Reynolds, and Rev. C. W. Saunder.

At the morning service, "Uncle John," as Rev. Mr. Hulin is known, read the first Psalm. His message was delivered to an attentive congregation of old friends and relatives. At the noon hour, lunch was served on the campus. At the afternoon service Rev. George L. Reynolds, of High Point, another home boy, compared the story of Nehemiah rebuilding the walls of Jerusalem with the rebuilding of the church at this place. He said the work of rebuilding was great because it is God's work and not man's. We are rebuilding for God and not for our pastor. If God's glory was involved in rebuilding the walls of Jerusalem, His glory is, therefore, involved in rebuilding Love Joy church. As in the days of Nehemiah, there is a reward expected from the enterprise, a reward from God, not in dollars and cents, but a spiritual reward. The rearing of boys and girls into Christian manhood and womanhood—reared to be future leaders of the church—this reward is the greatest.

The great work of rebuilding needs a leader—a person who puts his whole heart and soul into leadership, and one who does not know the meaning of the word, fail. There will be discouragements and opposition to meet and overcome. Nehemiah had many discouragements and much opposition, but he overcame them all and the walls were safely rebuilt. In building the church, there will be opposition; probably some will quit if it is built so that it will serve the people many, many years.

After these helpful and inspiring thoughts, the afternoon was spent in discussing the plan, structure, and the financial part connected with building the church. A modern brick structure was decided upon, one that will serve the present as well as the future needs of the people. Work will begin at an early date.

We were glad to have with us Sunday Miss Mae Hulin, who has just returned from a six months' stay in the Johns Hopkins hospital in Baltimore. While there she underwent a serious operation for goitre.

We have been having a very good attendance in Sunday school but it could easily be much larger. We hope to see our Sunday school grow by leaps and bounds when the cold winter days are over and sickness has vanished from our midst.

Our pastor filled his regular appointment the second Sunday. We were glad to have Mr. and Mrs. Trogdon, their son and his wife and children worship with us. Come again. We are always glad to have visitors.

Best wishes to the Herald and its many readers. REPORTER.

Kernersville.—January 29 our Sunday school attendance was good, considering the extremely cold weather. Mr. Lowdermilk preached an interesting sermon. He brings us splendid and useful messages.

We certainly enjoy having Mr. and Mrs. Lowdermilk back with us another year; she is such a good help in our Sunday school.

Why Not Circuit.—Perhaps the readers have been wondering if Why Not circuit is still on the map. Yes, they are still doing business in the good old way and many of them are moved to say amen; like saints of other days when they hear the glad tidings of the gospel. Each church runs an evergreen Sunday school and most of them weekly prayer meetings, and perhaps all. I do not know about one or two, as I have not got to go there but one time since conference. So things look fairly good for a successful year. We had the pleasure of attending one Christmas entertainment. This was at New Hope church.

We have just returned from Lovejoy church where we spent the day in service and enjoyed a good dinner on the ground in one of the tents. The day has been cold and some snow on the ground, yet we had a fairly good congregation and all enjoyed the preaching of Bros. J. W. Hulin and G. L. Reynolds. Brother Hulin preached at 11 o'clock. Both delivered their messages with power; each heart felt that the gospel has not lost its power when delivered by Spirit filled men. At the close of the afternoon service an appeal was made for pledges for the new church. They hope to start when spring opens up. Twenty thousand bricks were pledged and some money. The secretary, Brother Frank Hulin, reported that something over $1,000 had been pledged on the building fund. They propose building a modern brick church with Sunday school rooms that will be in keeping with the times, perhaps for 50 years. If anyone who reads this wants to put a thousand brick into Love Joy church, send your pledge to Mr. J. F. Russell, Troy, N. C.

O Lord, strengthen the people's faith in this, harmonize their wills with Thy will, then there will be unity of purpose, then they shall have strength to perform the task thou hast given them to do.

Things are getting right critical when a preacher can't leave his car on the church ground without the people filling it full of things too numerous to mention. That thing happened to this preacher today at Love Joy, and I haven't a name of the intruders; but may the Lord reward every one according to his work. JOEL B. TROGDON.

Efland, Orange Charge.—Owing to the extremely cold weather we did not have so many out for Sunday school Sunday.

Brother Williams continues to fill all of his appointments regardless of the weather.

Plans for a new church at Efland are being discussed and much work has already been done towards raising funds. We are anxious to see the work of construction begin as we are badly in need of Sunday school rooms. Friends of our church as well as our members show their interest in many ways. The Baptists have offered the use of their church while ours is under construction. We appreciate this very much and also any help towards the finances received from friends. Pray for our success in this undertaking.

MRS. E. S. TAYLOR, Reporter.

Friendship, Chase City Charge.—Our pastor Rev. J. B. O'Briant, filled his appointment Sunday, January 22. He preached a most helful sermon at 11 and 7:30 o'clock. We all enjoy Brother O'Briant's sermons very much.

Immediately after services we held our first quarterly conference. The same board of officers was re-elected for another year.

The Ladies' Aid is planning to give a box supper. The proceeds will go to the painting of our church.

Pray for us that our church may make progress and that we may work together for God and the kingdom this year.

J. F. G.

Grace Church Reception.—Grace people, led by the Ladies' Aid Society, gave a most enjoyable reception to their new pastor, Rev. R. J. Tamblyn, on Tuesday night in the Hut. In the receiving line were Mrs. Terry Sharp, president of the Ladies' Aid Society, Rev. and Mrs. Tamblyn, Rev. and Mrs. S. W. Taylor, Rev. and Mrs. Bates, Rev. and Mrs. Spahr, Rev. and Mrs. Stubbins, Rev. J. D. Williams, and J. F. McCulloch. Brother J. Norman Wills was master of ceremonies. There was music and there were speeches. There were also refreshments. The spirit of the occasion was all that could be desired, and Pastor Tamblyn must have been confirmed in his impression that he is heartily welcomed.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Rash

Thomas A., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Rash, of Jennings, N. C., was born February 20, 1927, and died November 21, of the same year.

Gathering buds, gathering buds,
Some must be young and ungrown,
Jesus is gathering, day after day,
Buds for the heavenly throne.

Why was he born? we humbly ask,
As we think of the little child;
He never lived to know a friend,
Or do a deed worth while.

Into the world he came and the world he left
Both in the salf-same year,
He never knew a joy on earth,
Nor did he know a care.

Then why it was we cannot say,
That he ever lived at all,
To never know a mother's love,
Nor the name of father call.

But we should not ask the cause of a thing,
Which the All-Wise Being said should be;
For all our knowledge comes from Him,
And He can rule better than we.

We cannot see the cause,
Nor the purpose understand;
But still if we are true to God,
There will be a day when we can.

In spite of the cause and purpose,
We miss the darling dear,
And when he died he left behind
Many and many a tear.

We think of him in his mother's arms,
His little blue eyes shining bright,
Filling the room with brightness,
As a lamp in the dark of night.

As we look at his little cradle,
We sadly miss his smiling face,
Which was so pure that not a ramble
Of sin upon it could you trace.

His heart was pure and innocent,
His face was sweet and true,
And a little squeeze from his little arms
Would make your heart melt within you.

But, ah, as we sit in sadness,
That same small voice speaks again;
Our eyes are open to another vision,
We feel as if we were another man.

We see in a far-off country
A city of shining gold,
And the scenes of endless grandeur,
The half has never been told.

Ah! There is a little child,
A little boy at play;
And then at a sudden glance
We recognize Thomas A.

Look at his smiling face!
As happy as can be;
Ah. I know no one on earth
Could be so happy as he!

Though we miss him here on earth,
We can't wish him back again;
To leave that world of happiness,
To live a life in a world of sin.

Though he has gone from us,
And to wish him back we can't afford;
Let us so live that when we die
We will go to meet, both him and our Lord.

CLAY MADISON,
Member of Union Grove M. P. Church and Student at High Point College.

Holt

Mrs. Elizabeth Jane Holt, the oldest member of Mt. Hermon Church, died January 10, 1928, at the ripe age of 95 years, nine months and 22 days. The funeral was conducted January 11 by her pastor, in the presence of a congregation that taxed the capacity of the church, and the body was interred in the church cemetery. The pallbearers were grandsons.

Mrs. Holt is survived by the following sons and daughters: Gilbert M. Holt, J. H. B. Holt, J. Lee Holt, Mrs. Betty Robinson, and Mrs. Mary Jane Isley, of the Mt. Hermon section, William H. Holt and Mrs. Betty Neese, of Greensboro. Besides the seven children there are surviving 45 grandchildren, 119 great-grandchildren, and 24 great-great-grandchildren, most of whom were present for the funeral.

In the passing of Mrs. Holt, Mt. Hermon loses its oldest and one of its finest members. Her influence for righteousness is expressing itself "even unto the fourth generation."

J. ELWOOD CARROLL, Pastor.

Yarborough

Funeral services for Lewis E. Yarborough, one of the prominent young farmers of Cross Anchor, S. C., who has killed Tuesday, January 10, were held at 3 o'clock Wednesday, January 11th, from the Yarborough home near Cross Anchor. The services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. W. B. Surratt, assisted by Rev. C. B. Prince, of Union, Rev. W. B. Garrett and Rev. J. P. Patton, of Greenwood. Interment followed in the Yarborough Chapel cemetery.

Mr. Yarborough was in the woods with several men, looking after the cutting of some large trees. A large tree having been sawed to fall down the hill, fell in a different direction from that planned, struck another large tree and rebounded up the hill. The butt of the tree struck Mr. Yarborough on the chest, knocked him to the ground and killed him instantly.

Mr. Yarborough was seemingly well out of danger and was looking out for the sofety of three other men who were apparently in more danger than he.

Mr. Yarborough was 42 years of age. He was born at Cross Anchor, the son of the late Dan and Evely Snead Yarborough, and had lived all his life in the home where he was born.

He was a member of the Yarborough Chapel Methodist Protestant church, having joined in early childhood. He was interested in all phases of church and community work, always taking an active part in these.

Besides his widow, Mrs. Pearl Ezell Yarborough, he is survived by the following brothers: John Yarborough, Enoree, S. C.; Hiram Yarborough, Hendersonville, N. C.; L. Yarborough, Enoree, S. C.; C. D. Yarborough, Clinton, S. C., and one sister, Miss Lily Yarborough, of Clinton, S. C., and several nieces and nephews.

The pallbearers were N. P. Yarborough, D. A. Yarborough, P. B. Ezell, B. F. Ezell, W. C. Ezell and J. K. Ezell.

It is a privilege to one who knew Lewis Yarborough to render a testimonial to his high character and true worth as a real gentleman and noble citizen. Having been the possessor of a happy and cheerful disposition, he seemed to spread sunshine and good cheer upon all those whom his life touched. He was truly unselfish and scores of people in his community and elsewhere can testify to the many kindnesses that he has rendered to both white and colored. Well may it be said of him:

"So when a good man dies
For years beyond his ken,
The light he leaves behind him lies
Upon the paths of men."

Hester

Mrs. Julia A Hester, daughter of the late R. W. Jones, was born in Person County, N. C., June 2, 1866, and died at her home in Henderson, December 28, 1927. She was united in marriage to P. L. D. Hester July 27, 1887. To this union five children were born; three still survive: J. T. and F. G. Hester, of Vance County, and J. R. Hester, of Palm Beach, Fla. Surviving are also three sisters, three brothers, her husband, and seven grandchildren.

She professed faith in Christ in early life and joined the Baptist church but later had her membership transferred to Flat Rock M. P. church with her husband, of which she was a consistent member till the day of her death. Mrs. Hester lived a beautiful Christian life. She had been in declining health for several years, yet she bore her pain patinently, and although she loved life, she expressed a willingness to go. I think I have never known a person more cheerful and more resigned than she.

She was very retiring in disposition. She lived the beautiful home life, content to find her pleasure in the family circle where she was loved and honored. The funeral service was held at Flat Rock church where interment was made. The service was largely attended and as we beheld the beautiful flowers that were deposited on the grave we were made to feel that her friends were many. May the grace of our Heavenly Father whom she loved and served comfort and sustain the bereaved ones, and may they cling more closely to Him who bringest life out of death.

There is a world above
Where parting is unknown;
A whole eternity of love
Form'd for the good alone;
And faith beholds the dying here
Translated to that happier sphere."

M. P. CHAMBLISS.

Teague

Charlie Teague, who departed this life January 19, 1928, was laid to rest Sunday afternoon in Bethel cemetery. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. J. W. Autry, of Swepsonville, a former pastor of the family. Appropriate music was rendered by the choir of the Bethel M. P. church, assisted by the quartet from Burlington First M. P. church.

The deceased, a young man of 31 years, four months, seven days, is survived by his father and step-mother, Mr. and Mrs. P. G. Teague, of Carboro, N. C., and the following brothers and sisters: Mrs. L. D. Petty, Pittsboro, N. C.; M. D. and Floyd Teague, of Pittsboro, N. C.; Mrs. H. L. Weaver, of Carboro, N. C.; Mrs. G. E. Hackney, of Carboro, N. C.; Mrs. J. E. Hackney, of Carboro, N. C.; Taft, Laura and Christine Teague, of Carboro, N. C.

Charlie was a young man of sterling character and a pleasant and cheerful disposition, making friends wherever he went, and speaking kind words to all with whom he came in contact. Surely he will be missed, not only by father, mother, sisters and brothers, but by a host of friends.

May the Lord comfort and cheer those who feel the loss most keenly.

Charlie, you have gone and left us,
And our hearts are very sad,
But we hope some day to meet you
In a land that's free from tears.

A COUSIN.

Gray

John Gray, aged 78, passed away January 18, and was buried at Level Cross the following day. Mr. Gray had made his home with Mrs. Emma Gray for some time. For several weeks prior to his passing he was confined to his room, growing worse to the end. The writer conducted the funeral service.

Nicholson, $12.00.

These remittances push several charges well on toward their goals. Brother Dixon this week goes beyond his goal quite a distance. Next week we will publish the list of goals again.

—Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, American ambassador to Germany, has started a subscription to raise $400,000 for the reconstruction of Heidelberg University buildings and has already secured more than half that sum. His action has been enthusiastically acclaimed by the college authorities, the city administration, and the entire population. It is looked upon as a godsend by the famous school, in which Dr. Schurman himself was a student fifty years ago.

—Rev. G. F. Millaway fell on the ice Tuesday and broke his left arm near the shoulder. He had the arm bound up and came to Greensboro to have Dr. Herbert Ogburn set it. He has our sympathy. We hope the healing will be rapid and as painless as may be.

—The Coble Township S. S. Institute met at Bellemont Church Sunday, January 29, at 2:30 o'clock. The principal speakers were Rev. P. E. Lindley, of High Point College; Mr. E. S. W. Dameron, Burlington, and Mrs. P. S. Dixon, Graham. The church was loosely filled with delegates from the various Sunday schools. Many visitors were present. The Sunday school work is steadily improving under the able leadership of Herman Coble, who has recently been elected president.

—Brother J. C. Causey, of Guilford county, is listed among 24 "master farmers of North Carolina." He is not simply a successful farmer; he is a good churchman and all-around citizen.

—Rev. N. G. Bethea last Sunday spoke in Mt. Pleasant church, in Pleasant Union church, and in Liberty church, giving his interesting account of his visit to Palestine, Egypt, and other countries.

—Brother John C. Andrew, aged 82, a member of Calvary M. P. Church, died last Monday morning after an illness of a few weeks. His funeral was held in the church Tuesday at 11 o'clock, conducted by Pastor Bates, assisted by former Pastor Gerringer. Brother Andrew was formerly a faithful member of Grace Church, but became one of the charter members of the new Calvary church, and showed a devotion that was beautiful to behold. He served as one of the building committee and has been from the beginning a member of the Board of Trustees. He was interested intensely in the success of the church and gave himself and his means to promote its success. We shall miss him, but we feel that he had finished his course and that he has entered into his rest. Days before the end came he told those about his bed that it was his last sickness. After lying for days in a state of weakness, he rallied a few hours before death came and gave directions as to his coffin, his burying place and his funeral. He was taken to Moriah Cemetery for burial.

—Secretary of Labor Davis when he came to broadcast a speech last Saturday night said: "My father, aged 76, is listening in tonight and before I begin my speech I will address a few words to him," which he proceeded to do in a filial way.

—Railway Engineer Gafney walked off a porch roof while asleep in Spencer and was severely injured.

—Mrs. Kate Hutton, mother of Rev. J. R. Hutton, celebrated her 93rd birthday last week. She is remarkably well preserved.

—Rehoboth, Granville, has an unusually sad funeral, that of Charles Cauthorn, aged 17, who was accidentally shot while rabbit-hunting.

—The death of General Haig, distinguished English commander in the World War, is reported this week. He died suddenly, his heart having been weakened by the strain of war time.

—We recently heard by radio addresses by President Coolidge and by Secretary Davis of the Department of Labor in the President's Cabinet. Both used the word "congratulate." The President pronounced it as we are accustomed to hearing it pronounced (congratchulate), but Mr. Davis made a clear separation between syllables and said congrat-u-late.

—Lindbergh is now visiting South American countries. The weather made him one hour late in one arrival. He is usually punctual to the minute.

—The ministers of the city were pleasantly entertained at a supper by the Lions' Club in the King Cotton Hotel last Thursday evening. They responded to calls for speeches which proved to be very entertaining to their hosts. In these humorous speeches the Methodist Protestant Church was represented by Dr. Spahr and Rev. R. J. Tamblyn.

—Mrs. J. M. Hamilton, a grandmother aged 65, has entered the University of Arkansas as a student. She wishes to prepare for journalism. It is never too late to learn—some things.

VOLUME XXXIV GREENSBORO, N. C., FEBRUARY 9, 1928 NUMBER 14

The Pastor and the Gratitude Gift

It is impossible to distinguish between observing the centennial of our church and making the Gratitude Gift. They are synonymous. Whatever of desire there may be to remember these hundred years of honorable history, with all the attendant emotions, will inevitably express itself in visible tokens. There is much philosophy in the slogan: "Say it with flowers;" for say it with something other than words is the natural impulse. Not to say it with something is a practical admission that there is nothing to say.

One can understand a bit of lassitude with some members of the church; those who are not deeply stirred by anything, those who are unfamiliar with the personalities of other years and know nothing of the great impulses of the church; those whose only interest is one of convenience, and other such reasons. No one expects the entire rank and file to enthuse over this anniversary or be happy over anything that appears like added burdens. These, however, are a minority. Most people have the root of the matter in them awaiting only the stirring call and inspiration of proper leadership. That a church may have no interest in this matter is largely due to the lack of some one to issue the challenge. To a very great extent they get their cue from the pastor. And it is quite difficult to think of an indifferent pastor, for he is supposedly the incarnation of the church principle.

The Gratitude Gift, as has often been expressed, is not a campaign or drive for money. It is simply an outlet for loyalty; an opportunity to visualize something, providing a way for all who want to celebrate the centennial. One hundred thousand dollars as a financial expression of one hundred years is apparently inadequate. There is no disposition to make a financial appraisement of our history. The Gratitude Gift is what it says it is, nothing more. We may or may not enjoy paying debts or simply doing our duty. A gift, however, is a joyous thing, or it isn't likely to be made at all.

So that the response to the Gratitude Gift will reveal the spontaneous loyalty of the church and more particularly of the clergy.

The government of the church is anti-Episcopal, wherein both pastor and people are exempt from the compelling authority resident in officialdom; but not exempt from the authority of duty. It is practically an assertion that for the things that ought to be done the whip is unnecessary; pastors and people will do them out of love and loyalty. This Gratitude Gift and the observance of this centennial, identical in spirit, cannot be spoken against. There is no voice to say it ought not to be done. But the keeping of it has been made voluntary. And the gift ought to be made. What is one to do in such a case! Shall we or shall we not go up to the feast! And if we go, shall it be empty-handed! The preachers of a church are its voice. Is it possible for them at this time to be silent or issue an uncertain sound? The preacher stands at the door; it is difficult to get to the church for a hearing except through him. The picture they see is the one he paints. Issues like the Gratitude Gift live or die with him. Behold this is our day of remembrance, and the pastor in meditation may well say: This is the church wherein I have found spiritual rest and the vast opportunity of a pulpit; a place where I may speak for God, a free man to declare a saving grace; this indeed is my life and all my expectancy of eternal rewards. And it is also my place of earthly rewards (shame even to think of it as a motive), that places a roof over my head and provides me with the boon of earthly substance. Yea, it is this church which literally mothers me, body and soul. It has come to this great moment, and the Gratitude Gift, its voice, will search me out and discover if there be in me the soul of gratitude.

And, more than mirroring the leadership of the church, the Gratitude Gift will have its inevitable reflex of confidence or incompetency; we cannot escape this conclusion. The size of the Gratitude Gift is not large but as an offering in addition to the budgets and drives of large proportion already on the books of the church, it represents a fair sum of money. Can we do it, granting the willingness to do it? The Million Dollar Campaign was a great awakening and more than any other single effort quickened the confidence of the church in itself. All who are familiar with the church will soon dismiss any suggestion of our inability to give the amount asked for the centennial. Our people are not poor; and I quite agree with a speaker who recently said that the preachers alone could make this gift, do it with comparative ease, out of money they have received from the church, if it were necessary that they should do so. No, it is not poverty, nor budgets, nor hard times, nor church debts, nor church construction, nor any of these things; it is a case of confidence in ourselves, whether or not we have sufficient church spirit, and we need to know the thrill of accomplishment. We set out to do this thing, and we did it. We started to build and we completed the house.

This is our birthday; let us make an offering unto the Lord; hail to the brightness of our Zion's glad morning!

These are then the important issues the Gratitude Gift will make clear: First, that our pastors with whole hearts are in love with their church; and, second, that when once we determine on a schedule we have the courage to see it through.

To go to the General Conference with either the Gratitude Gift not raised in its entirety or a single conference doing less than its full share is unthinkable. The gratitude is there, the loyalty is there, and we can do whatever our hands find to do.

"METHODIST PROTESTANT CENTENNIAL GRATITUDE GIFT"

Symposium

Letters From Prominent Ministers and Laymen With Good Words

JUDGE WHITAKER, Lynchburg, "Glorious Heritage"

The history of the Methodist Protestant Church is a glorious heritage since it was founded one hundred years ago. While the denomination is still weak from a numerical standpoint, yet it has made its impression on other church governments which will last throughout all time.

The church was organized to break the grip of ecclesiastical hierarchy and give the laymen equal voice in the management of its affairs. The democratic influence of its government soon made its impression on other denominations, its liberalizing influence was felt, and the ecclesiastical hierarchy was broken. The Methodist Protestant Church should be profoundly grateful for the influence this church government has exerted, as well as the good work it has been able to do along lines other than denominational. While the members of the Methodist Protestant Church should be grateful for the work it has been able to do, other denominations should be equally grateful as it has liberalized their governments and brought the influence of laymen into the affairs of the church. F. W. WHITAKER.

J. NORMAN WILLS, Greensboro, "Worth While"

For what are we grateful? If we maintain our church for ourselves only, for the pleasure of worship, and to save our souls, it were better that our denomination had not been born. But if we have the larger view, and are seeking to do the will of Christ by extending His Kingdom, we will find opportunities to serve for which we may truly give thanks. The work of our boards projected a few years ago has had to be scaled down, for financial reasons. The gratitude gift is to remove the handicap. It is well worth while.

J. NORMAN WILLS.

W. O. ATWOOD, Baltimore, "Generous Response"

The Methodist Protestant Centennial Gratitude Gift! What a splendid idea, what a spontaneous appeal it makes to us, and what a generous response springs from every true Methodist Protestant heart as we think of what it means. How insignificant the $100,000 seems when we place it beside the wonderful blessings we have as members of our church.

Come, fellow laymen, and ministers too, sit down and try to realize the blessings the church means and has meant to us and our children, then, with enthusiastic gratitude let us put our shoulders behind the project and push it across to a glorious success. W. O. ATWOOD.

TREASURER COOK, Kansas City, "Confident"

The Kansas Conference accepted the quota of $1,000. With the approval of each pastor and delegate present, we established a quota for each charge. Four charges to date have sent more than their quota. So far there has been paid to the conference treasurer $709.12. With a number of charges that have not sent in their gift, yet to be heard from, I am confident Kansas will be more than 100 per cent.

A. L. COOK.

PRESIDENT GARRISON, Kansas, "Names Miss Kansas".

A great many Methodist Protestant people and friends would like to be at the centennial celebration of the Methodist Protestant Church when he General Conference meets in the old St. Johns Church of Baltimore, where it was organized one hundred years ago, but many will not be able to go. Yet everybody can take part in that great celebration by giving to the Gratitude Gift. Almost one hundred per cent of the Centerville Charge, where I am serving as pastor, gave and the charge went 202.5 per cent, and therefore had the selection of Miss Kansas, to bring the gift from Kansas to the General Conference. Kansas will go 100 per cent and more.

T. L. GARRISON.

J. F. BAYLIS, Illinois, "Why This Gift?" Because—

Methodical in all we do, our church has been called "Methodism in earnest." This gift proves the statement.

"Ideal government, Christ the only Head, and all elders equal." Our church is worthy of the best.

"If God be for us, who can be against us?" One hundred years of glorious achievements prove His watchful care.

So, with unbounded thanksfulness this great privilege comes to us. Knowing that many pray, but never pay, we are going to seize this opportunity to prove to the world that paying and praying is the fruit unto holiness.

Because dollars and sense go together, it's a sensible thing to start another hundred years with a clean sheet and debts cancelled. J. F. BAYLIS.

J. A. SELBY, West Virginia, "Happy Event"

The Centennial Gratitude Gift is a happy suggestion. Happy because reminiscent in character. Past generations, it may be, dreamed of such a happy event, but did not, could not, name it. But this generation is to both see and feel the thrill of its fulfillment. This Gratitude Gift is retrospective. It goes back to the fathers and mothers of other days, but the full realization is to be shared in by the sons and daughters of this generation. Less than the full amount of this gift would be a spurious ingratitude. This is unthinkable, it must not be. I cannot give my consent for the West Virginia Conference to do less than her full apportionment. Every member of every church should be represented in this our first centennial birthday. So make it be.

J. A. SELBY.

JOHN F. CAPPEL, Ohio, "Joy and Delight"

As Methodist Protestants, we should deem it a great blessing and privilege to live in a day that witnesses the completion of one hundred years of noble, honorable, and useful history of our esteemed and beloved denomination.

Gratitude is one of the noblest attributes of a beautiful and Christ-like character.

At least one of the ways by which every loyal Methodist Protestant can give expression to a real gratitude of heart and life is to contribute to the best of his or her ability to this worthy and practical enterprise, the $100,000 Methodist Protestant Centennial Gratitude Gift.

To do less than our best would be base ingratitude. And would certainly give us cause to have grave apprehensions of our own loyalty and fidelity to the church that under God ought to be the joy and delight of our lives and the object of our best gifts. JOHN F. CAPPEL.

W. L. WARD, North Carolina, "Only a Beginning"

I am looking forward with a great deal of interest and enthusiasm to the meeting of the General Conference. I feel confident that our people are going to respond 100 per cent to the Centennial Gratitude Gift and I trust this will be only the beginning of a great wave of interest on the part of the membership of the Mehodist Protestant Church that will carry us on to a greater and more useful organization in God's Kingdom. W. L. Ward.

J. C. Leonard, Iowa, "Love Measured"

Some belong to the Methodist Protestant Church because it is convenient, some because parents or friends belong, but there are others who are courageous enough to think for themselves, so they belong because they love the church. They love its methods, its government, its fellowship. So on this one hundredth anniversary of our beloved Zion, a concerted movement is on whereby each may discover for himself just why he belongs to this particular organization. Each will have the privilege of saying how much. Remembering our love will be measured, not by the amount given, but by the ability of the giver. J. C. Leonard.

Treasurer Hemingway, Michigan, "Lapeer Over"

I am heartily in favor of the Methodist Protestant Centennial Gratitude Gift, but feel there are many who are better able to produce the articles than myself.

Our Methodist Protestant Centennial Gratitude Gift is all raised at Lapeer, and ten per cent over. Cash all in bowl.

Several Michigan charges are paid in full on the M. P. C. G. G. F. J. Hemingway.

A. G. Dixon, North Carolina, "Thank You"

It is especially pleasing to know that all of us are asked to make our gifts, not because we must, but because we want to. It is a great thing to have lived a hundred years. It is a long time in the life of a human being, and not many of us will ever reach it. But it is a short period of time in the hsitory of a church or a nation. The Methodist Protestant Church, our church, has lived a hundred years, and we are rapidly approaching its one hundredth birthday. Plans are maturing to celebrate that event with fitting ceremonies on May 16, 1928, in Baltimore, Md. Thousands of Methodist Protestants will be there that evening with glad hearts and happy faces. Thousands more will be represented there in their Gifts of Gratitude to God for His blessings upon us for our first century and with fond anticipations for a greater second century. The heart of the entire Methodist Protestant Church will be turned toward Baltimore that day.

Our gifts which are to be made between now and then, which will accumulate into one great gift of $100,000, is our "Thank You" to God for leading us and blessing us and making us a power among men for Him. Common decency and pride and denominational loyalty will certainly lead us to say this thank you in a very worthy way.

A. G. Dixon.

R. L. Shipley, Newark, N. J., "Only Chance"

This is our only chance to contribute to a centennial gift. Not one of us will be alive in the flesh upon the earth when the next centenary of our church comes. Our only existence will be in the institutions which we have made better and passed on to our successors. The gift we now make will enter into the legacy we leave those who come after us. It should not be a memory of failure but of a holy obligation, gratefully assumed and splendidly performed.

Richard L. Shipley.

J. F. Kenney, Chicago, "Illinois Will"

It is now 100 years since the founding of the Methodist Protestant denomination. We are now asked to multiply these years by 100 dollars as a material expression of our gratitude to God for the far-sightedness and fearless convictions of those Godly pioneers in religious effort. I doubt if they were in the flesh today that they would be satisfied to thus limit the gift but would use 1,000 as a multiple for dollars and with no limit on souls. With the comparatively small ratio decided upon, let there be no fall downs. Avalon Park Community M. P. Church will go over the top and so will the Illinois Conference. J. F. Kenney.

G. H. Miller, Cambridge, "A Challenge"

The Centennial Gratitude Gift should be and will be raised because it is a challenge to the spirit of loyalty on the part of the whole membership of the Methodist Protestant Church. Failure at the point of loyalty is fatal, either in the life of a nation or the life of a church. It should be and will be raised for the good that it will do in helping to meet the financial necessities of boards and institutions. It should be and will be raised for the good it will do our denominations as well. It is just one more way in which we are realizing the joy of working together and by which we are developing a sense of denominational solidarity. All together now for the joy of a common victory. George H. Miller.

President Brown, Ohio, "Arise, Buckeyes"

"In everything give thanks," said the Apostle. Inclusive in that "everything" for Methodist Protestants at this time is the celebration of the 100th anniversary of the founding of our denominaion.

Inclusive in that "everything" is the opportunity which we have at this time to place graciously upon the altars of our church our part of the Gratitude Gift.

Surely there is no organization, Sabbath school class, nor individual in Ohio who will deliberately show the spirit of ingratitude at this time.

Can any afford to let future generations read on printed page his name or the name of his church as having failed at this special occasion?

Then up, Buckeyes! In His name, accept the challenge and honor the privilege which is yours. Let sentiment at this time have her proper place. Demonstrate your love for your denomination and church by being loyal at this time, when she speaks in a language sufficiently plain and clear that the wayfaring man, though a fool, cannot mistake it.

Let us all gladly lay upon our Zion's altars $15,000 as our birthday gift, as a concrete expression of our love and gratitude for what our church has been, is, and shall be.

Frank Lawrence Brown.

W. H. Litsinger, Baltimore, "Thank You"

An opportunity to say "Thank you" is always welcome. Such an opportunity is the first, simple idea of the Gratitude Gift. One really fine thing about it is the fact that it comes to every Mehodist Protestant, young and old, rich and poor. Each one may share in the joy of its privilege, share in it whatever may be the size of his gift. Considering all the church has been and is, both to us and to the world, we are glad "to thank God." Wm. H. Litsinger.

J. W. Hawley, Pittsburgh, "Enthusiastic"

Our local church is very enthusiastic over the Centennial Gratitude Gift. We count it a great privilege to share in this benevolent ministry.

As a denomination we have a history of which we may well be proud. Our church represents ideals which are worthy of perpetuation. The causes benefited by this gift are of vital interest to the Kingdom. The goal is well within our ability.

To pass the 100-year mark with no effort to worthily commemorate its achievements is unthinkable, and could not happen unless we failed to appreciate our past or were ashamed of it.

To fail in raising this $100,000 Gratitude Gift will prove our unworthiness of the religious and ecclesiastical liberties so heroically provided for us by our sacrificing fathers. We cannot fail, we must not fail, we shall not fail.

J. W. Hawley.

W. H. Betz, Iowa-Missouri

Not more is a hoary head "a crown of glory" among the righteous, than is long and honored life in the family of churches, worthy of reverential thanksgiving.

Hats off to our noble mother, who, though a fruitful procession of years has passed over her head, is still young and enthusiastic in heart! Oh, Mother of Millions, we exult in thy victorious years!

Let no child, conference or church, which loves its mother, fail in its full share in the agreed gift to her—earnest of our purpose, she shall have winged feet to move on in perennial youth of motherhood yet other hundreds of years, to other millions, who shall know her blessed ministry!

W. H. Betz.

J. E. Pritchard, North Carolina

In contributing to the Centennial Gratitude Gift, Methodist Protestants do two things, namely, they honor the founders of our church and at the same time they lay the foundation for a greater church in the next century. Surely every one who has at all familiarized himself with the conditions under which our forefathers labored and endured and then founded a new denomination will want to honor their memory.

Since they suffered so much for us and founded for us the finest church government in the world, we ought to pass this on to the next generation unhampered by debt. It is true that the amount we are asking for is not large, but just at this time it will enable the boards of the church and the institutions of the church to start out on a new century of progress with new hope and new faith and new determination. Surely anything less than the full amount asked for will be entirely too small. J. E. Pritchard.

J. S. Eddins, Alabama

The Methodist Protestant Centennial Gratitude Gift is:

(1) A memorial. To us from failing hands the Fathers threw the torch of a representative Methodism. The church they founded has lived and flourished a hundred years. We are thus permitted to "raise our Ebenezer, hither by Thy help we've come."

(2) It is a holy covenant. We plight our troth anew—that these "shall not have wrought and died in vain." Let us keep faith with the founders of our spiritual Mother. We reaffirm our faith in the doctrine of mutual rights. We are hopeful of the future. We are ready to meet the challenge of the new century, that democratic Methodism might not perish from the earth! J. S. Eddins.

J. C. Coons, Indiana

Every member of the Methodist Protestant Church should have a great appreciation of the heritage bequeathed unto us by our church fathers.

As a spiritual child of this splendid church I want the great birthday celebration of her one hundredth anniversary at our next General Conference to be complete in every way.

It is such a great opportunity to show my devotion to my church and display my church pride that I cannot neglect the splendid privilege of sharing in the Gratitude Gift and certainly I would be disappointed if either my church or my conference would fail to do its full share.

J. C. Coons.

General Conference Representative, West Virginia

It was my privilege, as well as pleasure, to attend our annual conference which convened in Parsons, W. Va., and after hearing about the Gratitude Gift was very much enthused and will say that our quota has already been pledged and will be paid in full.

My prayer is that each minister, and layman as well, will get behind this movement and put the Gratitude Gift over 100 per cent, not only for West Virginia, but for the entire denomination. Lewis A. Batten.

General Conference Representative, Michigan

I am glad there is a Methodist Protestant denomination and that we are about to celebrate our centennial. Am heartily in sympathy with the Gratitude Gift movement, and shall do all within my power to make it a success.

Surely every one who realizes the blessings God has given us through the church will be glad to co-operate in this great movement. God loves the cheerful giver and I believe the presenting of this gift will lift the church to a higher spiritual plane.

My prayer is that every conference will come up with its full quota. Roy C. Moore.

I. M. McVey, Ohio

Ever since the first mention of the Gratitude Gift, I have been turning it over in my mind and find that more and more the conviction is growing upon me that we dare not fail to thus exhibit our gratitude to Him who watches over all the centuries and who has given Himself for the church and washed it in His own precious blood. There are pivotal moments in the history of churches as well as in the history of nations and of men. The moment when this gift is offered will be one of them. We must all get ready for it, not only by our Gift of Gratitude but by a whole-hearted consecration of ourselves to the cause for which He gave the last full measure of devotion! I. M. McVey.

B. M. Mitchell, West Virginia

What will West Virginia do about the Gratitude Gift? is the question I am asked almost every day and without any hesitancy I answer, "Give it." We are face to face with a real challenge, with our mountain roads and winter winds and so short a time to do the work, but most of our men are working with a determination that knows no defeat. They will win. There was not much enthusiasm in the district of which I am chairman, but we let everything else go until we had the promise of every dollar apportioned to our district. We could not do much, but we had pastors and laymen who could and we gave them a chance. It would have taken a stronger man than I am to have prevented my church from going over. We have a great happy, loyal, courageous group of men and women, who just took it for granted that this Gratitude Gift had to be raised, and that it was the opportunity of a lifetime. Well, I didn't do much to discourage them in their good intentions, so I guess they will do the thing. B. M. MITCHELL.

J. C. WILLIAMS, Ohio

It is impossible to express in terms of money any deep feeling of gratitude. But objectively gratitude can be expressed in terms of money as well as in terms of any other kind. The heart as well as the pocketbook determines the amount. True gratitude is a jewel born of heaven. Just a little reflection on the meaning of the church we love will cause the heart and pocketbook alike to bring jubilant gratitude into the courts of the Lord on the coming centennial morning.

The Methodist Protestant Church—mother of our spiritual selves; agency of the grace of Christ; servant of God and man, onward! JOHN CLARK WILLIAMS.

PROFESSOR W. E. THOMPSON, Tennessee

A happy thought in some mind found expression in the suggestion of a Centennial Gratitude Gift. May we not call this a debt of gratitude? Yes, and we will certainly pay it. Let us honor the heroes who fought so valiantly and successfully for the principles held dear by them, and still fondly cherished by their posterity. May they not be looking down to see what we will do in this important matter?

W. E. THOMPSON.

J. A. WADE, Arkansas

I cannot conceive of a more beautiful sight than the representatives of each annual conference marching down to the altar on the night of our great Lyric meeting and placing thereon the Gratitude Gifts representing every church, and I trust every individual, in our denomination! And I cannot conceive of a more embarrassing thing than for our conferece to be less than 100 per cent in its gift!

We do not mean for Arkansas to have less than its full part in this great event. The full amount has been pledged, and we are expecting to have it all in hand in time for the great occasion. Miss Arkansas will be there with the money in hand. J. A. WADE.

J. A. RICHARDSON, Colorado-Texas

I think it altogether fitting that, in some way, the achievements of a century of a democratic Methodism be brought to the attention of all lovers of mutual rights and freedom. The leaders of our beloved church were wise and far-seeing to inaugurate the plan of the Gratitude Gift. I know of no better way to prove our loyalty and appreciation for the eternal principles of right and liberty, of which the Methodist Protestant Church has been the champion for one hundred years, than to lay on her altars a golden offering.

J. A. RICHARDSON.

T. R. WOODFORD, Kentucky

Recently I said to our young folks here, "The finest things in my life, and the richest part of my life experience have come to me through the fellowship and privileges of the Methodist Protestant Church. Other communions may be as good, but this one is good enough for me. This is a mature opinion, after an experience in this fellowship, covering just about the entire second half of our church's history with an acquaintance of a large percentage of our people.

Of course I like the idea of the Centennial Gratitude Gift. When the matter was presented to our Kentucky conference I was glad to lead in an immediate response, which resulted in more than covering the amount asked for. We are now planning, at Pine Ridge, to raise in addition as much as was originally asked of the entire conference.

I believe that aside from the benefit which the money gift will bring to our various boards, this celebration will give a great thrill and impetus to every part of our church life. So may it be! THOMAS R. WOODFORD.

CENTENNIAL PROGRAM

The full details of our centennial program are not yet ready for publication but two great meetings may be announced.

The wonderful Lyric meeting on the opening night of the conference. The building is the largest to be had in Baltimore, accommodating about three thousand people. From the interest already manifest there will be a great throng attending. This is the night when we actually celebrate.

Nationally known speakers, religious leaders of four great denominations will be present to offer felicitations. A great chorus choir of three hundred voices, led by Rev. E. D. Stone, of Baltimore, will be on the platform, concluding with that mighty religious anthem, "The Hallelujah Chorus."

The concluding feature of this meeting will be the roll call when twenty-seven young women selected by their own conferences will present the Centennial Gratitude Gift of $100,000, and when every minister and layman shall get a great thrill of joy for his church.

A second great meeting at St. John's Church is proposed for Thursday night. Historical papers of large import will be read by President Feeman, of Adrian College; by President Ward, of Western Maryland College; by Editor F. T. Benson, of The Methodist Protestant, and the reading of the centennial hymn, written by Editor Lyman E. Davis, of The Methodist Recorder.

There will be many other interesting features, but all our joy will be conditioned upon raising the Gratitude Gift in its entirety, and every conference paid in full. We can't be happy unless we get it.

The Two Great Goals of the Gratitude Gift

One hundred thousand dollars. That is the first objective. That is the size of the Gratitude Gift. Not that it measures our gratitude, not that it is the estimate of our ability, nor the indication of our willingness. But it is a worthy figure and raised in full will make it possible for the boards of the church which are now debt-encumbered to start the new century with balanced books, in a position to do larger work. These debts roughly aggregate the sum of the Gratitude Gift. We shall know them no more. This amount, however, must be raised and we do not intend to say to ourselves, to the world, to the dear people gone Home, to God—we knew thou wert austere, thou didst ask too largely, lo here is but a part of thine asking. Nay, this we shall not say nor shall it be said of us.

And, every conference meeting its obligation in its entirety. This is the second great objective. Small and great, each conference shall have the satisfaction of knowing it did its full share. It is not enough to raise the full Gratitude Gift, but that each conference shall raise its entire amount. To every one has been assigned, and all have accepted, definite amounts, without a single negative vote in twenty-seven conferences. A remarkable fact! At the beginning of this movement it was felt that the very small conferences would be the most uncertain. They lacked organization and until recent years have not been the concern of the general church. But they were the very first to subscribe their full amounts, thirteen of them. The larger conferences which bear the burden of the gift already have large undertakings; their problem is perhaps more difficult.

But when the roll is called at the great Lyric meeting in Baltimore next May it will be our joy to know that we have the full amount and that no conference is embarrassed with an incomplete offering. Every child is at the table.

JAMES H. STRAUGHN.

CENTENNIAL GRATITUDE GIFTS

Maryland Conference: In Maryland, by mutual agreement of those having charge of the raising of the local conference gift and those working for the General Conference gift, the two were merged. This was done to save confusion in the minds of the people and also to prevent duplication of effort.

The campaign is progressing favorably and we fully expect to raise our quota.

To date about thirteen thousand of the thirty thousand dollars of our quota are provided by subscriptions, with only a portion of our conference district reporting.

Miss Maryland will be at the Lyric meeting next May among the other young ladies representing their conferences, unashamed, with grateful acknowledgment of God's blessings and mercy to us during a hundred years of conference history.

E. C. MAKOSKY, President.

THE CENTURY CHORUS

The keynote of the great demonstration of the Methodist Protestant Church which is to be held in Baltimore in May, is thanksgiving and praise to Almighty God for His goodness to us as a church through these 100 years of devotion and service. The Centennial Chorus has been organized to sing this note of praise. We trust that "The Hallelujah Chorus" with other anthems of praise will lift our hearts and send us out to do greater things for Him who is indeed "the King of kings and Lord of lords."

Yours for a great centennial,

JAMES H STRAUGHN.

LET ME GROW IN GRACE

Deepen all Thy work, O Master,
Strengthen every downward root;
Only do Thou ripen faster—
More and more—Thy pleasant fruit;
Purge me, prune me, self abase;
Only let me grow in grace.

Let me grow by sun and shower,
Every moment water me;
Make me really, hour by hour,
More and more conformed to Thee,
That Thy loving eye may trace
Day by day my growth in grace.

—Francis Ridley Havergal.

"Have faith in God, for He who reigns on high
Hath borne thy grief, and hears the suppliant's sigh;
Still to His arms, thine only refuge, fly—
Have faith in God!"

OPTIMISM | FROM THE FIELD | EVANGELISM

THE GRATITUDE GIFT

All will agree that this is paramount with us just now, and we are, therefore, asking every charge to give it priority until our allotment of $12,000 is subscribed. This is a very conservative amount for our conference—about 46 cents per member—and surely we shall realize but little difficulty in getting it promptly and fully provided. We are not to think of it as an assessment, but as an opportunity to express gratitude—gratitude to God; gratitude to our church Fathers; and gratitude for one hundred years of denominational life and service. Surely we could not let an event like this pass unnoticed, and surely every one will want some part in this Gratitude Gift as one of the features in the program by which we are to commemorate this, the first hundred years in our denominational existence. Rev. J. H. Straughn, D.D., the centenary campaign director, was with us last week in group meetings at Lexington, High Point, and Burlington, and closing Sunday at Henderson and the nearby fields. His addresses were informing and inspiring and helped us much in getting our campaign under way. Mr. J. D. Ross, of Asheboro, the chairman of our conference committee, is zealous, busy, and hopeful. He has no thought of any failure in this matter on the part of North Carolina. Nor do any of us. It just must be done; and what must be done, will be done. Bro. Ross has sent out literature, which we trust pastors have already passed on to their people. The fourth Sunday in February has been designated by the conference committee as Gratitude Sunday. On this day the people will be asked to make their gratitude gifts. Let every pastor and every member work, pay, and pray that the entire amount may be subscribed by that time.

Fairview-Glen Raven

On Sunday, January 22, we were with these churches, preaching at Fairview in the morning and Glen Raven at night. The people at Fairview are going ahead with their Sunday school rooms, which will be ready for use soon, if the work continues. We were heard at night by another attentive congregation, that very well filled the church. At both points the conference programs were presented, and the people urged to give to them liberal support. Pastor Williams is zealous and his people interested. We trust that the combined interest and zeal of pastor and people may result in a year of spiritual and financial development for the charge.

Committee on Church Extension and Survey

Friday, January 27, was spent with this committee on a visit to Spencer, Kannapolis, and North Charlotte. Of course the time was limited, but it was sufficient to give the committee some first-hand information that will be valuable to the conference and to the enterprises at these points. The outlook at all three places gave the committee pleasing impressions, and I think that they would have no difficulty in recommending each point to the favorable consideration of the Board of Church Extension. We may have to move a bit slow because of a lack of money; however, we must keep the work going until, in no remote future, we can begin the erection of churches at each place.

Yarborough's Chapel and Harmony

Saturday and Sunday, January 28-29, were given to this charge. We found Pastor Surratt and his interesting family comfortable, housed in the parsonage at Cross Anchor, and gradually getting acquainted with the people and adjusting themselves to their new environment. It had been nearly twenty years since we visited this charge, as a "beginner" preacher, and, of course, many changes have taken place in these two decades. However, we found some people still there whom we learned to highly esteem in those days, and whose friendship we have cherished during the intervening years. Some as faithful and interested Methodist Protestants as we have in the church anywhere are on this charge. We were glad to see them again, and to renew the fellowships of other days.

At 11 a. m. Sunday we preached at Yarborough's and at night we were at Harmony. The quarterly conference was held at the latter place, preceding the preaching service. The conference programs were stressed at each point, and most of assessment for college raised. The balance, we think, will be provided. Pastor Surratt is anxious to give himself in full measure to the work. He is greatly handicapped by not having some way to travel. We trust that the charge may be able to make some provision for him in this matter. The church and community at Yarborough's Chapel were greatly shocked and saddened recently by the tragic death of Bro. Lewis Yarborough, who was killed by a falling tree. Our tenderest sympathies are extended to the bereaved family. We shall watch with deep interest and earnest prayers the progress of the charge during the year, and we trust that happiness and growth may be in evidence all along the way.

Stewardship

Along with the Gratitude Gift program we are to emphasize Stewardship. February is the month set apart by the conference when our people are to have their attention called particularly to this Christian duty. Pastors are, therefore, urged to preach on the subject, or in some other way bring it to the attention of their churches. Some pastors distribute tithing literature, which is a good way of teaching the stewardship of money. We trust that pastors will find some time and some way, in their crowded programs, to give emphasis to this all-important matter of Stewardship—Stewardship of Self, of Service, of Substance.

Herald

We do not find the report of subscriptions in last week's HERALD. It will probably appear this week. We are anxious to see how many charges have secured their allotment, and how many others are heading toward the goal. Every pastor does an important work when he increases the circulation of the HERALD. And along with the HERALD, solicit subscriptions for the oldest Methodist paper in the United States—The Methodist Protestant.

Music

The music committee is still active. Bro. Surratt has a good article in the HERALD of last week, in which he urges the use of the M. P. Hymnal. The collection of hymns in this book is everything that the church could desire, and the book should be more widely used by our churches. I trust that this committee will continue to work until a greater interest is created for church music. By all means, the people should be taught and encouraged to sing. A suggestion: A revival song book, bearing the imprint of our own church. I wonder if our committee on church music could not get the next General Conference to order the publication of such a book?

Evangelism

Judging from reports received to date, it is the consensus of opinion on the part of pastors that evangelism is an outstanding need in the church today. I wonder if it occurs to us, as ministers, that the meeting of that need is in us? Surely "Like priest, like people" is true. The people will never be more spiritual than are their spiritual leaders. How these words of the great hymn writer should ring in the ears of every pastor:

"How careful then ought I to live,
With what religious care!"

Brethren of the ministry, let us see to it that the church shall not lack in us what is necessary to give to it the largest measure of spiritual life and power.

Appointments

February 8. Chapel service High Point College.

February 9. With Brotherhood meeting, Concord church.

February 10. With North Charlotte congregation in business meeting.

February 11-12. Connelly Springs.

February 19. With Bro. Lowdermilk and the Kernersville charge.

May grace, mercy and peace abound toward every pastor and every charge. Fraternally,

S. W. TAYLOR.

KNOW YOUR BIBLE

"The Bible is our tool-chest, and we must know what tool is needed for a certain work and where to find it. We must study or rightly divide the word of truth, to know how to show men their need of a Saviour, to show Him, and to answer excuses and objections." Do not read the first chapter of Genesis to the man who wants to know how to be saved, nor the Twenty-third Psalm to the man who does not believe that he is a sinner. Not a day should be permitted to pass without our Bible being opened and perused, and if we were thus attentive to what God says, how much more peaceful would be our experience, and how much more successful our undertakings.—Selected.

CHRIST THE CENTER

Every life must have a center. Some lives center in wealth; hence mammon has its devotees. Some lives center in pleasure; hence we have the giddy circles of the gay. Some lives center in fame; hence they cater to popular whim and trim their sails to suit the breezes that blow.

But any life that is self-centered or world-centered is wrong. The only true center for any life is Christ. Happily we can focus our eyes upon Him and derive our powers from Him and converge our energies toward Him, and confidently expect to abide with Him forevermore.

Make Christ, therefore, the center of your life.—Baptist S. S. Builder.

—Rev. C. W. Bates, church statistician, finds that the Methodist Protestant Church has gained about two thousand members in the last year, carrying the aggregate beyond all precedent. The total number of members is now over 190,000.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

Senior Topic for Feb. 19: "Are the Teachings of Jesus Up-to-Date?"

I

Plans for the Meeting

At least a week before the meeting the leader should appoint three committees, depending upon them to make a special study of the effectiveness or ineffectiveness of Jesus' teachings in the various phases of civilization. One committee limited to the study of the home community; another to national conditions; another to international, etc.

II

Hints for the Leader

1. Our topic, "Are the Teachings of Jesus Up-to-Date?" is one of much concern as we look about us in our community life, our national life, and our international life.

2. Would Jesus think His teachings up-to-date in the world today if He were to visit our industrial centers; our places of recreation and amusements? Raise the question in regard to our political life, and our home life, etc.

3. Tell what you think the conditions would be if the commandments which Jesus gave were lived and practiced in our present civilization. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. . . . Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Matt. 22: 37; 39.

III

Pertaining to the Topic

Are the teachings of Jesus up-to-date? This question rises in our minds and we regret that many decide in the negative. This isn't because the teachings are not up-to-date, but because we have failed to apply His teachings to the whole of life. One writer holds that the fault is with the world and not with the teachings of Jesus. This is true, for the nation that applies the teachings of Jesus is the most up-to-date nation. The community that applies the teachings of Jesus, which were given almost two thousand years ago, is the most desirable community in which to live. The home that accepts the teachings of Jesus and has Him as "the Unseen Guest at every meal and the Silent Listener to every conversation" is the happy home. The individual who opens his hearts to Jesus and lives for Him certainly is the up-to-date citizen.

IV

Correlation With S. S. Lesson

The Sunday school lesson treats two of the notable miracles of Jesus. One over "Nature," Mark 4:35-41; another, "the casting out of the unclean spirit of a person," Mark 5:1-20. In the natural world today miracles continue to take place. Who can explain the growth of the little flower or the mystery of the universe? Only God knows and controls. In the realm of unclean personalities miracles continue to happen. Lives which were unclean are now clean. Only God knows fully this miracle. Just so far as our civilization accepts and practices the teachings of Jesus will our civilization be Christian.

To Be Read and Commented On

Principles of Prayer—Matt. 6:5-15.
Economy—Matt. 6:19-21.
Golden Rule—Matt. 7:12.
The Strength of the Church—Matt. 16:18.
Love of God—John 3:16.
Up-to-Date Commandments—Matt. 22:37-39.

VI

Questions for Discussion

1. Would you prefer a community that failed to teach Jesus? Why not?

2. Tell where you have observed the effectiveness of Jesus' teachings.

3. How could we make Jesus' teachings more effective in our church life?

4. Is the world behind the teachings of Jesus or ahead of them?

Poetry to the Point

ABOU BEN ADHEM

About Ben Adhem (may his tribe increase!)
Awoke one night from a deep dream of peace,
And saw, within the moonlight in his room,
Making it rich, and like a lily in bloom,
An angel writing in a book of gold.
Exceeding peace had made Ben Adhem bold,
And to the presence in the room he said,
"What writest thou?"—The vision raised its head,
And with a look made of all sweet accord,
Answered, "The names of those who love the Lord."
"And is mine one?" said Abou. "Nay, not so,"
Replied the angel. Abou spoke more low,
But cheerily still: and said, "I pray thee, then,
Write me as one that loves his fellow-men."

The angle wrote, and vanished. The next night
It came again with a great wakening light,
And showed the names whom love of God had blessed,
And, lo! Ben Adhem's name led all the rest.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Feb. 12.—Jesus Pictures the Kingdom of God.

Scripture Basis—Mark 1:14, 15; 4:1-34.

Golden Text—Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done, as in heaven, so on earth. Matt. 6:10.

The Gospel of the Kingdom

The first two verses of the lesson (not printed in the quarterlies) give Jesus' simple burning message to a dying people. We find: 1, The fulfilment of time; 2, The presence of the kingdom; 3, The imperative requirement.

The great Apostle stated (Gal. 4:4): "When the fulness of time was come, God sent forth His Son." Thus Jesus came in fulfilment of prophecy and when the time was right. He came as a light in a dark world. He brought the kingdom of God to "the people that walked in darkness." It was not an earthly kingdom, but of the spiritual realm, for, said He later in His ministry, "The kingdom of God cometh not with observation * * * * for behold, the kingdom of God is within you." (Luke 17:20, 21). The way to receive the kingdom, or to become citizens thereof, was, and still is, to repent and believe. That is the message of the gospel today.

The Ground of the Kingdom

The first picture that Jesus paints in this lesson (also not printed in the quarterlies) is the parable commonly known as that of The Sower. The application is obvious, for upon the request of His disciples, Jesus gladly explains the parable to them, who, He said, should know the mysteries of the kingdom. Spiritual things are spiritually discerned. That is a partial reason, though an important one, why the people of the world misunderstand the children of God. The former have not become spiritually minded. What an honor and a blessing Jesus thus bestows upon us!

Three important factors are observed in this parable: The Sower, the seed, and the soil or ground. At this time, Jesus was the Sower. Since His ascension, evangelists, pastors, and other dispensers of the Word are the sowers. What a responsibility is ours! The seed has not changed since His day. It is still the blessed gospel of salvation, found in His Word. It still has life eternal within its covers. Perseveringly and zealously spread it broadcast, Christian friend, as Jesus had seen, and as you have doubtless seen in this country, the farmer do with the natural seed in his garden or on his farm. Nor has the ground changed since the day of Jesus. In this we find the kernel of the parable, for it is from the different kinds of ground that Jesus draws His lessons.

The wayside hearts are those which cannot permanently retain the Word. They hear it in Sunday school, during the church services of worship, at prayer meeting, when revivals are in progress. It fits their condition, but, as we say, it goes in one ear and out the other. The stony hearts are those that receive the Word, but they do not possess the stamina, the grit, the faith, to keep it against the days of opposition and ridicule. The thorny hearts are those who have been so attracted to material things that they surrender them for Christ's sake for only a brief period, then they give up the Word rather than the world. (See Matt. 16:26). But the fertile hearts are those who have received and retained the Word, and reaped abundant harvest.

Since there always will be these four varieties of ground, let us not concern ourselves about where the seed is falling, but be absolutely sure that we are not lax in the sowing.

The Growth of the Kingdom

We may be certain that the seed will germinate and grow. As faithful sowers, we may go to bed at night and sleep peacefully, knowing that God will use all of the natural forces, as well as the spiritual if necessary, to complete the growth. (See Isa. 55:10, 11). Sometimes it has taken years, as with the pioneers in the foreign fields, to witness this growth, but it is bound to come. And when it does, often it almost takes us off of our feet, so abundant is the harvest.

The mustard seed, as we know, is very small—not the smallest of seeds known to botanists, but as Jesus probably meant, the smallest which a farmer or gardener would sow. "The quantity of a grain of mustard" is recognized by the rabbis as the smallest possible quantity. In Palestine the plant grows to be an immense bush of ten or twelve feet. It forms a protection for the birds, as well as a feeding-place, for they are fond of the seeds. Is not Christ's kingdom so? It has grown and spread until it has practically filled the whole earth, and men, women and children find protection, peace and provision among its branches. Nor has it reached maturity yet, for there are still thousands who have not experienced its joy and contentment. Shall we not labor more earnestly and faithfully than ever to extend its branches over the whole earth?

Two Miracles of Power—Mark 4:35 to 5:20.

Golden Text—Mark 4:41.

Note: That the Christian Endeavor helps and Sunday school lesson on this page may appear for the same Sunday hereafter, we expect to discuss two of the latter next week.—The Editor.

—Brother David Hunter, aged over 95 years, died suddenly last Thursday evening. He was walking across the floor when the end came. He fell and life was extinct before anyone could reach him. This termination of his life was expected by his physician, as his heart had shown signs of failure. The funeral was held at Tabernacle church, of which he had long been a member, on Saturday at 11 o'clock. Rev. T. M. Johnson conducted the service and was assisted by Rev. C. E. Hodgin, by Brother Hunter's special request. Other ministers present were Rev. S. W. Taylor, Dr. J. D. Williams, Dr. S. K. Spahr, and Rev. T. F. McCulloch, and the editor of the Herald.. Brother Hunter was an extraordinary man. Physically he was a man of unusual strength. This was shown not only in his physique but also in his long life. By reason of strength his years were almost five score. He had a sound mind in a sound body. He was a man of good judgment, with his good common sense. He thought for himself and was not swept away by the hurrah of the crowd. Against his protest he served in the Confederate army in the war between the States. He looked upon the war, as many people look upon it now, as uncalled for and wrong. For perhaps 70 years Brother Hunter has been one of the pillars of Tabernacle church. He loved the church and was grieved whenever anyone showed a want of regard for the church. His home was the preacher's home and he could be counted on to be the pastor's friend. Near the close of his life, after he had been incapacitated by age to do any work, he gave hundreds of dollars to High Point College. Truly he was an extraordinary man, and we can join with Dr. T. M. Johnson in wishing that his mantle will fall upon others who will continue the good works that distinguished his life. His grandsons, though living far away, were all in attendance at the funeral, four stalwart young men, Guy, Speight, Wills, and Harold Hunter, sons of his only son, Brother J. S. Hunter, distinguished business man, who was called hence in 1904.

SPECIAL MEETINGS FOR FEBRUARY

I am sure I do not have to remind our auxiliaries that the time is at hand for holding the public service authorized by our General Conference. This is the only public meeting held during the year in which we may appeal to our church for an offering to help finance the building program of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.

The North Carolina Branch depends upon good offerings at the Thank-Offering meetings to raise its Branch Budget, and our pastors depend on them to help in raising their General Conference Budgets. For both these reasons our women must make every effort possible to hold successful meetings in churches that have a W. F. M. S. The women in churches that do not have missionary societies can render a real service by holding Thank-Offering services for this purpose.

The other special meeting is to be held on Friday, February 24, and is the day of prayer for the women of the whole world. You may find the program for this meeting in the January Missionary Record. The Christian women of the world will on that day unite in praying for missions We must not neglect the privilege of being of this great number of intercederes at a throne of divine grace. If several auxiliaries can unite in observing this day, the meeting will be more inspiring, but even the shut-ins of our auxiliaries may enter most heartily into the service.

The title of the book I promised you is, "Missionary Methods for Church and Home," by Katherine Scherer Cronk, and it may be obtained from our Publishing House at Baltimore.

MRS. GEO. R. BROWN.

W. F. M. S. NOTICE

Miss Annie Forrest is ready to come to North Carolina and help us with our Thank-Offering services. Please notify me at once if you want her help, and what time would suit you best.

MRS. GEO. R. BROWN.
Reidsville, N. C.

NOTICE AUXILIARIES OF W. F. M. S.

Please remember that the treasurer's book must close March 31st. Half of our budget is yet to be raised and what we do must be done quickly. In order to meet our Branch budget in full, each anxiliary must raise its full assessment and go a little beyond. Harmony and Rock Creek have done this and we hope to hear from them again. Who'll be the next?

MRS. S. W. TAYLOR, Treas.

—Mr. W. N. Everett, our Secretary of State, has succumbed to angina pectoris after four years of suffering.

MARRIED

Campbell-Webster

On Saturday afternoon at three o'clock in the First Methodist Protestant parsonage on Davis street, Burlington, Mr. Van Duley Campbell and Miss Alta Webster were united in marriage in the presence of only a few of their friends and the pastor's family. The pastor of the church officiated. These young people are members of the Sapling Ridge Methodist Protestant Church but both have been employed in Burlington for some time. They will make their home in Burlington. The good wishes of their many friends go with them in their new and happy venture.

Wood-Aycock

January 30, at 5 o'clock p. m., in the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. O'Briant, Rosemary, N. C., Mr. Joe Wood, of Littleton, N. C., and Miss Ethel Aycock, of Enfield, N. C., were quietly married, Rev. J. B. O'Briant officiating.

Maxwell-Troxler

On January 19 in the Friendship Methodist Protestant church, Haw River charge, Mr. George S. Maxwell and Miss Annie Troxler were happily married, the pastor, Rev. George L. Curry, officiating. There was present a number of relatives and friends to witness this beautiful marriage and to extend greetings, best wishes and congratulations to this interesting and very popular young couple. Mr. Maxwell is a successful farmer and stands high in the religious work of his church and community. He is the very efficient superintendent of the Friendship Sunday school. He received his educational training at Monticello high school and High Point college. Mrs. Maxwell is the beautiful and accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Troxler. She is very popular among a large circle of friends and acquaintances. Among other church activities she is the efficient pianist at Friendship church. She was educated at Monticello high school and at Elon college.

Immediately after the ceremony the happy couple left for an extended motoring trip north, which will include Washington city and other points of interest. Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell will make their home near Brown Summit, N. C.

We join the many friends of these interesting young people in extending congratulations and best wishes.

GEO. L. CURRY.

—A. C. Pickett, who married a sister of Brother Otis Campbell, of Calvary church, was buried last Monday at Bethany M. E. church, near Liberty. Cancer caused his death after three months of suffering. He is spoken of as a successful farmer, good church worker and citizen. He was 68 years old and leaves four sons and five daughters.

—The Ministers Association of Greensboro has put itself on record as opposing large naval expansion. Telegrams were sent to President Coolidge and Congressman Stedman asking them to lead in opposition to proposed expansion measures.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

South Winston Charge.—We had communion service fourth Sunday morning; a large number communed that day.

Preached that night at the Southside Methodist Protestant. A very nice congregation for that church.

The attendance and offerings are on the increase. We feel encouraged in these.

We had with us Sunday, January 29, Brother and Sister E. F. Allman from the Children's Home, with 19 of the children. They rendered us a fine program at Union Ridge at 11 o'clock.

The weather being so very bad we did not have very many out, but all there enjoyed the service. After the program we took an offering for the Children's Home of $26.00. Our people have not been giving regularly, but I think this service will get hold of them in a new way. After the service we served dinner to all who stayed. After dinner we went over to Southside church and they gave us the same program there, not many out, but what were enjoyed it. The offering was $7.08, making a total of $33.08. I trust this is just a foretaste of what we may be able to do in the near future.

I trust the Herald family will pray for us as we strive to go forward in the name and service of Jesus, trying in my weak way to preach the gospel in its power and purity, that God may use me to the saving fo souls.

P. L. KINNAMAN, P. C.

Asheboro.—Sunday being the first Sunday of the month the entire Sunday school came together for the closing in order to hear the report of the previous month. We were very proud of the January report. As we very well remember, we had some cold Sundays during the month of January, which of course hurt the attendance, but the average attendance for the month was 161.

The Workers' Council will hold its regular monthly meeting Monday evening, the 13th, and the entire Sunday school is invited to be present, as a social will follow the business meeting. The menu will be "milk and cornmuch," or "corn-mush and milk." This is an unusual menu to be served at a social, but feel sure everyone is going to enjoy the occasion.

A very good congregation was present at the morning service. The pastor preached on "Some Things Which Jesus Emphasized," which was interesting.

A meeting was held at 3 o'clock in the interest of a Young People's Convention to be held for the young people in Randolph County, March 21 22, 1928. Miss Alberson, of Raleigh, a worker of the North Carolina Sunday School Association, was the speaker. The church was nearly full of interested people which represented the different churches of the county. At the evening hour she made an interesting talk on the "Asheboro Baby," or the "Human Baby." She says the baby is ripe at the age of 24.

Monday evening the Woman's Home Missionary Society meets with Miss Lollie Jones fo the monthly business meeting.

Tuesday evening Mr. Hackney, of High Point, will meet with the Boy Scouts in the social room of the church at 7:30 o'clock. These meetings will continue each Tuesday evening for a few weeks to help the boys. Two troops have been organized recently and he will meet with both troops at the same hour.

Miss Esther Ross has been very ill and had to stay in for a week but glad to report she is out again and able to be back in the office.

MISS EXIE CALICOTT, Reporter.

Feb. 6. 1928.

West Forsyth Circuit.—The past Sunday was another unfavorable Sunday. The clouds were lowering, sprinkling often enough to make one apprehensive of a downpour. The mud was deep enough to make driving risky and walking almost impossible. However, the pastor was at Baltimore in the morning and at Stony Knoll in the afternoon. At each place a small but seemingly interested number of worshipers heard with such good attention that preaching to them was a real pleasure. Then to Pleasant Hill for the evening hour to meet with the C. E. Society. A band of earnest young people these are, whose growing interest in the work presages much for the future. The impression of being with them made a tired pastor forget the weariness of contending with the mud and dampness for so many hours.

The parsonage is still supplied with fresh meat. The Hunters have hunted us; Brother Clinton Sprinkle sprinkled us and the Long roll has grown longer. May God bless their material things, and give them rich supplies of His grace.

C. H. WHITAKER.

Calvary, Greensboro.—Brother A. C. Dixon, the efficient reporter from this church for the past three years, has accepted the position for another year, and it may be possible, will have a report in this issue of the Herald. But there are some things I should like to say as the pastor. Some of them may be a bit stale now, for they go back to the Christmas season.

The pageant, "At the Door of the Inn," was presented twice, both times splendidly done, and greatly appreciated by those who saw and heard it. A great deal of credit is due those who took part in it, and those who helped get it up. Some of the folks worked until after midnight getting the "properties" ready.

The parsonage family acknowledge with thanks numerous Christmas cards and tokens of good will from members of the church here and friends throughout the conference.

During the Christmas season, the Ladies' Aid placed a suit of sitting room furniture in the parsonage, Mrs. J. A. Cox donated a rocker, and Brother Cox made a table for the telephone. All add to our comfort and convenience.

Brothers Sullivan and Wagoner have placed shelves in the pastor's study at the church, and Brother Cox has put in "pigeon holes" and stationery racks. The Sunday school has had a telephone installed. So the preacher is all ready for study—if he can only find the time to do it.

These same brethren, particularly Brother S., have been busy in the church hut, and have added two more classrooms, besides making a number of other improvements. Brother Waugh has given a cabinet for the literature.

In celebration of Christian Endeavor week, last Friday night a supper was held in the hut. Some 30 sat down to a good meal, and greatly enjoyed the evening of songs and speeches and games. One result of the banquet was shown last night in the largest attendance at the Christian Endeavor Society meeting that the society has had since it was organized.

And that word largest can be applied to the attendance at Sunday school last Sunday morning. For months those in charge have been trying to get 200 out. Yesterday the attendance reached 205.

There has been a good increase in the church membership so far this year, with indications that the record for increase will be broken before the year closes. This church has a great field, and there is no reason why it should not grow into one of the largest churches in the Conference. This preacher is delighted with the opportunity for service that the church affords.

C. W. BATES, Pastor.

Bess Chapel Charge.—At the 11 o'clock service last Sunday morning our pastor, Rev. M. C. Henderson, delivered a very interesting and helpful sermon. The good-sized congregation Sunday gave evidence that our people are taking a deep interest in the church work. Our pastor and his family are taking a lively interest in the different organizations of the church and we are indeed glad to have their help.

Our Sunday school is growing in spite of the cold weather, and we hope to see it much larger as spring approaches. Let's all try to attend regularly and bring someone with us.

Our second quarterly conference will be held at Bessemer City Friday, February 10.

Rev. and Mrs. Henderson took dinner at the home of Mr. F. W. Baxter Sunday.

We are glad to know that Mrs. Ida Baxter is able to be out again.

REPORTER.

Asheville.—Sunday was a good day for us. Brother Casto's message in the morning and Brother Van Meter's at night were both most helpful.

Brother E. C. Fawcett has blessed us with stirring talks recently. We are most fortunate to have these spiritual men on Sundays and Wednesdays.

Miss McIntyre entertained our Christian Endeavor members last Tuesday night.

Next Sunday Brother Casto will hold a communion service in connection with the morning service.

The heads of the departments will meet this, Wednesday, night after prayer meeting

Little Bettie Jane, daughter of Brother and Mrs. E. H. Pratt, is quite ill. We are praying for her recovery.

Mrs. C. C. McNeil is still improving.

Rev. J. S. Williams is almost well from a minor operation three weeks ago.

Our second quarterly conference is announced for February 15.

REPORTER.

Concord.—One of the most interesting and enjoyable features of the church's activities was the Young People's Banquet last Thursday night. A large crowd was present and everyone enjoyed the program, which was under the leadership of Rev. Lawrence Little. Rev. and Mrs. J. R. Anderson, of Albemarle, and 18 of their fine young people were present, besides several other out-of-town visitors, which we were delighted to have.

Since our last report the following young ladies have been received into the church: Misses Annie Lee and Mary Aycock and Pauline Furr, coming from Epworth M. E. church, and Grace Beaver from the Presbyterian church. We are glad to have these splendid girls unite with us.

Mr. N. J. Miles, of Enfield, spent a few days here and sang at both services at our church last Sunday to the delight of the large congregations.

Our pastor, Rev. G. H. Hendry, is undergoing an operation on his eyes this (Monday) afternoon. We trust it will be successful.

MRS. D. A. McLAURIN.

Liberty-Siler City.—Nothing startling has been happening here, but the work is going steadily on. Bad weather and deep colds have hindered a bit, but in every way the work seems hopeful at both churches.

Herald Subscriptions

The Christian Endeavorers at each church gave splendid help in canvassing for subscriptions and renewals for the Methodist Protestant Herald. We have already sent in subscriptions enough to put us far beyond our quota, and we hope to send in a few more.

Rev. N. G. Bethea With Us

On Sunday evening, January 29, Rev. N. G. Bethea, of Loxington, was with us in Liberty and told in a most interesting way of his recent trip through the Holy Land. He spoke for more than an hour, and there was not a dull moment during the entire message. Some parts of the message were amusing, all of it was instructive, and much of it was genuinely inspiring. We took an offering. I am sorry it was not larger, and gave it to him for State Street church. Brother Bethea has been going out and delivering this message for the benefit of the State Street church building fund. He pays his own expenses and turns over what he collects thereon to his church treasurer for the church.

I am taking the liberty to suggest that if a Ladies' Aid Society, or a Missionary Society, wishes to make some money for their local society and will arrange a date with Brother Bethea, I feel sure he will be glad to visit your church and give this splendid message for one-half the receipts, and then he will give his share to State Street church. You arrange the meeting, sell the tickets, and he will give your audience an hour of thrill and uplift. You will thus help your own society and State Street church.

Our Parsonage

The parsonage for this charge is looking very much like a house fit for a preacher to live in, though it is far from finished. The rains and sleets have kept the contractor from making the progress he would like, but ere long we will be living in it.

Gratitude Gift

We are not yet ready to make any definite report on the Gratitude Gift, but we have our committees at work, and hope to be ready with an encouraging report at the proper time.

In the group meetings, held by Brother Taylor and Dr. Straughn, agent, a motion was made to make the fourth Sunday in February "Gratitude Gift Sunday" in the North Carolina conference. I wish all our pastors and laymen could have heard Dr. Straughn's message, as delivered in Burlington, for then I feel sure we would speedily say with our gifts just how grateful we are to God for His smiling providence upon our church for one hundred years.

Our Sick

Two weeks ago yesterday, Mr. J. W. Curtis, of Liberty, was operated upon for appendicitis, in the Wesley Long Hospital in Greensboro. Yesterday he came home, and is well on the way to recovery. Three days later Mrs. J. Wade Siler underwent a similar operation in the same hospital. She is expected home in the early part of this week. Miss McLaughin and Mr. Pierce, of Siler City, are both in St. Leo's Hospital in Greensboro, having undergone operations for appendicitis. They were both doing well last Thursday and will soon return home. We thank the dear Father for His goodness to these dear people.

Yours in His blessed service,

A. G. DIXON.

Grace Church, Greensboro.—January 31 the Ladies' Aid Society gave a reception in honor of Rev. and Mrs. R. J. Tamblyn in the Hut. The receiving line was composed of Mrs. T. D. Sharpe, president of the society, Dr. S. K. Spahr, Rev. and Mrs. C. W. Bates, Rev. and Mrs. R. C. Stubbins, Rev. J. D. Williams, and Rev. and Mrs. S. W. Taylor, president of the N. C. Conference.

The address of welcome was given by Mr. J. Norman Wills. Mr. Tamblyn responded. Dr. Taylor then spoke concerning the conference. Dr. Spahr, Mr. Bates and Mr. Stubbins were then heard from.

Ice cream and cake were then served by members of the society.

After the refreshments, the company was delightfully entertained with several musical selections by Mrs. K. C. Benbow and Mr. Bynum Clapp.

The Ladies' Air Society presented Mrs. Tamblyn with a basket of beautiful pink roses.

The audience, and especially Mr. Tamblyn, was delighted to have the presence of Dr. J. F. McCulloch, a former member of Grace church.

Despite the bitter cold weather many people were present to greet the new pastor and his wife.

Wednesday evening, February 15, at 7:30, the Woman's Missionary Society will present the play, "The Color Line," at the Hut.

This play received much favorable comment at the Student Volunteer Movement recently held in Detroit. It deals with modern China and her trials of war. It shows very plainly the way Americans treat the Chinese.

C. J. J.

Siler City.—Last Sunday morning our pastor brought to us some very interesting facts about the Methodist Protestant Church, which was very appropriate because of the Gratitude Gifts which are continually coming in at the present time. We have never heard a more inspiring sermon than that delivered by our pastor Sunday evening on the subject, "Our Heavenly Home."

Our Sunday school is making rapid progress toward the attendance goal made at the beginning of the year, which was an average of 100. Last Sunday there were 99 present. Only a few Sundays ago the attendance went above the hundred mark, and with the nice spring weather approaching, we are quite certain we will reach our goal and probably go beyond.

"The Trip Around the World" will be given at our church Thursday, February 16, by the Senior Christian Endeavorers. This program has been carefully planned by Mrs. Dixon, who is well informed along this line, and a number of other committees; and it will be very educational to all those who attend. The proceeds will go for beautifying the interior of the church.

Mrs. Dixon left last Monday for Baltimore where she will attend a missionary meeting.

REPORTER.

Friendship, North Davidson Charge.—Rev. R. S. Troxler filled his appointment February 5, giving a very impressive sermon.

Due to an epidemic of measles in this community, the attendance in Sunday school has not been so good for the past month. We had only 75 present February 5th.

Brother Troxler explained the Methodist Protestant Centennial Gratitude Gift to us Sunday, and in connection with this plans are being made for a pageant, "The Church of Our Fathers," to be presented at our church on Sunday, March 4. Our church is one among the oldest in North Carolina, having been organized in 1834.

LONA WALSER, Reporter.

State Street Church.—Because of the epidemic of measles our Sunday school attendance was a little below normal Sunday morning.

The address by Dr. Straughn Wednesday afternoon was interesting and instructive. Many things not quite clear to some of us concerning the Gratitude Gift were clearly explained.

The city C. E. Union met at the Second Reformed church last Thursday evening. All the societies of the city were well represented. Dacotah Presbyterian Society was the only one having a hundred percent attendance, however, and therefore carried the banner from the Second Reformed Society where it had been for the past quarter.

The Missionary Society met at the parsonage last Thursday afternoon; a good program was given and all present were helped by it.

Plans are being discussed by Mrs. Harkey and her Sunday school class of young ladies for a social to be given some time soon. This affair promises to be an evening of clean fun and enjoyment. Everything is to be entirely original and as the young ladies say, "something different."

Dr. Brannock has divided his class of men into two sections and put on a contest to see which side will get the most new members in a certain length of time. Just what forfeit the losing side will have to pay has not been made public.

REPORTER.

Community Church, Thomasville.—Even though the night was damp and rainy, 800 people assembled in Community church Sunday night, February 5th, for the pageant-play, "The Dream That Came True," with 50 participants.

"The Dream That Came True" is both Biblical and modern, in three parts. The first part was in the Walden home with Mr. and Mrs. Walden played by Mr. J. C. Lloyd and Mrs. J. W. Boyles, Alice and Tommy played by Kathryn Welborn and Dale Tysinger and Bobby and Teddy played by Edward Hall and Zelda Moore. Mr. Walden is disturbed with the unusual amount of family bills; Mrs. Walden has just purchased a tea gown and a party dress; Alice displays her new party gown and Tommy goes out for the evening, using the family car and appeals to his father for money. Bobby has saved a few pennies in a bank which is all that he has to give for the missionary. Teddy touches her father's cold heart a bit by reminding him that God was glad to give His Son. Mr. and Mrs. Morgan call in the Walden home to ask Mrs. Walden to teach a Sunday school class and to try to shaw Mr. Walden his stewardship. Mrs. Walden thinks she hasn't time to teach a class although she has time for everything else; Mr. Walden thinks that tithing would be unreasonable, preposterous. However, after Teddy's good-night talk with her daddy, Mr. Walden falls to thinking; he picks up his Bible to read, but falls asleep and and dreams a dream or sees a vision, he hardly knows which.

The second part of the pageant-play is the vision which Mr. Walden has. Here, the Spirit of Stewardship, played by Mrs. Max Moore, appears under the white spotlight and in eight Biblical episodes speaks to Mr. Walden, trying to show him his stewardship. The first episode is the Cain and Abel story presented in costume and dialogue under the colored spotlight, the Voice behind the scene, Rev. H. W. Maier, representing the Voice of God, speaks at intervals. The second episode depicts in like manner the story of Naaman, Elisha and Gehazi; the third episode the story of the Foolish Farmer; the fourth episode, the Rich Young Ruler; the fifth, the Lord of Talents and the three servants; sixth, the Widow's Mite; the seventh, the Ten Virgins; and the eighth, the final day of judgment. In the eighth episode, Teddy, seeing her father on the side with the unrighteous, calls out, "Come over to our side, daddy." The pageant dies away and Teddy is on her father's knee receiving her father's promise that he will go to Sunday school with her next Sunday. Mr. Walden reappears and together Mr. and Mrs. Walden pledge to each other to live the life of the righteous steward.

The third part closes with Mr. Walden on his knees in a prayer of consecration when the soloist, Mrs. C. F. Finch, sings, "Take My Life and Let It Be Consecrated, Lord, to Thee."

Immediately following the pageant-play, different size candles were lighted to represent different amounts given. The thank-offering totaled $106.15 and will be sent as thank-offering to the W. H. M. S. and the W. F. M. S. from Community church.

Pleasant Grove—We were very glad indeed to have Rev. Paul S. Kennett preach for us the fifth Sunday in the absence of our pastor. He preached a very interesting and helpful sermon.

Owing to the weather and roads the quarterly conference was postponed to next Tuesday night. We hope to have a goodly number present.

The superintendent, Mr. Teague, seemed very much encouraged with the attendance Sunday. He said he felt that there was some real interest shown where so many came to Sunday school and preaching when the weather was so unfavorable.

The Lord's Supper was administered to a large number. Brother Reynolds used the order of service from the M. P. Hymnal.

The Ladies' Aid Society will hold its February meeting Wednesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. O. W. Cecil in High Point.

MRS. R. J. KENNEDY, Reporter.

Cid, Denton Charge.—The reporter has had heart-rending sickness. First, my daughter, Mrs. Hal Harris, for nearly four weeks before Christmas was real sick and went to a hospital for treatment; glad to say she has improved very much; and on Christmas night the reporter was taken real sick and nearly had pneumonia; then in about 10 days took an acute attack of sciatica, which left her in room for over three weeks. But, thankful to say I am now able to do some work. Have not been able to get to my church for the Sunday school, which I cherish so much. I am like the Piney Grove correspondent said last week: "This world would have no charm if it were not for the church to which we love to go and worship" sweet Jesus, the one that keeps us day by day. I wish to thank all my friends for their aid and assistance during my illness, for they were faithful.

Rev. E. A. Bingham, accompanied by Rev. S. W. Taylor, our president, filled their appointment Sunday at Cid and Rev. Mr. Taylor delivered a fine message to a faithful few. The weather and roads accounted for the absence of many.

I am glad to see so many encouraging reports in the dear old Herald; for through this paper we keep in touch with each other. For an old, old friend's name is better in print than none at all.

Our cottage prayer meetings are still going on. It was at Mr. Ben Parrish's home last Saturday night; had a good spiritual meeting. It goes to the home of Mr. Isaac Black next Saturday night.

Miss Sadie Kindley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Kindley, and Mr. Clyde Hughes, son of the late Frank Hughes, were married on the 29th of January. Our best wishes go with them through life.

Mrs. Delia Wright is spending the winter in Thomasville with her children.

Mr. Bert Byerly, of Thomasville, was buried at Walter's Grove last Friday.

The four months' old child of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Gallimore was buried at Piney Grove last Thursday. Much sympathy to all the bereaved ones.

Our superintendent, Mr. C. O. Leonard, is faithful and brings us some good messages.

Mrs. C. M. Craver is sick.

We have been listening to hear from our ex-minister, Rev. M. C. Henderson, and family.

REPORTER.

Denton.—Sunday was a great day for our church here. President Taylor was with us and preached at the 11 o'clock hour. He spoke of how God expected us as a church today to "go forward." He made it very plain that he felt it his duty and privilege to see that the Methodist Protestant Church as a whole "goes forward" in his field of work here in North Carolina. He stressed the need of a closer relationship with God. How this and this alone would make the church go forward as it should. It was indeed a great sermon, and was presented with much force and zeal. I am sure no one except one with a heart full of the love of God and a great amount of experience and study could ever have preached it. The large crowd that almost filled the church seemed to be charmed by his great message.

After the preaching service Brother Taylor asked if the people here would not like to pay their college assessment. In just a few minutes it was raised and over paid about six dollars. It seem that the people had caught the spirit of "Go Forward."

There was a good attendance at Sunday school Sunday, there being 109 present. Brother Bingham and his family are certainly very dear to the people here. Just to see Mr. Bingham's smiling face makes one feel a thrill run through their soul and know that he lives close to his Master. May we all try to make our lives more pure and useful by their being among us.

A MEMBER.

High Point.—A solemn and impressive communion service was held at the First church Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, in which practically the entire large congregation participated. Dr. Spahr made a brief talk on "Showing the Lord's Death," and was assisted in the celebration by Rev. E. Lester Ballard, associate pastor, and Rev. Fred W. Paschal, student in Theological Seminary. A large number of children from the Junior church and many young people joined in this delightful service.

At the evening service Professor P. E. Lindley delivered a forceful message on "Hearing the Word of God." Mr. Lindley is very popular with the congregation, and is always heard most gladly. At the morning service the solo parts of the anthem, "Let All the Earth Their Voices Raise," were rendered by Rev. E. L. Ballard in a pleasing manner, and Mrs. J. Hobart Allred sang a pretty solo. At the evening service Messrs. Ballard, Schultheiss, Koonce, and Davis sang a quartette.

Last Friday evening the executive committee of the Senior Christian Endeavor Society was entertained by Miss Mary Koonce and Mr. and Mrs. Carey Davis at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Koonce.

On Monday afternoon the two missionary societies met in monthly session at the church with the two presidents, Mrs. C. L. Whitaker and Mrs. E. L. Ballard, acting as presiding officers. There was an attendance of 21 members. Circle No. 1, Mrs. Diffee, chairman, had charge of the program and the Question Box for December and also January was conducted. In the Home Society the sum of $20.00 was contributed to Bethel Home. It was decided to hold a prayer meeting on February 24th, the Day of Prayer to be observed throughout the country, and a committee was appointed to make plans for it. A nominating committee for officers for next year was appointed as follows: Mrs. J. A. Gray, chairman, Mrs. L. J. Diffee and Mrs. P. T. Crawford. A motion to divide the Home Society into circles was carried. Both societies are working diligently to collect dues and pledges in order to close the year's work in March.

At the Workers' Council meeting on Tuesday evening an interesting debate on the question, "Resolved, That the Worship Program is more important than the Lesson Study," will be held.

A most interesting survey was made last Sunday by Prof. T. C. Johnson's class of journalism in the college which revealed the fact that approximately 4,500 persons attended divine worship in the various churches of High Point on that day, which is not a bad showing in a population of 25,000 and weather conditions were not ideal. Green Street Baptist church made the best attendance record of 600 with Wesley Memorial M. E. church following with 500 present. The longest sermon occupied 50 minutes and the shortest 20 minutes with an average of 31 minutes.

We are sorry to note the illness of Mrs. M. R. W. Green and Mrs. D. E. White, who are missed from services.

Mrs. J. A. Tussey, who has been confined to High Point Hospital for four months on account of a broken hip, has recovered sufficiently to be removed to her home.

We are sorry to hear that Miss Dorothy Rankin is suffering from tonsilitis.

Mr. E. L. Douglas is away from home on a business trip of several weeks for McEwen Lumber Company.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Gray and children went to Charlotte Saturday to attend the golden wedding celebration of Mrs. Gray's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hutchison.

Lineberry, Davidson Charge.—The usual services were held last Sunday with very good attendance. Pastor Ridge preached a very impressive sermon which was food to our hungry souls.

On Sunday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock a Sunday school convention was held at our church. The splendid talks and songs from members of various churches were greatly enjoyed by all present.

Our Sunday school superintendent, A. H. Reid, has been absent for several Sundays on account of sickness; we hope he will soon be with us again. Also our choir leader, Brother Grady Burkhead, is sick.

Brother Reid and Brother Burkhead are always present unless sickness prevents.

On account of bad weather and the service at Denton, only a small number were present at Christian Endeavor Sunday night. But still we felt the Lord was with us and our program was not a complete failure.

When the weather opens up we hope our Sunday school and Christian Endeavor attendance will greatly increase.

REPORTER.

Denton Charge.—Last Saturday afternoon we were glad to have Rev. S. W. Taylor with us in a conference with the Jerusalem members. On Sunday President Taylor filled my regular appointments at Denton and Cid. All of his messages were encouraging and helpful. The congregation was very good Sunday morning, but in the afternoon and night the rain hindered many from coming. We had hoped to get more of the members from the country churches to Denton if the weather had been good. We were glad to have Rev. C. E. Ridge and family with us at the evening service at Denton. Brother Taylor secured $36.00 in pledges for the running expenses of High Point College from the church at Denton. Of this amount $25 was paid Sunday. We have also arranged with Jerusalem and Cid a joint committee to meet at N. W. Lanear's store Saturday afternoon, February 11, for the purpose of trying to unite the two churches in an effort to build a new church on the Denton and Lexington road near where the Thomasville road meets the Lexington road. We feel that this would be a better location for Cid church, and would be moving it in the direction of Jerusalem church. All speak very highly of our new president, and we wish to extend the invitation to him to come again any time it is convenient.

The Denton church has secured 25 copies of primary song books for the Junior choir. We fell this will mean much to the children and to the church. Mr. S. C. Bristow was received into Denton church Sunday morning.

E. A. BINGHAM.

Henderson.—Although silent for some weeks, we are nevertheless active. I will try to be brief in the reports of some of our numerous organizations and their progress.

On January 12th, the Young Ladies' League held their business meeting with Miss Elizabeth Fox. Mrs. Annie Mae McIntosh presided in the absence of the president. The devotionals were conducted by Mrs. McIntosh. Miss Lucy Taylor, assistant secretary, acted in the absence of Mrs. Tal Beckham, secretary. The general routine of business was conducted, followed by committee reports. During the period of new business the society voted to send a box of linens to the Bethel Home. A committee for collecting these was appointed. Rev. R. A. Hunter had charge of the program and told of the splendid work being done at Bethel Home by Rev. Homer Casto. The meeting was closed by prayer. A tempting salad course was then served.

A most interesting meeting of the W. H. M. S. was held Monday afternoon, January 16th, with Mrs. Clyde L. Finch. This being the first meeting of the new calendar year, it was indeed encouraging to have 20 members present. The necessary busines of the societies was transacted. At the close of the business the program committee took charge, the main topic being "Our Work in India." Miss Myra Hight gave a most interesting account of the work in that field, using several references from our missionaries who are laboring there. Mrs. O. O. Young also told of the great needs and results of our work there. The meeting closed with a special prayer for our missionaries and work in India, offered by Mrs. R. A. Hunter.

The prayer meetings are still in charge of the Christian Endeavorers and Wednesday night, January 18th, the subject of "India" was discussed by Mrs. Clyde L. Finch. During the evening, Charlie Hight, Jr., played a violin solo, accompanied by Mrs. Finch.

On Wednesday night, January 25th, Miss Katherine Hight discussed our Home Missionary work. This was very interesting indeed and the leader gave, in a most attractive manner, the various works being carried on in our land by the Methodist Protestants. A vocal solo by Mr. Clyde L. Finch, accompanied by Mrs. C. S. Finch, was greatly enjoyed.

January 29th, being the fifth Sunday, Rally Day was held at the M. P. church here. A splendid program had been prepared and dinner served in the basement, but owing to the snow and bad weather the attendance was not as large as it would have been. At the 11 o'clock session, Dr. E. H. Broughton, of Raleigh, N. C., delivered a most wonderful address on "Reformation versus Regeneration." There were two special anthems by the choir, and a duet, by Miss Maxine Taylor and W. P. Garrett, which were very enjoyable. Lunch was served at 1 o'clock. The afternoon session was opened by an organ selection by Mrs. Hattie Harris Perkins, of Raleigh. "Holy City" was then beautifully rendered by Mrs. S. R. Watson at the organ, Mrs. F. R. Harris, piano, Lawrence Harris, violin. C. B. Baskett, of Spring Valley church, read a very interesting paper from the "Methodist Protestant." After a few remarks by the president, and general business discusions the services were closed by Rev. R. A. Hunter. We are very sorry that so many people were unable to be with us for this service. There is always an inspiration to be had by such fellowship and a great joy experienced when we learn that so many are striving for so great a common interest, that of advancing the work of our Master.

February 1st, Miss Elizabeth Fox had charge of the missionary talk at prayer meeting. Her topic was "China." This was very interesting and Miss Fox told of the growth of our work there, and of the hindrances now, due to the civil war in China. There has been much interest shown in these meetings, and a wider and clearer knowledge of the real workings of our missionary forces brought to the minds of our people in general. The High Point College will be discussed by Miss Maxine Taylor this Wednesday night.

Sunday morning, February 5th, Rev. James H. Straughn, of Washington, D. C., spoke at the 11 o'clock service in the interest of the Centennial which is to be held in Baltimore May 16th, 1928. A good congregation was present and by a pleasing manner and descriptive narrative we were carried into that great occasion which is to be one of the outstanding events of our Methodist Protestant history. Rev. Mr. Straughn is indeed a capable speaker and one suited to his task. We were glad to have him, also Rev. M. Ivey Crutchfield, of Littleton, who was with us for this service.

There is a great deal of sickness among our membership and yet we are going on in our Master's labors. The Sunday school is doing good work and we feel the presence of His mighty hand. Pray for us that we may continue to go forward.

REPORTER.

Enfield.—Last Sunday was our regular appointment at Whitaker's Chapel. It was communion Sunday and a fair crowd came notwithstanding the weather was unlikely. We have some fine people in the community who are very much interested in the future of this church. Among these are a number of young people who are wide-awake and capable of giving their church a lift.

In the afternoon the writer conducted the funeral of Miss Harriet D. Lewis in the neighborhood of Roseneath church. She had lived to a ripe old age, being 84. Although not a member of our Roseneath church, yet she had been a faithful attendant at all services. She was laid to rest in the family cemetery in a two hundred yards of the church.

On account of the funeral services the afternoon appointment was called off. However, there will be the regular appointment next last Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

We continue to be showered with many kindnesses from our people here. We repeat our deep gratitude for their gifts.

One of our oldest members of the Whitakers Chapel church, Mrs. Alice Whitehead, is still in the Rocky Mount Hospital. We trust that those of her acquaintance will make it a point to call in and see her. On account of her age she will have to stay there some little time. If we cannot go to see her we can at least pray for her.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

S. S. Report, Mt. Lebanon.—The Sunday school at Mount Lebanon church, Randleman, is not as large as some schools, but I think we are doing as good work as many, and our collections will compare favorably with others of larger enrollment. Last year the collection from the eight classes amounted to $269.26; $101.95 of this amount was sent to our Children's Home.

A Christmas treat was given to each member of the Sunday school and some of the poor and sick in town were remembered also.

Mr. Ed Jarrett has been re-elected superintendent of the school for 1928. He is always at his post and faithfully discharges his duty.

Miss Ruth White was elected pianist and renders acceptable service.

It is encouraging to see so many old men and old ladies in our school, but there are still others who should come.

During the month of January our average attendance has been 72.2 and our collections have amounted to $16.58. Every first Sunday our collection goes to our Children's Home.

The old ladies' class presented the writer a beautiful silk muffler as Christmas gift in appreciation of her services as teacher of their class. This was duly appreciated and we feel encouraged to give them our very best service.

We are glad to have two of the high school teachers join our Sunday school this year.

Mrs. W. H. Neese will entertain the young ladies' class at the parsonage next Tuesday night. They have a large class of young ladies.

We are hoping this will be the best year yet for our Sunday school.

MRS. J. T. DOSIER, S. S. Reporter.

PASTORS, PLEASE NOTICE

Conference voted that the pastors should remit money for Conference Journals within 30 days after they were received. The thirty days are up. I have received something like one hundred dollars. I am anxious to pay the printer. Won't you please send me your Journal money? And make your check payable to C. W. Bates, Sec'y. Thank you. My address is 1113 Bellevue St., Greensboro, N. C.

—Brother W. I. Ward has been elected president of Asheboro Chamber of Commerce. Members of our last annual conference will remember Mr. as the lay member of the statioing committee.

Mrs. George R. Sockwell has returned to her home from Wesley Long Hospital.

Several charges have reached or passed their goals with new subscriptions. But old subscribers are to be added to make up the total number of subscribers. The goals set by the Annual Conference committee were based on membership and were just half as large as the committee thought they really ought to be. They left a large margin for passing the goal and several charges have passed it. Many charges make up in old subscribers what they lack in new. This canvass has greatly helped, and we thank pastors and people who have kindly lent a hand. State Street church, Lexington, was the first to reach the goal.

LINDBERGH AND THE BULL-FIGHT

A great multitude of people both in this country and in Europe who had come to hold this young aviator in the highest regard because of his splendid courage, his skill in his chosen field, and his rare good sense in circumstances where the majority of young men would have fallen down, learned with deep regret that he had been a spectator at a Mexican bull-fight.

If he could refuse the common drink of France, and the wine offered him by his hosts in Mexico, a beverage that is accepted as part of their social habits, why, without any offense, might he not have declined in kindly and gracious manner to be present at one of the most brutal and demoralizing exhibitions of modern times? The Prince of Wales could do it.

What must be the effect upon those thousands of boys and girls of the schools of Mexico who, in the summer of 1926, signed a petition to the Minister of Education demanding that, "since Mexico has reached a higher degree of culture and enlightenment, the barbarity of the bull-fight, which is an affront to civilization, be abolished." The petition urged the Minister to "obtain the assistance of other high government officials to put an end to bull-fights, or at least to prevent the slaughter of the horses which now take such a leading part in it." These wretched horses, gored, disemboweled, by the enraged bulls, are one of the saddest features of the bull-fight. Alas for the children in Mexico's schools! We can only regret that anything has been permitted to cloud an otherwise so stainless a shield.—Our Dumb Animals.

—Insurance company statistics indicate that 1927 will show the lowest death rate in the history of the United States and Canada. Only cancer and violence took increased toll of life.

Three new charges—Guilford, Yarborough, and Saxapahaw are added to the list this week. The charges that now have credits number 64, leaving 28 charges without payments on either budget. Brother pastor, and church officials, won't you please examine this list and see in which group your charge is found? We should not go another month without being able to show budget credit for every charge. There should be 28 "amens" to this. Let's see!

I know that raising money is not an easy matter, but it is a necessary matter, and we MUST urge it. Let us pray that grace may be given to us to see our duty in this, as in all other things that concern the Kingdom, and to believe that God will make all grace abound toward us so that we, "having all sufficiency in all things may abound unto every good work."

We are happy to report other churches and classes, having become interested in giving more of our girls music in the Jamestown High School; the Ladies' Sunday School Class of Friendship, Haw River Circuit, led off by assuming the tuition of Elouise Beam for the entire school year; the W. H. M. S. of Asheboro, Siler City-Liberty, Hunter-Kimball Memorial Class, Grace Church, Greensboro, has assumed the responsibility of one each, for the spring term. We are truly thankful for this, and the girls are unable to express their deep appreciation, and they are all working hard to take advantage of the opportunity.

We wish to express our deep appreciation to Rev. E. L. Ballard for his untiring interest and efforts in securing new song books for the Home, and to all who contributed toward these, as they were much needed. May all who contributed receive a great blessing in so doing.

We regret to report one of our girls in the Guilford General Hospital, she having undergone an operation for appendicitis Saturday. Dr. S. S. Coe, our big family physician, reports her condition very favorable.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Kistler

Mrs. Lucinda Kistler, wife of J. J. Kistler, departed this life December 18, 1927, aged 88 years, 8 months and 23 days.

Mrs. Kistler joined Pleasant Hill M. P. church early in life. She was faithful in attending church services while she was physically able. She and husband loved the pastors, be who they may, and gladly made their home, his home. They also believed and practiced paying liberally, and always did this early in the conference year.

The writer never knew a person who lived a more resigned and satisfied life. She said just a short while before she died, "I am not afraid to die, because there is nothing between me and my Savior."

Her remains were tenderly laid to rest in Pleasant Hill cemetery, in the presence of a large crowd of friends and sorrowing relatives.

She has left behind an aged father, J. J. Kistler, two brothers, Zimri, of Shelby, and Albert, at home, and Mrs. Alice Schroeder of Charlotte.

J. D. MORRIS.

Thompson

Death recently visited our community near Orange Chapel and took Sister Margaret Thompson home to heaven. We know her rest is sweet, because her toils on earth were great; we know she enjoys that healthful clime, because she was sorely afflicted while staying here.

We can but rejoice because of her heavenly gain, but amidst our rejoicing is a dark shadow of sorrow because we miss her so much. For she was a noble wife, a loving mother and an ideal neighbor. She loved her church, and weather nor distance kept her away as long as health would permit.

She was laid away in Orange Chapel cemetery, the pastor, O. C. Loy, with the assistance of Rev. H. I. Isley, conducting the funeral service.

O. C. LOY, Pastor.

—C. L. O'Briant, son of Rev. J. B. O'Briant, who has been at Kelly Field, Texas, for some time, has been chosen at Washington, D. C., as one of five men to go to Havana, Cuba, to open an aviation field there. He is now there on duty.

—Rev. C. W. Bates officiated yesterday in the funeral of Mrs. Robert Laughlin. A daughter died about a year ago.

—Dr. Robert King, of Pulaski, Va., is the preacher in evangelistic meetings in progress in Westminster Presbyterian Church.

—The United States last year produced 1,186 airplanes, as against 789 in 1926. Eighty-four manufacturers are now engaged in the production of aircraft as against 37 a year ago.

—Rev. Dr. James Shera Montgomery, pastor of Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church, Washington, D. C., has again been elected chaplain of the United States House of Representatives. This is the fourth Congress in which he has served in that capacity.

PLEA FOR BREVITY

In last week's Herald the editor requested reporters to study brevity. A very good suggestion. Why take time and ask for space for an article that few, if any, will read? This hangs in a certain business man's office: "If you have nothing to do, don't do it here."

I have read the Herald since Vol. 1, No. 1. A long article must be "snappy" if I read it through and I suppose there are others.

Pastors might stick a pin here. Not many laymen have room for a long one. Try giving it in broken doses and see how it acts.

When Is a Man Not a Man?

I have just been reading what the president of the University of North Carolina says about college athletics in his last report. He says among other things: "What we need is not athletes playing at being students, but student athletes. In student athletics I believe firmly and wholly; in professional athletics within our colleges and universities, not at all. . . . We will not go so very far wrong, it seems to me, if we keep in mind certain general principles. First, any athletic team ought to be made up of genuine students. I mean of men attracted to a given institution in a normal way, and not altogether or primarily because it offers a satisfactory arena for the display of athletic prowess, or because of any special inducement for the same. I mean also of students genuine in the sense that they are concerned about getting an education, not viewing the reasonable demands of classroom ad campus as unwelcome interruptions between opportunities for their real mission in life. Second, any athletic program should be one which, as its ideal, involves every member of the student body in wholesome physical activity, and so finds in the teams which represent the institution in intercollegiate contests a natural outgrowth of its life."

President Chase says he does not believe in professional athletics in our colleges and universities. We wonder whether he believes in professional athletes at all. Can a man realize the true purpose of his human existence by developing his muscular system to fullest extent and devoting his life to the exhibition of feats of physical strength? Can we look upon such a man and say, Here is a true man? Does not the attainment of true manhood involve at least the normal development of the powers of mind and heart that belong to humanity? Can one who neglects the cultivation of his mental and moral powers in favor of the extraordinary development of his bodily powers claim to have grown into true manhood?

Man has certain powers in common with the brute and certain other powers that distinguish him from the brute. If a man cultivates only those powers that he has in common with the brute, does he become a true man?

Evidently he does not. The value of education and training is to be judged by what it makes out of its subject. A man in his maturity in order to be entitled to the name of a man must have developed human qualities. If he has become a monstrosity, interesting chiefly as a matter of curiosity, he is to be profoundly pitied.

—This week in Raleigh is being held North Carolina's first institute for the instruction of parents in the care of children. Of course only a few parents, comparatively, can be present and hear the instructive addresses delivered. It is to be hoped that the valuable hints and information given will be published in order that parents generally may avail themselves of it. The care of the child's health is a problem in which the parent needs all the help of science.

Surprise Spencer Church

We have a most loyal little band of Methodist Protestants in the great railroad town of Spencer, N. C. There are perhaps thirty of them. They bravely tackled the problem of building a Methodist Protestant church in that town. They could not be discouraged or intimidated. They felt the need and had faith. They went forward in the face of all opposition and efforts at discouragement. They conducted a Sunday school and called for the service of a pastor, which call was honored by the President of the Annual Conference and by the Annual Conference itself. Our earnest young brother, T. G. Madison, is the pastor now and has been for over a year. They want a house of their own. They have bought a lot for a church and have paid for it. Now they want to build a church or at least Sunday school rooms. They need and must have help. They realize it and are asking for help. This is a condition through which nearly every one of our strong churches has passed. To build for future needs and future growth requires more than the local membership can do. The denomination as a whole or the annual conference district must lend a hand. The local church might be too proud to ask for help and might proceed to build within their means, but what they could build would not be a credit to the denomination and would not serve the true purpose of the denomination in that place. It is the duty of the brethren of the locality to appeal for the help that the situation justly demands and it is equally the duty of the church at large to respond. None of our churches lives to itself. All are members one of another. The new born infant church appeals for the love and help of the older and stronger churches of the family.

Our brethren and sisters at Spencer are asking each of our Sunday schools to send them an offering. We do not know how much they expect to receive in this way, but there are two ways in which we might surprise them: we might give less than they expect and so surprise and disappoint them, or we might give them more than they expect and agreeably surprise them. Would it not be better in every way to surprise them by exceeding their expectations by the number and the aggregate amount of our offerings? We trust pastors, Sunday school superintendents and church members generally will interest themselves in seeing that their Sunday schools are given the opportunity to help the struggling, devoted band at Spencer. Give them help in money and then give them your prayers for complete success in their great task as a church.

—Bro. Gerringer calls attention to group insurance. We wonder why the brethren are holding back. Is it because the Conference voted to ask the charges to contribute 40 per cent of the aggregate premiums? Some thought that a mistake. I have sent in my card, expecting to pay all the premium. Others can do likewise, and any charge that wishes can help its pastor pay his premium.

METHODIST PROTESTANT CENTENNIAL GRATITUDE GIFT

Symposium

CHAS. O. APPLE, Indiana, "Posterity"

We twice born people have a spiritual line of ancestors and we have learned to love the organization that performed the function of a Mother.

It is very natural to express our love by means of gifts. My Spiritual Mother is going to have an outstanding birthday, her one hundredth birthday; posterity will recall how we made the day prominent.

Therefore, feeling that what we do will not only show our love for the church but will be a challenge to posterity, let us push on to the goal knowing that those who have died at her altars would join in saying, God bless the men and women of this day who are of the household of faith.

CHAS. O. APPLE.

TREASURER ROGERS, Alabama, "Happy Time"

What a happy time it was for the Alabama conference on November 10, when after hearing about the Gratitude Gift, to be allowed a part in this great remembrance. We actually fell over each other trying to see who could be the first to subscribe. Our people are 100 per cent in sympathy with this great cause, and Alabama will be there on the night of May 16, not only with her check in full, but with one of our most representative young ladies to bear it.

A. C. ROGERS.

C. W. BATES, North Carolina, "Show It"

"Blow, blow, thou winter wind!
Thou art not half so rude
As base ingratitude."

So sang the poet. And we say, Amen. After the mother has nursed us, comforted us, helped us to grow in grace toward the measure of the fullness of Christ. Then not to be grateful, and not to show our gratitude in some way that measures a bit of sacrifice for us. This is unthinkable.

I want to bear testimony to what this mother has meant to me: She took me in my boyhood, called me into her ministry, helped to give me an education to better fit me for that task, and has honored me these years with a place to preach, and with positions of responsibility. I am grateful, profoundly grateful. I hope to show it by my Gift of Gratitude.

C. W. BATES.

PRESIDENT MATTHEWS, Ft. Smith, Okla., "We Will"

While I do not have the exact figures as to how much of the Gratitude Gift has been already raised, I can say it is going strong.

One church in our conference took a fifth of our apportionment and has already raised it.

Nearly all of our stronger churches have raised their quotas. "We will go over the top."

M. L. MATTHEWS.

M. L. MCCANDLESS, Texas, "Nothing Less"

Dear Brethren: As the time is now at hand and as members of the Methodist Protestant Church we each one individually are called upon to meditate upon principles involved, results brought about and progress to be made in regard to our beloved church. It would seem that we should all ask ourselves the question that David asked, "What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits unto me?" unto our church, and unto this Christian nation in advocating, preaching and helping in church practices to establish mutual-rights principles.

As we come to the 100th birthday we cannot and must not be satisfied with ourselves with anything less than the $100,000 Gratitude Gift.

M. L. MCCANDLESS.

PRESIDENT PHIPPS, Texas, "Household Expression"

M. P. C. G. G. has become a household expression throughout the Texas conference. Some of our churches will not find it possible to make large gifts. However, we are making a heroic effort to have every church and every individual member and many sympathetic friends represented in this very worthy cause. The outlook is encouraging. We hope to double our quota. One of our most faithful pastors will be represented by $100, and I think his church will lay an additional $150 on the altar.

J. A. PHIPPS.

L. B. SMITH, Wilmington, Del., "Still Bethel"

God spoke to Jacob asleep on a pillow of stones at Luz. He arose and made of them a pillar, called it Bethel, and promised of all God gave him a tenth.

A century ago our fathers came to Luz (almond tree-bitter) and of its stones erected our Bethel of worship. Shall these sacred stones be for us pillows, and we "at ease in Zion?" Shall we not rather, by our Centennial Gratitude Gift, make of them a more glorious pillar, pointing future generations to the "gate of Heaven?" Let's not return to Luz, but call it Bethel still.

L. B. SMITH.

PRESIDENT HUNTON, Georgia, "Blessed"

"It is more blessed to give than to receive." It is blessed to give to any cause or for any right purpose, it is a blessing to give to the cause of charity, it is a blessing to give to the cause of education, it is a blessing to give to the cause of patriotism. Many a mother has given her son to this great cause, many a father has given his life for this cause and many a son has given his all.

The greatest gift of all gifts is a gift out of the gratitude of the heart and the greatest kind of gratitude is that which we hvae to God for the gift of His Son and of His church.

Do not give because of a duty, do not give because of a feeling of necessity, but out of the gratitude of a full heart; let us make this not only a Gratitude Gift, but an offering of Gratitude.

The Georgia conference, though small, we believe is going over the top with her quota—and we are planning a centennial celebration in every one of our churches in the district.

WALTER M. HUNTON.

T. W. LEONARD, Pittsburgh, "Easiest"

I know some folks in my own church who have recently subscribed towards the Centennial Gratitude Gift and they are so happy over it they have gotten several others to subscribe. And I know some who have felt so good over it they have subscribed twice. I want to say to you "Leading Laymen," if you have not done so, get in the push and help your pastor put it over. You will say with me that it was the easiest money you ever raised in your church. To make the birthday party a big success in a financial way, we should endeavor to interest all the members of our church and Sunday school and be careful not to deprive any one of giving. If we can get 25 per cent of our people interested, we will go way "over the top." The time to act is now. We should all forget for the time being our own local church financial problems, or at least, we should not build a wall out of them so high that we cannot see larger and greater things just ahead. Your people will get a greater joy out of participating in this great birthday party than they have had for many a day.

T. W. LEONARD.

G. W. HADDAWAY, Maryland, "Come on, Everybody"

Real gratitude is the pinnacle of virtues with genuine human beings and especially sincere Christians, yet, possibly, is practiced the least of them all the world over. Have we improved in this regard since the days of Jesus and the ten lepers. Our response to the Gratitude Gift fund as a church and individuals will answer the question. Let us answer in the affirmative by laying on the altar of our church $100,000 as a thank-offering for 100 years of denominational life and prosperity and do so at once. Come on, everybody!

G. W. HADDAWAY.

A. M. RANKIN, North Carolina, "One Hundred Per Cent"

There are 26 conferences and one mission conference in the Methodist Protestant General Conference and it would be unthinkable to have a single conference come up without the full 100 per cent paid. I anticipate the pleasure of seeing the 27 young ladies seated on the stage and as their conference is called out come gladly to the front with 100 per cent.

Surely no conference will have the unpleasant task of coming forth and saying my conference failed. Let us not think of failure. I have too much faith in the loyal membership of our great church to think of failure. Let every conference come to Baltimore in May 100 per cent strong.

A. M. RANKIN.

G. D. JONES, Eastern, "Golden Opportunity"

One hundred years of splendid achievement! What an occasion for rejoicing and thanksgiving! What a golden opportunity this centennial celebration will afford every loyal Methodist Protestant to give substantial and generous expression to the gratitude he feels, as he thinks of the debt he owes his spiritual mother.

We can never fully repay the debt we owe our beloved church, but certainly we cannot afford to miss this opportunity to give expression to the extent of our ability, to the affection and gratitude of our hears. We can also make his birthday celebration an inspiration to greater loyalty and achievement, to our sons and daughters. Here's for a bigger and better Methodist Protestant Church.

REV. GEORGE D. JONES.

Atlantic City, N. C.

H. M. THOMPSON, Texas, "Double Quota"

I do not occupy any strategic or other commanding position in these parts, but a word with our president a few days since said that we—the Texas conference—would double our quota. For my part, out here on a small country circuit, we mean to double ours.

These Texas folks seem rather to pay a "gratitude" than a common debt. We are much in sympathy with the Gratitude Gift and wonder at any threatened failure.

We move slowly in these parts for reasnos better known to us. We have opposing factors that are hard to cope with, but we who are older have more of hope since we seen so much that is not present now. I will burden you no further except to type my humble prayer that God shall bless you in this directorate and finally bring the Methodist Protestant Church to its own along with every other blessing of freedom in Christ Jesus.

A fellow servant,

H. M. THOMPSON.

Lake Creek, Texas.

THE LEGACY OF PEACE

I quote at length from the strong, earnest, eloquent, fine comments on "Peace I leave with you: my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you," by the late James Martineau. "This is a strange benediction to proceed from the Man of Sorrows at the dreariest moment of His life; strange at least to those who look only to His outward career, His incessant contact with misery and sin, His absolute solitude of purpose, His lot stricken with sadness ever new from temptation to the cross; but not strange perhaps to those who heard the deep and quiet tones in which this oracle of promise went forth—the divinest music from the center of the darkest fate." The same author holds that the Christian's peace, like that of the "Prince of Peace," comes from two sources, namely, virtuous toil and holy trust. Such peace is more than the absence of jar and conflict; a condition free from the restlessness of fruitles desire, the forebodings of anxiety, the sting of enmity; yea, it is the complete removal of discord from the heart and soul of the Christian, accomplished through the death of Christ.

In these modern days of philanthropy when some one has wittingly remarked that the rich men of America "go around seeking that which they may endow," the giving of Jesus, the world's greatest philanthropist, may be taken as a model for all giving. The records of His life show that He gave that which was most needed and most fitting. I fail to note a single exception during His entire life of "going about and doing good." He gave freedom to those in bondage, food to the hungry, the water of life to the thirsty; sight to the blind, strength to the weak and enfeebled, healing to the afflicted, companionship to the lonely, peace to the troubled and fearful of heart, and life to the dead, salvation to the lost. With His unsearchable, unfathomable, unexplorable riches many poor ones of the earth have been made rich. As the late Dr. J. H. Jowett expressed it, "He supplies all our lacks."

The same records which show that Jesus gave that which was most needed and appropriate, prove that He gave also that which was the most desirable. These troubled-hearted disciples would rather have peace of mind, heart and soul than the treasures of Egypt. The real hungry man would rather have the bread of life than anything that could be given him. Most blind men, like Bartimaeus, would prefer their sight to anything else. It is said that the parting words of Benedict Arnold, dying lonely in a foreign country, were, "I want a friend, I want a friend." The world gives its best gifts first, while Jesus gives gifts that grow in power and fullness of blessings. Christ gives sincerely, substantially, and eternally. We are not urprised that Paul, who knew the peace of His Lord so well, exhorted the Colossians to "Let the peace of Christ rule" (arbitrate, umpire) in their hearts. It's for all disciples of Christ. This priceless bequest is within the reach of all here below. If one does not have it, it is his fault that he has not yet entered into his heritage.

REV. W. A. LEDFORD.

OPTIMISM | FROM THE FIELD | EVANGELISM

Trafalgar

When Admiral Nelson engaged the combined French and Spanish fleet at Trafalgar he signalled from his flagship, "England expects every man to do his duty." That signal is, we trust, being raised from every pulpit in the North Carolina conference. This Gratitude Gift is the call of God and the call of the church to every Methodist Protestant to do his duty. Surely none will fail. Reports will be coming in very soon, and we are anxious to see what ten charges will be first to raise allotments assigned them, and what charge will lead this list.

Denton

February 4-5 were spent on this charge. A business meeting was held on Saturday with the brethren at Jerusalem in an effort to arrange a schedule of appointments for them. We found them discouraged and ready to quit. If the merger with Cid (which we will speak of presently) can be consummated, we think our work at Jerusalem should be abandoned. Until that merger can be completed, Pastor Bingham will give the Jerusalem church fifth Sunday services and Sunday night appointments, according to the order of the quarterly conference. This seems the very best that can be done at present.

Sunday morning and night we were at the Denton church. Each service was well attended, and the attitude of the people was highly encouraging. The conference programs were presented at the night service, and we found pleasing evidences of sympathy and co-operation. The Denton church has a bright outlook, and is destined to become one of our strong and influential churches. The college assessment for this church, of $30.00, was overpaid by $5.00. The balance will be paid later, we expect, by the other churches.

In the afternoon, on Sunday, we were at Cid. The weather was disagreeable, and only a small congregation was present. However, those who were able to get there seemed to hear our message gladly. We trust that good was done.

The Cid church needs to be relocated. A very desirable site can be had at the conjunction of the Lexington and Thomasville roads. This is not quite midway between Cid and Jerusalem, but close enough to each to make it a desirable location for both. A merger was proposed to the Cid people and promptly endorsed by the congregation and pastor. Committees were at once appointed by the pastor for each church, and a meeting called for Saturday, February 11. If this merger can be consummated, we are confident that it will be the solution of the problems at these two points, and a decided forward step for our cause in that section. A church is very much needed at the point named, the location seems a very desirable one, and by all means the matter should be pressed, and at the earliest date a church erected. Pastor Bingham has his hands on the situation. He and his family are popular with the people, and the work is being zealously and wisely directed. Denton charge will, no doubt, reveal a year of progress when the reports are in next fall. We expect to visit the other churches on the charge during the year.

College

Thursday, February 8, we spoke to the students, in the chapel exercise, at High Point College, and had the further pleasure of shaking hands with a number of the faculty and being guest of President Andrews and the students at luncheon in the spacious college dining hall. The student enrollment this year is over three hundred. The institution has had marked progress, and is destined to become not only a great factor in building the conference, but in the educational programs of the state, as well. We thoroughly enjoyed our visit.

Brotherhood

Thursday night, February 9, it was our privilege to be in a Brotherhood meeting of the Concord church. This is one of the few churches in the conference that has a Brotherhood organization. We enjoyed speaking to them, and our impressions are that they will render increasing service ot the church. This church has been helped much by the new Sunday school annex; and now they have in contemplation a new church auditorium. Concord is one of our progressive churches, and we rejoice in their courage and devotion. Bro. Hendry is popular with the people, and under his zealous leadership the church is going forward. The Cowell-Ramsay evangelistic party are there for a three weeks' meeting. Blessings on their work.

Connelly Springs

Saturday night and Sunday, February 11-12, were given to this charge. Bro. D. M. Dew, who has been serving this work for some time, met us at the railroad station, and conveyed us at once twenty miles across the mountains to Shiloh church where we had an appointment at 7 o'clock. The people were there when we arrived, and we enjoyed meeting them and preaching to them. The attendance was not large, but very good we thought for a winter night congregation. Sunday we were at Shady Grove and Burk's chapel. The attendance was very good at each place, and the people very responsive to the services. The college assessment of five dollars was raised in full by these two churches. At Burk's the church building had recently been moved from its old position to one several feet back and considerably higher. The change is an improvement. They now need to paint inside and out, and this, we think, they will do. The weakness and the remoteness of this charge makes it difficult to take care of it in keeping with the needs and the opportunities. However, we must do our best for them. The services that the churches are rendering, and can render, are too much needed not to give them every possible assistance. The work will grow if we can properly care for it. The people speak well of Bro. Dew, and we are sure that his service is helpful. But this is something of an uncertain pastoral arrangement. Bro. Dew expects to graduate from Rutherford College in the spring, and may not continue to live within reach of the charge. However, we must, and will, do all possible for these churches.

Bro. H. D. Garmon, who served this charge for many years, is living near Shady Grove. We had the privilege of seeing him and of eating dinner in his home. Bro. C. E. Silvers is active, also, in the work of the charge. We were glad to see him and Bro. J. L. Love during the day. Bro. W. P. Martin, one of our superannuated ministers, lives near Shiloh church. But for our limited time, we would have visited him. We were sorry to learn that he is not so well, and it is a matter of regret to us that we were not able to see him. He has our love and prayers.

Annual Conference Programs

January, February, March, raising A. C. B.; February, Stewardship; Week of Prayer, last week in February. The brethren, we are sure, will co-operate with these programs as far as possible.

Herald

Only seven charges have secured the allotted quota of new subscribers. State Street secured ten over, Graham two over, Siler City and Vance each one over. A number of other charges, while not up to the quota, have secured several additions. Twenty-six charges are blank. The time for this campaign has expired, but we hope the work may continue until all quotas are reached.

Books

We have a need for books in first and second year conference course; if any one will lend these books, please communicate with us.

Harmony

I am told that a certain prominent minister, when asked the secret of his long and useful pastorate of a certain church, replied, "Harmony." This is a Christian grace of far-reaching power, and one that every minister should studiously and prayerfully cultivate. The Lord fill us with love that "suffers long, and is kind."

CHURCH HISTORY

Dear Doctor McCulloch:

Having occasion for my own personal advantage to do some research upon the subject of the Methodist Protestant Church in North Carolina, I am reading with great interest the manuscript copies of early Journals of the conference.

It has occurred to me that readers of THE HERALD might find some interest in occasional sketches of these early days; and also that some of the older and better informed members of the conference may be able to give me valuable information. I, therefore, venture to enclose what may be the first of a series of articles. I do this out of no disregard for the position of our excellent conference historian, Rev. J. E. Pritchard, but largely from the selfish motive of seeking in this way help from the public for my own task.

May I add the request that any one having either books or records which they are willing to dispose of inform me of that fact. I should like to buy a copy of the History of the M. P. Church by Rev. John Paris for my personal library. I should like also, as custodian of the Journal of the conference, to have the records of the Union Societies and other valuable materials to hold for the conference.

Sincerely yours,

PAUL S. KENNETT.

High Point, N. C.,

The First N. C. Conference of the M. P. Church

The first annual conference of the "Associated Methodist Churches for North Carolina" began on December 19, 1828, "at Whitaker's Meeting House in Halafax County." At that conference, Dr. Paris says, there were "eight ministers, five licensed preachers, and twelve lay delegates," and this statement has been followed by later historians. The record before me says: "Present, James Hunter, Elder; William Bellamy, Elder; Miles Nash, Elder; William W. Hill, William Price, Elder-elect; Eli B. Whitaker and Albriton Jones, Deacons; Eli B. Whitaker, Pres. pro tem, and Miles Nash, Secretary." Five licensed preachers and eleven lay delegates are then named. Later in the conference a twelfth layman was seated as were two preachers, Rev. Henry Bradford, who is among the eight ministers listed by Paris, and Rev. Thomas Moor, who is not mentioned by him.

It will be noticed that the name of William W. Hill appears without any statement as to his order, though Paris names him as one of the "eight ministers." In this connection an interesting statement appears as follows: "Whereas our Bro. Wm. W. Hill was on a former occasion elected to elders orders in the Methodist Episcopal Church, so-called, by the Virginia annual conference, which election was not consummated, he not having applied to the Bishops, so-called, for that purpose. He now applies to this conference for ordination, which on motion was unanimously carried by rising up." There is no record of the ordination service but no doubt it was held.

There seems to have been an abundance of presidential timber in this meeting. It will be observed that Rev. Eli B. Whitaker is mentioned as president pro tem. No statement is made of his election. Whether this is an omission (there seem to be several in this brief record) or whether he served by virtue of having held office in the Roanoke Union Society, I do not know. On the second day of the conference a motion was carried that: "Rev. James Hunter be appointed President of this conference in place of Rev. Eli B. Whitaker." A little later it was, "Resolved, that the Rev. William W. Hill be appointed our president until our next conference, his term of office to commence on the 22nd of December, 1828." Regardless of all this electing, however, the minutes are signed by Mr. Whitaker. Our difficulties with officers do not end here for the Journal of the second conference, April, 1829, lists Rev. Henry Bradford as president but later records the re-election of Rev. W. W. Hill and signs his name at the end of the minutes. From that time there seems to be no question of the leadership of Mr. Hill for some years.

Much time was spent upon financial problems. The only committee whose report is given in full is that on ways and means. "Agents" were appointed for each circuit. Rev. W. W. Hill was chosen agent "for this body," and Rev. Miles Nash, "agent to act in conjunction with Bro. Hill." Mr. Wilson C. Whitaker was selected as conference treasurer.

Three circuits received appointments of "preacher in charge." These were: Roanoke, Rev. Eli B. Whitaker; Greenville, Rev. I. B. Hutchins; Albemarle, Rev. Aquilla Norman. It is interesting to note that the two latter were "licensed preachers." Evidently several preachers lived and worked within the bounds of each circuit.

The conference also adopted "the articles of association and resolutions as adopted by the convention held at Baltimore," appointed a committee of correspondence, and voted "that they would not receive any person as a preacher of the gospel unless he should say he thinks he is called of God to preach."

FOREIGN MISSIONS

The Foreign Missions Conference

In last week's article I only told a part of the story of the Foreign Missions Conference held at Atlantic City January 10-13. I finish the story this week.

Dr. Henry T. Hodgkin, one of the secretaries of the National Christian Council of China, strikingly pointed out that "Increasingly the missionaries are eager to take the risks involved in adjusting procedure and institutions to meet the demands of Chinese Christians and Chinese Nationals, and we, as church people, must appreciate and approve this attitude of the missionaries. They are anxious to get to their posts of service, but they are eager also to conserve those gains which have come by Chinese Christians assuming places of responsibility—a responsibility which is giving the church in China a new lease of life."

He also gave the Chinese side of the important question of missionary workers by saying that "The Chinese church and Chinese Christians are eager for a continued stream of missionaries from America and Europe, if they have a voice in the kind of missionaries and in the training of those missionaries. We ought to be wlling to concede this voice to the Chinese—the right to select the kind of men and women who are to come to their churches and schools, the attitude of mind these men and women are to have toward China, the training they are to have before leaving for foreign service, the relationship they are to have to the Chinese church."

Dr. Rufus M. Jones, professor of philosophy in Haverford College, in his own characteristic way said, "We, as interpreters of Christ, must be forever done with gunboat Christianity, with aeroplane bombing Christianity, and with poison-gas Christianity. We must either stop talking about Christ's ideals of life, or go on talking about them in both word and deed in the fell-clutch of hard facts that may spell death to us as he did and as they did in whose train we want to follow. There is no other way to build a Christian world —no other way except to be Christ-like. We must meet this secular world—its prosperity, its smugness, its hard-boiled philosophy, its utilitarian aims—with a settled conviction that we are going all the way through with Christ and with a burning passion to be like him in life and in spirit."

And so well did Dr. W. A. Beaven say, "We dare not let this great missionary enterprise lapse or languish. People are questioning whether we can afford to keep it up. The one thing that is clear is that we cannot afford to let it go. In fact, it grows clearer that it is the best all around investment we can make from every point of view. From the purely financial background this is true. The policy of greed and ill-will will bind upon our shoulders burdens of armament. It will involve great masses of men thrown into non-production, if not destructive military units. It will involve increasing fortifications and great investment in non-producing material. The policy of good-will looks toward conserving man power and money for constructive efforts in world building. The only possible hope for the Orient is to be freed from the necessity of expending what resources it has upon military defense and aggrandizement, and our attitude will largely determine the policy they will have to pursue."

And, in this connection, I cannot refrain from quoting from the address given by Mr. William Boyd, advertising manager of the Curtis publications in Philadelphia. He was one of the commission sent out by the Methodist Episcopal church to make a survey of its missionary work. After spending eight months in this survey he emphatically says, "I believe that every dollar invested in foreign missions has produced greater returns than any dollar invested in any human enterprise. There is no incompetency in the carrying on of the mission work or in the management of its funds; and there is not so much wasteful competition in the work as is found anywhere in business."

Much more of good and of real benefit might be said of this conference. Let me say in a word, it was worth-while. I have only pointed out the most important items considered and could touch upon them but briefly. The great missionary cause is certainly passing through a crucial period. Readjustment and change is upon every hand. In this conference the privilege was brought to come in contact with and to get the very latest facts concerning the real conditions on the mission fields. Only those whose privilege it was to be there can know of the worth and the value of this great gathering. In unity of spirit we were working together to unify and to promote the work of the missionary enterprise in the Orient.

S. W. Rosenberger, Executive Secretary.

HOME MISSIONS

A Great Gathering in Cleveland, Ohio

The National Church Comity Council, under the auspices of the Home Missions Council, Council of Women for Home Missions and the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, was held in Cleveland Friday and Saturday, January 20-21. The daily sessions were held in the Old Stone Presbyterian Church. On Sunday afternoon a great mass meeting was held in Euclid Avenue Baptist Church, when addresses were made by Bishop McDowell, of Washington, and others.

This conference numbered approximately five hundred delegates. They came from Canada on the north to Florida on the south and from Maine to the Pacific coast. It was composed of church officials, secretaries of various boards and representative pastors and leaders of the Protestant denominations. The purpose of the conference was to consider questions of comity and co-operation between Protestant denominations of America and prevent overlapping in the extension of our Lord's Kingdom in communities where several denominations are functioning.

The keynote of the conference was co-operation rather than competition. This seemed to strike a responsive cord in all hearts and brought forth many expressions of approval. It was publicly stated more than once that comity means courtesy, kindness. If this is its meaning as it applies to the relation we sustain toward each other in the experiences of everyday life, how much more important that it be manifested by religious bodies in the great cause in which we are all engaged and where instead of competition there should be unity of spirit and oneness of purpose.

None will deny that there has been, at least to a degree and in many instances a large degree, existing among the denominations workig in the same territory the lack of Christian fellowship and fraternity. As the representatives of these denominations sat together for two full days and discussed not only the importance but absolute necessity for a better understanding and closer affiliation of the great religious organizaions, one could not fail to be impressed with the fact that a new day is dawning for Protestant Christianity in this and other countries.

There was no expression relative to church union. They had not assembled for that purpose. They had assembled to create a closer fellowship among Christians and more concerted action in the great objective of extending Christ's Kingdom in the world. There were in some instances extreme views expressed. This might be expected in a great gathering of men and women coming from such a wide area and having lived and labored under different environments. During the early part of the conference a number of carefully prepared addresses were delivered on various phases of this subject of comity in which a way was sought to eliminate competition and overlapping in church work, and with the further view of preventing waste as well as having better facilities for promoting religious welfare in the community.

These addresses were delivered mostly by what might be termed young men, and they were largely, if not entirely, from the north and northwestern part of the country. These were the speakers who were inclined to be extreme in presenting their views with remedies for the difficulties confronting the general church. The trend of their thought and expression was a depreciation of the denominational idea. They were for federation without consideration of the value or need of the denomination. They favored the community church independent of any denominational authority or control.

Their plan was to go into a community or town where several denominations were established and they thought overchurched and proceed to unite those churches into one organization; in fact, gather all the people into one society without regard to creed or any special religious requirements. It would be union without due consideration as to how it might be accomplished or results to follow, theory without any well defined plan for harmony and effective service. They would proceed very much as a school board in uniting the schools of one district and concentrate them at one given point, or as farmers would combine in one association in disposing of their farm products.

These speakers seemed to have their innings but when the time for general discussion came and the great body of the assembly was heard, it was with no uncertain sound, not only as to the advisability of retaining the denominational feature, but the absolute necessity of the denominational control of the whole situation, that no effective and permanent work can be carried on in an independent way. Bishop Moore, of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, the presiding officer, was very happy in his remarks holding the council to the question under consideration. He very aptly remarked that uniting farmers in selling corn and cotton is altogether a different proposition to uniting church people into one organization where there are deep convictions in doctrine and usages. We were, however, convinced that the general results of the two days' discussion and association were most helpful and should be felt in all of our churches.

A plan was inaugurated extending through a period of five years in which an earnest effort will be made to carry the spirit and principles of comity into every state of the union with the view of eliminating competition and bringing the various denominations into closer relation with one another, thus preventing over-churching limited fields, or readjusting conditions reducing the cost of maintaining religious services and having better organization and equipment for the work to be done. It will be well for those presenting this plan to bear in mind at least two things. First, the masses of people have not studied this great problem as these leaders have, and have not yet the open mind, and the other is in their approach to the denominations they are without authority and can sustain only an advisory relation in dealing with the problems to be solved. Much education will be necessary to prepare the people for adjustments sought.

The understanding of the writer is that those who composed the comity conference were not there to speak with authority. The Home Missions Council and the Council of that those present understood they were there with any such authoriy. The Home Missoins Council and the Council of Women for Home Missions held their meetings on Monday and Tuesday following. These will be considered in another letter.

J. M. Sheridan.

THE CHURCH A MEANS TO A GREATER END

At a church meeting which I recently attended, most of the talks made had for their principal theme the Methodist Protestant Church. Almost without exception the speakers' line of thought was, What can we do to increase the prestige of the Methodist Protestant Church? The suggestion I received was that the church is an end rather than a means to an end. It seemed to me that the matter was approached from the wrong end—in homely phrase, the cart was placed before the horse. Instead of devoting our thought and effort to making of the denomination a church, to satisfy our ambitions and give it a "place in the sun," should we not consider how to make the church contribute more to Christianity, to better the community which it serves, and generally to aid in the elevation of mankind?

It may be argued that these things can be accomplished by building up the church, but that would be to approach the subject indirectly. One who devotes his time and effort to a search for happiness does not find it. Happiness comes as the natural result of making others happy—of forgetting oneself in the interest of others. In the same way the church will grow and prosper as a sequence of doing the work within its sphere without thought as to how the church will be affected.

Instead of thinking, How will this movement contribute to the church's growth? should we not think, How can the church help this movement? For instance, missions, community elevation, education, alleviation of suffering, promoting righteous living. Should we not, instead of seeking to serve the church, use the church in the service of humanity? By doing this, the church will inevitably grow strong and be a power for good. The prestige of the church should come as a result of its service to the world; and, only in ratio to its contributions to the need of the world has it a right to exist. The question is sometimes asked, What is the matter with the church? Is not the answer found in the foregoing?

OUR STORY PAGE

THE CAVE

There were very few people at Rock Beach because it was too early in the season, but Donald and Dorothy did not mind that. In fact, they thought it was a good thing. In the first place, they were just getting over whooping cough and if there had been a lot of people around, they would have had to stay away from them. In the second place, they did not have to dress up when there was nobody to see how they looked.

Miss Jordan, an old school teacher, very deaf and absent-minded, came with them and, of course, their old nurse, Mary Casey. Dad and mother and the baby stayed behind in the city.

Every day when it was nice, the children were allowed on the beach to play, and Miss Jordan would sit down with a book, or Mary Casey would bring her grape-vine edging which she had been making for years, and keep an eye on the children while they played.

One day a stranger came to where Donald and Dorothy were. He was a boy about nine years old, and he stood watching their play with a little smile on his face, as if he were saying: "Very nice but childish!"

"Why don't you go away and make your own sand castles?" said Donald at last. "It's rude to stare."

"Oh, I've made so many sand castles I don't get any fun out of it any more," replied the strange boy.

"Well, if you haven't had whooping cough, you'd better go away from us," said Dorothy.

"I've had it," said the boy. "I've had everything—measles, mumps, diphtheria, scarlet fever, chicken-pox, water-on-the-knee."

"Well, then," said Donald, "come on and play with us."

"I never play here," said the strange boy.

"Why not?" asked Dorothy.

"It's not exciting enough," replied the boy with a yawn.

Of course the children wanted to know where he did play, and when he replied: "In the cave," they were filled with curiosity. They had not known there was a cave.

"We'll ask Miss Jordan can you take us to it," said Donald, racing up the beach to where his old friend sat with her favorite book.

Donald talked very loudly, but the moaning of the sea, or maybe the wind, made Miss Jordan's hearing duller than usual. She thought he said: "May we go paddling in the waves?" But what he said was: "May we go exploring in the cave?" So she said "yes," because it was quite a nice balmy day with a land breeze.

Off ran Donald and Dorothy with their new companion, who said his name was Fisher.

They soon came to a big pile of rocks towering above their heads, which at high tide was partly covered with water. Up among the rocks was a small hole into which the new boy led them. When they got clear inside, they found quite a large cave, very dark and mysterious with a pool in the middle.

"The exciting part," explained Fisher, "is not getting caught in here when the tide comes in, because if you do get caught in here, you would either get drowned, or else you would have to hang yourself up on the roof until the water ebbed."

"Maybe we better go out now," said Dorothy, nervously.

"Oh, you needn't be in a hurry," said Fisher. "You get a warning. First you hear the water hissing outside. That's the first warning. Then there are several waves come in. The first one is usually real little and only covers your feet. You can easily get out before the big ones get in."

"I don't like it," said Dorothy. "I guess I'll stay outside and watch. When I see the waves coming, I'll call you."

"You see there's a house on top of this rock," said Fisher. "There's a cross old man lives in the house, and he carries a cane with a gold knob, and one time when I stayed on the rock too long and got chased up by the tide, he hit me with the cane."

"Well, I certainly don't like it here," said Dorothy. "Let's go back, Don."

But Donald had no notion of going back yet. He liked excitement, caves and adventure. He almost wished the old man with the cane would chase him over the rocks. That's the way Donald was—afraid of nothing. Dorothy was different. She went and sat on a rock outside the cave and worried.

"The tide is coming in," she called every once in a while, but the boys paid no attention to her.

Pretty soon she heard the water hiss and a wave unrolled itself at her feet like a long carpet, one end of which slid into the mouth of the cave. She jumped up with a little cry and putting her head into the cave she called: "Donald! Donald!"

There was no reply. At first Dorothy felt like running into the cave to warn the boys, then she thought, "Fisher said they could hang from the roof. Donald is a good climber and I'm not. If I go in they might drown trying to save me."

So instead of going in, she ran as fast as she could to Miss Jordan and shouted in her ear that the boys were trapped in the cave. Of course, the poor lady was very much frightened. There was nobody on the beach, but Dorothy said: "There's an old gentleman in the house on top with a cane and he chases people, but maybe he would know what to do." So they hurried to the big house on top of the pile of rocks.

Meanwhile the boys were having plenty of excitement. They had not heard Dorothy call them, because Donald had coaxed Fisher to explore the cave with him and they had gone deeper and deeper, squirming along a very small passage and coming out into another cavern, very black and dark. Fisher struck matches and they found themselves in a glistening weird place fit for a pirate den. Just then, Fisher cried: "Gee, listen to that! Look!"

He had heard the water hissing along the small passage by which they had come, and now he pointed to the floor which had suddenly become covered with cold sea water.

"We can't go back," he said, "we'll have to find a place to hang ourselves up."

"Maybe we can go on," said Donald, in a scared voice.

They found another opening in the cave hither than the one they had crept through, so they stumbled along it, feeling real scared now.

"I oughtn't to have let you come in here," said Fisher. "We may get drowned and what'll your sister say?"

Donald cried a little, but he did not let Fisher know, and Fisher cried too, but he was careful not to let Donald find it out.

Meanwhile there was great excitement above the ground. Miss Jordan had told the old gentleman about the boys, and he had telephoned for the Coast Guard at the Lighthouse. Then he had come out with his hired man and a long rope to try to do what he could to rescue the boys.

They were hurrying out of the house when suddenly a head appeared under the porch steps.

"Fisher!" cried Dorothy.

Fisher ducked back hastily when he saw his old enemy, the gentleman with the cane, but the old gentleman hastened down and called: "Come out, you scalawag!" so fiercely that out came Fisher's head again.

"What are you doing under my porch?" shouted the old gentleman, shaking his cane.

"I don't know, sir," replied the boy.

He came out very unwillingly, and when he was asked where Donald was he shook his head.

"He does know!" cried Dorothy. "Oh, please, tell us, Fisher!"

Fisher made no reply, but just then another head came out from under the porch steps. You see, Fisher was sure the old man was going to use his cane, and he thought he had better not tell on Donald.

When they had explained their adventures and Donald had said:

"We just went on and on until we saw a bit of light. Then we shoved away some rocks and earth and found ourselves in a place with boards over our heads. When we heard voices, we crept along and here we are!"

"I've lived here eighteen years and never knew there was a cave down under me!" exclaimed the old gentleman.

He did not use his cane, and seemed on the whole rather pleased with the boys. They all went into his house, which was full of curious and interesting objects of every kind which the old gentleman had been collecting all his life.

"You may use the cave all you like," he said, "but only at low tide. In fact, I think I'd like to go through it myself."

Later Fisher said to Donald:

"Now, isn't that queer! He's quite jolly and acts like a kid himself. Maybe he was chasing me for fun that day!"

"Well, anyhow, he's given Miss Jordan his grandfather's old ear-trumpet, so I guess she'll know where we are after this!" said Dorothy.—Selected.

SIX YOUNG "REBEKAHS"

"Let's hold out and not go when the invitation is given." Such were the rallying words of a half-dozen 16-year-old girls as they met and sat together, many years ago, in a country meeting-house. The evangelist had been giving himself in earnest appeals for more than a week without any response from the unconverted. It seemed that Satan held them fast. The six girls who had banded themselves together to withstand every offer of salvation were blocking the way.

One evening the preacher spoke from the text: "Wilt thou go with this man? And she said, I will go." He pictured the appeal to Rebekah to leave the delightful associations of her parental home and to go far away to meet Isaac, the noble son of the greatest man of that age. He praised Rebekah's quick, firm choice, and described the joyful meeting of these two young people and the establishment of their happy home, founded on the purest love. Then he made an appeal which deeply stirred the hearts of the six girls. He showed that God is calling every unsaved one to a new life of divine love, filled with holy service and sustained by indescribable joy. The attractions of this new life, he said, make one willing to give up, if necessary, any human association.

One of the girls followed the preacher's vivid description so intently and felt the force of his appeal so deeply that, without looking round at her companions, she stepped out and went to the front during the invitation hymn, saying in her heart, "I'll give up all to go to meet my Saviour and to share with Him a life of love, and service, and joy." When she reached the front she found, to her surprise, that all her five companions had followed her down the aisle to surrender themselves also to Jesus! The grip of Satan on the unconverted ones was broken that evening and many others came to take Jesus as their Lord.

The girl who stepped out first and answered the call was my mother. Now she is past 80 years of age and is waiting to hear the final call; and she is ready to answer, "I will go." Her constant advice is, "Accept the Lord Jesus in your youth, and service Him all your days."—Henry D. Allen.

A MISSIONARY'S PLEA

Will you pray for us? Each day we need your prayers, for the way is rough and long, and our lips falter and forget their song, as we proclaim the Word men will not heed. Pray for us! We are but vessels frail; the world's appalling need would crush us down, save that in vision we behold the crown, upon His brow Who shall at length prevail! Not yet, the crowning fields must first be won, lives freely yielded, martyr blood be spilt, love cast out fear, redemption blot out guilt, ere we behold the kingdom of God's Son. We shall behold it! Lo, His Word stands sure; our King shall triumph in a world set free. With joy His chosen ones His reign shall see! Pray for us, friends, that we may still endure.—The Missionary Review of the World.

LEADERS OBEY FIRST

"If you two girls were boys," said Uncle Frank, "I think Marian would stand the better chance of becoming the general of an army." His 12-year-old niece, Margery, turned questioning eyes on him. Her twin sister, Marian, had just run upstairs in answer to mother's "Come up here, girls."

"Yes," continued Uncle Frank, "people who are advanced to positions of command are those who have learned first to obey. Marian went at once in response to Mother's call, and mother is still waiting for Margery."

Margery was off like an arrow.

Perhaps the girl who drops into slack habits of obedience hardly realizes how much she is limiting her own future. If we cannot make ourselves obey a call, how can we lead others? Positions requiring leadership and control have to be given to those who themselves have first learned to obey. Be a general in your own heart. Make yourself drop at once the thing you are doing to do the thing which you are asked to do. —Queen's Gardens.

—Ur of Chaldea, the first home of Abraham, is the scene of excavations carried on by the University of Pennsylvania, in collaboration with an English company of antiquarians. Some important recent finds are reported. The tomb of a queen who lived before the days of Abraham has been unearthed. In it are the bones of the queen and the metal remains (gold and silver) of articles of woman's apparel. Some of the interesting relics found will be placed in the museum of the University of Pennsylvania. Others will go to England for preservation there. Brick and stone arches are found, proving that men understood the principle of the arch in that remote period.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Asheville.—Brother Casto's message at the communion service Sunday morning was instructive and inspiring. The occasion was enjoyed by all present. Nearly every one communed.

Brother Van Meter gave us another one of his delightful messages at the evening service.

There is a plan on foot to focus the interest of the church on the Wednesday night prayer meeting. This Wednesday night will be taken up with the second quarterly conference.

On Tuesday night of this week our Christian Endeavor Society will give a Valentine party to the adults and their friends.

Our young people have improved some of the Sunday school rooms. Calcimine and paint have been used freely. A new rug has been placed in one class room. The committee worked until almost midnight the most of last week and were happy for the privilege.

Mrs. M. F. Taylor and Mrs. Martha Bates are confined at home with illness.

Mrs. Everhart will entertain our missionary societies this Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. E. C. Fawcett was missed at the services Sunday because of a slight illness.

REPORTER.

English Street.—There has been no report from this church for some weeks, but we are not sleeping. We haven't such a large number, but they are a band of faithful workers. I think our Sunday school is growing, but we hope to see it much larger and more interest taken. We have many little folks in Sunday school to train for the Master's work, and we pray that the teachers may be inspired with wisdom from God to prepare their minds for good seeds.

Last Sunday morning Rev. C. B. Way, of Lexington, filled the pulpit in the absence of our pastor and gave us a good sermon from the subject of "Abiding in Christ." On Sunday afternoon they had an old-time singing and every one seemed to sing praises from the depths of their souls.

Our church seems to be well protected as far as the law is concerned, as three of our city policemen are active members of the church, including the chief, who believes in carrying his part and more in the church's activities; but we are sorry to report that Chief Roy Gibson is in the Guilford General Hospital suffering from a flesh wound in the hip and elbow, received Sunday afternoon when he and Patrolman Robbins and a man under the influence of whiskey were in a gun battle. All were able to leave the hospital after having their wounds dressed with the exception of the chief; he is reported to be resting nicely.

The Christian Endeavor met in its monthly business session on Friday night of last week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Lee. Much interest was aroused and several new vows were made to be more active in the Endeavor work. After the business was over the young people were invited into the living room and an hour of fun and frolic directed by Mrs. Lee and Miss Iris Caudle was enjoyed by all. Then "Cupid" with a bow and arrow directed them into the dining room where a fruit supper was served.

From these monthly meetings the Endeavorers expect as much inspiration as they do from anything else. The Valentine scheme was carried throughout.

We ask an interest in your prayers. Goodbye until the next edition of the Herald.

High Point.—At the Sunday school hour last Sunday the opening program in the assembly room was in charge of the Junior Philathea Class, Miss Gertrude Hughes, teacher.

At the 11 o'clock service, for the offertory Miss St. Clair of the college faculty rendered "La Cygne," by Saint-Saens, on the violin in a charming manner, and Mesdames John C. Whitesell and C. R. Hinshaw sang a beautiful duet, "Still With Thee, O My God," Marston. Dr. S. K. Spahr delivered a very timely and forceful sermon on "A Challenge and a Promise." The great challenge is "Bring ye all the tithes into the store-house, that there may be meat in mine house," and the promise is, "I will open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it." The church of God is His store-house, and in it must be provision for all needs of the world, material, intellectual, and spiritual. All the great movements of the world have come out of the church: but it is dependent upon the people to bring gifts to it. Its needs cannot be met by the ministry alone, the sweet singers, or dignitaries, but all the people must bring their tithes and offerings, and lay them upon the altars. Dr. Spahr related an incident of his young manhood when a theological student at Adrian College, Mich. He was asked to go out and preach on Sunday afternoons in the country during the summer vacation. After delivering eight sermons the brethren "passed the hat" and found it contained the magnificent sum of 96 cents! Whereupon an old brother arose and exclaimed: "Thank God salvation is free!" As to the promise, "The blessing of God maketh rich and addeth no sorrow."

A number of friends from West End church, Greensboro, came over last Tuesday to give Mrs. E. L. Ballard a surprise party on her birthday, February 7th.

The Ladies' Aid Society held its monthly meeting Monday afternoon at the church. The vice-president, Mrs. S. S. Coe, was in the chair. Announcement of a play to be given in March was made. After the business session, refreshments of cream and cake adorned with hearts suggestive of the Valentine season were served.

A very interesting and harmonious quarterly conference was held last Wednesday evening, February 8. A committee was appointed to make plans for the Centennial Gratitude Gift.

The Brotherhood will hold its monthly meeting next Thursday evening, and supper will be served to them by Mrs. H. U. Oakes' circle at 6:15 p. m.

The C. E. Society gave a Valentine social Monday evening, when "A Trip Around the World" was made. There was a good attendance.

Dean P. E. Lindley of the college is conducting the Sunday evening services during February. His sermons are always greatly enjoyed and appreciated.

We are pleased to see Mrs. W. P. Pickett, Mrs. A. A. York and Mrs. D. E. White out again after being ill for several weeks.

Dr. and Mrs. S. S. Coe went to Madison Sunday afternoon to visit Mr. and Mrs. Victor H. Idol. Mrs. Idol's father, Mr. C. B. Pratt, a prominent and well known citizen of Madison, died quite suddenly Sunday morning, and the funeral was conducted Monday afternoon.

Enfield.—The following is a simple quotation, yet has a big truth or moral for any individual or organization:

"Good, better, best,
Never let it rest,
Until the good is better
And the better best."

I believe our church has caught the spirit of this verse; for better results are visible.

We had services morning and evening the fifth Sunday in January. The services were good and worshipful although the attendance was not very large, due to the extremely cold day. We did not have preaching the first Sunday as our pastor was at Whitakers Chapel. Last Sunday was a good day, both at church and Sunday school. There was good attendance at each service and two fine sermons.

We were glad to have some visitors present. Come again, your presence helps us!

Our pastor has been instrumental in organizing a Senior Christian Endeavor. We have had some splendid meetings. Last week it met at the "Hut," with Mrs. Powers as leader. More were present than at any meeting yet.

I observed the note by the editor, and also by a layman asking for brevity of reports. "A hint to the wise should be sufficient."

MRS. ELI S. BELLAMY, Reporter.

Union Chapel, Granville Charge.—Our missionary societies met with Mrs. Cappie Edwards January 27th. We had a large number of our members present and several visitors. Mrs. W. A. Perdue, chairman of Circle No. 2, had charge of the program. Mr. Fogleman gave the chapter in the study book which took up literature and pictures. Mrs. Norwood White conducted the question box.

We were very glad to have Dr. Straughan, of Washington, D. C., with us the first Sunday afternoon. He presented to us the Centennial Gratitude Gift, which has been presented to all the conferences.

The ladies of the missionary societies gave their annual thank-offering service the second Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Cappie Edwards told us about the work at Pine Ridge, Ky. Miss Leah Davis made a talk on what our duty is in the missionary enterprise. Mr. Fogleman told us about the work at Bethel Home. Miss Emily Floyd gave a brief report of the work in Japan, China and India. Mrs. R. M. Edwards read an article on stewardship. Mildred Edwards, in her usual charming manner, sang, "Give Me Thy Heart." Miss Eunice Huff told the story of Mrs. Pickett's thank-offering box. Christine Edwards gave a reading, "The Point of View," and Mrs. L. E. Barnes told us the value of the Missionary Record and urged the members to take it. The offering was $20.20.

We are glad to report that we are going to have electric lights in our church within a few weeks. REPORTER.

P. S.: Something has been said about being brief, and I am glad, as I do not think we should take up too much space with these reports. I will try to be brief next time.

Piney Grove, Denton Charge.—Brother Bingham preached yesterday afternoon to a very large congregation of attentive hearers. He spoke of our Centennial Gratitude Gift, which he made very plain.

Of course we're very proud of the progress that our church has made, and to show our gratitude to our forefathers and mothers who have stood by the church and made it what it is today and what many of us are, we owe to them for their faithfulness to God and church. We raised our quota yesterday, which was $24.00, some given in honor of fathers and mothers who have gone on to receive their crown of glory for their faithfulness.

We are proud of our church and our Sunday school to raise their quota the first Sunday it was presented, and am sure if we think of God's goodness to us, although we think we did well, we still are far behind in gratitude and thankfulness to God for our blessings day by day.

May we try harder to do more each day and week as opportunities come to us to show our gratitude for His goodness.

Our Sunday school is moving along very well, with good interest, and we hope as the weather opens up that we may have many more at Sunday school.

Pray for us at Piney Grove that we may do something worth while.

Very glad to have some visitors yesterday Mr. and Mrs. Van Wood were with us. This is Mrs. Wood's home church. We appreciate her donation for the Gratitude Gift.

REPORTER.

Calvary.—Brother Bates asked me to serve as reporter this year and I have agreed to do so. Brother Bates is giving us some fine sermons. There have already been several additions to the church this conference year. We were please to have Brother and Sister R. W. Crowder and family, who have recently moved here from Apex, N. C., join us a few Sundays ago.

Brother and Mrs. Bates are doing some fine work here and have already endeared themselves to the entire membership of the church.

The Sunday school under the leadership of John W. Dixon and his corps of teachers and workers is growing rapidly. On February 5 the Sunday school passed the 200 mark for the first time. On that Sunday there were 205 present. On last Sunday there were 212 present.

The Senior C. E. Society, through the faithfulness of Miss Josie Causey, Miss Ila Burrow, Brother Wagoner and others, is doing nicely. They are having 50 young people present each Sunday evening and they are making the meetings worth while.

On Monday night the boys in Miss Josie Causey's Sunday school class, their dads and a few invited guests met in the church hut and held a father and son banquet. They spent a very enjoyable evening. Brother Robert Crowder and his string band furnished fine music for the occasion. There was a fine address given by our pastor. Some of the boys gave recitations. Various games were played during the evening.

I could fill columns with an account of the activities of the various organizations of the church but we will not ask Dr. McCulloch for any more space at this time.

With one of the best preachers in the N. C. conference, with a faithful, active membership and an unlimited field in which to work, we are expecting great things of Calvary. Watch these columns. We are doing things and will let you hear from us from time to time. Pray for us.

A. C. DIXON, Reporter.

Denton Charge, Canaan Church.—Pastor Bingham's sermon was just fine Sunday. He can make things plain and simple. He told us many things about our church and its organizations. We love our church because of its loyalty, and we as Methodist Protestants should take advantage of the Gratitude Gift as a token of our love to our church and its hundredth year. Brother Bingham after his fine sermon Sunday gave our people a chance to show their love to our church, and in just a few minutes we raised our portion pledged as a Gratitude Gift. Everybody seems to rejoice over this gift.

May God bless our church and our charge. May we do our best in our Sunday school. People at Canaan, let's wake up to the sense of our duty and be what God wants us to be.

REPORTER.

Hope, Chatham Charge.—Sunday was a good day for us. We had a good attendance at Sunday school and some new members, which now makes an enrollment of 101. We are glad to have Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Andrew back in Sunday school again. They have been unable to attend since Christmas on account of sickness. We were sorry that our superintendent, Mr. J. L. Fields, was kept away Sunday on account of cold.

We are glad that Mrs. Isley is out again She has been suffering from cold and a bruised arm.

At 11 o'clock, Rev. D. I. Garner, pastor of English Street M. P. church, preached to a large and appreciative audience. He brought us a stirring message on the subject of prayer. We certainly enjoyed having Brother Garner with us and hope he will come again At the close of the service two new members were received into the church by our pastor. Dr. and Mrs. A. C. Burkhad joined by letter from the Methodist Episcopal church, San ford, N. C. Communion was also observed at this service.

The Christian Endeavor from the M. P church, Siler City, came down at 6:30 and rendered a splendid program, which was thoroughly enjoyed by a large crowd. At the close of the program the president turned the meeting over to Mrs. A. G. Dixon, who organized a Christian Endeavor Society for our church. The following officers were elected: President, Miss Willard Boyd; secretary, Miss Gladys White; treasurer, Mr. W J. Moore. These officers, with Rev. C. G Isley, were made a committee to appoint othe: officers or committees that might be needed Mrs. Dixon then talked very interestingly for a while on missionary work. Her talk was indeed instructive as well as entertaining. At the close of this service she enlisted 15 members in a missionary society. Mrs. Dixon promised to meet with us the fourth Sunday afternoon for the purpose of organizing a Woman's Missionary Society. He hope that you may hear from us later in regard to these new societies. REPORTER.

Notice.—I am domiciled in the M. E. par sonage at Aurelian Springs. It seems very much like home to me as I have lived many of my wandering days in parsonages. I may not stay the term of four years. The people were very kind to us and furnished hands and trucks to move us.

We are near one of the best schools in the state.

If the Herald, of any person, desires to reach us by mail, Littleton, N. C., Route 2, is our address. H. S. B. THOMPSON.

Bessemer City Church.—We are doing very well at present. We had services Sunday evening. Our pastor, Rev. Mr. Henderson, was with us for C. E. Society services and also preached a very interesting sermon.

We have a very good Sunday school. We have been having contests between the Baraca and Philathea classes which keep them interested and are sometimes very amusing.

Our C. E. Society is a great help to the church. We hope to have a very successful year and to be at our best for the Master. Pray for us that we may continue to press onward to the mark of the high calling which is in Christ Jesus.

"Come, Holy Spirit, Heavenly Dove,
In all Thy quickening powers,
Kindle a flame of sacred love
In these cold hearts of ours."

We feel a deep interest in our pastor, Bro. Henderson, as he is one of our boys. We wish to extend a hearty welcome to pastor and family.

The Ladies' Aid Society is planning to present a play some time in the future. Title, "Old-Fashioned Mother." We hope it will be a success. LUCY BLANTON, Reporter.

Harmony Church, Yarborough Charge.—Our pastor filled his appointment the fourth Sunday morning and Sunday night, delivering two good sermons.

We were glad to have our president with us the fifth Sunday night, at which time our quarterly meeting was held.

Our Sunday school is progressing very nicely.

The Woman's Missionary Society met with Mrs. G. B. Taylor the fourth Saturday afternoon after which cake and hot chocolate were served. REPORTER.

Corinth, Littleton Circuit.—Yesterday was our regular preaching day, but it seems that we have gotten out of the habit of having services on first Sundays. Our pastor was not present yesterday as he was attending the conference drive at Henderson. But two of our ex-pastors were present—Rev. H. S. B. Thompson gave us a fine lecture on Sunday school work. While he was talking, Rev. O'Briant came in. It seemed natural for Mr. O'Briant to be there. He was asked to preach, but he said he would preach some other time. We extend to them both a hearty welcome, and want them to come again. Rev. Thompson has recently moved into this community. We would be glad to have him and him family come to our Sunday school.

Bonney McCoy Morris has finished his stenographic course at Norfolk, Va., and has returned home. We are glad to have him back at Sunday school.

We were glad to see Miss Bettie Mae Walker at church yesterday. She has recently had a tonsil operation at Rocky Mount hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Morris visited their daughter at Farmville recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Tommie Pepper have moved from Norfolk, Va., and are living with his mother near here.

Macedonia, Why Not Circuit.—I had the pleasure to go to Macedonia and heard our new pastor preach a great sermon. Those who know Brother Trogdon know he is a great man. He may see this and wonder why we call him great and he may not feel great, but I feel any man that has been called of God to preach the gospel is a great man. As we sit and listen to him we can surely believe he is a great man sent from God.

We built an addition to our church last year that cost us about $1,200 and now we are preparing to paint same as soon as spring opens up; think while this is done we will paint the old part again. We are not rich people here but all of this material is paid for. We do not boast, but praise God. We are proud of our little band of faithful workers and we are proud of our pastor and we pledge to him our full co-operation.

As I think of our neighbor church, Love Joy, I want to congratulate them for their resolution of building a new church of brick. This church is noted for great revivals for many years, and I feel has been a great help to me. I want a little part in rebuilding this church and if some of the managers will write me the price of 1,000 brick I will send check at once. About 16 years ago I was a penitent at the altar there, the most miserable man in all the world and one of the most dangerous men. It was at that time a bootlegger and the people of Love Joy took a great interest in trying to get me to stop. I begged the people to pray, I begged God to forgive, and now I am one of the happiest men in all the world and one of the worst enemies the bootlegger has and, strange to say, some people say I am still in the business. God has been so good to me I want all the readers of this paper to rejoice with me. As the year 1927 passed out, I commenced to look back and count; I found I paid out $7.50 for doctor bills in a family of 12; as I looked at my family Bible I had 10 births recorded all in good health; three marriages and on the death sheet not a single one recorded. Haven't I got something to praise God for?

With best wishes to the editor and all Herald readers.

Yours in His name,

W. D. MOORE.

Burlington, First Church.—Our reports to the Herald have not been very regular, but this does not, by any means, say that we have been asleep on the job. The attendance at the Sunday school services yesterday, February 12, was very good. A glance at the register showed the following: Number on roll, 598; attendance today, 283; attendance a year ago, 153, making an increase over last year of 130. Offering, $20.49 as compared with that of one year ago, $11.44. Brother J. G. Rogers, the new superintendent, is seeing to it that we have the best of music in the Sunday school. The orchestra is fine indeed.

The morning preaching service was well attended. Our pastor, Brother Gerringer, preached a good sermon, as usual. His subject for the 11 o'clock service was, "The Stewardship of Life." The attendance at the evening service was not as good as that in the morning. We believe this decrease in attendance was due to the fact that the revival at the First Presbyterian church was coming to a close last night.

The Christian Endeavor Society, with Miss Bertha Isley as president, is moving on very well, it seems. The attendance last night was good and we are hoping to build up a large, working society during the coming weeks.

The Baraca Class, with Mr. W. E. Smith as president, and Mr. C. C. Branson, as teacher, is making some progress, we trust. The goal for each Sunday this year is "A Hundred Strong." Attendance yesterday was 80; offering, $8.78, and enrollment of 178.

The regular monthly business meeting of the church was held Wednesday, February 8, following a brief devotional service by the pastor at 7:30 p. m. Many things of interest for the church were discussed at this time and we are looking forward to a good conference year.

We are sorry to hear of Bro. John Quakenbush falling and meeting with perhaps serious injury. We are praying for his recovery.

Best wishes to the Herald and readers.

L. A. Braxton, Assistant Reporter.

Graham.—Due to the fact that the reporter has been very busy, a report has not been sent in since conference; so I should like to say that it was indeed a pleasure for us to have our beloved pastor, Rev. D. R. Williams, back with us for another year. He and his wife have been a great help to our church and community and we should feel lost without them.

Our Sunday school is doing fine under the splendid leadership of Supt. J. L. Amick. An intermediate class of boys has grown so much recently that it became necessary to devise means for the enlargement of a class room for them. This is very encouraging and we feel that Brother C. E. Core, teacher of this class, deserves some credit for the growth of the class.

The choir has been doing some good work recently. Mr. P. S. Dixon has proved to be a very efficient choir leader and the several special selections he has been arranging have been very good and enjoyed by all.

A few of the young ladies of the church met at the parsonage the third Monday evening in January and organied a Home Missionary Society. The society is sponsored by Mrs. D. R. Williams. We hope to see these young people do some splendid work in missions.

The Ladies' Aid Society and Foreign Missionary Society met in their regular monthly meeting Monday, February 6, with Mrs. Norman E. Sykes. There was a good attendance, the program was splendid, and the ladies spent a very pleasant afternoon.

REPORTER.

Concord.—The Cowell-Ramsey meeting got under way here Sunday. The church was packed at both services. Mr. Hendry preached at the morning hour from the subject, "What Then?" He pointed out some of the great things that have happened after prayer. At this service the altar was filled with those desiring reconsecration. Mr. Cowell filled the pulpit at the night service, preaching a splendid sermon on "God's Recipe for a Revival." Mr. Ramsey will arrive today (Monday) and direct the singing. We are hope for a great in-gathering of souls during this meeting.

The Brotherhood meeting and supper was held last Thursday night. President Taylor was present and brought a wonderful message on brotherhood and what it stands for.

The Intermediate department of the Sunday school held a social on last Friday night in the dining hall of the new Sunday school building. Many interesting games were played, after which refreshments were served.

MRS. D. A. McLAURIN.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—Today being our regular preaching day, our pastor, Rev. G. B. Feree, preached to a good congregation; his subject was "The Crucifixion of Christ." Such messages should stir us to deeper consecration. Brother Ferree spoke to us for a few minutes on the Centennial Gratitude Gift. We also raised $32 in pledges on A. C. B. We hope to raise the full amount by the last of the month.

There was no preaching service at night on account of sickness in the pastor's family.

Sickness has greatly hindered us in our work this winter. Mrs. B. A. McClimon, who underwent a very serious operation some time ago, and Misses Ethel and Kate Compton, who have been sick, were able to be back in church services today.

On January 30th our community was saddened by the death of Mrs. Emma Fowler. She was a sister of our Sunday school superintendent, Mr. B. A. McCliman.

REPORTER.

Alleghany, Davidson Charge.—We were glad to see as many out at Sunday school as were present.

Brother Ridge preached a good sermon, as always. He told us that money is not all that we have to give. We should give our love. We should try to encourage all. We can speak a kind word to all; a kind word when we are sick does us a lot of good.

We will have preaching the second Sunday in March at 2 o'clock. After that time we will have morning preaching again. Let us all try to do our best.

ABIGAIL COGGIN, Reporter.

Pleasant Grove.—Our congregations Sunday were reasonably good, but some were out because of sickness.

Mrs. B. E. Kennedy has taken her bed again with flu. Mrs. J. R. Meredith has been right sick, but is improving. Bro. J. Maynard Kennedy has been suffering for several days with an ulcer in one of his eyes. At this writing he is better. Miss Margaret Cecil and Mrs. Lawrence Cecil are rapidly recovering from an operation for appendicitis. We hope soon to have all these at their usual places in church.

Our C. G. G. committee is now at work and we expect to make a creditable showing the fourth Sunday. The pastor expects to exchange pulpits with Rev. N. G. Bethea on that date. Brother Bethea has been here before and our people will be delighted to have him come again. GEO. L. REYNOLDS.

Charlotte Church, Richland Circuit.—Our pastor, Mr. Love, filled his appointment the first Sunday in February at 11 o'clock. His text was Romans 13 chapter and 1st verse.

Our first quarterly conference will be held at the parsonage on Saturday afternoon before the fourth Sunday in February.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wright and children, of High Point, were present at church Sunday.

Mr. R. E. Mabe and family, of Asheboro, were also present.

Mr. Glenn McCain, of this community, and Mill Fleta Briles, of Asheboro, were married, February 4th, 1928.

Since our last report Mrs. Frank Prevost, of Randleman, was buried at our church. Mrs. Prevost, with her husband, were keepers of the county home for several years and had many friends in this community.

REPORTER.

Grace Church, Greensboro.—The Ladies' Aid Society met in the church parlor Monday afternoon, February 13.

The devotionals were conducted by Mrs. J. M. Millikan. The report of the treasurer showed the society in good financial condition. The question of placing a bulletin board on the church grounds was taken up and a committee was appointed to look after the purchasing of same. The society is divided this year into four circles, which seems to work well as each circle brought in new members at this meeting, six new members being added.

The Home Missionary Society met Tuesday evening with Mrs. T. D. Sharpe at her home on Percy street. Mrs. J. M. Millikan, president, presided. The devotional exercise was conducted by the pastor's wife. The book telling the story of the life of our own mountain people is being studied and two chapters were read and discussed. The discussion was led by Mrs. J. C. Penny.

A splendid musical program given by Misses Boyles and McQueen was very much appreciated.

The Ladies' Aid Society entertained the Junior Christian Endeavor Society at a Valentine party Monday evening in the hut.

About 40 boys and girls were present and from the beginning fun and frolic held forth. Under the direction of Miss Grace Thomas, superintendent of the Junior Society, interesting games were played.

Ice cream in the shape of hearts was served.

Our church is realizing more and more the good work Miss Thomas is doing among our boys and girls in thes Junior Society.

MORE ABOUT CONFERENCE GROUP INSURANCE

There are to my way of thinking two good and sufficient reasons why we ministers of the North Carolina Conference should take the conference group insurance:

First, because this is the cheapest protection that any of us can secure. The yearly premiums will be approximately twenty dollars, sixty per cent to be paid by the insured and the other forty per cent by the Annual Conference. The insured has the privilege of paying the entire amount of his premium but the forty per cent will have to be paid through the Annual Conference.

Second, because this is the only form of insurance that a number of our men, especially the older men, can secure.

The men who have declined so far to subscribe for this insurance doubtless think they have a valid reason for not doing so. However, I have failed to see any good reason for declining this proposition. The insurance company met every condition we contended for. No better proposition, it seems to me, will ever be made us. All of our ministers, including professors, missionaries, and superannuates are eligible. No medical examination is required. We only have to state that we are in good health or something to that effect.

The Annual Conference approved this insurance and voted to lay an assessment upon the charges to take care of the forty per cent premiums. The only thing that is now holding this matter up is the fact that a sufficient number of our men have not returned their application or information cards. When this is done the insurance can be put in force and the budget council can meet and levy the necessary amount to provide for the forty per cent of premiums.

I had thought I would say nothing more about this matter but because I think we are about to let a fine opportunity get away from us I am breaking into print again about it. Please mail your information cards to Dr. J. Emmett Sebrell, Charlotte, N. C., Box 809. Or if you have misplaced the card, write him, stating that you want the insurance and he will send another card.

L. W. GERRINGER,

NOTICE

Rev. J. Clyde Auman, Enfield, N. C., was elected by the Annual Conference to serve as treasurer of the following special funds:

Fund for Delegates' expenses to the General Conference.

Fund for Church Extension pledged at Conference and to be pledged in response to the President's appeals.

ANOTHER PLEA FOR BREVITY

"Plea for Brevity," by "Layman," in last week's Herald is timely. Like him, "I have read the Herald since Vol. 1, No. 1," and I have to know the writer personally if I ever read a long drawn out article; even then it must be very interesting. "Pastors might stick a pin here." I would say "ought" instead of "might."

People don't have to read a long article in any paper, but often have to hear (or stay away from church, as some do) a long drawn out sermon. After 10 or 15 minutes' preliminaries, and in the wind-up all that has been said worth listening to could have been boiled down and said in 30 minutes. Let some of our pastors try this and I am sure they will have larger congregations, more attentive hearers, and more real good accomplished. There are few, if any, laymen that have room for a long one.

—In the list of goals for Herald subscriptions Liberty-Siler City has appeared as Siler City. This was the way the committee wrote it for brevity. But Liberty has had its part in making up the fine total reported by Brother Dixon from these twin churches. It is with Liberty as with some other churches: not many new subscriptions can be obtained because nearly every family is already taking the paper.

—Bro. D. H. Hunter disposed of his estate by will. Six hundred dollars form a trust fund for Tabernacle church for the care of certain graves; Angeline Causey will receive $400, Abram McMasters, $100, and the residue will be divided among the four grandsons, Guy Hunter, the oldest grandson, to be executor.

—Mrs. Pritchard, of Mt. Pleasant charge, was among the visitors at Calvary church last Sunday.

New churches added in this report, 1.

One new charge is added to the list this week. The charges that now have credit are 65, leaving 27 charges without payment on either budget. One-quarter of the year gone, and 27 charges have made no response to that part of the conference program necessary to carry on the work of the church—the Budgets. They are going to, we are sure, but it would help so much if they could do something NOW. Church Extension obligations are pressing, and there are no funds. And besides, the inspiration of having every charge rallying to the Budgets would be of great value. Pastors and officials of the church, PLEASE give us this inspiration by quickly putting your charge in this list. This week we are glad to enroll Haw River Circuit, Brother Curry, pastor. Before the month is over we are very confident several new charges will be added. Whose?

"The earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof, and they that dwell therein."

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

Senior Topic for February 26: "How Much Does the World Want Christ?"

I

Plans for the Meeting

Plans are necessary for a good meeting. Plan a week ahead, not five minutes before the meeting. The five minutes before the meeting should be given to prayer. Have some members give the need of strengthening the missionary work by means of money, prayers, workers. Or have one or two discuss briefly, yet stimulatingly, "The World's Greatest Need—Jesus." This discussion to create interest and enthusiasm from the very beginning. Or as suggested by the C. E. Quarterly, "Have representatives of different countries appear in costume and present the appeal of each land for Christ."

II

Hints for the Leader

1. Many have the spirit of the man of Macedonia: "Come over and help us." They want peace. They want real, true success. They know that the world does not satisfy, but they believe that Jesus gives the "peace of God which passeth all understanding." They believe Him to be the the "Light of the world." They believe Him to be "the way, the truth, the life."

2. There are those who scoff Him. "He came to His own and His own received Him not." They scoff and reject Him because they will not see His beauty and experience, His transforming power.

3. Others say, "We will hear thee again of this matter." Not scoffers, nor entirely indifferent; but not convinced. Kind, gentle words, embued with the Holy Spirit of God plus a Christlike life will lead them to accept Christ as a personal Savior.

III

Pertaining to the Topic

"How Much Does the World Want Christ?" A more fitting question would be, "How Much Does the World Need Christ?" With the Secretary of the Navy asking for an appropriation large enough to have the "biggest yet" Navy; with military training in a large number of our schools and colleges and the militaristic spirit getting such a strong hold in our national life; with companionate marriage; with hatred and prejudice and the oppression of smaller nations; with a cold, indifferent religion which depends upon organization to carry forward the kingdom of God; with thousands in the slum districts, who do not even know about Jesus, the Savior of men; with millions across the seas who still bow down to gods of wood and stone, surely the paramount, most pertinent question is, "How Much Does the World Need Christ?" In fact, it isn't a question—it is a literal fact. Oh, World, with all your strife and problems, Christ is your greatest need. For He alone can calm your strife and solve your problems.

IV

Correlation With the S. S. Lesson

In today's S. S. Lesson you studied about another marvelous cure wrought by Jesus. A woman diseased for 12 years pressed through the crowd and touched the hem of His garment and was made whole because of her faith.

"The Great Physician now is near,
The sympathizing Jesus;
He speaks the drooping heart to cheer,
O hear the voice of Jesus!"

Have someone tell a story depicting the transforming power of Christ.

V

To Be Read and Commented On

The desire of the nations. John 12:20, 21.
Sought by the poor. Luke 2:15.
Eager seekers. Acts 17:11, 12.
Not wanted. Matt. 8:28-34.
Sought by the wise. Matt. 2: 1, 2.
Rejected for envy. Matt. 27:18.
Sought by the religious. Luke 2:25-32.

VI

Questions for Discussion

1. Do all church members manifest the Jesus way of living to the world?

2. Through what avenues may Jesus be given to the world?

3. How can you lead the world to realize its need of Jesus?

VII

Five-Minute Talk

Give the pastor five minutes in which to sum up all that has been said and to give his own thoughts on "Jesus, the World's Greatest Need."

VIII

Poetry to the Point

THE GOD WHO IS ENOUGH

The world keeps seeking for a way
To gain release
From war and strife and bitterness—
I have His peace.

The world goans 'neath its burdens,
Its eyes are dim;
It cannot find the rest it craves—
I rest in Him.

The world is hunting happiness,
Without alloy;
But happiness cannot be found—
He gives me joy.

The Storm Subdued

The story of Jesus and His disciples on the Sea of Galilee during a storm is a familiar one, and, though briefly recorded, contains important lessons. The incident is also recorded by the other two synoptics, Matthew and Luke.

The first thing we observe is that Jesus commanded that they should go to the other side. He wanted to get away from the multitude, and He had business in the country of the Gadarenes. It is often upon Jesus' bidding that we launch out on the sea of life, not knowing what we shall encounter. Sometimes we run into storms—fierce storms—and our frail barks are tossed to and fro by merciless adversity.

The second thing is that Jesus lay asleep in the storm-tossed boat. He feared not the angry elements. His Father in heaven was ruler over all, and they were safe. Our faith is more human and susceptible of wavering with life's vicissitudes. Yet, is it not true that with Jesus in our lives, though His presence may not always manifest itself in phenomenal ways, though He seems to be asleep, as it were, we are safe from the storms of life? When we know He is with us, what need we fear?

The third observation is the rude awakening He received and His calm action. Mark records that they said, "Master, carest thou not that we perish?" inferring that He did not care. Perhaps we are sometimes rude in addressing God, under the strain of trying circumstances and of wavering faith. Jesus seemed not to rebuke them for this, but for their lack of faith. Calmly and in simple language He spoke to the sea and the angry waves subsided. If we will but listen, He will speak peace to our troubled souls in distress, and there shall be "a great calm."

The Demoniac Delivered

Across the sea from Capernaum, on the wooded slopes of the hills, lived this fierce Gadarene, who possessed super-human strength and beast-like passions. No man was able to bind him. Children were warned to keep away from his haunts in the caves. He met Jesus when He stepped from the boat, and fell down and worshiped Him, acknowledging Him as the Son of God. Strange that devils recognized Jesus, when men of His day and this have renounced Him.

Jesus cast the demons out of the man and they were permitted to enter into the swine, which were destroyed by their wild plunge into the sea. The owners thereof, having heard of the arrival of Jesus and seen this miracle, were anxious for Him to depart, for He might destroy more of their possessions. To them, as to men today, worldly possessions were worth more than heavenly treasures. The pigs were more valuable than the man's soul. Jesus did depart. He doesn't remain where He is not wanted. But He left a disciple there who went about telling what great things the Lord had done for him. And men marvelled. Are we as zealous to tell what Jesus has done for us, as was this man who was delivered from the power of Satan?

The Powerful Physician

"The Great Physician now is near,
The sympathizing Jesus."

Passing over to the other side, a multitude met Him, among whom was a ruler of the synagogue, Jairus by name. This big man in religious circles condescended to ask Jesus to come to his home to heal his dying daughter. Sickness and death often drive the haughty to humble themselves before the God whom they have previously ignored. Jesus consented and followed the distressed father.

Suddenly He stopped. "Who touched me?" He demanded. What a foolish question, His disciples thought, and imparted their opinion to Him. How could He tell that any one person touched Him, when the crowd was pressing against Him on every hand? But the touch was different, for, like contact with a charged wire, it completed a circuit and power left Him. "I am guilty," said a trembling woman, as His searching eyes looked over the crowd and fell upon her. Confessing all to Him, she was made whole of an incurable disease, and the peace of Christ was implanted in her heart. She believed, and many in the crowd believed, that He had power to heal all infirmities.

The Life-Giving Lord

No doubt the delay increased the anxiety of the ruler, but we do not read of any impatience he displayed. The healing miracle was hardly performed when one came from his home to abruptly announce to him that Jesus was not needed now, since the child was dead. Jesus' sympathetic look met the fallen countenance of the father, and to strengthen his faith He said, "Fear not, only believe." That was all the tonic that was needed as they continued their journey. Coming into the house, Jesus put aside the professional mourners, saying, "The child is not dead, but sleepeth." How quickly mourning turned to ridicule! And how we despise such hypocrisy! Then, taking the father and mother and His three favorite disciples, He entered the room and commanded the spirit to return to its tenement of clay. To the amazement of all, the child breathed again and arose. "What sort of a man is this that the sea, the demons, disease and death are subject unto Him?" This is none other than our Jesus, the Christ of the living God!

—Do not be deceived by the report of new Herald subscriptions credited in the list. As already stated, old subscriptions count in making up the goal as well as new or renewed subscriptions. Only two pastors have as yet reported the number of old ones. We are hoping to publish the first week in March the list including subscriptions paid before the first of November as well as those received since November 1. Pastors will have to help us in this, if we do it, as we have not the data. A number of charges are past the goal fixed by the Annual Conference committee that appear to be far behind because the list gives only the number received since November 1. For instance, Grace church and Calvary church, Greensboro, seem far in arrears, whereas we believe both have passed their goals. We know personally the subscribers that belong to these churches, but this is not true of any other church probably.

—Rev. E. G. Cowan was in Greensboro Wednesday and took his oldest son home with him for treatment. Several years ago the son fell from a tree and sustained injuries in his chest. He is suffering a return of that trouble, and may have to undergo an operation. Our sympathy and prayers are extended to the son and to the other members of the family. Bro. Cowan told us while here of a fire in Fairfield church last Sunday. The roof caught during the service, but the prompt work of the congregation kept the building from burning. A new roof, which was badly needed, is to be put on at once. A fire is sometimes a blessing. We do not know, but perhaps it was in this case. We commend the brethren for their promptness in making repairs so the work may go right on.

—Radio brought into our room on Monday night a speech made by General John J. Pershing in New York. He spoke in eulogy of Lincoln. We could hear every word distinctly. The man that introduced him classed him with Washington and Grant as great generals. As an orator he does not rank so high, though he has respectable ability as a speaker.

—Calvary church's committee on parsonage will soon be ready to report.

Say It With Money

"Say it with flowers" is appropriate sometimes, but it may be greatly overdone. Sometimes it is better to say it otherwise and many times the best way to say it is with money. A Greensboro brother sent his check for ten dollars at the time of a funeral, saying, "Others will send flowers and doubtless there will be flowers enough. The deceased was so much interested in foreign missions, and I think it better to send money to be used in carrying on the work in which the deceased was so much interested." There died this week in this city a prominent member of the Friends church. He had long been interested in the support of aged ministers of his church. Before his death he requested his friends who might be disposed to send flowers for his funeral to send money instead to be used in the support of superannuated ministers.

There are many occasions when the best offering that can be made is an offering of money. Flowers have one value, money is many-valued; it can be transmuted into the best purchasable service.

Our Centennial Gratitude Gift is a case in point. We might have agreed to celebrate our hundredth anniversary by meeting in our churches gorgeously decorated with flowers and holding a laudatory service. We might appropriately do that, too, after the wild flowers come; but that would not accomplish the good to come from the addition of $100,000 in money to the treasuries of our struggling church boards. Yes, say it with money.

Treaties of Peace, Not Engines of War

Congress is being besieged by men whose minds have been inflamed with the military spirit, demanding huge and costly preparations for war. They repeat that old less than half a truth, "The way to prevent war is to prepare for war." The rational way to prevent war is to prepare for peace, and at this stage of civilization one of the best ways to prepare for peace is to make treaties of peace with the civilized nations. It is with nations as with individuals, "According to your faith be it unto you." If we have no faith in other nations and show that we have not by preparing for war against them, they in turn will lose faith in us and will arm against us. Thus a war will be brought on by the very means represented to be a preventive of war. The American people should wake up and make Congress understand that the nation is in no mood to finance an unnecessary war brought on by inflamed military leaders.

Who is going to make war upon us? Let them show. If any nation refuses to join with us in a reasonable treaty of peace, we might suspect designs upon us. But what nation has refused to make such a treaty? Let Bryan's plan be pursued. Let treaties be made with all the powerful nations binding them and us to keep the peace. Let there be goodwill among the nations instead of mutual distrust and fear. The money asked for for war preparations is needed for more rational and humane purposes. Let us have no more unnecessary war. Let us outlaw war. Let us cease to think of war.

Conan Doyle's Evidence

When Edison expressed the opinion that it is a 50-50 chance that man survives death, Sir Conan Doyle replied by citing the experience of one of his sons with a spirit medium. What the medium told the young man it would seem might have been told him out of the medium's own knowledge so far as it was indubitably true, and the rest of it might have been fabricated by the medium. Mediums who are not what they pretend to be doubtless make it their business to inform themselves regarding people who are likely to become their clients, and know so surprisingly much that it is easy to makes the impression that they are in receipt of information from the dead. Necromany, pretended communication with the dead, is a very ancient fraud; Moses forbade the children of Israel resorting to necromancers.

Mr. Doyle is a great writer of detective stories. Perhaps he is because he is endowed with a fruitful imagination. The same endowment may somewhat unfit him to judge correctly evidence offered him. At any rate we do not feel that he is adding much force to the argument for immortality. Since Christ came and brought life and immortality to light, we do not much feel the need of evidence that Mr. Doyle and his spirit mediums have to offer. As to Mr. Edison, he seems to be spiritually blind. His absorption in physical phenomena has perhaps prevented his receiving the more important revelations of the spirit world.

—Hon. Newton D. Baker, secretary of war in President Wilson's cabinet, has been invited, as a representative statesman, to lead a "Parley on War," at Wesleyan University, March 29-31, and has accepted, according to an announcement made at Middletown, Ohio, last week. The joint committee of faculty and students which is arranging this parley to promote study of the war question in its various aspects plans to secure also as leaders a historian, a pacifist, and a militarist.

—The pastor of Spencer church writes thanking us for calling attention to the church enterprise of the members and their need of help. We trust their situation will continue to appeal to our Sunday schools until a favorable response is elicited. It is a privilege and a pleasure to help such people as our loyal members at Spencer are.

—Winston church has no pastor yet, but President Taylor has succeeded in securing a preacher for each Sunday morning service. The congregations are good, the Sunday school is much alive, and the future is brightening.

—The concrete road and the automobile should be great promoters of church attendance. How times have changed! And some of our readers may yet go to church in airplanes.

DO YOU LIKE YOUR PASTOR—WHY?

Rev. Luther K. Long

An old lady, so it was related, was very enthusiastic in her love for and devotion to her pastor. Pressed for her reason, she was slow in finding one that seemed to her adequate to meet the situation. Finally, her judgment settled on this one: "He is a wonderful preacher; the way he pronounces 'Mesopotamia' always brings tears to my eyes."

The present writer, in common with many another minister, has often been surprised at the things in his sermons, or in himself, that have proved attractive and interesting, or otherwise, to members of his congregation, and occasionally the thing hit upon by the hearer does not seem to him to be significant, either one way or the other.

Sometimes one has to wait a long while for evidence that certain ideas or courses of action have reached the inner consciousness of his people and awakened a response, favorable or unfavorable. In some cases the weary worker would have benefited greatly had the outspoken words of appreciation, or criticism, come earlier.

No doubt every minister would be sometimes warned, sometimes surprised, sometimes cast down, and occasionally greatly delighted and encouraged, did he know by what means and to what extent he was interesting, holding, and helping the varied individuals and classes to whom he desires to be of real service; and it is entirely possible that an occasional well considered and well aimed adverse criticism would do as much good as honest praise.

An enterprising editor has recently drawn out letters from a number of people who have expressed themselves concerning their ministerial likes and dislikes—mostly their "likes." I am giving here copious extracts from most of these letters. They may help some ministers to see themselves as others see them; and they may aid some lay people to better appreciate the worthy qualities in their own pastors —and to speak out in commendation of those qualities and ministers.

She likes a manly minister:

I am a woman. Our present pastor is one of the most popular we have ever had in town. He doesn't have a special manner reserved for women. He doesn't cultivate the habit of hanging around the edges of women's meetings. I am not saying that he won't stop in at a woman's session for a few minutes, but he never looks as if that was his final ambition in life. I like him the better for it. Our last pastor simply throve on teacups, and seemed more at home at an afternoon meeting of women than at the monthly meeting of the men's club. After all, the women of a church don't want to be ignored, but they don't want a pastor who seems to think that the church is primarily women's business.

She wants to be called by name:

I am twelve years old and in the eighth grade. I like our pastor because he always knows my name. Our last pastor never knew whether my name was Emma or Mary, and it really is much nicer to be called by one's right name. Don't you think so?

Yelling versus talking:

I like my pastor. He always has something worth listening to. One of the best things about his preaching is that he does not yell. He just talks straight ahead, man to man, as if he had something which was so important that every last one of us ought to know it. We had a yelling parson last year and it is a great relief to have one who just talks.

Does this pastor soft-pedal?

Our minister has been here four years and every one likes him, except perhaps some of the cranks who are always trying to get the church mixed up in politics and what-not that's none of the church's business. But he doesn't pay any attention to them, and goes straight on preaching the gospel. There is always something soothing about his sermons. I don't mean that they aren't interesting; but he doesn't try to get us all stirred up talking about those people over in Europe who are always starting wars, and he doesn't spend his time talking about passing laws to keep boys and girls from working in our factory. When all these reds began to agitate about those Italian anarchists in Boston, he simply told us that we should have faith in the courts, and not allow violent agitators to get us all upset. One can go home and sleep at night after that kind of a sermon. I would vote to have him stay here for life.

Hasn't this writer the better attitude?

My pastor has a habit of preaching sermons with which I heartily disagree. He stirs me up and makes me mad, but I like him all the better for it. He makes us think; and what is the church for if not to make men think? He is what I suppose is called a preacher of the social gospel. He has traveled a great deal in Europe and in Latin-America, and he has much to say about the duty of America towards the building of world brotherhood and peace. He preached a sermon last winter, at the time of a threatened break with Mexico, on "Let him that is without sin cast the first stone." He said a good many things about American imperialism. I didn't quite agree with him, but I am glad he said them. Then, again, he has rather liberal views on labor. He believes that no employer has the right to limit the freedom of men to organize as they please. I am inclined to part company with him on that, too. But this is always where he wins me —he does not dogmatize, and he does not attempt to exclude the other man's opinion. He is always fair and honest in attempting to see the other point of view. So, no matter how much I may disagree with what he says, I shall stick up for his right to say what he thinks. A free pulpit is the only one worth having in America.

A mighty good reason:

My liking for the pastor of our church began at the time of the last illness of my wife. I had never been especially appealed to by his preaching. He isn't a good preacher. But when my wife was taken seriously ill last summer, and was taken to the hospital, he was there; and when the end came he was the one man in the city whose sympathy was certain and understanding. I don't know much about pastors, or what they are supposed to do, but this man was a friend, and I suppose that is the finest kind of pastor after all.

This pastor is a good Scout:

I am a Boy Scout, and our troop meets in the basement of the church. Last month we got rough-housing after meeting and broke a window. The official board men were very sore, and they said we couldn't use the room any more; but our pastor asked to let him talk to us. He did. And we won't break any more windows.

This one understands young people:

I am seventeen years old, and sing in the choir. There are twelve girls of about my age in the choir, and we all feel much the same way about the pastor of the church. We like him for many reasons. He preaches very good sermons, and interests us; but we always feel that he understands the way young people feel about life and religion. He seems to expect a good deal from us, and yet he seems to understand our questions and our point of view. He seems to respect us and our opinions. We are never afraid to go to him with our questions, and he always makes us feel that he has learned as much from us as we have learned from him. I don't have to tell you that there is nothing we would not do to help him make the church a success.

A good one for the last:

I am a teacher in the High School. I go to this church because of the intellectual and spiritual culture of the pastor. He knows the poets, and he possesses the ability to use them to open up larger and larger areas of spiritual understanding. I like him because he spends much time with his books. He belongs to a larger world than I have either the capacity or the time to explore as I would. There is scarcely a sermon which does not take one out into fresh fileds of insight and sympathy. As I listen, I feel myself meeting the best and the greatest men of the ages. He has a feeling for history, and the power to transmit it. There is nothing dead in the world; he brings it all into living terms. I leave the church with the feeling that I have been introduced anew to the heroic spirits of the centuries and to the God who has moved through all. I scarcely know the pastor, but I am constantly in his debt.

Working over these letters, I am impressed anew with the variety in taste and disposition to be found among the people of our churches. Each and every one of them should be considered when the call or assigning of a pastor is up for decision. I am glad there is in the bounds of the ministry so much variety in personality and talent. God's treasuries are wide and deep and rich. Here's wishing that every minister may increase in ability to draw out, and in wisdom to distribute to needy and waiting souls, the sort of riches that will meet their requirements.

THE CHURCH IN A CHANGING WORLD

Reviewed by Rev. Joseph Fort Newton, Litt. D.

Dr. Speight recently gave up the pulpit of King's Chapel —one of the oldest and most famous churches of Boston, built of stone brought over from England—to take the chair of philosophy in Dartmouth College. For years he has made the old chapel a shrine of broad-minded Christianity, inviting men of all faiths to its pulpit, and his influence and example will not be forgotten. In the sermon here reviewed he reminds us that while the church seems to be slow and staid, it is in fact changing rapidly, in three significant ways.

First, the church is changing in its relation to its worshippers. Hitherto there have been two types of church and worship, the liturgical and the informal, the sacramental and the evangelical, each noble and useful after its kind, and ministering to different needs. Today, under the challenge of a changing world, we are discovering that these two types of church and worship belong together, as the two hemispheres of one complete spiritual life.

"To minister to a man's mind," says Dr. Speight, "perplexed and distracted by a thousand problems, and also to his heart, which yearns for assurances of faith; to speak to the consciences of men, compelling them to measure their personal inclinations against the well-being of the whole community, and at the same time, through the same institution, to foster the meditative, mystical, undistracted communion with God—that is indeed a complex task."

Attempts to meet it are seen in the richer forms of worship and the use of Gothic architecture now used, increasingly, by the non-liturgical churches; and on the other hand by a greater flexibility of ritual in the liturgical communions. The church is not driven to this larger ministry, but drawn to it by its sense of responsibility to bring the inspirations of religious faith to an age which, if left without a spiritual vision, is at the mercy of nameless fears, baffling perplexities, and a sinister cynicism.

Second, as Dr. Speight points out, the churches are changing radically in their relation to each other. Dogmas which separated them in other days seem less and less significant, and the common inheritance of faith is found to be vitally important, if the world is not to lose its way. There is a tide running in the hearts of men moving toward a larger, deeper unity—not a dead uniformity, but a living unity of fellowship in which all can serve in their different ways with mutual respect and brotherly goodwill.

"All forward-looking men," says Dr. Speight, "will seek to hasten the breaking down of barriers and the day of understanding. There is a grander church than all particular ones, however extensive—the church universal—and into this church all who partake of the Spirit of Christ are admitted, and no one can be excluded from it but by himself. It is this larger vision that more and more engages the attention of thoughtful men of all churches, each serving in his place and busy doing his part, yet realizing the fellowship and essential unity which make many men comrades and co-workers."

Also, there is a new sense of duty of the church in a changing world, in dealing with the moral issues that are raised by our social, national and international relations. Here a prophetic pulpit will find its opportunity and its obligation, the more so in a day when material prosperity tends to obscure moral insight. The wealthier and more powerful we become in America, Dr. Speight sees, the more difficult it will be to keep our corporate life on a high level.

"The pulpit," says Dr. Speight, "will attract men who see this situation and feel its seriousness only if they are not merely permitted but expected to speak their convictions 'with malice toward none, with charity for all, but with firmness for the right as God gives them to see the right.'" Thus a philosopher, who is also a prophet, looks at the church in a changing world, and finds that it too is changing, even when it denies the fact and denounces the changes.—McCall's Magazine.

—Have you been accustomed to think of George Washington as a perfect man? The biographers have succeeded in finding some flaws, though the most unfriendly ones cannot cover the splendid virtues. In fact, there has never been but one man in whom men could find no fault, and to Him the unfriendly attributed the greatest sins.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

Bright Outlook for the Church in China

The following extracts are taken from a letter by Dr. C. Y. Cheng, general secretary of the National Christian Council of China, which come as a great encouragement to the cause of the missionary enterprise in China at the present time.

"You will be happy to know that, at a time when missionaries have evacuated from their posts and much of the work of the church has come to a standstill, the Chinese Home Missionary Society is planning to send out a new band of missionaries to the Yunan Province. The secretary of the society, Rev. C. K. Li, is going to accompany four or five new missionaries to start for Yunan after visiting such centers as Foochow, Amoy, Swatow, Canton and Hongkong, visiting the churches and meeting church leaders in these centers in the hope to rouse up a greater measure of zeal for this missionary outreach. We hope to have two medical workers, two teachers and one evangelistic worker amongst those who go to the field. It is very gratifying to know that these people have decided to serve Christ and their fellow-men in that distant place, well knowing that political upheaval and open banditry are awaiting their coming. It is very inspiring to read the letters these people wrote to us offering their services for the evangelization of the southwest.

"The Christian Church in China has been greatly affected by the advent of the Nationalist movement. Patriotism is a subject of timely importance and the Christian Church has frequently been accused of being unpatriotic and being classed as running dogs of imperialism. Prompted by a desire to show to the non-Christian world that Christian people are, in no sense, less patriotic than their fellow-countrymen, many Christian unions have been formed in various cities with the object to deal with the current problems facing the Christian Church. A number of statements and manifestos have been issued and resolutions passed, stating the position of the Christians in regard to matters such as the so-called unequal treaties, Christian education, etc. In such attempts, Christians have shown to the non-Christians that they have as much welfare of the country at heart as any other Chinese citizen. But, of course, sometimes such declarations and resolutions have somewhat gone astray, not quite in keeping with the principles of the Christian religion. This is indeed a difficult time, a time that each one of us must "wate hand pray" so that we may do the right thing both in the eyes of the nation as well as of God.

"The Christian Church is undergoing a time of severe testing. There is a strong element in the Nationalist movement opposed to the Christian religion, also a strong element again foreignism. As the Christian Church is both religious and has also connection with foreigners, it has suffered a good deal of misunderstanding and ill-treatment. Then the evacuation of missionaries has somewhat added to the difficulty of the church. In that, much responsibility and unfamiliar responsibility has been left over to the native workers. Yet we are thankful to say that many stand firm and proved to be faithful to their trust. This time of testing will, in my opinion, lead the church to a higher plane of their spiritual life. The church in the future may have to go with less financial support and intellectual assistance from outside, but the church will still have the Christian truth and message to deliver to the people of China. The church will still have Christ to present to the people of the Far East who is the essential value of the Christian religion. We shall forever thank God, if the church, in passing through this time of testing, will find itself in this new path of development in the days to come."

JESUS AND THE HUNGER FOR WEALTH

(Matt. 6:19-21)

It is because I so love the words of Jesus, that I have decided to base what I have to say upon what He said. Another reason why I have taken a text is that you may hear His words, if you forget mine.

It is rather strange that around one lone figure there should center all of the hunger of the human heart. We have been a long time in discovering the fact that Jesus gave His religion not only for spiritual need, but that it is the central force for every other need.

Society, law, customs, politics are wrong without Him. With Him, it is right. Whenever and wherever His thought is the controlling factor in the affairs of men, in whatever sphere of life they may move, there is rest and peace. Without it there is always unrest and discord.

His coming into the world worked a revelation and He is still working it. Not only is it true that He made more history than any other man but He is still making it. He is still the center of all discovery and the basis of all science worthy the name . He still has to do with the great hunger of human hearts. What builds our great system of railroads? I answer, Hunger. What mighty power is it that builds our great cities? I answer, Hunger. What has built up the mighty commerce of the world and linked the nations of the earth together? I answer, Hunger. I conceive that there are just six of these great human hungers which are all inclusive as follows, the hunger for wealth, for health, for knowledge, for sociability, for the beautiful and for righteousness. I shall treat each of them briefly and in the order named.

Jesus and the hunger for wealth. I have placed this one first, because men seem to regard this as the all-important thing in life. The wealth of any nation lies in an inborn desire of every man to outdo his fellow men. In the final analysis, it is found to be based upon a selfish ambition. All wish to be rich, for the idea is general that riches will bring happiness. That the more a man has of worldly goods, the happier he becomes. Now, it is a fact that riches bring luxury, but in themselves they never bring happiness worthy the name. The definition of true riches is found in the statement of St. Paul, I Timothy, 6:6, "Godliness with contentment is great gain." Literally, "great riches." Jesus' definition of wealth was not in what a man had, but in what a man was and is in himself.

Jesus was the richest Man the world ever saw, even though He had no place to lay His head, because the riches were Himself. This is a natural hunger and, because it is, Jesus has something to say about it. He said that it was a sad sight to see a man who had gathered riches here upon earth, where it was a known fact that they could have no enduring quality; and had not laid up for himself any treasure in heaven. Hence His command, "Lay up for yourselves treasure in heaven, where moth and rust do not corrupt nor thieves break through and steal."

I believe this is just as much a command as, "Thou shalt not kill." It is right for a man to have money, if he obtain it in a lawful manner; and the rich blessing of God falls upon him who uses it for His glory. But woe to him who lays up the treasure for himself with no thought of the future, passing out of this life "not rich toward God." It is possible for you to be immensely rich, even though poor upon earth. In the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, Jesus teaches that the sin of the rich man was not the mere fact of his riches, but because he found in them his highest good. He spent his wealth on himself. He made a god of his riches. He was guilty of the sin of omission, which, in Matt. 25:31-46, Jesus declared condemned men to everlasting punishment.

"Fire," says the proverb, "is a good servant but a bad master." So are the riches of this world. As a servant, riches may minister to every good, both temporal and spiritual. As a master, fire itself cannot burn the heart as riches burn and destroy the soul. Because men have left Jesus out of their business, we have strikes, boycotts, lockouts, violence and all sorts of crime. We have an almost constant clash between so-called capital and labor. There is neither reason nor excuse we can give to God for the existence of these things. They should work smoothly and together. Just as capital cannot live without labor, neither can labor exist without capital . I think Jesus insists that men ought to have money, but at the same time He warns against its awful power to ruin the soul. So many persons slave themselves to death for money as though it were the chief aim and end of life. Such persons get no real joy out of life. Everything is measured by the sign of the dollar mark. This awful greed for gain burns out the life of many a person, dulls his vision, and the finer sensibilities of his soul, and hardens his heart toward God.

How can we satisfy this hunger of our hearts? I answer, first, by cultivating an actual ability to play.

More and more the world is learning that the play hours are the greatest hours of a child's life. In them he is laying the foundation for a strong body that will help him to start out in the battle of life without handicap. This idea is being emphasized in all Y. M. C. A. and kindred organizations the world over. The development of the body brings out the better qualities of the man. It is not time lost to play, to be able for the time being to throw away the rush and care of the business world. If men would play more, they would live longer.

It should not, therefore, cause us any surprise to read of Jesus in the market place with the children, at the wedding in Cana of Galilee nor to find that He was invited out to dine and always accepted the invitation; the people rejoiced to have Him with them. "Come ye yourselves apart and rest a while" would send you back to work with more vigor and you could enter into it with a real joy. A man is a wealthy man who has a strong body. Away with the idea that religion makes a man a weakling! He is a stronger, better man because he has it. He is better able to lay up for himself treasure in heaven because he has not wasted his substance in riotous living. You have a vast store house of nervous energy. Save it. Do not throw it away. It is precious to you and all that prolongs life is precious to God.

And, finally, have Jesus' view of wealth. There is nothing permanent about it here on earth. He said it could not endure. They contain no enduring qualities. It is foolish for you not to have it. Because moths eat costly clothes, and money is worn away in circulation and even thieves come and steal it and carry it away. What if there is no treasure laid up in heaven for you? What then? Would you be really wealthy? Then make yourself rich in the blessed friendship and love of Jesus. These cannot pass away nor grow less. They have great sustaining power. They support when all else fails. Any one who has Jesus with him is a truly rich man, for all He has and is belongs to you. Believing on Him, all things are yours and He is God's. Now as you finish reading this article, may I come real close to you and whisper in your ear the secret that will satisfy this real hunger of your heart? Then listen, "Lay up for yourselves treasure in heaven." May God bless you and help you to become immensely rich. Amen.

C. Morgan Compher.

KEEP UP THE SONG OF FAITH

Keep up the song of faith
However dark the night;
And, as you praise, the Lord will work
To change your faith to sight.

Keep up the song of faith
And let your heart be strong.
For God delights when faith can praise
Though dark the night and long.

Keep up the song of faith,
The foe will hear and flee;
O let not Satan hush your song,
For praise is victory.

Keep up the song of faith,
The dawn will break ere long;
And we shall go to meet the Lord
And join the endless song.

BABSON APPEALS TO LAYMEN

Roger Babson, the noted financial adviser, addressing the Congregational National Council at Omaha, had this message to his fellow laymen:

"I want to say one word to you laymen—namely, that we must give our preachers something besides money and criticism. We must give them our hearty support. The three greatest institutions or the three greatest forces in the world's history have been the church, Sabbath observance, and family prayers. For these three things the churches have stood throughout the ages. The future of America is wrapped up with the future of the churches. Your children are safe, not because of policemen or judges, but because of preachers and churches. Sweep away the churches and the preachers, and America crumbles. Only as long as you back the churches and the preachers will America continue to progress along the pathway of her destiny.—Selected

ALONG A COUNTRY ROAD

He heard her singing it as he came along the country road. The strains of the song reached him clearly. What a beautiful voice it was! He stopped to listen. He could hear every word.

"Why should I my cross a burden deem?
Jesus is my life, my song.
Why should I my cross a burden deem?
Jesus is my life, my song.
All my way is marked by love divine,
Round my cross the rays of glory shine,
Christ himself companion is of mine.
Jesus is my life, my song."

He stood there listening to the golden voice, which suddenly became silent.

"All my way is marked by love divine,
Round my cross the rays of glory shine."

He whispered the words slowly. "I wish I could believe it."

He sighed a little, and buttoned his old coat closer, for the wind was cold.

"It's a fine Thanksgiving," he murmured bitterly.

He started on slowly, for his shoes were broken, and one foot was sore. He coughed a little, too, for his last job had been on an irrigating ditch, and he had taken cold, and he hadn't gotten over it yet. He wished he could hear that voice again, and then suddenly it began:

"All my way is marked by love divine,
Round my cross the rays of glory shine,
Christ himself companion is of mine.
Jesus is my life, my song."

He came nearer, and as he did so a little woman came down the walk from the little house toward him. She wore a clean gingham dress, and he noticed that her hair was quite gray.

"Good morning," she said.

The lad touched his hat. "Good morning," he replied.

She looked at him. "Were you going far?"

"As far as the road will take me."

She smiled. "That might be a long way."

"Perhaps—"

She looked at him again with her motherly eyes. "Did you know it was Thanksgiving?" she asked gently.

He nodded. "I did think of it; but with nothing with which to be thankful for, it hasn't made the impression on me it might. I'm not wasting much time thinking of my mercies. I'm hunting a job."

She was silent a moment. "Suppose you stop and eat Thanksgiving dinner with me, and see about the job afterward. There'll be other days, but there won't be another Thanksgiving for a whole year." She paused. "I haven't any guests; but I promised myself I'd get up a dinner anyway, hoping the Lord would send somebody my way."

She looked at him again, and the boy noticed what a motherly face she had.

"I lost my only son two years ago," she went on, "and I'm trying to go on without him."

The boy started. "That's too bad, ma'am," he cried.

The little, gray-haired woman nodded. "Yes; isn't it?" She replied with lips that suddenly quivered. She paused again. "I'm fighting hard not to give up to the grief of it on Thanksgiving Day." Her voice broke. "So you're hunting a job?"

"Yes, ma'am. I've tramped till I'm tired, but no one seems to want anything I can do."

"Come in."

She led the way up the path through the open door into a clean little living-room, where a canary sang in a cage, and there were a great many house plants in the window. She drew up a chair and handed him a magazine.

"I'll have to ask you to excuse me while I baste the turkey," she smiled.

He sat there and watched her as she bustled back and forth, thinking what a comfortable little home it was, and what a mother she had been.

"Too bad he couldn't have lived," he thought.

He got up suddenly and took the water bucket from her hands and went out into the yard to an old-fashioned well, and drew up some.

He went to the cellar, too, for cream and butter, and cut up some kindling.

Dinner was ready promptly by two, and, sitting across from him, she asked the blessing.

It seemed to him, hungry and discouraged as he was, that never in his life had he tasted a dinner like that. Such turkey and dressing and cranberry sauce and hot rolls and jellies and preserves, and oh, the mince pie! How wonderful it was!

"It's the finest dinner I ever sat down to in my life," he told her, "and so unexpected. All I saw was a long country road, when suddenly a door opens, I hear a beautiful voice singing, and you came. I never believed in angels before, but I do now."

"Even in blue gingham?" she asked.

"Even in blue gingham," he replied. He sighed. "I don't believe even you realize what it means to a homeless, motherless boy to be taken in like this and fed and warmed and welcomed." He was silent a moment. "What was the song you were singing as I came by this morning?"

She smiled. "Oh, that," she replied, and then she began to sing again:

"All my way is marked by love divine,
Round my cross the rays of glory shine,
Christ himself companion is of mine.
Jesus is my life, my song."

She ceased to sing, and he looked at her.

"Do you believe that?" he asked.

"What, my boy?"

"The words you have just been singing:

"'All my way is marked by love divine,
Round my cross the rays of glory shine.'"

"Certainly I believe it. And so do you when you stop to think about it."

He arose. "Well, anyway, I thank you for your beautiful song—it makes one feel better, at least." He smiled at her. "I've so many things to thank you for, I hardly know where to begin—the dinner when I didn't expect any, the kind words you surprised me with, the homelike feeling you gave me, as if I wasn't a waif of the road with no place to lay my head." He smiled again. "Life already looks cheerier and brighter, and the road before me less dull and lonely, because of you—"

She nodded gravely. "I've been wondering how I'd get through the winter," she went on. "I need someone to bring in the wood and the water and take care of the cow. My son did all these things for me." She paused. "Would you stay with me this winter?" she asked. "I'll be glad to pay you."

The lad threw back his head and laughed with the sheer joy of it. "Pay me?" he cried. "It is I who should pay you. This is a regular Thanksgiving Day, isn't it? Here, give me that bucket."

He swung out to the well again, but as he did so he found himself humming part of the old hymn he had heard her singing that morning as, sad and discouraged, he was walking on that country road.

"All my way is marked by love divine,
Round my cross the rays of glory shine,
Christ himself companion is of mine.
Jesus is my life, my song."

He lifted his face to the sky that glowed rosy red from the rays of the setting sun. And the road no longer stretched before him cold and lonely, for there just ahead of him were light and warmth and welcome.

"I believe it." He whispered the words reverently.—Boy Life.

JIMMY'S RIDE

MARY RUTH CLEMENS

Jimmy and John Jacob were making castles in the sand. At least John Jacob thought he was helping, but since he was only a dog he was a bit in the way.

"There now, John Jacob," cried Jimmy, "you've knocked down that perfectly splendid tower. I do wish you wouldn't be so frisky."

But John Jacob wagged his tail, and ran around in a circle. He was really inviting Jimmy to come and play down nearer the waves.

Jimmy paid no attention, so John Jacob came and sat beside him with his head on one side, and one ear cocked high, as if to say, "Well, what do you want me to do?"

"Sit there like a good dog, John Jacob, until I get this tower fixed. There! Now I must have a drawbridge, and a wall around it so the enemy cannot get inside." So he patted and patted and patched and carried wet sand until at last it was finished, a beautiful big castle.

Suddenly John Jacob began running after a large shadow on the sand, and Jimmy looked up. He knew from the whirring noise that the shadow was made by an aeroplane. He sat back on his heels and watched. John Jacob was barking furiously.

"Why, I do believe he is going to land," cried Jimmy excitedly as he watched the aeroplane circling around. "My, I hope he doesn't go in the water. Oh, he is coming this way."

The aeroplane made a wide swoop and came to land on the beach some distance from Jimmy. Then it sped rapidly toward him on its wheels, for it couldn't stop all at once.

"Run! John Jacob, run!" cried Jimmy, and he ran as hard as he could to get out of the path of the aeroplane.

"There! He's gone right over our castle, and he's made it look worse than you did, John Jacob." But John Jacob wasn't caring much about the sand castle; he was busy barking at that mysterious bird that had swooped down so suddenly.

Then a man jumped out, pulled off his big goggles and leather helmet and looked first at John Jacob and then at Jimmy.

"Sorry, young man," he said to Jimmy. "I guess I knocked your building flat. I could see it was a fine one, even if I was coming fast, but I couldn't help hitting it. Suppose I help you build another."

Jimmy came closer. "Oh, that's all right," he said. "John Jacob smashed it a while ago, too. But I was through anyway."

"Who's John Jacob?" asked the man.

"He's my dog. Every one thinks that's a funny name, but I like it."

"So do I; let's shake on it," and the man held out his hand and gave Jimmy's a friendly shake.

Jimmy began asking questions about the aeroplane so fast that the man couldn't answer them all.

"Wait a minute," he said. "Let's get acquainted. First, what's your name?"

"Jimmy."

"Fine, and mine's Peter."

And they shook hands again.

"Now, how would you like to climb inside my boat and see how it feels to sit on the driver's seat?"

Jimmy felt so excited he could hardly breathe. To be sitting in a real aeroplane! Why, he'd never dreamed it was so big.

"Makes a lot of noise when it starts, doesn't it?" he asked.

"So loud you can't think."

"Will it go very high?"

"Yes, indeed it will. Say, Jimmy, how would you like a ride to pay damages for the building I destroyed? I have a few minutes to spare, and if you would like it we could take a short ride before I leave."

Jimmy's eyes grew most too big for their sockets.

"I surely would like it," he said. "But I'll have to ask mother. I think she'll let me go. Mother's awfully nice, you know."

"I don't doubt it. All mothers are. I'll go along when you ask her and tell her I'll take good care of you."

So that is how Jimmy got his aeroplane ride, though he never dreamed when he began to build a sand castle that it would bring about such a wonderful thing.—Our Little Ones.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

Senior topic for March 4: "What is it in Jesus that attracts young people?"

Scripture: John 12:20-32.

I

Plans for the Meeting

A week in advance give each member a slip of paper with the following question at the top: "What is there in Jesus that appeals to me?" Have these papers read in the meeting. Then place on the blackboard the characteristics of Jesus that the members decide are the most appealing to youth.

II

Hints for the Leader

Our topic, "What is it in Jesus that attracts young people," is one which appeals to a group of young people. Jesus was young. He grew physically, religiously, mentally and socially. "He grew in wisdom and in stature and in favor with God and man."

2. Jesus is the Hero of youth. This is a day of heroes. Youth eagerly chooses "Babe" Ruth, Charles Lindbergh, etc., but when Jesus is seen by youth, youth immediately exclaims, "Here is my hero, for He is youthful, He lived as I desire to live, He died as I would like to die."

3. Now have the papers read and see if some of the following characteristics of Jesus may be brought out: Love, kindness, thoughtfulness, sympathy, optimistic, courageous, attractive, open-mindedness, consecrated, active, heroic, forgiving, altruistic, intelligent, reverent, leadership, etc.

III

Pertaining to the Topic, by Bruce Barton

Have you really known Him? Let me introduce you to the most attractive, most delightful man in the world. You have never known Him as he really is; all the pictures ever drawn misrepresent Him. They have made Him out a weakling, a woman's features with beard—He who for thirty years swung an adz and drove a saw through heavy timber, who for long days tramped the borders of His beloved lake, and would not sleep indoors if He could slip away into His garden.

An outdoor man he was, a man's man who could stand watch when all His friends deserted Him in sleep, and could face the tempest in a little boat calm-eyed and unafraid.

They have called Him a pacifist. How could they forget the day, I wonder, when in the midst of the hard-faced crowd He stood, and braiding a little whip, drove them out before Him?

Think you it was only the glance of righteous anger in His eyes that sent them scurrying? I tell you that behind that little whip were muscles of iron, made strong by years of labor and a spirit that never once knew fear, not even in the presence of the cross.

They killed Him, of course, in the end, and sometimes I am almost glad—glad that He died at thirty-three, with youth still athrob in His veins, and never an illusion lost or an ideal dimmed by age.

Claim Him, you who are young and love life; let no man dispute your claim. For He too was young, and is; He too loved laughter and life.

Old age and the creeds have had Him too long. I offer Him now to you—not in deed but in truth—Jesus of Nazareth, the joyous companion, the young man whom young men can love.

To Be Read and Commented on

Christ, His character:
Holy, Luke 1:35.
Righteous, Isaiah 53:11; Matt. 19:16.
Faithful, I Thes. 5:24.
Harmless, Heb. 7:26.
Obedient to God, Ps. 40:8; John 4:34; 15:10.
Subject to parents, Luke 2:51.
Zealous, Luke 2:49; John 2:17.
Lowly in heart, Matt. 11:29.
Loving, John 13:1; 15:13.
Unselfishness, Matt. 8:20.

VI

Questions for Discussion

1. What appeals to you most in the life of Jesus?

2. Name some great hero with whom you are acquainted and love. How many of Jesus' characteristics do you observe in his life?

3. Does Jesus really appeal to the youth of today as he did to youth of former days?

4. Do you think young people are attracted by Jesus when they see Him as He really is?

5. Name characteristics that youth possesses that Jesus possessed as a young man.

Resolved: "That the youth of today is appealed to by Jesus more than in former days."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

March 4: Jesus and the Twelve. Mark 1:16-20; 3:13, 14; 3:13-19; 6:7-13, 30.

Golden Text: Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation. Mark 16:15.

Christ's Cabinet

SIMON PETER seems to head the list of the disciples, and was one of the three who composed "the inner circle." His father's name was Jonas, and his brother's, Andrew, they being fishermen of Bethsaida. Subsequent to his call, he resided with his family in Capernaum. "He was hopeful, bold, confident, courageous, frank, impulsive, energetic, vigorous, strong, and loving, and faithful to his Master notwithstanding his defection prior to the crucifixion."

ANDREW, "manly," or "mighty one," brother of Simon, fisherman by trade, who became a disciple of John the Baptist. He possessed keennees of perception of spiritual truths. "Andrew was not one of the greatest of the apostles, yet he is typical of those men of broad sympathies and sound sommon sense, without whom the success of any great movement cannot be assured."

JAMES, the son of Zebedee, who was called Boanerges, "son of thunder." He was a fisherman in the Sea of Galilee, and was probably of a family of means, having hired servants (Mark 1:20). James was another of the favored disciples, in whom Jesus placed special confidence. He was the first martyr of the Christian Church.

JOHN, the brother of James, another "son of thunder." These two brothers may have been cousins of the Master on their mother's side. John was the third member of the Master's inner circle. He was the disciple of love, yet of vehemence, but was rebuked by Jesus when the latter trait asserted itself too strongly.

PHILIP was also of Bethsaida. He was of Greek blood, as his Greek name implies. He did not possess as strong a personality as some of the others, owing to his lack of self-confidence, but he was a faithful disciple.

BARTHOLOMEW, "son of Tolmai or Talmai." There is no other reference to him in the New Testament, save his calling to discipleship, but there is much tradition concerning his life, work, and death.

THOMAS, called Didymus or "Twin," was one of the most interesting characters of the twelve. He was pessimistically inclined, which led to his doubting of things unseen. Yet he was a man of courage, sincerity and unselfishness. His declaration after seeing and hearing his risen Lord was one of spiritual triumph.

MATTHEW, "gift of Jehovah," or Levi, was the son of Alphaeus. He was a customs officer when discovered by Jesus, and doubtless a man of some education. Unlike six of the chosen ones, he was not a pupil of John the Baptist.

JAMES, the less, son of Alphaeus, may have been the brother of Matthew, but this is controversial. But little is known of him.

SIMON, the Cananaean, which denotes political position rather than place of residence. "Zelotes," as he is sometimes designated, signifies one of the officials of the political party which raised vigorous protest against Roman dominance. By some Bible scholars, he is identical with Nathanael.

JUDE, or Thaddaeus Lebbaeus, by some is considered to be the brother of James, the less. Tradition gives it that Jude was martyred in Persia.

JUDAS ISCARIOT, or "man of Kerioth," son of Simon. He was a man of mean, grasping, selfish characteristics, and was unsusceptible to Jesus' teachings, though at times they applied directly to his case. He is the only one who is not a Galilean.

Anointed Apostles

After selecting His cabinet of men of various positions and temperaments, Jesus called them up into a moutnain—a high place, a holy place—to ordain them, or anoint them with spiritual power. He preached the first ordination sermon of Christianity, and they went forth, timid, inexperienced, wondering, yet with zeal and power imparted to them by their great Master.

The last verse of the lesson gives us an interesting picture, if we will but use some imagination. "The apostles gathered themselves unto Jesus." We may imagine how eager they were to tell the joyous experiences they had; how one could hardly wait for another. Jesus listened patiently and attentively, as a parent does when his child tells of an unusual experience he has had. He was glad for their sakes that such was their experiences, for their faith in Him and in His power was thus greatly increased.

Jesus bids us go forth into the harvest field. He makes us to know that all will not be delightful; hardships will come; obstacles will be met; but He gives us power to overcome. Do we go with the faith and courage of the Twelve? If all did, crime, divorce, hatred, and other lusts and devices of Satan would be practically obliterated, and peace, love, and happiness would replace these evils so horrible to us as individuals and as a nation. God speed the day!

LETTER TO ALL PASTORS IN RE THE M. P. C. G. G. BY THE CONFERENCE COMMITTEE

Dear Brother Pastor:

The Gatitude Gift Campaign is now on and growing in interest every day. We trust that you have received the literature sent several days ago, and that it has been passed on to your people. The large posters will help if put in conspicuous places in the church.

For the next month we trust that you can find it possible to give the Gratitude Gift program right-of-way, and that all the driving power of every local church may be brought to bear upon this effort. We not only want to raise our allotment, but we want every charge and every church to share generously in the results.

This is a splendid opportunity for our people to get a great blessing by showing gratitude to God for preserving our church and using it for a HUNDRED YEARS to His glory. It is GRATITUE money that we are asked to give, and surely every one will want to share in this gift.

The FOURTH SUNDAY in February has been designated as GRATITUDE DAY. At this time we are to make our gifts to this worthy undertaking. It is to be a great day with us, and one in which every pastor and every member is expected to share enthusiastically, both in the giving and in the joy that will come from the results. We are hoping that, as nearly as possible, every dollar of our allotment, $12,000, will be provided on this day.

Pastors will please make reports of their efforts to Mr. J. D. Ross, Asheboro, N. C. These reports should be made promptly after pledges have been received.

Now, for a glad, prayerful, and united effort to do this worthy and necessary thing.

PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Some months ago a very unusual thing happened at Elon College, and along with a host of others I had the rare privilege of witnessing it. No one present will, in all probability, ever attend such an occasion again; they are extremely rare. It was a birthday—the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of "Uncle" Wellons, a distinguished minister of the Christian Church. It seemed most fitting that on his one hundredth birthday he should go back to the institution that was so close to his heart, and for which he had done so much, and do what he had been doing, with great joy, for seventy-five years—preach. Certainly his friends and his church could not let the centenary of this man of God pass without giving it recognition, and nothing could have been more pleasing to him than to preach on the day when he was one hundred years old.

But that was not sufficient; his friends must have some other outlet by which to express their gratitude to God for the long life of His servant and their appreciation, also, of his extended and efficient ministry. And so they placed into his hands one hundred dollars in gold. This was not an effort, of course, to pay him anything; but just an expression of golden gratitude and appreciation.

As a church, we are approaching a similar event. Next May, we will be one hundred years old, and certainly we can not let this event pass unnoticed. To do so we would stand condemned in our own souls, and likewise before the court of public opinion. We must commemorate this event, and the compulsion that moves us to do it not that of conscience or of public opinion, but rather the compulsion of Gratitude. We are going to do it simply because we want to do it.

One hundred years of useful and honorable denominational life stirs within us emotions of gratefulness and appreciation—appreciation of the intelligence, courage, and sacrifice of our fathers, which is the purchase price of our rich ecclesiastical heritage, and profound gratitude to God for His good hand upon us these hundred years.

Now, how shall we do this worthy, and needful, and joyful thing? Of course, befitting recognition will be given to it in the program of the coming General Conference. The committee charged with this part of the celebration is working out an elaborate program, and all that could be asked in this particular will be done. But this is not enough. Most of the church will not be there, and yet the entire church must have a share in this historic event. Our wise and noble leaders have, therefore, conceived the idea of a money offering as an outlet for gratitude, on the part of the entire church. All can't joint in person in the happy celebration at the Lyric Theater in Baltimore, but all can have some part in the celebration, represented by the One Hundred Thousand Gratitude Gift—not as an assessment, but purely as a gift by which to express gratitude. And surely no loyal Methodist Protestant will want to fail in this part of our commemoration of this glorious achievement —ONE HUNDRED YEARS of honorable Kingdom serviee.

The amount of this Gratitude Gift allotted to our conference is $12,000—about 46 cents per member. This is an easy undertaking for us, and one in which we should find much joy in accomplishing. The charge allotments are now in the hands of the pastors. During this month the matter will be presented from all of our pulpits, and on the fourth Sunday the subscriptions of the people are to be received. The North Carolina Conference expects that every pastor and every member will stand in his place, and see this thing through to a happy and an honorable finish. We are able to do it; and gratitude and loyalty demand that we do do it. Let none fail us now.

Week of Prayer

We call attention again that this is our Week of Prayer—the last week in February—for a deepening of the spiritual life of the church and a quickening of the concern of the church for Evangelism. We trust that pastors will call attention to this Sunday from their pulpits, and that all of our people may be much in prayer during this week.

Appointments

Feb. 26—Welch Memorial 11 a. m.; Midway, Guilford Charge, 7 p. m.

Feb. 28—Meeting of Conference Trustees, office Odell's, Greensboro, 11 a. m.; 2 p. m. meeting of Board of Church Extension, Burlington, First church.

March 18—South Winston, 11 a. m.

Fraternally,
S. W. TAYLOR.

STATEMENT FROM CAMPAIGN DIRECTOR, DR. J. H. STRAUGHN

Recognition

A special centennial certificate will be given to all who make contributions of one dollar or more. It will read that So and So contributed one hundred (pennies, nickels, dimes, quarters, etc.)

There is a special award for those who contribute $100 or multiple thereof, listed among the Founders Club. This is a fine opportunity for a Memorial Gift in recognition of a Father or Mother, Superintendent, Pastor, etc.

A Debt of Honor

This Centennial giving is the opportunity of a life-time and has in it every element of loyalty. It lays upon us all a high obligation as well as privilege. In deepest reverence for the church, in profound gratitude to God, let us bring our gifts.

HERALD SUBSCRIPTION RECEIPTS

Rev. J. C. Auman, $2.50; Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk, $2.25; Rev. W. L. Carson, $2.00; Rev. H. F. Surratt, $1.50; Rev. C. G. Madison, $1.50; Rev. D. R. Williams, $1.50; Rev. H. L. Isley, $1.50; Rev. A. G. Dixon, $1.50; Rev. R. S. Troxler, $4.50.

—The Department of Commerce announces that, according to the returns received, there were in the United States 39 Liberal Catholic churches in 1926, with 1,799 members. This denomination was not reported in 1916 and there are therefore no comparative figures. The total expenditures, as reported by 32 churches, amounted to $47,287, including $43,070 for current expenses and improvements and $4,217 for benevolences, missions, etc.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Asheboro.—While we are not burning the woods and sifting the ashes in these parts, neither are we turning the world upside down, yet there is something going on at our church most of the time. A fine Boy Scout troop has recently been organized and gives promise of great good. Quite a number of the classes and various organizations have held social gatherings recently and have taken steps to enlarge the work.

A week ago the past Sunday while the pastor was at Gray's Chapel assisting in the funeral service of Mr. Charles W. Allred, Prof. Paul S. Kennett filled the appointment at 11 o'clock. Our people always appreciate his sermons.

Last evening the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society had charge of the service and put on a missionary program including the pageant, "The Color Line." The service was splendid and the offering fairly good, it being above $40.

Yesterday morning the pastor preached on the Gratitude Gift and on Wednesday evening of this week we will have a meeting to launch the campaign and make plans for raising our part, which part, the conference says, is $500.

We have had quite a lot of sickness among our members this winter and some of them are still sick. Mrs. J. A. Way, who has been shut in for six weeks or more, is slowly improving. The little girl of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Rich is seriously ill with pneumonia. Miss Esther Ross has had a relapse and is confined to her room. Mrs. W. E. Luck, who has been seriously ill does not improve very rapidly. Mrs. Ernest Hughes is still in the hospital, but is improving. Then this preacher, who has been somewhat indisposed most of the winter and who has been on a diet, is coming back to normal again. But for the sake of brevity I must stop.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Orange Charge.—Measles, bad weather and roads are interfering with our work considerably. However, we are trying to present everything that comes up as best we can.

Union Grove church is striving to complete its amount of A. C. B. by the first Sunday in April.

The Gratitude Gift was presented yesterday at Efland and Union Grove. Some response, but not what we had hoped for. It is our purpose to present this next Sunday at Hebron and Chestnut Ridge.

Hebron church is beautifying her auditorium, and planning to finish the Sunday school rooms. Efland church has a building and remodeling proposition on. This will cost from $6,000 to $7,000. The membership has pledged about $6,000 for doing this work. We had hoped to have the work going before now; but owing to the rough weather it has been decided to wait until about March 15 and then push the work through to completion.

We hope to secure college assessment at Chestnut Ridge soon and make as good showing as possible on A. C. B. at all the churches in next month.

We were pleased to receive Mrs E. B. Goodwin as a member of our Efland church yesterday. Mrs. Goodwin came to us from the First Baptist church, Durham, prior to her marriage a short time ago to Prof. E. B. Goodwin. She was Miss Virginia Alice Frazier, of Durham, N. C. Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin have been for the past two years teachers in Efland high school.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Rehobeth Church, Granville Ct.—Our community has been recently saddened by the death of one of its members, Charlie Cawthorne, a youth of 15 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Cawthorne. Charlie with several friends was out hunting, when he was accidentally shot by a member of the hunting party. He was rushed to a local hospital at Henderson where everything possible was done for him, but after lingering for several days he passed into eternity.

During the brief days of intense suffering Charlie bravely smiled and with patience submitted to operations and blood transfusions.

The funeral services were conducted at Rehobeth church by the pastor, Rev H. F. Fogleman, who spoke in fitting words of the young life that had been permitted to dwell among us. The interment was in the nearby cemetery where friends gathered and placed many floral offerings as a last tribute to him who has preceded us into the country beyond.

He leaves to mourn a host of friends and kinsmen besides the immediate family, Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Cawthorne, two sisters, Misses Inez and Evelyn Cawthorne; Mr. Vincent Cawthorne, of Henderson, and Master Ed Britt Cawthorne.

The entire sympathy of the community goes out to those who are saddened by this tragical death. REPORTER.

Siler City.—At a meeting of the church membership, which was held Sunday, February 12, it was decided there would be all-time preaching service since Mrs. Dixon has gladly offered her assistance. That is, Mrs. Dixon will preach for us twice a month on the two Sundays that Dr. Dixon is at Liberty. However, we will not have an evening service on the second and fourth Sundays.

Our pastor delivered a very good message last Sunday morning on "Tithing" or "Liberal Giving." On Sunday evening there was a very interesting pageant given. In this pageant, which was written by Dorothy Elderdice, our pastor and a number of members participated, and in which four of our number took each 25 years and briefly told the history of the M. P. Church up to the present time.

Last Sunday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Dixon visited Grace Church at Bonlee, and while there Mrs. Dixon completed the organization of a Woman's Missionary Society and a Senior Christian Endeavor Society. Both of these were started two weeks ago at the time the Senior C. E. Society of this church held their Sunday evening service at Grace Church.

Those who have received their Sunday school certificates and pins for perfect attendance during the last 12 months since our last report was made are: Messrs. Ora Pickett, Marvin Phillips and Master D. G. Fox.

Our regular Wednesday evening prayer services are becoming more interesting each week. Last Wednesday evening the Senior Philatheas conducted the services with Mrs. D. L. Johnson as leader; topic, "Women and Their Part in the Kingdom of God." The Young Men's Bible class will conduct the services this coming Wednesday night with Mrs. E. D. Woody as leader.

"The Trip Around the World," which was to have been given last Thursday evening by the Senior Christian Endeavorers, has been postponed because of sickness. Miss Minnie Cooper is now in St. Leo's Hospital where she underwent an operation for appendicitis. Miss Colie Siler has had an attack of influenza. Little Fannie Florence Forrester has been very sick with pneumonia. However, we are glad to say all the above are improving rapidly. REPORTER.

English Street.—Pastor Garner's sermons Sunday were just fine, morning and evening. He told us many things about the way we must live if we have a clear record above. He can make things so plain and simple that even the children can understand.

On Tuesday night of last week the Ladies' Aid held their monthly meeting with Mrs. Ridge on English street. Fifteen members were present and when the dues were collected there was $3.10 in the treasurer's hands. Some of the members brought different kinds of fancy-work with them and we priced all pieces and sold most of them before we adjourned. We decided to do the same thing at the next meeting. Mrs. Ridge knows how to make a cocoanut cake, for we all enjoyed that and other things.

The Junior Philathea Class which has named itself the Sunshine Band, met with Miss Iris Caudle on last Thursday night. The membership contest with the Baraca Class was discussed and these girls have planned to work real hard. The boys would better look out.

We are glad to report that Chief Gibson was back at church Sunday night walking with a cane and a broad smile on his face.

We have reorganized the Junior Endeavor Society under the leadership of Mrs. J. A. Bowers; there seems to be an unlimited field in which to work.

With best wishes to the editor and all Herald readers. MRS. J. A. LEE.

Pine Grove, Kernersville Charge.—We were very glad to have with us last Sunday at the 3 o'clock service Rev. S. W. Taylor, president. He delivered an inspirational message. In the beginning he spoke directly to the young people. Several illustrations were given emphasizing the fact that the young people can really be somebody that will be of great help to the world, or a hindrance, which ever way we may choose. We feel that the young people of today ought to take an active part in church work, for they will have to be the leaders some day.

He forcibly brought out that all inanimate objects of the earth are GIVING: the sun gives up heat and light; the flowers give us beauty and fragrance. Such as we have therefore are we expected to give; such as we do give either helps people upward or downward. If we have hatred, jealousy, stinginess, selfishness, malice, or impurity in our hearts, such do we give. On the other hand, if we have love, kindness, courage, loyalty, bravery, honesty, and uprightness, such do we give to help people on to higher and nobler things.

We are very sorry that sickness kept several of our members from service Sunday.

The parsonage for this charge is already beginning to look like a preacher's home. We hope that it will soon be completed.

BESSIE COOKE, Reporter.

High Point.—At the junior church service the associate pastor, Rev. E. L. Ballard, gave the children some interesting facts about the formation and early history of the church. He has been asked to repeat this talk at the mid-week prayer service on Wednesday evening. The founders of the denomination and its early history should be of great interest to our people of all ages.

At the 11 o'clock service Dr. Spahr delivered an appealing message on Love. He said that he felt it his bounden duty to set forth to his hearers the beauties and possibilities of the Christian life. It is a great thing to know that there is something that will never fail; greater than faith that can remove mountains, and greater than hope, without which men are of all creatures the most miserable—love. Nothing is more beautiful than Jesus' forbearance with Judas, with Peter, and with us, His poor, erring children. There is not as much kindness in the home, the church, and the world as there might be. We should not be content till we reach the Christian ideal in our attitude toward others.

At the evening service, Rev. P. E. Lindley brought a splendid and effective message.

The Missionary Circles met Monday afternoon.

Friday, February 24th, will be observed by our women with a prayer service at the church at 3 o'clock, p. m. This is a world-wide day of prayer for missions.

A shower for Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Tussey was held at their home on her birthday, last Thursday, February 16th (Mr. Tussey's coming Monday, February 20th). Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Ballard and a number of friends met at the home, held a brief prayer service and presented her with a number of gifts, all of which made her very happy. Mrs. Tussey is an invalid, having recently returned home from a stay of 17 weeks in High Point Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Auman are receiving the congratulations of many friends upon the arrival of a little daughter, Betty Doris, on February 17th. Mr. and Mrs. Auman have recently moved to their attractive new home on Montlieu Avenue, near the college.

A little son arrived on February 16th at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gorrell Payne, and he will bear the name of Charles William Payne.

We are grieved to announce that Mrs. W. C. Hammond, the efficient and popular secretary of the Board of Public Welfare, is in Guilford General Hospital for treatment and rest after a breakdown as the result of diphtheria and over-work. Her physician says she must stay a month or more.

Mrs. George Sockwell, who has been spending a few days with her aunt, Mrs. D. A. Neese, has returned to her home near Gibsonville.

Mrs. George R. Brown, of Reidsville, came over Thursday afternoon to attend a meeting of the Executive Board of Missionary Societies with Mrs. E. L. Ballard at the parsonage.

Dr. J. H. Straughn, of Washington, D. C., will occupy the pulpit next Sunday morning, when the interest of the Centennial Gratitude Gift will be presented.

Miss Emma Lewis Whitaker, of class of 1927, High Point College,, who is teaching at Liberty, N. C., spent the week-end with her aunt, Mrs. C. L. Whitaker.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Auman are building a home on Montlieu Avenue, which will soon be ready for occupancy.

Upon invitation, Mrs. R. M. Andrews will go to Asheboro next Friday and give a summary of the Mission Study book, "A Straight Way Toward Tomorrow," before the Missionary Societies.

Miss Pearl Leonard will be hostess to Circle No. 4 of the Foreign Missionary Society on Thursday evening at her home. Mrs. Lester Peacock will be the leader.

Miss Martin, who has been librarian at the public library since the opening in September, 1926, has resigned the position on account of her health, and Miss Lucille Pickens has been elected acting librarian for a few months. Miss Pickens has been Miss Martin's assistant.

Fairview.—Due to measles we have had very small numbers for Sunday school and preaching service. Our pastor, Rev. T. A. Williams, gave us two splendid sermons February 12. We always enjoy his sermons.

Our Sunday school rooms are now completed. We are very proud of them and feel that they are going to be a great help in our Sunday school work.

The Baracas are planning a dedication service for their first Sunday in their new room. They want every member of the class present on that day and those that have been members and are not a permanent member of another Sunday school. The time will be appointed soon.

Our former Sunday school superintendent, Mr. E. H. Somers, was severely burned a few weeks ago while filling his tractor with gasoline. May God comfort him in his affliction.

Pray for us in our work for the Master.

PAULINE TROXLER, Reporter.

Laurel Hill.—Bro. J. M. Morgan brought us an impressive sermon Sunday, February 12. He gave us some splendid thoughts.

Sickness in our community is keeping some from church.

We have a good Sunday school. It is not as large as we could make it, but the attendance is good. The people seem more interested in the Sunday school work now than for some time. REPORTER.

Salem, Saxapahaw Charge.—Last Sunday Rev. O. C. Loy brought to us another one of his splendid sermons.

Our Sunday school is moving along very nicely, and we are looking for it to be much better in the spring. We are going to build Sunday school rooms in the early spring. A donation of $25 by Mr. B. W. Durham, of Kannapolis, was appreciated very much.

Born to Rev. and Mrs. O. C. Loy last Thursday a daughter.

Miss Ossie Overman has been sick with measles. REPORTER.

Grace Church.—Wednesday evening, February 15, "The Color Line," a modern play, was given by the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. The play deals with the struggles of a Chinese student in one of our American colleges. He is not treated as a Christian, and is not taken in by any of the students. He renounces Christianity, but, when he hears that troops, led by his father, have killed the man that was responsible for his conversion, he changes his mind. He goes back to instill the Christian principles into the hearts of his countrymen.

The play was given under the direction of Mrs. J. M. Stone. Those taking part were Misses Irene Hester, Lucille Sharpe and Ruth Simpson, Mr. R. F. Williams, Lindsay Moore, and Carl Jones, Jr. A freewill offering was taken amounting to $51. Before the play Misses Mitchell and Richards entertained the audience with vocal and violin selections, accompanied by Mrs. J. Norman Wills.

Our Sunday school continues to grow under the efficient superintendency of Mr. R. C. Millikan and his splendid assistants.

One of the outstanding classes of this Sunday school is the "Jinx" Class, or Class No. 13, taught by Mr. F. R. Stout. Last Sunday this class reached its goal of 20 consecutive star classes. This does not mean that it will stop there, but will strive to have 26 Sundays of perfect attendance. The class started out with eight members, and now has an enrollment of 22. A banquet will be given Thursday evening to celebrate this event.

Another added feature of the Sunday school is the newly-formed orchestra, composed of six pieces. The playing of the orchestra adds much to the musical program of the Sunday school. C. J. J.

Mt. Ebal.—We have presented the M. P. C. G. G. at all the churches except Cid and Jerusalem. All the churches have responded, doing their part well. I promised to report for Mt. Ebal this week. The other churches are reporting these special services. Mt. Ebal is one of our weak country churches so far as membership is concerned, but we have some loyal Methodist Protestants at this church. When the Gratitude Gift was presented last Sunday afternoon, they gladly did their part. They have a little over-subscribed their proportional part of the $200 apportioned to this church. We will have no trouble going over the top on this charge.

E. A. BINGHAM, Pastor.

Denton.—Sunday was Methodist Protestant Day here. The weather was extremely cold and there were not as many present as usual. Brother Bingham explained the M. P. C. G. G. and made an interesting service. The quota for this church was $107.88. Brother Bingham presented the situation so clearly and forcefully that there was but very little trouble to get the required amount pledged and over-pledged about $20. Everyone that pledged seemed to do so gladly and freely. We certainly commend the spirit in which the people here go about financial matters. Sunday night there was a reading of the history of the M. P. Church. The pastor took one of the leading parts. Others taking parts were Misses Blanche Hoover, Ruth Lanier and Inza Hill, Messrs. Arthur Lanier and Clay Loflin. This program was real interesting and enjoyed by all present. I think every Methodist Protestant should certainly love and appreciate their church better after these services.

There were five new members received into the church Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock service. These were Mrs. B. T. Atkins, Miss Esther Atkins, William S. Atkins, Mrs. Margaret Curry and J. U. Lanier. We cordially welcome these members into our midst.

There will be a union meeting in our church beginning at night, February 28. This meeting is to be conducted by the M. E. South, Baptist, and M. P. churches. The pastors of the different churches will do the preaching. We hope and pray that this may be a great revival.

The Ladies' Aid Society has finished a nice woolen quilt. This quilt is a name quilt and has somewhere near 200 names on it at ten cents a name. The quilt is to go to the Children's Home at High Point.

A MEMBER.

Hollister.—We haven't a large Sunday school, but we have a few faithful members who are always present unless they are hindered by sickness.

Pastor Spencer delivered a splendid message last Sunday night. There were lots of compliments, but all of his sermons are good.

Brother Spencer is busy soliciting subscriptions to the Herald. He hopes to reach the goal now soon. I think the Herald should be in every Methodist Protestant home; in fact, I don't see how it can be a real M. P. home unless they have the Herald in it. It should be read in every M. P. home. To me the Herald is next to the Bible. It read it from page to page every week and I think it is well worth its cost. May God bless the Herald and its readers.

KATHLEEN SHEARIN, Reporter.

Flat Rock, Vance.—Yesterday was a good day at Flat Rock. Pastor Chambliss gave us the best sermon yet. Many of his remarks were directly to the young people. After the service our pastor talked of the Gratitude Gift and said He thought we might arrange a special service for some Sunday afternoon or evening to arouse and stimulate interest.

The attendance at Sunday school was not quite so good as usual, but think it due largely to bitter cold weather.

The Ladies' Aid gave a very enjoyable Valentine party on the evening of the 14th at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Reavis. After games and fun of various kinds, Mrs. Reavis brought out a lovely fortune cake. Then the cutting up began. Eats were sold to the amount of about $25.

On the evening of February 11th Mrs. B. W. Jones entertained her Sunday school class of boys and girls at her home. The evening was spent in games and fun, everyone having a jolly good time and declaring Mrs. Jones a grand hostess. Delicious refreshments were served.

The W. H. M. S. will hold its February meeting on Thursday afternoon of this week with Mrs. U. J. Parrott as hostess. In addition to the work and regular program plans will be made for another effort to organize the young people of our church in missionary work.

M. V. W., Reporter.

Bellemont, Mt. Hermon Charge.—Much interest is shown in our Sunday school. We have 144 on our roll. We hope when spring comes that we will have a better attendance.

Owing to the weather January 27th, Bellemont was the only Christian Endeavor Society represented at the union meeting held at Bellemont schoolhouse. We had about 30 young and old people present. Several very helpful talks were made on Christian Endeavor work. After the social hour, refreshments were served. All reported a nice time.

On February 5th Coble township Sunday school institute was held at Bellemont. We were very fortunate in having Mr. P. E. Lindley, dean of High Point College; Mr. E. S. W. Dameron, of Burlington, and Mr. P. S. Dixon, of Graham, as speakers. A large crowd attended this service. It was very interesting and helpful to all Sunday school workers. All the Sunday schools of the township were represented except St. Paul's Lutheran church.

Mrs. Paul Lowder, who is music teacher in the Edwin M. Holt High School, had the misfortune of breaking her ankle and has been confined to her home for quite a while. We are missing her at the church services and hope that she will soon be able to worship with us.

Mrs. Lacy Sharpe, who had a stroke of paralysis some time ago, continues in feeble health.

Mrs. Will Bunton, of Burlington, was laid to rest in Bellemont cemetery Monday, February 6th. Quite a large crowd attended the funeral services, which showed the esteem with which she was held in her community. Our sympathy goes out to the bereaved family.

Our pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, gave us another one of his splendid sermons this afternoon. We have three sermons a month, the second Sunday afternoon, third Sunday evening, and the fourth Sunday morning.

With all good wishes to our Herald readers.

Bethesda, Halifax Charge.—Mr. Spencer gave us a good talk yesterday on the subject of stewardship. The congregation was smaller than usual, however, on account of measles in the community.

After much discussion, the regular fourth Sunday night appointment has been changed, tentatively, to the first Sunday night.

Rev. N. M. Harrison has agreed to give us, at least temporarily, an 11 o'clock appointment for the third Sundays. Let us see to it that more preaching makes us better.

The Ladies' Aid will dispense with their usual monthly meeting this time, since measles has the "right of way." (We don't dare to hint that it is a "measley" arrangement. No indeed!)

They have taken in a further small amount of money from a sale and hope soon to have some repairs made on the church building.

A CALL TO PRAYER

If radio's slim fingers
Can pluck a melody
From night and toss it over
A continent or sea;

If the petaled white notes
Of a violin
Are blown across a mountain,
Or a city's din;

If songs, like crimson roses,
Are culled from thin blue air,
Why should mortals wonder
If God hears prayer?

HOME AND FOREIGN AUXIALIARIES AND CORRESPONDING SECRETARIES

At the joint session of the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies at the Branch meeting in Henderson last year, the Committee on Education with its report made some recommendations and offered three awards for educational work during the year 1927-28.

If I am not mistaken the report was adopted and referred to the Education Committee of the two Branches. Lacking a permanent secretary of the joint session, the report which was turned over to the temporary secretary was lost and has never been presented to the anxiliaries unless by delegates with unusually good memories. Since the last Executive Committee meeting Mrs. Ballard, who was appointed reporter for the Branch meeting, has given me a copy of the part of the report which she had in her notes, so I am writing this to urge any or all auxiliaries which have at the end of the year (March 31) become eligible for either of the three Education Awards to state this fact in the fourth quarterly reports to the Corresponding Secretary of your Branch, who will please notify the Education Committee not later than one week before Branch meeting. Any later than this you can readily see would leave too little time for your committee to decide on and prepare suitable rewards.

Following are the conditions of the awards:

Award No. 1—To the Home and Foreign Auxiliaries meeting jointly and holding 12 inspirational programs during the year, and completing the two study-books, "Our Templed Hills" and "A Straight Way Toward Tomorrow."

Award No. 2—To the Home Missionary Auxiliary which holds 12 programs as outlined by the Program Committee of the Executive Board, and completes the study book, "Our Templed Hills."

Award No. 3—To the Foreign Auxiliary holding 12 inspirational programs a year and completing the study-book, "A Straight Way Toward Tomorrow." Also at least one-half the members of the auxiliary must have found answers to all the questions in the Question Box during the year.

I hope there will be a large number of auxiliaries who have met all these conditions.

Yours sincerely,

MRS. R. M. ANDREWS.

A BIRTHDAY PARTY

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Calvary church will hold their Thank-Offering service Wednesday night, February 29th, in the church hut. At this time they will celebrate three birthdays with real cakes and candles. Miss Annie L. Forrest will be the guest of honor.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

A Letter From Rev. J. F. Minnis

Dhulia, India, Jan. 6, 1928.

Dear Dr. Rosenberger:

I wish to thank you for the check you sent for Christmas. I wish it were possible for you and all those who sent it to know how much we and the whole community appreciate your efforts. It saved the day for us and gave us a good feeling while we would have spent a wretched Christmas without it. I think I am safe in saying that this has been the best Christmas we have ever had in the mission.

On the 23rd of December the fun began and it lasted until Monday, the 2nd of January. Before the holidays we appointed a committee to make a program for the week. On Christmas eve we gave out the gifts, as Christmas was on Sunday. Everyone seemed happy and no one complained that there was not enough. I feel like we gave the boys very nice presents of toys, pencils, pens, belts and so on. We try to give a little extra and never count the clothing as gifts. The teachers all were given Rs. 5-0 each and all the laborers received Rs. 2.8. The women were given cloth for jackets or sardis. Besides the regular gifts we were able to have some sweets for the boys. They received sweets on three occasions and were given special food a time or two. This year Mr. and Mrs. Cassen, Dr. Lacy, Mrs. Minnis and I went out on Monday, the 26th, to shoot deer for the Christmas dinner. But there were no deer in the jungle we hunted in, so we were forced to take the second best and buy three sheep. While we had a plain meal yet it was very well prepared and tasted exceedingly well. All the people from the district, all those at the settlement farm, all those connected with the Boys' School, and all the Christian community living near the mission, ate of this dinner. The only ones left out were the girls of the Girls' School. They had their own special dinner. Were I to tell you how little this meal cost I fear that you would get the impression that it was not expensive to live in India. But on the other hand, if I were to tell you we had meat and butter and rice you might think that we had a cheap dinner in two respects. However, though it was not fancy, yet it was filling and in the end that is what pleases a lot of people. I have never seen a more pleasant crowd than we had this year. Were you able to have seen us all sitting on our feet, no one sitting at tables, and seen the long rows of boys and happy groups of women and the lanterns here and there you would never be able to erase the picture from your mind. It is a sight never to be forgotten. Everyone eating with fingers and yet no one with faces covered with food. When we come home we shall try to give you an Indian dinner and see if you can eat soup with your fingers.

The program for the week was like this—Saturday morning, 24th, was gift-giving morning. I received two Indian hats and another Indian cloth while Mrs. Minnis received a piece of cloth for some kind of Indian dress. Saturday night was a night of song. Sunday morning we had English service for the missionaries. Sunday afternoon we had a joint service. Another night of song by the community Sunday night. Monday night the teachers of the Boys' School entertained us with funny plays. Tuesday night we had the dinner and after the play there was a religious service for the Hindu people living near the mission. Wednesday evening the women, directed by our wives, gave a play. Thursday night the preachers entertained. Friday evening the girls gave a play in their compound. Saturday night the farm hands made us all laugh with their foolishness in the form of a play. Sunday being the first Sunday in the new year, we had the Lord's Supper and babies baptized. Monday afternoon the Settlement Farm men gave a show of special acting, and on Tuesday night the boys in the school wanted to give a play, so we allowed them to give the last play. The school opened on Wednesday and we all went to our work feeling glad that we had a good time and hoping that the next year will bring another just like it.

J. F. MINNIS.

HOME MISSIONS

The Home Missions Council

In my recent article on the Comity Conference, the Home Missions Council, the Council of Women for Home Missions and the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, held in Cleveland during January, I dwelt particularly on the Comity Conference which included the members of the other three organizations. In this article I shall endeavor to give some impressions concerning the Home Missions Council in which I was specially interested.

There was one joint session of this Council held with the Council of Women for Home Missions when matters of mutual interest to the two Councils were considered. The President of the Home Missions Council is Dr. C. L. White, a Baptist minister, of New York, and the Secretary is Dr. W. R. King, a Presbyterian minister, who was recently elected to the office. This Council is a self-constituted and self-perpetuating body composed of ministers, Secretaries of General Boards and representatives of various Protestant denominations, to eliminate competition and institute plans whereby waste may be avoided and better results accomplished in advancing our Lord's Kingdom.

The program, as outlined in the Secretary's report, is a very ambitious one extending through a period of five years. It has a wide range and includes many departments operating on a national scale. First, a survey of the whole field of inter-denominational comity in Home Missions. Second, an intensive and sustained effort to secure the indicated adjustments by the various denominational groups. Third, the elimination of all competition between denominations whose Boards are constituent to the Home Missions Council and the Council of Women for Home Missions. Fourth, the allocation of responsibility on a now competitive basis for the needed extension of Christian work and the securing of the acceptance of such allocations by the bodies concerned. That all Protestant denominational Home Mission and Church Extension Boards, national and regional Executives and Superintendents, pastors and local congregations becalled upon to give this movement cordial and whole-hearted co-operation to the end that comity may be quickly and completely realized. Again, that the program be given wide publicity that the whole church may be informed of the effort to bring the Protestant denominations into closer fellowship and more Christian co-operation in the common task of making America Christian.

Surely no one can object to, or be out of sympathy with this movement so ideal and lofty in its motive and end, nor do I think we need to have fear as to the spirit and purpose of those who are endeavoring to unite the Christian forces of our country in one common cause. However, such a far-reaching campaign as is here outlined will necessarily require much education of the great masses of our people who are bound by denominational ties and traditions, extending through generations and in many instances having deep-rooted convictions as to usages, doctrines and church polities.

The policy is to proceed on the basis that there shall be one church to approximately one thousand persons in a given community, this to be accomplished by a combination of all the Christian forces of such a community. The plan would be to retain the denomination best adapted in meeting the needs of that community. This would, as a rule, give what Dr. King in his report is pleased to call "the major denomination" the advantage. It would not be difficult to see the dissatisfaction, if not the injustice of an effort to carry forward such a program as expressed in the resolutions from which I have quoted that such an end "may be quickly and completely realized."

As I listened attentively to the discussion in Cleveland and have since studied the report of the Secretary and the recommendations, I have been profoundly impressed with the aim and purpose of the Council but have been just as deeply impressed with the fact that the whole scheme needs to be executed with the greatest possible wisdom and sagacity. While the purpose of the movement outlined is commendable and should receive the careful and prayerful consideration of Protestant churches, I do not think it can be carried forward with the expectation that the end sought "may be quickly and completely realized." There will be less difficulties to overcome in the section of our country more recently settled, and where the people have been separated from their own denominational churches, than in the east and south where the denominational ties are stronger and the local churches have been functioning for a long period of time.

J. M. SHERIDAN.

Brother Stubbins writes that Hickory Ridge has paid $30 college assessment and Maple Spring $40. This is in full for each of these churches, he says. We trust that every charge will make a strenuous effort to secure the college assessment. The college can't run without money, and it MUST run.

Two new charges are added to our list this week—Connelly Springs, Rev. D. M. Dew, pastor, and West Thomasville, Rev. G. W. Andrews, pastor. This gives us a total of 67 charges enrolled to date. Twenty-five charges have no credits. We trust that this number may be reduced by at least five in our next report. Let's hurry until this 25 vanishes. Thank you, brethren.

We know that the winter months make the work seem very slow on many of the fields; but we must not lose heart. Spring is nearly here, and with it will come new life and new endeavor. We can only do our best, and when that is done there will be no occasion to worry about results.

The blessings of the great Head of the Church upon you all. Amen.

Moody Bible Institute Dedicates Enlarged Radio Station

Much interest centered in the dedication of the new super-power Moody Bible Institute radio station, WMBI, on Friday evening, January 20. The increase of power from 500 watts to 5,000 was permitted by the Federal Radio Commission on condition that the aerial towers and transmitter be located outside the Chicago city limits.

Six and one-half acres of ground were secured at Addison, 21 miles northwest, and a brick structure for the housing of the most effective and modern radio apparatus has been completed. The building provides living apartments for the operators, reception rooms for visitors, and every convenience for efficient service.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Resolutions of Respect

It is with hearts full of sadness that we, the members of the Missionary Society of Flat Rock church, record the death of Mrs. Julia A. Hester, whose faithfulness and patience through long years of illness should be an example for us.

In her death the husband has lost a true wife, the children a devoted mother, the church a faithful member; although unable to attend service for several years she was always interested in its progress.

Therefore, be it resolved:

First, that we be submissive to the divine will.

Second, that we would remember always her sweet and gracious disposition, her gentleness and willingness to serve.

Third, that we extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved family and commend them to the Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well.

Fourth, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy spread upon the minutes of the Missionary Society, and a copy be sent the Methodist Protestant Herald for publication.

MARY V. WHITE,
MRS. U. J. PARROTT,
MRS. T. P. HESTER.

Porter

Fred N. Porter, the son of the late William and Eliza Porter, of near Rocky Swamp, was born in September, 1834. In 1871 he was married to Annie E. Benton. To this union 15 children were born, nine of whom lived to be grown and married. Six preceded their father to the glory world during childhood and early life. Brother Porter gave us a picture of his loyalty and patriotism by serving with the 18-year-old boys in the war between the states for a period of two years. Untrained in the use of implements of war and military tactics, but ready and willing to do his bit for his country, he served and did mostly guard duty while in the great conflict of the '60's. Because of his age he was never in the battles and came through without injuries. He served with John Allen and Bill Sanders, of near Louisburg, N. C. Young though a brave soldier willing to do his part to save his country and protect his home and native land which was made to run red with human blood, later to flourish with growing crops which gave comfort and strength to those who labored and suffered hardships while he was in the conflict. The deceased lived and made his place in the world by honest dealings and faithful service. He owned and operated a large farm near Hollister, N. C., until stricken with typhoid fever some five years ago. The disease leaving him physically unable to do the work required on the farm, he moved to Hollister, N. C., where he made his home until his death.

Brother Porter was a member of the Methodist Protestant Church. During his early life he chose as his church Eden M. P. Church near Enfield, N. C. Later in life and after making his home at Hollister, he moved his membership there and was a liberal contributor and active in the erection of the present M. P. Church where he labored faithfully until he was called to his reward. He will be missed in the activities of his church as well as in the community in which he lived.

Surviving besides his widow, Mrs. Annie E. Porter, his faithful and devoted companion for nearly 57 years, are the following relatives: Mrs. J. R. Powers and Mrs. W. F. White, of Enfield, N. C.; Exum, Ivey, Laddy and Miss Annie May Porter, of near Hollister; Mrs. J. W. Warren and Curtis Porter, of Littleton, and W. C. Porter, of Vaughan, N. C.; also 27 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

The funeral service was conducted by his pastor, Rev. C. L. Spencer, of Enfield, N. C., assisted by Rev. J. Clyde Auman, also of Enfield, and Rev. M. Ivey Crutchfield, of Littleton, N. C. Willing and ready, he laid down his work here and slipped away to be with Him who calls his children to be with Him. Truly a good man has gone from among us. A place has been made vacant here, but one has been filled in the Mansion above. In His wisdom God calls his servants from this into fuller and more noble service; thus our brother was called. Hearts are sad and eyes are filled with tears when we think of his going to a better land, but we should rejoice and strive to follow in his footsteps, and be willing to say with Wesley,

"Servant of God, well done!
Thy glorious warfare's past;
The battle's fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last."

A FRIEND.

Ridge

On July 4, 1927, there was born into the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sam F. Ridge, of High Point, a son, a rosebud, sent from God. A babe who always had a smile for every one, that made you have pleasant thoughts. A babe with bright eyes, round face, a very picture of health. But God only loaned Carl for seven months and four days to this earth, for the pleasure of the young parents, grandfathers, grandmothers, uncles, and aunts; for on February 9, 1928, about 4 o'clock in the morning he was called back. He was sick for three weeks; at first he was not considered seriously ill, but when he developed pneumonia his loved ones began to realize his small voice was soon to be stilled. Although all was done that watchful care and loving hands could do to restore his life, God's hand stopped the pain forever in his body and he went to sleep. Asleep in Jesus. Oh! how sweet!

The young father and mother cannot bring little Carl back, but by living the true life to Him who understands it, all they can go to Carl.

May they cling more closely to Him who bringeth life out of death.

As we look into his little bed
From which a pure spirit has fled,
We cannot the purpose all understand.
But if true, there'll be a day we can.

MRS. J. A. LEE.

Holder

In the early morning of February 5, 1928, the spirit of our beloved brother, Mr. W. H. Holder, passed through the vale and shadow of death to dwell in that home for which he had been making preparation for a good many years.

Brother Holder was 67 years of age when God called him home. He was a good man and a loyal member of the First M. P. Church of Winston-Salem. He professed faith in Christ early in life and had given the greater part of his life to the service of God. He was twice married. His first marriage was to Miss Susan Jane Dawson. To this marriage four children were born, who survive: Mrs. E. M. Arington, Mrs. F. L. Speas, L. M. Holder and J. A. Holder. His second marriage was to Mrs. Sadie Ramsey, who survives. The funeral was held in Mt. Tabor M. E. Church, conducted by the writer, assisted by Brothers Staley Myers and R. C. Stubbins.

Brother Holder was a great sufferer for 12 months or more and he bore it all with that Christian fortitude that characterized his life as a Christian citizen. When the call came he was ready and we believe his spirit is resting with his Saviour where there is no suffering.

May the Lord abundantly bless and comfort those who are bereaved in the passing of this servant of God.

HISTORICAL EXHIBIT

During the month of May two great bodies of the Methodist Protestant Church, the Young Peoples' Convention and the General Conference, are to meet in Baltimore, Maryland, the cradle of Methodist Protestantism, during which time the Drinkhouse Memorial Room at the Headquarters Building, No. 516 North Charles Street, will be converted into a historical museum where will be placed on exhibition relics, manuscripts, photographs of prominent men and places in the history of the Methodist Protestant Church, which should prove both interesting and instructive. In order that this exhibit may be as compete as possible the request is being sent out through our church papers, asking that anyone having articles of real historical value, and who will loan them for this exhibition, will please get in touch with the undersigned at as early date as possible.

WHY THE METHODIST PROTESTANT HYMNAL SHOULD BE USED IN OUR CHURCHES

Some of the reasons why we should use our own hymnal in our church services are:

First, because it is prepared for Methodist Protestants. Although it contains hymns sung by all denominations, it has been edited, compiled and published by and for Methodist Protestants. The Order of Public Worship, adopted by our General Conference for use in our own churches, may be found in the front of the book. The various ceremonies, marriage, baptism, reception of members, Lord's Supper, etc., are contained therein. No other such hymnal is published for the churches of our denomination!

Second, it contains the precious old hymns that have been sung for centuries by Christians. For those who are averse to overemphasizing denominationalism in this day of federation and union, this hymnal is entirely suitable. It could be used in a mixed congregation of Presbyterians, Methodist Episcopals, Friends, and others, and a large sufficiency of hymns found which all could sing.

Third, it is useful in all services. Not only may it be used in the regular Sunday preaching services, but prayer meeting, Sunday school and Christian Endeavor as well. It contains hymns of praise, thanksgiving, adoration, activity, etc., which children and young people love to sing. Likewise hymns of prayer, justification, trial, trust, heaven, etc., are found within its covers for use of the more mature Christians.

Fourth, it is reasonable in price. One copy may be bought for 85 cents, while a quantity of five or more may be purchased for 75 cents each with delivery charges extra. Considering the wealth of material for worship, the substantial and high-class workmanship, which will assure its lasting qualities far beyond many of those of cheaper grades, it is indeed very reasonable. SPEAKERS WANTED

In carrying forward the work of the Anti-Saloon League the writer, as superintendent, has found that there are scores of invitations which he cannot fill. The liquorites are becoming more and more active. The foes of liquor are also very much alive.

For some weeks I have been arranging a list of volunteer speakers, both men and women, representatives of all churches and all parties, who—like the Four-Minute Speakers and other volunteers during the World War, when we were fighting a foreign foe—propose to speak to schools, clubs, churches and other gatherings in the interest of our prohibition cause and against the return of the outlawed liquor traffic.

I shall be glad to hear from such volunteers who would give one or more Sundays in this campaign work during the year. We are hoping to have at least one hundred such speakers. Our list now contains something over twenty. In order to get out our printed matter and to get ready for action, it is necessary that the names of the volunteers be in this office on or before the first day of March Who will help us?

Sincerely yours,

C. A. UPCHURCH, Supt.

What Is Spirituality?

Perhaps no religious term is more misused than the word spirituality. The term is applied to persons and to special acts and to the entire life. It is to be expected that a spiritual person will perform spiritual acts and live a spiritual life. But what is a spiritual person? Conceptions differ, hence the diversity in the application of the term.

To some, spirituality is synonymous with emotionality. To them, the emotional man is the spiritual man. But it is obvious from observation of different types of people that emotionality is a matter of natural temperament. Some people are more emotional than others because they were born so—in their first birth. But spirituality is derived in the second birth, conferred by the Spirit of God in the new birth that Jesus referred to in his conversation with Nicodemus. It is a quality or power not possessed by souls that have never come under the power of the Holy Spirit. Such persons may be in a high degree emotional, but they are not spiritually-minded.

Spirituality may stir the emotions, doubtless will do so, but the fact that the emotions are stirred is not evidence that the nature has been made spiritual. The carnal mind may play upon the emotions. Tears are not necessarily the result of real contrition or godly sorrow. Shouts may be heard from those who are still carnal.

Spirituality produces results in the life that emotionality can only simulate. We doubt whether any better definition of spirituality can be framed than we find in the New Testament in describing the operation or the fruits of the Spirit. Jesus spoke of the fact that the Holy Spirit will bring to our minds the truths He had declared. In the parable of the sower we see that Satan makes it his business to take away the word of truth, make us forget it, but the Holy Spirit makes us remember and helps us to recall the truth that Jesus spoke. He thus fashions the content of our consciousness, helping us to keep our thought on the things that are high and holy and inspiring, the revealed truth of God.

Further than this, the Holy Spirit helps us to realize the meaning of the truth for us, helps us to apply the truth to our own consciences and life. He shows us the way of duty for us and awakens in us a desire to live the right kind of a life.

The influence of this new spirituality begotten by the Spirit of God within us passes over into the domain of our feelings and produces peace and hope and happiness. In the last chapter of his letter to the Galatians Paul contrasts the products of the carnal mind with the products of the spiritual mind, saying hat "the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." A tree is known by its fruit, so is a human soul. Spirituality in the soul will exhibit itself in the life.

"The Bible cannot be used in the public schools," but twelve states do it.

Jesus' Other Sheep

Jesus said to the Canaanitish woman, "I am not sent save to the lost sheep of the house of Israel." He felt that his earthly ministry was to be limited to his own people, the Jews. Yet when outsiders (Gentiles) appealed to him for help he never refused to give it so far as we know. His heart was not bound by race prejudice. His special concern was for his own people, but in his heart was a craving for the uplift and salvation of all the people of the world. Near the end of his life he said: "Other sheep I have which are not of this (Jewish) fold: them also I must bring that there may be one fold and one shepherd." Who were the other sheep? And what did Jesus mean by bringing them and forming of the whole one fold?

It seems clear that the other sheep were people of the Gentile world, such as would accept Him when they knew about Him, and that by bringing them Jesus meant evangelizing them so that they could intelligently accept Jesus as their Good Shepherd. All who accept Jesus Christ as the great Shepherd of the sheep are in the one fold. It matters not into how many denominations they may be divided, the acceptance of Jesus as Lord and Savior puts them into the fold of Christ. If all were brought into one ecclesiastical organization, they would not be in the fold of Christ any more truly than they are now.

—In October we printed a parable entitled "A Man from Maine." We have received inquiries from Maryland and from Pennsylvania as to the meaning of it. This week we received an interpretation of it from North Carolina. We do not recall what suggested the writing of the article, but we recall that our purpose was only to set forth the narrowness and foolishness of our early prejudices against that with which we are not familiar. We meant no rebuke for anybody except those who cling to and fondle their prejudices when they ought to have outgrown and discarded them.

—According to our findings, the following charges have reached their quotas in the number of HERALD subscriptions: Asheboro, Charlotte, Graham, Calvary, Grace, State Street, Mebane, Moriah, Orange, Liberty-Siler City, Rockingham, Union Grove, and Vance. Orange heads the list in numbers with 81; Vance comes next with 65, and Liberty-Siler City follows with 49. There may be small errors in our count, as in a few cases we could not determine from what charge subscriptions came.

—Some of our contributors could help us by contributing earlier in the week. There must be a last day for receiving matter for publication each week, but if all wait till the last day, it becomes impossible to get all matter in. Please send in as early as the nature of your subject-matter will permit.

—Brother Hendry writes from Concord that there have been about 25 conversions in his meeting conducted by Rev. J. C. Cowell. The meeting will continue through this week. Nine united with the church last Sunday.

JESUS AND THE HUNGER FOR HEALTH

(Luke 8:43-44)

One of the great surprises to the world is the fact that Jesus is not the Saviour of men's souls alone, but their bodies as well. To be in sound health was a strong feature of His religion. To emphasize this part of His work, most of the records of His life tell of His sympathy for the sick and give the history of their wonderful cures. In this incident of the text we have a concrete example of the human hunger for health. A common but sad sight to watch the pitiful struggle for health. Of what use is wealth in comparison? I know of nothing more abused than health. None of us value it as we should. We should keep in mind that God can do more with a healthy body than with a sickly one. The three-fold ministry of Jesus is being more emphasized than ever before—teaching, healing, preaching. To the appeal of the sick, He responded quickly. Even now, He is interested in and wants to help us. Outside of the salvation of our souls there is nothing, I think, in which He is more interested than in our health. He is anxious for us to keep well not only for our own sake but for His also. It is a shame that we have been so long in discovering the place of Jesus in all things that concern human life. He is still deeply interested in all things that affect the body as well as the soul. He was not too busy to pause when the helpless woman, summoning all her strength, reached forth her hand to touch Him. All had been spent in her search for health; ready to grasp at anything, she found her cure in Jesus. Did you ever notice as you read the history of His life how many times it is recorded that "He healed the sick." The Holy Man of Sorrows was, and still is, "touched with a feeling of our infirmities." His holy human body knew the pains and suffering that yours and mine feel. I would not have you think that I believe for a moment in the so-called Christian Science, which upon investigation is found to be neither Christian nor Science. Neither would I have you substitute Mrs. Eddy's "Science and Health" for the teachings of Jesus. But I would call your attention to what Jesus did and is still doing for the sick and suffering. "Greater works than these shall ye do," said He, and when I think of the Christian hospitals and faithful Christian nurses and physicians; of the wonderful surgical operations, of the many persons recovering from dreadful sickness, I wonder if these are not some of the things He had in mind when He spoke. Through the skillful fingers of the surgeon, He touches the body and it lives. I repeat that human life is a most precious thing to Jesus and anything that conserves and prolongs it is richly blessed of Him. I wish to call your attention to two great elements that enter into life and in more or less degree affect it in every way.

And the first is food. People must eat. They must eat to live. Not only so, but they must have wholesome food. I do not mean luxuries, but nourishing food, that which will build up the system and strengthen the body. What did Jesus eat? Being of Jewish family, He no doubt conformed to the Mosaic bill of fare. Of meats, only that which had the cloven hoof and chewed the cud. This would eliminate pork. It would produce dyspepsia and indigestion. He could not afford to eat anything that would injure His body. Vegetables, fruits and all fish that had fins and scales and swam in the sea. Bread. Such was His bill of fare. As a sequence, His body was strong. He was well. He practiced what He preached. His was really "the simple life." He loved the great out of doors, fresh air, warm sunshine, fresh good water and plenty of refreshing sleep. It has not been so many years since a great change came, and now the same treatment which Jesus used is being prescribed by all our best doctors. In the mad rush for money some years ago, a few meat packers and canners caused the death of thousands through impure food. So that there arose a great cry for reform and the Son of God through legislation gave us the Pure Food law. The law-makers came to recognize the fact that if the nation is to be strong they must have pure food to eat.

Jesus needs live, well people in His vineyards. As a rule they do the best work and prove to be the best servants who have strong bodies in which to work. "Know ye not that your bodies are the temple of the Holy Ghost? Who so defiles the temple of God, him shall God destroy, for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are." Pretty strong words these are. More men were driven to the saloon for drink through dirty kitchens and half-cooked food or overdone, than anything else. Some of us spend a great deal of time in cleaning the parlor and front of the house, but if you want to see how the family live, look in the kitchen and pantry. We often trust the health of the family to a colored woman in the kitchen who has plenty of opportunity to put whatever she pleases in our food, and we ask no question as to the cleanliness of the kitchen, or cook either, for that matter. I thank God with all my soul that the nation is waking up to the truth that it is more important to teach our daughters how to make good bread and cook a decent meal than to learn the latest stitch in fancy work or the last steps in a modern dance. The health of the nation lies in the kitchen and when the pans are clean and the meals well-cooked and served, a great many doctors will seek other professions.

If we boiled more and fried less, there would be less need of the doctor and less suffering from indigestion. The doctors and hospitals live and grow fat on the frying pan and lard can. A certain business man whom I knew real well was asked whom he had for his cook, and he proudly answered: "Gentlemen, I married her." Blessed indeed is the wife and mother who knows how to care for the health of her family. "The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her."

And the second element is activity.

I have not time to discuss this part of our subject as I would like and keep within the limits of this paper. But again, I refer to the life and example of Jesus. Always busy. He went about, not aimlessly, but doing good. Now, I submit to you that if it is a religious duty to pray, it is also a religious duty to clean up. From the parlor to the kitchen, or if you please, begin at the kitchen. If it pleases God for you to read the Bible, it also pleases Him for you to clean up and stay clean.

There is never any shame attached to good wholesome, hard work, whatever it is. Jesus was a carpenter and I am sure whatever He made was made good. It was a long time coming back to the shop for repairs. It is not sufficient that we "be something," we must also "do something." Had you ever thought what a busy life Jesus led, all day long and often far into the night, day after day.

> "This is the gospel of labor,
> Ring it, ye bells of the kirk;
> The Lord of love came down from above
> To live with the fellows who work."

What a change has taken place in a few years. I can remember the bitter cry of the sweat shop, which brought to birth the Employers Liability law and compelled the great manufacturers to give a good, decent, clean, safe place in which to work. The germ-laden garment can no longer be placed on the market with the prison staring the manufacturer in the face. I am old-fashioned enough to believe that there is more virtue in soap and hot water and towel than many a prescription which is taken to the drug store. The spirit of the mighty Son of God is still abroad in the land and we must work while it is day.

The closing word of this article is just this. Jesus wants to work through your body. He asks you to give it to Him. Let Him take possession of it and use it for His glory, that He may bring out of it the sweetness and beauty that He knows is there. Jesus asks of you, your life, not alone that you may spend it for Him, but for others as well. Give it to Him. Give in the conscious fact that in strict obedience to the simple laws of health which He followed, He will make you stronger and better; better able to battle with life and conquer; better able to lay down the body at the close of earthly life in the blessed consciousness that you have fought a good fight. May God help you to win for Jesus' sake. Amen.

THE CHRIST OF THE INDIAN ROAD

The Christ of the Indian Road, by E. Stanley Jones, is quite a readable, fascinating book. But "the Christ of the Indian Road" is not the Christ of Calvary; not the suffering, dying Christ who gave His blood as an atonement for the sins of the world. The Christ of the Indian Road is a Christ of the imagination. Beautiful to look at, but powerless to save, a rationalistic, man-conceived Christ that does not offend the high caste Hindu, but powerless to save. There is only one Christ, not an Indian Christ, nor a Chinese Christ, nor a Japanese Christ, nor any other Christ but the Christ of Calvary. All others are false Christs.

W. K. Norton, born and reared in India, his father, Albert Norton, a missionary before him, does not picture India in the beautiful, glowing colors that E. Stanley Jones does. But W. K. Norton, and his father before him, have moved among the low castes of the most abject poverty and sin, for half a century or more, preaching and teaching the Christ of Calvary, and they have found resistance, not a human triumph, by catering to the Hindu religion, by offering an aesthetic human Christ, with the Divine left out. No blood sacrifice nor atonement. A Christ not mighty to save. E. Stanley Jones' Christ takes the "way of least resistance."

The Christ of the Indian Road is the Christ of modernism, not the Christ of the ages, suffering, dying—"mighty to save." We have to meet with the first sound, orthodox writer, speaker, or paper that endorses the book as a whole. Beware!

J. F. DOSIER.

Considerable resentment has been expressed against alleged attempts on the part of religious groups to impose their will upon legislative bodies and government officials. For years manufacturers' associations and similar commercial groups have maintained their lobbies and expended vast sums upon propaganda designed to secure governmental action favorable to their interests. It is strange that intelligent citizens should become alarmed when those whose only aim is the betterment of the conditions of life exercise such influence as they can legitimately command to secure needed legislative action.—The American Child.

"BESIDE ALL WATERS"

Her assignment was to hospital visitation. Yes, she was a Moody student, having surrendered a fine position in the city to meet the terms of her consecration, and to prepare for Christian service.

As she passed down the ward that day, speaking her kind word, handing out a helpful tract here and there, she was about to pass by a bed whereupon was a young woman whose sister was visiting her. It seemed an inopportune time for a mission errand. But as the student visitor was about to pass along the invalid asked:

"Won't you give me a tract, too?"

Gladly the visitor paused and gave not only a tract, but a kind, definite explanation of the way of salvation. The sisters listened with increasing interest, that merged into conviction and concern, and before the Spirit-filled visitor left each sister claimed to have found the Lord.

The beauty of this incident is in the aftermath. The ministrant of mercy followed up her work, kept in touch with the sisters who had been converted that day, gave that sweet and sincere encouragement to them that their circumstances required, and now the sister who was not married has become a devoted student at the Institute, with the purpose of giving her life in Christian service in either home or foreign fields.

But, of course, the crowded aisles of a great city store would not be supposed to afford an opportunity for gospel service, would they? However, a student of M. B. I., whose help-along task was to handle trays in the crowded tea room at the noon hour, could not forget his privilege of service even there. A number of times he handed interesting gospel tracts to two young women who were also employed there. Nearly as many times as he handed the tracts they handed him a patronizing smile. But God's Spirit watched over the planting and interest grew.

Though these young women were Catholics, they finally accepted the invitation of the earnest Christian student to attend a church service. On the Sunday morning agreed upon he escorted them to the church where he had himself found salvation.

It is the holy habit of the pastor of that church to press the claims of Christ each Lord's Day. Like a sun-burst of sweetness and glory came the message of salvation to these girls. They afterward asserted that it was the first time they had heard the Gospel in its simplicity and beauty.

To the invitation of that morning these two girls responded and were saved. Again, the aftermath is remarkable. Of course there was persecution, and the need of much prayer and much encouragement. One of these young women has become an evening school student at the Institute, and continues her task at the down-town store with a new joy and blessing upon her life.

Thus does the good Father watch over the seed that is scattered "beside all waters."—Moody Bible Institute Bulletin.

—Gambling has undoubtedly increased, and to an alarming extent. The war was the real cause. Life itself became a gamble, uneconomic wages and profits destroyed the sense of economic equity, and crude and unnatural excitement paralysed the imagination. Only when life regains "atmosphere" will this stupid and soul-deadening practice abate.—The Scots Observer.

CENTENNIAL GRATITUDE GIFT

An Expression of Our Pride and Our Gratitude

We Methodist Protestants should answer every call of the church the very best we can. Therefore, on this 100th birthday of ours we should put forth every effort possible to raise a Gratitude Gift that we will be proud of. We are proud we are Methodist Protestants for many reasons. Now let us prove it by our gift.

From my earliest recollections I was taught to love, honor, and obey the Methodist Protestant Church. In memory of the dear ones who taught me thus, my Gift of Gratitude shall be. This is a wonderful opportunity to show our love and appreciation of our church and what it means to us. I feel sure no real Methodist Protestant will think of anything less than North Carolina being on the honor roll. Let's each of us bend our efforts to the making of our local church 100 per cent and thus North Carolina will be so.

Mrs. H. C. Nicholson.

Our Opportunity Alone

The Gratitude Gift is the opportunity of a life time to show our appreciation for the existence of the Methodist Protestant Church.

This was the church home of my father and mother. This church received the writer as a member in early life; nurtured him with spiritual food; sent him forth to preach the word, and has given him a place to labor.

The amount of money which he will be able to give to this fund will not express his gratitude.

Sincerely,

B. M. Williams.

An Adopted Son's Appreciation

From a boy I liked Methodist doctrines. My parents were Presbyterians, and I learned the catechism at my mother's knee or across it. Think now it was providential that I joined the church of my parents, for there was no Methodist Protestant Church in my home town at that time.

I came in contact with Methodist Protestant folks, loved them—especially Rev. W. A. Bunch, who was pastor of the Burlington work at that time. He was one of the best friends I ever had.

One of the things that bothered me when I joined the Methodist Protestant Church was the fact that so many of them paid so little. Some of them still bother me along that line. I had been taught to be liberal, mighty glad of it now, for there is nothing better to teach a child.

In answer to God's call and mother's prayers I gave myself to the gospel ministry of this new spiritual mother I had adopted and that had adopted me. No son ever loved an adopted mother more, neither did any mother ever treat an adopted son better. My parents followed me into the Methodist Protestant Church, a happy day for me. They are in glory now. A memorial gift for each of them in this M. P. C. G. G. Do you blame me?

Surely this should be a time of hilarious giving on the part of all Methodist Protestants, especially all who have been born and bred therein. It seems to me that if those who have come in as adopted children are happy to present their adopted mother a gift, how joyfully those who have never known anything else but free grace and mutual rights should do so.

North Carolina, we are told, is the most talked of state in the union just now, and we know that she will not be talked of less because we fail to show up full in Baltimore next May. Let us rejoice now in the fact that we have the opportunity to make this gift. We will rejoice then that it is done.

N. G. Bethea.

Why Should I Be Grateful?

When I let my thinking get to the bottom of this Gratitude Gift business, I find it has been divested of all other relationships except my own relationship to my own church.

What has the Methodist Protestant Church meant to my life? Has it made a distinct contribution to it? Did the founders of our church after all render a real service to us when they established the Methodist Protestant Church?

I must answer that the Methodist Protestant Church did make a distinct contribution to my life. The genius of its government with its theological tenets somehow enabled me to find myself religiously. And without guessing what I might have done in some other church, I know that it rendered to me a great service in the opportunity for service which has enabled me to develop along lines which might not have ever come to me outside its communion. But let that be a guess, if you will; it is no guess that I have enjoyed richly the contributions my church has made to me.

Again, I find myself asking this question about what we ought to do as to the Gratitude Gift. If we are unable to appreciate what our church fathers have done for us, are we able to reproduce their deeds? For to be unable to appreciate their worth seems to me to indicate our lack of ability to do the great things of which we today are proud. Therefore, a refusal to respond to the appeal may be construed as evidence that we are in the wrong church and are without the ability both to appreciate our forefathers' greatness or to do a great deed ourselves.

R. M. Andrews.

The M. P. C. G. G.

It is ideal, pactical and essential. We have a thousand men who can give a hundred dollars each and thus raise a hundred thousand dollars; but a thousand men cannot express gratitude for two hundred thousand men. Twenty thousand might give five dollars each and raise the money; but Jesus would say, Where are the nine, were not ten cleansed? Jesus could make bread out of the stony hearts of a thousand; but it is a devilish suggestion. He does not make bread that way. Natural processes bring Him bread, or He does not eat. What a man sows, he reaps. If he sows nothing, he reaps nothing. It will be a crime against our members if we do not induce every one to sow a little grain or two for a possible harvest. Gratitude is a personal matter. One cannot be proxy for another. We may be poor and hungry or hard put to it to keep up with the styles; but if God had deserted us, what would we have! I want to hear of the churches whose every member made a gift. I don't care who gives a thousand. I shall be much ashamed of our church if fifty thousand of them are too sordid to give a week's supply of chewing gum, or cigarettes or cigars or tobacco or cream or candy or coca-cola and simple enough to think they can go to heaven.

S. R. Harris.

Everybody Contributing

We have subscribed our quota at both churches on the Liberty-Siler City charge, and some of the money is in hand at both places. The most pleasing feature about it to me is that the people have done it so cheerfully, and that so many have made contributions. Both our Sunday schools, and both our Christian Endeavor societies have made contributions.

In that way we have endeavored to give each church member and each Sunday school member, and each C. E. member a chance to give. And most of them have been grateful enough to respond.

It will be fine if every Methodist Protestant in the North Carolina Conference makes an offering to this Gratitude Gift. Why should it not be so?

Surely no churches in the conference will fail to make its gift.

Make all reports, and send all checks for this fund to Mr. J. D. Ross, Asheboro, N. C.

Faithfully yours,

A. G. Dixon.

BEAUTIFUL HANDS

Such beautiful, beautiful hands!
They're neither white nor small,
And you, I know, would scarcely think
That they are fair at all;
I've looked on hands in form and hue
A sculptor's dream might be,
Yet are these aged, wrinkled hands
More beautiful to me.

Such beautiful, beautiful hands!
Tho' heart was weary and sad,
These patient hands kept toiling on
That the children might be glad;
I often weep, as looking back,
To childhood's distant day,
I think how these hands rested not
When mine were at their play.

Such beautiful, beautiful hands!
They're growing feeble now,
And time and toil have left their mark
On hand, and heart, and brow;
Alas, alas! the nearing time,
The sad, sad day to me,
When 'neath the daisies, cold and white,
These hands will folded be.

But O beyond these shadowy lands,
Where all is bright and fair,
I know full well these dear old hands
Will palms of victory bear;
Where crystal streams thro' endless years
Flow over golden sands,
And where the old grow young again,
I'll clasp my mother's hands.

GOVERNMENT IN THE OPEN THE ONLY ADEQUATE SAFEGUARD

The following deliverance by the late President Woodrow Wilson, which may be found in his book, The New Freedom, and which is as applicable to church government as it is to civil government, is strikingly clear in its logic and impressive in its conclusions:

"The concern of patriotic men is to put our government again on its right basis by substituting the popular will for the rule of guardians, the processes of common counsel for those of private arrangement. In order to do this a first necessity is to open the doors and let in the light on all affairs which the people have a right to know about.

"If there is nothing to conceal, then why conceal it? If it is a public game, why play it in private? If it is a public game, then why not come out into the open and play it in public? You have got to cure diseased politics as we nowadays cure tuberculosis, by making all the people who suffer from it live out of doors; not only spend their days out of doors and walk around, but sleep out of doors; always remain in the open, where they will be accessible to fresh, nourishing, and revivifying influences.

". . . I, for one, have the conviction that government ought to be all outside and no inside. I, for my part, believe that there ought to be no secret place where anything can be done . . . Everybody knows that corruption thrives in secret places, and we believe it a fair presumption that secrecy means impropriety. . . . Publicity is one of the purifying elements of politics. The best thing you can do with anything that is crooked is to lift it up where people can see that it is crooked, and then it will either straighten itself out or disappear. Nothing checks all the bad practices of politics like public exposure. You can't be crooked in the light. I don't know whether you have ever tried it or not; but I venture to say, purely from observation, that it can't be done."—Selected.

A PRAYER

"Not more of light I ask, O God,
But eyes to see what is.
Not sweeter songs, but ears to hear
The present melodies.
Not more of strength, but how to use
The power that I possess.
Not more of love, but skill to turn
A frown to a caress.

"Not more of joy, but how to feel
Its kindly presence near,
To give to others all I have
Of courage and of cheer.
No other gifts, dear God, I ask,
But only sense to see
How best those precious gifts to use
Thou hast bestowed on me."

Nowhere in our land are the priests of Moloch persecuted. The armament boosters, the scaremongers, the sowers of distrust among nations, the big-navy champions, the compulsory-military-training advocates are never denied a hearing. It is only the friends of peace and international good understanding that are hounded.—The World Tomorrow.

OPTIMISM | The President's Letter | EVANGELISM

M. P. C. G. G.

The program is on now in full swing, and encouraging reports are coming in from various charges. Liberty-Siler charge is the first to report in full. Denton church is a close second, with a plus of about twenty dollars. Welch, First Church, High Point, English Street and Midway, on Guilford charge, all subscribed in full Sunday. Graham is half out, with the work still going. Orange reports $52.00, with more to follow. The outlook at South Winston is encouraging. Kannapolis is out in full, also Spencer. Yarborough's Chapel is busy and hopeful of results. Pleasant Grove subscribed $47.35, with nearly half paid in. Encouraging attitude on Davidson, with $40.00 subscribed at two churches. Mt. Pleasant church subscribed $186, with good prospects for nearly $100 more. Pleasant Union is working but report not in yet. Charlotte reports $114, with prospects of more. Gibsonville subscribed more than half their quota, and will go right on with their efforts until the entire amount is pledged. Randleman reports one-fourth of allotment raised. Denton charge has over-paid with one church yet to subscribe. .

This is highly encouraging. Chairman Ross can not but be happy over the hearty response that the churches are making to his splendid and untiring efforts. The work, we are sure, will be continued until every dollar is provided. The oldest conference in the connection will not fail the church now, at her high noon. Thank you, brethren, thank you!

Ministerial Club

It was our privilege and delight to address this club at High Point College February 16. We found a large and earnest group of young men, out of which will no doubt come effective future workers for the conference. The college is serving well in helping to meet the demand of the church for well-trained leaders. We bespeak for these young men continued earnestness, and a future of usefulness.

South Winston

On February 17, we were with Bro. Kinnaman, looking over this new field. A lot has been secured and paid for. We did not have the privilege of meeting the people on this visit, but Bro. Kinnaman speaks well of them. The field is unchurched, and appears promising. We are to visit them again in March.

Kernersville

On Sunday, the 19th, we were with Bro. Lowdermilk and the people of this charge, visiting, however, only two churches. In the morning we were at the Kernersville church, and in the afternoon at Pine Grove. It was a pleasure to preach and to meet the people at both points. Kernersville provided the college assessment in full. Pine Grove raised a part of theirs. We trust that the balance may be provided soon. In a short time Bro. and Sister Lowdermilk will be the happy occupants of a new seven-room bungalow parsonage, which is being built hard by the Kernersville church. This is a forward step by this charge and we most heartily commend them. Since our visit to Pine Grove several years ago, they have erected a new house of worship. The building seems well constructed, and is ample in size. Sunday school rooms are provided on each side at the rear of the building. The exterior is painted, and the interior will be painted soon, we think. This church appears to us to have a splendid opportunity. We trust that the spirit of consecration, progress and liberality may lead them on to larger results in Kingdom service that are possible for them.

There are encouraging signs on the Kernersville charge, and we trust it is starting on an era of steady and increasing growth. Pastor Lowdermilk is prayerfully and earnestly facing his tasks, and is splendidly supported by his capable wife. We enjoyed our visit to this field.

Welch and Midway

February 26 was given to these two points—Welch in the morning and Midway (Guilford charge) at night. We enjoyed preaching at each place, and meeting the people and renewing the fellowships of other years. The M. P. C. G. G. was presented both morning and night, and the people at each place had open minds, hearts and purses. In a very short time both congregations subscribed the amounts allotted to them. Pastor Ashburn could not be with us at Midway. He is pressing the work on his field. Pastor Pierce and his people are praying and working for a year of progress. We trust that their desires may be fully realized. Our deep interest and prayers will attend all of these charges during the year.

Group Meeting

In the afternoon we had a few minutes with Doctor Straughn and a group of workers at First Church, High Point. Dr. Straughn spoke there in the morning and was greatly cheered by the generous response of this church. Nearly $1,000.00 was pledged to the Gratitude Gift. At night he spoke in the Community church, Thomasville, but with what results we have not learned.

Easter Programs

Doctor Sheridan has already mailed to pastors sample copies of the splendid Easter prgoram prepared by his board. It is highly fitting that all of our churches hold this Easter service. The program will prove a blessing to the church and is worth while from that standpoint. Besides, it is a means of raising much of our finances for establishing home mission churches. Some of the strongest and most progressive churches in our own conference have received aid in this way. So please see to it, Pastor and Sunday School Superintendent, that every church on your charge holds this service, and takes an offering for the G. C. B.

Pastors' Reports

Nearly all pastors have their reports in now. We will give a digest of these reports next week.

Commended

In a recent number of the HERALD, Bro. C. H. Whitaker gives an itemized statement for his charge, and the apportionment to each church; also the per capita assessment for the charge, and for each church. This is a splendid idea, and we heartily recommend his plan to other charges.

Group Insurance

Recently I made casual inquiry about a home in a certain community, and was told that it was the home of the wife of a deceased Methodist minister. When asked about her means of support for her family of five children, I was told that her husband left her $10,000 life insurance, and that he had died after paying only one premium. It will be a very unfortunate thing, it would seem, for us to fail in our group insurance undertaking. Let's not lose this opportunity.

Evangelism

By the time this reaches the reader, our week of prayer for evangelism will have passed. We trust, however, that the praying may not cease. Pastors are asked to preach during the month of March on this subject. An "Evangelism" edition of the HERALD will be published during the month also.

A Man

In his introductory remarks at a public service, a minister recently said that the sole business of a minister is to magnify Jesus. With this statement, we most heartily agree. And it must be said that this mission is not fulfilled when the sermon is over and the benediction pronounced. Always, the biggest thing about a sermon is the man back of it. The most effective way—the only way—by which a minister can fulfill his mission is to be a man. Terence, a heathen, said, "I am a man, and nothing that belongs to a man shall be foreign to me." This, every minister of Jesus must say, or fail in his mission.

Assignment

February 22, Rev. D. M. Dew was assigned pastor of Connelly Springs charge.

Appointments

March 4. With Bro. Totten at Draper, 11 a. m.

March 10. With Bro. Ashburn in second quarterly conference.

March 18. With Bro. Kinnaman in South Winston, 11 a. m., and Union Grove 7:30 p. m.

March 25. With Bro. Love on the Richland charge.

April 1. With Bro. Anderson at Albemarle.

April 21-22. With Bro. C. E. Ridge, on Davidson charge.

April 28-29. With Bro. Powell on Greenville charge.

February 28, 1928.

THE N. C. CONFERENCE IN 1829

On April 2, 1829, "a conference" was begun "at Sampson Meetinghouse in Roanoke circuit." This must have been considered an annual conference, though not so designated, for Rev. W. W. Hill was elected "President for the state" and "shall officiate in that capacity till the next annual conference." The next one, by the way, met at Union Chapel, October 1, 1829, and Bro. Hill was again elected "for the ensuing year." It will be remembered that the first conference met December 19, 1828.

Eighteen members were present at the opening of the April meeting, seven of whom were laymen. Among the other eleven there were elders, elders-elect, deacons, and deacons-elect. A group of eight rules of order was adopted.

Consideration of the character of ministers was held behind closed doors and even so early in the history of reform one was found wanting. Little information is given, but "it appearing to the satisfaction of the conference from his own statements, that matters of importance at a distance pertaining to the same (his characer) were undecided, therefore he was permitted to surrender his license and beg leave peaceably to withdraw from this body." No hint is given as to the charges and I have thought best not to use the name.

Four circuits were formed and appointments made as follows: Roanoke, Rev. Miles Nash; Liberty Circuit, Rev. Wm. Bellamy and Rev. James Hunter; Warrenton, Rev. Caswell Drake and Rev. Richard Davison; Oxford, Rev. I. H. Cobb. The wording of these appointments is interesting, they "are destine to travel with discretionary powers to make such assignments in the appointments as they think best," etc.

Woman suffrage now makes its appearance, for a motion was carried that "white females of our societies should vote in the choice or election of their respective class leaders."

An order is recorded that "E. B. Whitaker, C. Drake, Albriton Jones, Henry Bradford, and Wm. Price receive their ordination tomorrow." It will be noticed that the first president of the conference is included in this list (he was a deacon when so chosen), and that others named in the list of "eight ministers" given last week are also included. There were both elders and deacons among the ministry at that time.

The one other item of interest in this meeting was the appointment of a standing committee whose sole duty it was to hear trial of the president of the conference if need arose during the recess of conference. Let us give thanks that the need did not arise.

At the October meeting held at Union Chapel (also called Hunt's Meeting House) three of the four circuits reported present with good delegations. Later in the conference representatives from the fourth arrived. Several ministers were received, among them John Coe from Guilford County.

The session is of interest chiefly for the growth noticed in the conference and the spirit of growth observable. In addition to the four circuits above named assignments are here made to Guilford, Hillsborough, and a third circuit whose name is not familiar to me and is not easy to read. It first appears as "the New Contemplated circuit," but it is evident that some later editor has been taking liberties with the manuscript, for the last letters of the word have been marked out and "plated" written above the line in another hand. On the page the name appears without the new and seems to be "Conteartarey" or "Contentary." Rev. Seth Speight was "in charge" of it. Ten preachers were assigned to Guilford circuit and smaller numbers to the others, but in each case some one was to "have charge."

Local churches are not named in these minutes but Dr. Paris tells us that Moriah, Bethel, and a church called Liberty, which he says was organized in 1829 by Rev. Alson Gray, Rev. John Wilburn, and Mr. Alexander, formed the nucleus of Guilford circuit. The names of Alson Gray, John Wilburn, John Gray, Travis Jones and others are among the ten who under the leadership of John Coe had charge of Guilford circuit as assigned by the conference of October, 1829. I have visited both Moriah and Bethel and would appreciate information as to the Liberty church here mentioned.

This confeernce re-elected Rev. W. W. Hill president, fixed his salary at $200 and traveling expenses, gave him power to appoint traveling preachers, who in concert with the president were to "preach and organize societies," and elected Willis R. Harris vice-president, to serve in case of emergency. The first reference to the "Mutual Rights" is found in the appointment of a committee to have such parts of this Journal published therein as they think proper.

OUR STORY PAGE

FRED'S KITE

What's this windy weather good for anyway?" snapped Fred, standing disconsolate at the window one day, as he ruefully surveyed the dun-colored landscape. Everything outside was brown and dejected and winter-soaked.

"What's it good for, I'd like to know? You get stuck in the mud and every other thing, and you lose your rubbers off, and then the wind blows your hat away, and aw, I wish it would come summer."

"Maybe it'll come summer pretty soon," said little sister Sue, pleasantly. "What's the matter, Fred, did the naughty wind blow your hat off?"

Sue's friendliness was only a partial cure for Fred's sourness, if indeed it was any cure at all. And a moment later when Fred's big brother Robert broke in, it was too much. Robert's cruel thrust was this, "It makes freckles, too, don't it, Fred?"

Fred was furious by this time. As if it wasn't enough to have his rubbers pulled off in the mud, and his hat blown away by the wind over and over, and to have to run after it in the sticky mud! And then to be told about freckles. It was too much. Fred was very sensitive about his freckles.

"Aw shut—," began he, and he was going to say something very spiteful and unkind to his older brother. But then something outside the window caught his attention.

Bill Williams was going by, and Bill was carrying something under his arm. It was a kite.

"Hey, hold on there! Where yer goin', Bill?" forgetting that the window was closed. He rushed out of the house and after Bill.

"What yer got there, Bill?" he asked. "Aw, ain't she a dandy!"

Bill's kite was a dandy, if ever there was one, for Bill could make kites. In fact Bill was one of those good handy fellows that can do a whole lot of things. They used to have a lot of fun with him in school over it.

"Bill will, won't the Bill?" they used to say, and then somebody else would chime in: "William will, will Bill?" And everybody would laugh. If it was in school time, the teacher would hush them up and say sweetly, "Of course, William will, if you ask him."

If there was anything Bill could do, it was make kites. He would rather make kites than eat. He would rather make them than wade in the brook. He would even rather make kites than fly them—round and square, diamond-shaped—any old way, he could make them and they would always fly.

This kite was no exception. Bill had made it out of some old stuff he found lying around, and it was covered with bundle paper. It wasn't so much to look at, but it would fly. "I had all my string out on it this morning," said Bill. "I don't know how much there was of it. 'Bout a mile, I guess."

"Want to help me make one," asked Fred.

"Sure," said William, always willing to do anything, as the teacher said.

Now if ever the sunshine came out after a storm, it was that Saturday morning, when Fred came back into the house, with Bill after him, and asked his mother if he could make a kite.

"I don't know," she answered, "you might try."

"Sure, he c'n make one," said Bill.

Scissors and paste, and sticks and everything else flew around that kitchen for the next half hour, and that kite ought to have been a success, if it could only have flown half as well as things did there. String and wrapping paper from bundles furnished the covering, and out of the rag bag came strips of cloth for the tail.

"Can I have a dime to buy some string," Fred asked of his mother.

"Give yer half o' mine," volunteered Bill.

"No, don't do that," said Fred's mother, "here is your dime, Fred."

And Fred went off to the store for the string, so cheerful that he even asked his mother if there wasn't something she needed at the same trip.

Anybody who was ever a boy, and had a new kite all done on the kitchen floor, waiting only for the string, and that ball of string in his pocket, knows how Fred hustled home from the store after that brief errand. And then he and Bill sped down the street for the big open lot to try it.

"Give it a boost, will you?" he asked Bill—"no' let's pull yours up first."

It took Bill's practiced fingers only a minute to adjust the "bellyband" and measure out the tail they had made from the rag bag. And up she went—the kite, I mean.

And any boy who ever stood with the string of his first successful kite mounting higher and higher, knows a thrill such as only comes to a great inventor, and not very often at that. Any boy can tell you who remembers the first kite he ever had that would fly.

Billy's kite was soon up, too, and it wasn't long before half a dozen others were at the field, kites in air.

Some of the kites began to pitch and dive, but not Fred's. "See how steady she holds," he cried, "and it's blowing a gale up there."

"Bet it's more'n 'tis down here," agreed Bill.

Then Fred spoke up again. "Say, Bill," he asked, "why don't we fly kites all the year 'round?"

"Dunno," answered Bill. "They say they do in China, but we don't here. "Guess it must be because the wind's best in the spring. See how that kite pulls, will ye."

"She does pull, doesn't she?"

Fred seemed to stop a minute, and then he said, "Say, Bill, the mud's dryin' up, and it's just a bully day for flyin' kites."

"Gee," he added, "I like the spring. I like these windy days. They're great for kite flyin'."

THREE KINDS OF GIVERS

Some one has said that there are three kinds of givers—"the flint, the sponge and the honeycomb."

To get anything out of a flint you must hammer it, and then you can only get chips and sparks.

To get water out of a sponge you must squeeze it, and the more that you squeeze the more you get.

But the honeycomb just overflows with its own sweetness.

Some people are stingy and hard. They give nothing away if they can help it.

Others are good-natured; they yield to pressure, and the more they are pressed the more they will give.

A few delight in giving without being asked at all; and of these the Bible says, "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver."

THE FALSE ALARM

Jack heard a whistle outside his window. He was a yellow-haired boy about nine. He put his head out of the window, only to see Allen, his black-headed friend, looking up.

"Let's go fishing," said Allen. "I'll ask mother." A moment later he put his head out of the window. "I'll be right down, Allen. Just wait until I get bacon and some bread. We can have lunch in the woods."

In a few minutes he reappeared. The two boys sauntered slowly toward the river. The day was hot, so they did not want to hurry. Their way led down a steep gravel road, through a green, dewy pasture, along the railroad track, across the golf course, and then into the woods.

The woods trail was damp and fragrant. They walked silently, enjoying the green beauty on every hand. The birds were warbling with full throats.

At last the pair emerged from the woods upon a shaded river. Here they set up some small sticks, lighted a fire and toasted the bacon and bread which they had brought with them. After this lunch, as they called it, they wandered along the stream bank.

Jack threw in his line. Before long he felt a bite. He jerked his line, felt a sudden pull, and drew out a struggling trout.

"I got the first one," he shouted to Allen.

"I'll get the next two," replied the other boy.

It was a long time before either of them got another bite; perhaps Jack's shout had frightened the fish. After a while Allen got a trout, and then another. Then they began fishing in earnest.

Jack did not like to feel that his friend was a better fisherman than he was. There was quite a lot of excitement between them as to who would catch the next fish.

So busy were the two boys that they were not aware of the approach of two bears behind them. Suddenly Allen heard a rustle of paper at his back. He looked around. There stood a bear busily nosing the fish which they had wrapped up in paper.

Allen shouted. Jack looked around; then he, too, saw the bears. There was but one tree close, a very thin maple. But both boys immediately flew to this tree.

In their excitement neither one of them could get up the trunk of that small tree. They were both crowding each other. At last Jack shinnied his way to the branches. He reached down to help the now nervous Allen up into safety.

"That was a narrow escape," panted Allen. "They weren't chasing us," replied Jack, noticing the bears carefully for the first time.

Allen looked. There the two animals were eating the fish they had caught. There was no excitement whatever about the mother bear or her cub. They finally finished the fish and licked the paper until it was clean.

Neither animal seemed to have noticed their presence.

"They'll go away," shivered Jack. "I'd hate to have them get me. They'd eat me alive."

But the bears were in no hurry to leave. After sniffing around for a few moments, the mother curled up in the shade of the tree and fell asleep. The cub nosed about for a few minutes longer until he, too, curled up by his mother to fall asleep.

"Now we're in a fine fix," said Jack. "We've got to stay up here until that fool bear wakes up again."

"Don't you suppose it would be safe to go down?" inquired Allen. "We might not awaken her."

"You can go down if you want to," declared Jack. "But I know when I'm safe."

"Then we can awaken her."

"With these maple buds."

"Allen began to pick off the maple buds and hurl them at the sleeping bears, but did not seem to disturb the sleeping creatures. Jack began picking the buds, too; and he tried to do his share towards awakening the bears.

At last the mother bear rolled over sleepily, for a maple bud had hit her on the nose. But she did not appear to be angry in the least. The cub sat up as well.

The boys began throwing more and more buds, in the hope of driving the animals away. The buds were becoming scarcer and scarcer. They had to lean farther and farther out on the slim limbs of the tree to pluck them.

All at once the limb that he was stripping of buds bent downwards, and Jack almost fell out of the tree. He clung tightly to the bending limb, hanging up in the air like a bird-house.

Finally the limb cracked and then broke.

The bear had approached in evident curiosity. Jack landed with a bang, almost on the creature's back. He was so frightened at the bear's closeness that he could not move. The bear's nose was close to his. Then of a sudden the bear stuck out her tongue and licked Jack's nose. The boy was too alarmed to even scream.

Then the animal backed away.

A voice sounded, "Come here, Flossie."

The boys looked in the direction of the voice. There stood a man calling the bears. They approached him eagerly. They must be tame bears, the boys decided.

"I'm glad you didn't hurt my pets," the man said, and immediately left with the two bears following him.

"Now what do you know about that?" demanded Allen, after he had climbed down the tree, and stood beside his friend watching the disappearing trio.—The Presbyterian.

TWO VIEWS

Recently two men were discussing a certain preacher, and one of them said: "I sure do like him; he never stirs up any trouble; he never hurts anybody's feelings; the meanest man in the world can listen to him and think that he is somebody." The other man replied: "That is just the reason I don't like him. He lets people go to hell unmolested, and a dancer, card-player, Sabbath-desecrater, can sing in his choir or teach in his Sunday school, and even hold official positions in his church. He sugarcoats when he ought to unmask the evil within his own ranks."—W. W. Hamilton.

AN AGNOSTIC SILENCED

The agnostic says: "I don't know." Judge L. Q. C. Lamar, of the United States Supreme Bench, was traveling in Ohio. Just before him was a widely advertised agnostic talking like a perpetual motion, reeling off the odds and ends of infidelity written by infidels during the past hundred years. A group of men stood round listening. Judge Lamar reached over and touched the talker, introduced himself, and said: "I believe you are an agnostic?" "Yes," said the talker. "Well," said the great judge, "you talk a great deal not to know anything." The talk ceased.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Zoar, Mecklenburg Circuit.—Our pastor last Sunday night delivered two good sermons. We are always glad to have him with us.

When spring opens we hope there will be more that will come to Sunday school and preaching.

There has been a change made in the time of preaching services: On the first Sunday in next month there will be service at 3 o'clock. REPORTER.

Asheville.—Two wonderful messages blessed us last Sunday by Brothers Casto and VanMeter.

The second quarterly conference was well attended and the business was done in a very fine spirit. Brother E. H. Pratt and Miss Eula Taylor were elected nominees to represent us in the next Annual Conference.

A committee from the Christian Endeavor Society will canvass for church paper subscriptions. Miss Verdie McIntyre will canvass for registrations for the Young People's Conference in Baltimore. Miss Wenonah Joyner, our new secretary, gave a very fine account of our first quarterly conference. Hearty thanks were voted to the volunteer workers for repairing the furnace and beautifying the class rooms in our Sunday school. A special Sunday will be set apart for General Conference Gratitude Gift offering. Miss Gladys Boling, one of most faithful young ladies, left Sunday for New York City, where she will make her home indefinitely. The prayers and good wishes of all go with her. REPORTER.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle Charge.—Measles is winding up just about the cleanest sweep that any epidemic could make: almost every family had it. This greately interfered with Sunday school work.

Brother Hunter has served us without fail; the third Sunday in January he preached a very helpful sermon, and today, an unusually cold day, he was there. There were just a few present, so Brother Hunter talked on the Sunday school lesson today.

How many of us have a favorite home mountain and have dearly loved to see that mountain every morning and evening? The Pilot Mountain, which we have here, I think is one of the most beautiful. Did you ever wonder just how it looked when there were several days of cloudy, foggy weather, and during a severe storm didn't you wonder if it was still there? Then when the clouds lifted and the sunlight flooded the skies again the Pilot is still there! That's Brother Hunter; he is still there, full of the same story.

Mrs. H. P. Loftis was a victim of measles and pneumonia and departed this life last Tuesday morning at 3 o'clock. She was buried at Pinnacle M. P. Church.

Granny Mickle remains very sick.

Mr. Walter M. Collins recently had a stroke of paralysis; he is suffering from high blood pressure and Bright's disease.

Mr. Ray Hunt is planning to build a new home on his land at Shoals.

Let's everybody remember that the Stokes County Sunday school convention will be held at Pinnacle M. P. Church this coming summer. Let's work to have a decent report for our township officers to read to that convention. C. W. ALLEN.

West Forsyth.—In spite of the biting wind there was almost an average attendance at Sunday school at Pleasant Hill February 19, and a surprising congregation considering the cold. But they are people who do not let the weather decide their actions.

At Tabernacle in the afternoon Billy Sunday team No. 15 came out from Winston-Salem. This is known as the "singing team." There were over 20 of them along, and they sang old songs and new, testified, exhorted and persuaded; two young ladies reconsecrated; three other ladies confessed and decided to give their hearts to God. The Billy Sunday men are from every walk in life, most of them daily wage-earners. They are "dead in earnest." Have consecrated their power of song, their time, and means to the Master. They somtimes go over 100 miles after a day's work to help in a meeting.

C. H. WHITAKER.

Spencer Church.—First, we want to thank our editor for his kind appeal for Spencer, and also all who will help us. All contributions will be acknowledged through the M. P. Herald.

We have some as true-hearted M. P.'s here as anywhere. We organized our W. H. M. S. July 9, 1925; our church the following September; our Sunday school December 6th, 1925. Since we have gained, W. H. M. S., 12 members, now 22 members; church organized with 15, now 33 members, nine men, 24 women and children; Sunday school, now on roll, 50. Have paid all claims each year; have paid for piano and lot. We wish we could build a church without asking help, but this we could not do soon. We are thankful for our pastor, Rev. T. Glen Madison; he has done splendid work here, and we thank all who have come and preached the Gospel to us. We will ever remember Rev. D. A. Braswell, who organized our church, and his work among us; and we are glad we could rent the little chapel to hold our services in. Hope we can have a building of our own soon.

Sunday evening our pastor and Miss Josephine Cable gave the pageant of the M. P. C. G. G., and am glad Spencer and Union Grove went over the top with our quotas for our beloved M. P. church.

MRS. A. L. MOORE.

Spring Church.—Since last report our community has been saddened by the death of three of its members—Mrs. Mary Smith, Mr. Peter Porch, and Mr. Major Thompson.

The fifth Sunday of January Brother Shelton gave us a good talk.

He delivered a splendid message yesterday at communion service.

Some repairs have been made on the parsonage building.

We were glad to have some visitors present February 12.

VIRGINIA MASSEY.

Caroleen and Shelby.—The work has started off well; the people received us for the third year kindly, and have been proving it by bringing many good things to eat. The good people of Caroleen hit us with a hundred pounds of flour and other articles of merchandise too numerous to mention; for all these we are thankful and pray God's blessings upon the givers. Shelby has remembered us in a substantial way.

We have been devoting our time this month to raising our college assessment.

We put on a drive to raise our quota for the church paper; the committee is at work and hope to send in in full soon.

Our Sunday school and church services are very well attended. Caroleen has an enrollment of 125 and average attendance of 115; this, we think, is a very good average for the year.

Shelby Sunday school is growing by leaps and bounds; today's report showed 63 present, most of whom were adults. Measles kept many of the children away. We are looking to the 100 mark in the near future. One of the hopeful signs is the Shelby Mill Quartet, and many of the good singers of that section are furnishing music for Sunday school and church. This adds much to the church services.

Our community has been saddened by three deaths in the past week: Mrs. Pearl Sisk died suddenly on last Tuesday. She was a faithful member of our church and was a good woman. She left five children. On Sunday, Romeo Conner was laid to rest in the cemetery at Caroleen. He was a good boy; he leaves one sister. Brother Auto Gerin, after a long illness, was laid to rest the following Wednesday. He left a wife. May God's blessings rest upon the bereaved and may they find comfort in Him who has said, "Let not your hearts be troubled."

We ask all the readers of this paper to pray for us; we have problems to solve; your prayers will help us solve them.

L. S. HELMS, Pastor.

February 26, 1928.

Mizpah, Haw River Circuit.—We're learning to love our new pastor, and with co-operation I'm sure we shall have a successful year. The third Sunday afternoon he preached an excellent sermon. The main thought was witnessing for God in the world court.

A revival will begin at our church Monday night, March 12th. I understand our pastor is to conduct the services.

Pastor and people meet at our church Thursday night before the first Sunday in each month. Object, business matter of church, religious and social. As time passes on we hope to make it an important factor in our church work.

We are planning to hold an Easter service.

As the year advances we hope to have many interesting things to report.

MRS. ROY STEWART.

February 27th.

Asheville.—Two good messages Sunday by Dr. VanMeter. Brother Casto was ill with a cold and could not come to us.

Led by Brother Foster, the church is now comfortable for every service. Brother Foster has a loyal band of supporters who stand by him for any emergency repairs at any time.

Miss Verdie McIntyre was called to High Point Friday of last week on account of the illness of her sister, Miss Norvella. She returned home with her sister this Monday.Miss Norvella's friends thought it best for her to recuperate at home.

Brother H. L. Hanner will "lead off" in our prayer meeting this Wednesday night with Bible verses on "Walking With God." Other members and groups will treat special topics from time to time.

Our church will take the Gratitude Gift offering on March 11. The fund has already started with $5 from Pastor Paschall and $2 from Miss Jennie Buckner.

Our Bible class can surely boast of one of the best teachers anywhere. Brother E. C. Fawcett has an inspiring message every Sunday. His interpretation of the Scriptures shows a first hand experience of the truth. We only wish that the church could be filled each Sunday morning with listeners to be blessed by his teaching. REPORTER.

Kannapolis.—Kannapolis went over the top with the pledges and cash yesterday on the M. P. C. G. Gift. We are having splendid attendance at all services.

The Ladies' Aid gave a chicken and oyster supper on Saturday night. I did not get to attend as I was in the hospital in Charlotte with my son, Frank, who underwent a very serious operation on last Saturday evening.

For some time he has been suffering a great deal from some ribs that were broken several years ago and were growing crooked, thereby pressing down on the heart and lung, as a result of which he had for some time been spitting blood and fainting from the least bit of exertion. Last Saturday morning Drs. A. G. Brenizer and T. H. Sparrow performed an operation on the chest, cutting off the ends of the ribs, and straightening them out and lifting them up off the heart and lung, thus enabled the lung to expand and to function properly again and the heart to beat regularly without so much fluttering and skipping. Frank is getting along just as well as could be expected, and the doctors are very hopeful of him. He is suffering a great deal, but we feel that he is doing splendidly. He was carried to the Charlotte Sanatorium on last Friday morning and doctors say he will have to stay for quite a while so that they may keep him under observation.

We shall let you hear more from Kannapolis later on.

E. G. COWAN, Pastor.

Caroleen.—I will state some things our Christian Endeavor Society is doing. The Juniors meet every Friday night and Seniors meet every Saturday night. We have splendid meetings and some good discussions on the topics. We have some good leaders and it seems that the future will be better for the Endeavor work. We are hoping to see better attendance, better collections and more interest manifested.

We are planning to have a social in the near future for the benefit of the society to get the entire membership together.

REPORTER.

Concord.—We have started into the third week of our special meeting. The interest is increasing with each service. The evangelist, Mr. Cowell, preached three great sermons yesterday to the largest congregations of the entire meeting. Every seat was taken and chairs placed in every available place. The church has been greatly revived, backsliders reclaimed and sinners converted at every service. Nine new members were received into the church yesterday. The meeting will continue all this week and perhaps longer.

A cement walk has been laid from the entrance of the new Sunday school building to the street, which was badly needed, and improvements made on the church grounds.

Mr. H. D. Eudy, father of Mrs. Carl Lefler and Messrs. James and Charles Eudy of our church, died yesterday after a lingering illness, and will be buried today (Monday). The bereaved ones have our sympathy.

MRS. D. A. McLAURIN.

Burlington.—Circle No. 1 of the Ladies' Aid Society entertained Circle No. 2 at the home of Mrs. Ed Moore, February 23rd. The guests were received at the door by Martha and George Washington. Each guest was given a number. Three numbers were grouped together and called upon to do funny "stunts." Tiny red hatchets were hidden around over the rooms; each was asked to find them. Mrs. L. W. Gerringer found 22 and was awarded a hatchet. A cherry tree was drawn on cardboard with a hack out of the body. We were blindfolded and asked to pin the hatchet in the hack. Mrs. G. G. Stafford came almost to the place and was given a pretty box of candy. We had several good readings by Miss Margaret Rogers and Miss Mattie Blackwood. We also enjoyed good piano selections by Miss Lula Riddle. Another game was played: Two bottles were placed and the guests were given ten peas to be held at nose height and dropped into the bottle. Mrs. J. M. Crawford dropped six out of ten into the bottle and was given a can of peas.

The evening was filled with good duets by Miss Lula Riddle and Mrs. Flay Rogers, piano selections and games.

The house was beautiful with flags, red roses, Christmas cactus and red hatchets everywhere.

In the dining room Mrs. Moore had for a centerpice a Japanees cherry tree laden with red cherries. The ladies of Circle 1 assisted Mrs. Moore and her daughter in serving dainty refreshments.

Grace Church, Greensboro.—The Jinx class celebrated last Thursday evening at 6 o'clock in the hut. Members of the Sutton Philathea class served a delightful supper. Afterwards the members of the class and visitors were entertained with some selections by Mr. Frank Warner. Mr. A. S. Meyers gave a chalk talk, followed by talks by Mr. Tamblyn, Mr. J. Norman Wills, Mr. R. C. Millikan, Dr. A. H. Johnson, Mr. L. F. Barnard, and Mrs. D. S. Coletrane.

All members were present. Mr. Victor Stout, teacher in a rival class, made us a challenge. His class, composed of boys about 10 years old, has six consecutive star classes. It started with two members and now has 11.

Last Sunday the Intermediate and Junior Departments had perfect attendance, every class having a star. The Sunday school is growing and we hope to have more stars.

Pleasant Grove.—Brother Reynolds and Rev. N. G. Bethea exchanged pulpits Sunday morning. Mr. Bethea brought us a message on the C. G. G. which was enjoyed. Pledges were taken but since there were so many absent Sunday the work was left in the hands of a committee, who are: Mr. I. A. Teague, Mr. I. W. Burton, and Mr. Homer Veach.

The Workers' Conference meets Wednesday evening at 7:30 at the church.

There are still some of our number absent on account of sickness.

The attendance at Sunday school and church is not as good as we would like, but we feel sure there will be an increase when the weather gets a little warmer.

REPORTER.

Kernersville.—The Ladies' Aid Society is still alive if you have not heard from us, nor have we been idle, for our president, Mrs. Lucian Hepler, and other leaders of our society are not going to let us lounge on the job.

On February 22nd we had a birthday offering and church social at the church. Invitations were sent to the entire membership and despite the rain a goodly number came. The children our our Sunday school entertained by rendering a program commemorating the birthday of the "Father of our Country." After this a social hour was spent very profitably during which the ladies served sandwiches, coffee, cake and pickles. A nice sum was realized which I presume the ladies will use in helping to "dress up" our new parsonage. Yes, our parsonage is beginning to look quite home-like, and the contractor thinks that the pastor of this charge may wake up in this quaint nice new home about April 1.

On last Thursday afternoon the society held their regular monthly meeting with Mrs. Lucian Hepler. Eleven members were present. We were indeed glad to add to our list one new member, also to have one visitor with us. See, we are no longer an "unlucky thirteen," since we now have 14 members. At this meeting the ladies contributed a nice lot of bed linens, towels, soap, etc., to be sent to the Bethel Home.

I trust that ere the close of this year we shall do many things to brighten the lives of others. MRS. E. G. LOWDERMILK, Sec'y.

Roberta.—We have our church completed now and started in for business.

Our Sunday school is growing rapidly with Mr. Z. D. Cochrane as superintendent. Attendance Sunday was 89; offering $16.38. Not many present owing to sickness.

Mr. Ed Alexander is in the Presbyterian Hospital in Charlotte in a very serious condition, with little hope of recovery.

Mr. Andrew Cochrane and Miss Donnie Smuggs, also Mr. Lester Johnson and Miss Violet Smith, were married Saturday afternoon. REPORTER.

Shiloh, North Davidson.—Surely no church has more cause for gratitude than has our M. P. Church; and we feel that Shiloh has much for which to give thanks. We are thankful for the history her growth from a small church at the beginning to the beautiful structure which now has a large auditorium and ten five Sunday school rooms. We remember with reverence the servants of God who have gone in and out among their flock here and led many souls to Christ by way of the altar. And today we are proud of the young people going out from this church and becoming religious leaders hither and you. Surely, we shall be glad for an opportunity to express our gratitude for these wonderful expressions of God's love by laying a bountiful gift upon the altar on the third Sunday in March. Yes, we believe Shiloh will cheerfully do her best, and "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver."

MRS. WILEY SHOAF,
For Centennial Committee.

Chapel Hill, Davidson Circuit.—Brother Ridge preached a good sermon last Sunday. He took up the Gratitude Gift and raised some money. I think we should all love our church.

We were pleased to have Mr. Lee Surratt and wife join our church. Mr. Surratt is our Sunday school teacher. We have 60 on roll.

LIZZIE CRAWFORD.

West End, Greensboro.—The annual thank-offering service of the W. F. M. S. was held Sunday night with a large number of women taking part. The thank-offering box convention, candle-light service, Spot Without Blemish, and a women's quartette composed the program.

The W. H. M. S. met Monday in regular business session with 17 present. The devotional service was led by Mrs. Carl Routzen, with invocation by Dr. Williams. A reading on our Baltimore Home for business girls was given by Mrs. Stapleton and "Our Young People," by Mrs. Burns. Several items of business were transacted and plans discussed for successful closing of the books in March. Mrs. Bonkermeyer led the closing prayer.

On Monday night the Senior Chrisian Endeavor Society met in business session with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Routh. About three-fourths of the active members were present. The treasurer reported all back pledges paid. Plans for future work were discussed and a pledge made to C. E. work. The Intermediate superintendent, Miss Glayds Routh, reports the work of the girls and boys during her absence while in the hospital, during which time Miss Anabel Thompson acted as superintendent, directing the work in both spiritual and social development. Martha Meroney is president, with Douglas Kime secretary. The Junior Society meets each Sunday morning immediately after the close of Sunday school with a membership of nearly all the Junior Sunday school children. Mildred Stack is president, Sarah Foust, secretary, and M. H. Waynick, Jr., treasurer. The treasurer reported its state pledge paid.

The Foust Bible Class held its monthly meeting at the church Thursday night. It decided to beautify the church lot. Mr. R. M. Johnson, of the Lindley Nurseries, was elected chairman of the committee. An attendance contest between the men and women is to be put on. The side having largest average at the end of a year will be winner.

Miss May Dixon and Scoutmasters Summers and Campbell gave the Scout girls and boys a weinie roast at the Battleground Friday night with 53 present.

In the Gratitude Gift, West End will memorialize two people—a layman and a minister. It seems fitting to choose Mrs. Ada Wright Bosher, our only charter member who has passed over, and Dr. Cicero Harris, a pioneer minister, who was known and loved by some of the West End members, and whose daughter is a member of our church. It is interesting to know that the first religious meeting of the Methodist Protestant Church of the state was held at the home of his father, who was a minister, and who gave his denomination four sons to the ministry.

On Sunday morning sketches of the lives of the two were read before the congregation. Dr. Williams preached two powerful sermons on the Gratitude Gift.

CHURCH REPORTER.

Mebane.—Our attendance at Sunday school and church services has been off, due to sickness.

The Ladies' Aid and Missionary Societies are still quite active. The Ladies' Aid Society met in February with Mrs. Highfill Jobe with very good attendance. After the business meeting the hostess served delicious refreshments suggestive of the Valentine season.

The Missionary Societies held their meeting in February with Mrs. H. C. Nicholson. The attendance was fairly good. During the social hour Mrs. Nicholson served pink lemonade and sandwiches.

A committee has been appointed to look after the raising the Gratitude Gift. The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society gave a pageant Sunday evening, this being their thank-offering program. This was a very impressive service. The pageant was under the direction of Miss Pauline Nicholson, president of the Foreign Society.

On the evening of February 14th, from 7:30 to 10 o'clock, the Young Ladies Class entertained the Young Men's Class at a Valentine party at the home of Mr. Hubert Sykes, with about 40 in attendance. Various games and contests furnished the entertainment for the evening. Delicious refreshments were served.

February 28.

State Street.—Brother Reynolds came over Sunday morning and preached for us while Mr. Bethea talked to Mr. Reynolds' congregation at Pleasant Grove about the Gratitude Gift. After a brief outline of the organization and progress of the denomination, Mr. Reynolds gave a splendid talk on the importance of faith and simple, unquestioning trust. All present were helped and interested.

Sunday night the service was conducted by the ladies of the Missionary Society, this being the time for the regular thankoffering service, which is held annually. A good program was rendered, almost all the members of the society taking part. The monthly meeting of the society will be held Thursday afternoon in the home of Mrs. A. H. Evans.

Rev. and Mrs. Bethea left early Monday morning for Halifax county, where Mr. Bethea will give his lecture on the Holy Land Tuesday night at Enfield; Wednesday night at Whitakers, and Thursday night at Aurelian Spring. They are expecting to return Friday.

Measles is still holding back our Sunday school attendance, but the average is good considering the condition. REPORTER.

North Davidson Charge.—Our work is moving along, even though it is slow an account of bad roads, measles, flu, and other things. Our Sunday school and preaching services have not been as well attended as usual, but we are hoping that the March winds will dry up the mud and that other conditions will be better so our congregations will pick up again.

Our new church on No. 10 will be ready for service in a few weeks. We may hold service there next Sunday. Women, as well as men, are working faithfully to get it ready. We have a working band of folks down there. We took in four new members there the first and fifth Sundays. We have about 60 members now.

Since our last report we have been remembered by several substantial gifts. Mr. Richard Berrier, of Jacksonville, Fla., sent us a check for $100 as a Christmas present. I tell you that check certainly did look good. We appreciate the Berrier boys in Florida. Though there are many miles between us they never forget the old home church nor pastor. Thy give, and the reason they can give because they take the Lord in partnership with them and give Him a tenth.

Brother Jeff Berrier brought us half a hog, so you see we have been enjoying fresh meat. He has also given us straw for the cow. Mrs. Jeff Berrier, Mrs. F. L. Koonts, Mrs. John Brinkley, and Mrs. Perryman have sent supplies for our table. We thank these good people for these tokens of appreciation and pray God's richest blessings upon them.

R. S. TROXLER, Pastor.

Vaughn, Littleton Circuit.—We held our regular preaching service Sunday. We have had our church covered and painted and light put in, which add much to our services.

We had a very large congregation present. One joined the church. Pastor Crutchfield preached on the M. P. C. G. G., which was enjoyed by all, in the evening service. In the morning we observed the Lord's Supper.

REPORTER.

Moriah.—We are a country church and we are and have been having Sunday school at 10 o'clock and preaching at 11 o'clock, a. m., and Christian Endeavor—Senior, Intermediate and Junior—at 6:30, and preaching at 7:15 p. m. We mean by this that we have not gone into winter quarters.

Our attendance has been very good considering the amount of sickness we have among our membership. Besides a lot of measles and severe colds, the following are very sick and we are much concerned about them: Mrs. John C. Sharpe, Sr., Mrs. Cecil Moser, Mrs. Lillian Kirkman Coltrane and Mrs. Date Gladstone. We are praying that if it is God's will they may be restored to health.

The regular union monthly meeting of the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies will be held in the home of Mrs. E. P. Sharpe Thursday of this week at 3 p. m.

The old part of our church, which contains six Sunday school class rooms, is to have a new metal roof this week.

Our pastor is dividing his time between visiting the sick and grubbing a portion of new ground which he intends to use for a garden. We suppose he is preaching sermons he prepared in days gone by. If so, he seems to have a good memory. Just as Brother Carmichael was about to take his text Sunday night, February 19th, President Taylor, his wife and son, came in. And after being invited and persuaded by the pastor, he consented to preach to us, and he gave us a very inspiring and helpful message. Come again, Brother Taylor.

We have a committee to secure subscriptions to the Herald, and we hope to send in a list of new subscribers soon.

Best wishes to the Herald and all its readers.

REPORTER.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—Pastor Spencer brought us an impressive sermon Sunday morning on "Stewardship." He impressed the importance of liberal giving of our money to God's work—not only our money, but our service and time. The congregation was very small owing to sickness. We have postponed our Centennial Gratitude Gift service until the fourth Sunday in March as we want to boost it more among our members. Misses Bell Wood and Kathleen Shearin have been appointed as a committee to boost. We hope to make the fourth Sunday in March a red-letter for our church.

Our Sunday school is planning to give the pageant, "Signs of Easter," on Easter Sunday evening. A committee consisting of Mrs. Fletcher, Mrs. Ellington and Miss Kathleen Shearin, have been appointed to get up the program.

Our Missionary Society is planning to give a play, "Old-Fashioned Mother," soon.

REPORTER.

Gibsonville.—The most interesting fact with us just now is the Centenary Gratitude Gift. Our committee presented the matter to the congregation in the absence of the pastor on the third Sunday. On the fourth Sunday a group of our young people gave "Church of Our Fathers" in a very impressive manner at the 11 o'clock hour, and the committee received the offering, amounting to considerably more than half our our quota. (It is fine to sit back and look at the folks work.) The committee has no thought but to get the balance of our quota from the members who were not present.

Our Juniors Christian Endeavorers gave a demonstration during the "Children's Period," in the 11 o'clock service on a recent Sunday of the memory work they are doing under splendid leadership.

The Young People's Christian Endeavor Society is holding a social and business meeting this week, preparatory to their spring activities. They have decided to hold a sunrise service Easter morning.

The East Guilford Christian Endeavor Union held recently its annual banquet and business meeting in our church hut. This union is composed of Reformed, Presbyterian, Methodist Protestant societies, and a union society of Whitsett composed of members of practically all denominations in that community. The banquet was a very enjoyable and inspiring occasion.

Sunday, March 4th, our Sunday school will join in the township convention in the Baptist church here.

The four pastors here are planning for a week of union pre-Easter services.

Our Woman's Home Missionary Society at the monthly meeting recently held made plans for raising the balance of our quota before time for the branch meeting.

REHOBOTH AUXILIARIES

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society met for their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Willis Kittrell on Wednesday afternoon, February 22. The meeting was called to order by Miss Sue Harris. The subject of the meeting was "Self-Sacrifice." The Scripture lesson was read by Miss Doris Cheatham, followed by prayer, led by Mrs. Willis Kittrell. Also a very interesting paper was read by Mrs. Kittrell pertaining to the Business Girls' Home at Baltimore. Mrs. J. W. Wrenn, in a very pleasing manner, explained the Golden Jubiless, it being the 50th anniversary of our Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.

Minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary. Members answered the roll call with a verse from the Bible. We also had three associate members. Mrs. R. W. Harris read the program for March.

The hostess, assisted by Miss Lucy Rogers, served delicious refreshments.

The Children's Missionary Society met with Mrs. A. A. Currin Saturday, February 25th. The little members brought their thank-offering boxes. Mrs. Currin served refreshments.

We are planning to hold our annual thank-offering service the first Sunday in March. There will be a short program and Miss Annie L. Forrest will be with us.

FLAT ROCK W. H. M. S.

The Woman's Home Missionary Society of Flat Rock church (Vance) held its February meeting at the home of Mrs. N. J. Parrott. The meeting was called to order by the president, after which Mrs. Parrott conducted devotionals.

Only one active member was absent. Reports of all committees were good. Several new interests were taken up. First, the president gave out letters to each member to be mailed in behalf of the finances of the society. The motion was carried that as it was impossible for the society to meet together again on Friday for a day of prayer service that each member would offer prayer in her home at 8 o'clock on Friday evening, thus uniting their prayers for missions. Miss Mary V. White gave a talk on the Gratitude Gift and urged each member of our society to help in every way to make it successful in our church.

After much discussion of the organization of the young people, and the realization that we can accomplish nothing without the co-operation of the parents, two committees were appointed to make a house-to-house canvass and learn who would join and their ages so we might organize the societies in standard with Branch societies.

A vote of thanks was given Rev. M. P. Chambliss for typing letters and envelopes for the society.

As next month is time for election of officers, the following nominating committee was appointed: Mrs. N. J. Parrott, chairman, Mrs. B. F. Wade, Mrs. T. P. Hester.

A motion prevailed that a report of the year's work be read by the secretary at the church service in March, as so few of our members are members of the Missionary Society.

Mrs. U. J. Parrott gave a reading of the Business Girls' Home in Baltimore. Miss Mary V. White gave a reading on the importance of interesting the men of the church in missions.

We were very glad to have with us in our meeting Mr. Spainhour, of Winston-Salem, he being the father of Mrs. T. P. Hester. During the social hour Mrs. Parrott served delicious refreshments.

MRS. T. P. HESTER, Secretary.

FOR FOREIGN AUXILIARIES

Miss Annie L. Forrest spoke in two churches on the Haw River Charge last Sunday, and at Reidsville at night. We had a good thank-offering service at Reidsville. The women of the W. F. M. S. gave the little play entitled "Missionary Arithmetic," and Miss Forrest spoke in her usual forceful way. The offering amounted to $30. I am hoping to hear good news about the thank-offering services from all our auxiliaries.

Miss Forrest will speak at the following places on the dates named:

March 4, Granville Circuit, morning and afternoon.

March 4, Henderson, at night.

March 11, Burlington, in the evening.

March 18, Charlotte, probably.

I should like to make appointments for her during the week, if possible.

MRS. GEO. R. BROWN.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

Senior Topic for March 11: "How Can I Help Others to Follow Jesus?" Scripture, I Peter 3:8-16.

I

Plans for the Meeting

Have each active member to invite at least two who have not been attending the meetings. Be sure to bring one of those invited. Make the service devotional and inspiring. Try the following program:

1. Prelude ending with "I'll go where you want me to go, etc." To be sung prayerfully.
2. Scripture followed by silent prayer, closing with prayer by the leader.
3. Special music (appropriate).
4. Discuss the following questions: Why lead others to follow Jesus? How can we lead others to follow Jesus? What can our society do to help others follow Jesus?
5. Prayers—sentence prayers of consecration.
6. General discussion, comments, etc.
7. Hymn (appropriate).
8. Announcements.
9. Benediction.

II

Hints for Leader

The greatest thing we remember about any life is the way the life was lived. The example we set or the life we live speaks louder than any word we utter. Jesus' life is an example and speaks more forcefully than any words He gave us. We can help others to follow Him by the life we live. There are other ways: Love, kindness, encouragement, prayer and service. Try them!

III

Pertaining to the Topic

To lead those about us to follow Christ requires that we first be Christ-like. Unless our lives ring true the invitation extended will be emptiness and repulsive; therefore, no response. Secondly, one must know Christ and enthrone Him pre-eminent in one's life. One can not expect to make Christ pre-eminent in the life of those one meets daily unless that one knows Christ in a vital relationship. Thirdly, one must know the Bible to a certain degree. Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth. II Tim. 2:15. The Word is the light of those endeavoring to follow Christ.

IV

Correlation With S. S. Lesson

The lesson for March 11th, "Jesus Feeds the Multitudes," is interesting as we consider this topic. Have someone to tell of this multitude following Christ. Why they followed and what Jesus desirel most of all to teach them.

V

To be read and commented upon.

Why help others follow Christ?

1. Commanded by Christ. Matt. 10:5-7.
2. Gratitude requires it. Mark 5:19, 20.
3. Humanity needs it. Luke 10:2.
4. Our churches need it. Acts 2:38:42.
5. We grow by it. Eph. 4:11-15.

VI

1. Why lead others to follow Jesus?
2. How can we lead others to follow Jesus?
3. What can our young people's society do to help others follow Jesus?
4. What are we willing to do about it?

VII

Pastor: "The various methods of helping others to follow Jesus."

VIII

Poetry to the Point

I would be true, for there are those who trust me;
I would be pure for there are those who care;
I would be strong, for there is much to suffer;
I would be brave, for there is much to dare.

I would be friend of all—the foe, the friendless;
I would be giving, and forget the gift;
I would be humble, for I know my weakness;
I would look up, and laugh, and love, and lift. —Selected.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

March 11—Jesus Feeds the Multitudes. Mark 6:31-44; 8:1-10.

Golden Text—I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall not hunger, and he that believth on me shall never thirst. John 6:35.

The Compassionate Christ

At the time of this lesson, the people were moving toward the Passover Feast, and nearly all of them, no doubt, were anxious to at least see the Man of miracles and Teacher of truth. To escape them, He, with His faithful band of disciples, took boat to the other side. They were at the head of the Sea of Galilee, so it was not difficult for the people to observe their course. Following on foot, they met them on the opposite shore. Jesus was moved with compassion for them. They were as shepherdless sheep, which has striking significance to those acquainted with the raising and pasturing of sheep. Did this emotion come and go as a passing thought? Not at all. "He began to teach them many things."

Many times we see the throngs: as they surge from shop and factory; as they push their way in and out of the busy marts; as they pour into places of amusement. Do we ever feel compassion rising in our bosoms as we see them trying to satisfy human cravings? And if we do, how do we meet their needs? Jesus taught them the wonders of His gospel in His day. So may we—may I say, so should we? Yes, not only because of their needs, but because He has given us command.

The Hungry Host

A wayside preacher would do well to have half as many in his audience in this day as Jesus had on that day. Just think, five thousand men, besides women and children! And they were hungry, not only for the bread of life, which was the more important, but for physical food. Jesus could hardly stop teaching as He observed their insatiable thirst for more. But the slowly descending sun reminded Him and the disciples that it was time for the evening meal. Wisely, thought the twelve, they advised Him to dismiss the crowd that they might go find food. To their astonishment, He ordered them, "Give them to eat!" How could it be done? The only food they could find anywhere near to that hillside was in the possession of a wise lad who brought his supper with him, a mere morsel for a dozen men, much less five thousand.

The Marvelous Miracle

The lad surrendered his lunch of five loaves and two fish to the Master, a very commendable thing for a hungry boy to do. The people were ordered to sit in an orderly arrangement on the grassy slope. The food was blessed of Jesus, broken into fragments, and passed out to the multitude. Imagine the disciples' wonderment as they saw the particles multiply in their own hands. Imagine the marvel of the crowd as they ate their fill of that blessed food that was passed to them. The twelve forgot their own hunger as they observed what had taken place, but Jesus was mindful of them too, for a basketful apiece was gathered after all had eaten. Jesus satisfied all.

Leading Lessons

First, Jesus was mindful of the physical as well as the spiritual needs of the people. He made practical His teachings by making provision for their weakened bodies. Second, He taught His disciples that they had a part in applying His gospel. He could have done it all, but no, His followers must learn to do their part. Third, here as elsewhere in the Bible is recorded an unselfish act by an unidentified child. We find that children had a part in the experiences of our Lord. Fourth, His laborers or assistants were not forgotten. The fragments were enough for all of them. Sweet is the reward of the faithful after the multitude is fed and is satisfied. Fifth, that which Christ blesses will multiply. Our talents may be few, our equipment may be inadequate, our confidence in ourselves may be small, but submitted to Him they will enlarge to meet all occasions.

—The Methodist Recorder reports success in the endowment campaign for Adrian College. Already an aggregate of $430,000 has been pledged.

—Brother A. S. Lindley, who has been at Fortmyer, Fla., for his health, finds himself somewhat improved and expects to return to North Carolina about April 1st. His friends here will be glad to see him return in better health.

—John Barker passed away in this city last week at the age of 77. He was the oldest son of Brother Isaac Barker, a loyal member of our church who lived near Providence, Randolph county. Brother Barker, of Randleman, is another son.

—A special writer living in California looked over the Methodist Protestant Herald for February 16 and found a number of news-letters that interested him very much. He selected four for a publishing house that desires a write-up of Sunday schools and classes that are doing things worth while. The four selected were Graham, First Church, Burlington, Calvary Church, Greensboro, and Piney Grove, Denton Charge. He has written to the reporters of these churches for fuller information.

CENTENARY PROJECT FOR JUNIORS

"Our Methodist Protestant Family in Baltimore"

(In Ten Lessons)

The Board of Young People's Work is presenting for the next ten weeks, through the church papers, ten Centenary lessons for Junior boys and girls which are presented as a Centenary Project. It is hoped that the boys and girls all through the church will be studying the principles and program of the Methodist Protestant Church during the next ten weeks. The lessons may be used by Junior Sunday School classes, Junior Christian Endeavor Societies, Junior churches, special Centenary groups, or by Church-night groups. The important thing is that they be used. The ten lessons are as follows:

1. Our big Methodist Protestant Family and how it was started.
2. The part of our family which lives in the Kentucky mountains.
3. Some of our family live in big "love-homes."
4. Some of our big Methodist Protestant Family are New Americans.
5. Many would not have churches if it were not for our big family.
6. A part of our family live in India.
7. Our Chinese Methodist Protestants.
8. Our family in Japan.
9. Our family is being educated.
10. The Birthday Party.

LESSON ONE

"Our Big Methodist Protestant Family and How It Was Started"

Approaching the project with the children: The first step in introducing this series of Centenary Project lessons is to lead the children into wanting to know more about their church. The project must be made the project of your particular group. Interest in the project may be aroused by the leader telling of the one-hundredth birthday celebration in Baltimore in May; that our Methodist Protestant family is one hundred years old; that we have a form of government just like that of the United States. When sufficient interest has been aroused, ask if they would like to be "Centenary Discoverers" to find out just why our church was started one hundred years ago, and what it stands for, and what it is doing in the world.

Some Facts for the Centenary Discoverers

1. Our big Methodist Protestant Family is scattered over a large portion of the world—many of them live in the United States; some live in Japan; others in India; and still others live in China. We have Methodist Protestant Churches in all these countries.

2. Our big family made up of 200,000 people started 100 years ago with just a few.

3. We were once a part of the Methodist Episcopal Church which was started in 1784 with 80 ministers and 15,000 people. This was just eight years after the Declaration of Independence was signed. Before the Methodist Episcopal church was organized its ministers and members were all a part of the Church of England.

4. In the organization plan of the Methodist Episcopal church in 1784, only the ministers had a vote; the members of the church were not given the privilege of making any of the rules or laws. A small group of the ministers and some of the people of the church objected to this from the very beginning in 1784; they wanted the ministers and church members to share in the making of the laws and the rules governing the church. These people were called reformers.

5. In 1821, one of the reformers, a lay member of the Methodist Episcopal church, started to publish a paper for which he wrote articles in which he explained why both ministers and church members should be given the right to make the laws and rules for the church. His name was William Stockton.

6. Every year there were more people reading the paper, and the number of reformers grew quite rapidly. In 1827 the Reformers again asked the Methodist Episcopal church to allow layman the right to vote. The church asked the Reformers to withdraw, but the Reformers assured the church of their loyalty and desire to remain therein; they continued, however, to publish their paper.

7. The Reformers were active; their paper was causing their number to increase; in 1827 they were expelled from the church.

8. There was but one thing for the Reformers to do—they organized their own church in 1828 and called it the Associated Methodist Churches until in 1830 when the organization of the church was completed, they named it the Methodist Protestant Church.

9. About the only difference between the Methodist Episcopal and Methodist Protestant churches is the form of government. During the years since 1828 the Methodist Episcopal church has more and more given the church members a part in making the laws of the church, and we are hoping that the time will soon come when the two churches will be reunited.

10. In May, hundreds of Methodist Protestants will go to Baltimore, Md., the place where our church was first organized, to celebrate the one hundredth birthday of our church.

Suggested Activity: Photograph Album—Each child may start to make a photograph album in which he may paste pictures of those who make up our Methodist Protestant Family. Construction paper may be used for the cover pages and either white or brown wrapping paper for the inside pages. Pictures may be found in the four church papers, old and new issues. Let the children choose what they will write under or over the pictures; they should be given freedom of expression. New pictures may be added during the ten-week period.

Map of the World—Let three or four children make a large map of the world which will be used by the entire group. Map may be made on either muslin or cardboard, but should be at least 3x5 feet. Locate Baltimore by using a large gold seal. The map will be needed during the ten weeks.

Birthday Cake Poster—Let another group of children (three or four) prepare a large poster, using a large sheet of cardboard in a soft shade of green. Cut from white paper or cardboard a large birthday cake which may be pasted about three inches from the lower edge of the cardboard. Cut from pink paper one hundred tiny candles; paste these to the birthday cake on the poster. As the children learn facts about the Methodist Protestant church during the next ten weeks, draw pencil lines out from the candles, in fan shape, making some lines longer than the others, at the end of which write the facts which the children learn about the big Methodist Protestant Family, such as:

"The Methodist Protestant Church is one hundred years old;" or "Our Methodist Protestant Family lives in the United States, in India, China and Japan."

My Church's Birthday Book—Let each child make a "My Church's Birthday Book." As he learns facts about his church, let him either draw or paste a small candle in his book and under the candle write the fact which the candle represents. When the ten lessons are completed, it is hoped that each child will have one hundred candles in his book and one hundred facts about his church.

Worship Service

Theme: Thanksgiving for Our Church.

Call to Worship: Leader—O come, let us bow down; let us kneel before the Lord our Maker.

Children—Let us come before His presence with thanksgiving, and make a joyful noise unto Him with psalms.

One Hundredth Psalm in unison.

Praise Hymn—"For the Beauty of the Earth." No. 38 in Hymnal for American Youth. (Repeat last verse).

Discussion Before Prayer—Through conversation with the children lead them to suggest reasons for thanksgiving for our church. By skillful questioning and suggesting the following expressions may develop:

1. The one great universal church was organized to help us to live like Christ—we are thankful for the Christian church in the world.

2. The Reformers in the Methodist Episcopal church who started the Methodist Protestant church fought hard for what they believed to be right—we are thankful for their courage; that they were true to a great principle.

3. We love our own church and are loyal to it; but we see good in all churches and wish them to grow and prosper—may we be as loyal as were our early church fathers.

Prayer by the children.

Hymn—"Faith of Our Fathers."

Memory Work—Memorize the ten facts about our big Methodist Protestant Family and way it was organized. Memorize the hymn, "Faith of Our Fathers."

Suggestions for Leaders

1. Explain the meaning of words, "Expel," "layman," "reformers," "principle."

2. The children may form themselves into a "Centenary Discoverers" Club for the ten weeks.

3. Place your major emphasis upon the activity of the group.

4. This lesson divides itself into three periods, the work period, the instruction period and the worship period; they may come in the order named.

5. We would like to have you send all the things which the children make to the "Methodist Protestant Family in Baltimore" Exhibit in Baltimore for the Young People's Convention and General Conference.

6. A story which portrays the work of a church may be used in the worship service just before the discussion.

We are indeed grateful for each contribution of this week, and for the many loyal friends who help support this work. We also express our deep appreciation to the Ladies' Aid Society of Denton for a beautiful quilt which we received the past week, and a very useful box of clothing sent from the Jane Gordon Missionary Club of Girls, from 12 to 16 years of age, Pittsburgh, Pa. These are very helpful ways in which to show interest in the Home.

We still have some measles, and have now added two cases of mumps. Aside from these, the health of our family is very good.

TO WHOM REPORT?

Report to Mr. J. D. Ross, of Asheboro, N.C., when your charge has pledge its quota in full. Also mail all checks for the M. P. C. G. G. to him. We congratulate all those churches and charges which reached their quota on February 26, Gratitude Sunday.

Faithfully yours,

A. G. DIXON.

—We regret that we cannot publish an anonymous communication mailed at Burlington, N. C., last Saturday. We will hold the money sent to pay for publication subject to the order of the writer of the communication. But he must furnish indubitable evidence of his identity. We have just read about two swindlers getting $5,100 from a poor Jewish rabbi in Durham. We are determined that they or any of their ilk shall not have this money.

We are glad to welcome Midland, Rev. J. W. Hulin, pastor, as the new charge to be added to our list this week. This gives a total of 68 charges paying to date. Twenty-four (24) charges are without credits. Whose are these charges? We are grateful for all that is being done toward meeting this part of conference obligations. And we are appreciative of the help that these 24 charges are going to give—but HOW we would appreciate that help NOW!

In order to release Herald space for matter that is being crowded out we will run hereafter just the weekly report that we receive from Brother Idol. At the end of each month a report will be published covering total receipts for all purposes up to that time. We trust that this change may be satisfactory to every one.

We appreciate the fact, brethren, that there is much to be done, and that there are many adversaries. But let us not yield to discouragement, nor be deterred by any obstacle. If God be for us who or what can be against us?

What Kind of Disciples Does Jesus Want?

When Jesus was a teacher on earth He of course wanted disciples; otherwise He could not have been a teacher. But did He invite all men indiscriminately to become His disciples? The reports of His life in the Gospels seem to indicate that He selected His disciples and discouraged some who offered themselves for discipleship. The conditions of discipleship as stated by Him seem quite severe. "If a man forsake not all that he hath, he cannot be my disciple." It is clear that Jesus wanted whole-hearted disciples, men and women who were interested in spiritual things above all else. A man might reduce himself to poverty by giving away all that he had and still not meet the conditions. The multitude who followed Jesus for a little while after He fed them with loaves and fishes were poor enough, but they were not true disciples because they followed Him for the sake of the loaves and fishes. The "rice Christians" of China are not true disciples. The cravings of physical nature, not those of the spiritual nature, move them in their discipleship. Jesus came to minister to the spiritual man. It is true that He healed the sick and fed the hungry, but this was not His main business. He did that that He might do the other, the spiritual service. It is clear that Jesus wants as His disciples those who hunger and thirst after righteousness and are willing to make the necessary sacrifices to attain this high purpose. He came to save people from unrighteousness, from sin. But He is helpless to save except as men become willing and desirous to be saved. He can only cry across the gulf to those on the other side and weep because they will not come unto Him for salvation. The unwilling man offers a tremendous problem to Jesus and those who represent Jesus in the world today. We may not succeed in all cases, but it is the business of the church and its ministers to try to "make disciples" of all men.

A New Voice This Week

Many of our church names have become familiar to us through their frequent reporting in the course of the years. But this week we hear a voice that we have not heard before —that of Greer's church. We welcome this new church to our circle and hope for it a prosperous career. It has had a good beginning. The devotion manifested by its members gives ground for high hope. Such consecration will attract others and the work and the membership will grow. A few words in the report indicate that this field was left vacant by the consolidation of churches. Two days ago we were in conversation with Editor Plyler of the North Carolina Christian Advocate, and he remarked that consolidation of churches is much advocated these days, but sometimes it is overdone. It may be that it was overdone by our M. E. brethren in this case. At any rate the desire of the people for a church in their own community is commendable and they have proved their faith by their works. May they long live and prosper ever!

Better Since Amended, Mr. Reed

Senator J. A. Reed, of Missouri, has favored us with a copy of a recent speech of his delivered in Washington. One of his paragraphs is:

"If I am capable of understanding the spirit of the Declaration of Independence or realizing the soul of the Constitution, this Government was established to insure to the citizen the exercise of his natural liberties as an individual, and to preserve to him inviolate the enjoyment of all his faculties of brain and heart and soul."

After trial for over a hundred years it was found that the Constitution failed to secure to men the enjoyment of all the faculties of brain and heart and soul. For that reason an amendment was added, known as the Eighteenth Amendment. Since this addition was made, the Constitution better serves its original purpose. Yet you, Mr. Reed, are charged with being opposed to this amendment. And you are a candidate for the high office of President of the United States. Do you think that you are qualified for that office, entertaining such a feeling toward part of the Constitution, the fundamental law of the land?

In the Greensboro Ministers' meeting on Monday, Rev. Murphy Williams protested against extravagance in funeral expenses. In their grief people go beyond their ability and beyond reason in expenses. The dead are not bettered by it and harm is done to the living. He also referred to the neglect of those who would really be benefited by a gift of flowers. He would have more attention to the living if not less to the dead.

—Swiftly comes May 16 when our church is to make its Gratitude offering. We are all interested and none of us would feel otherwise than disappointed if there should be failure in any part of the church to measure up to reasonable expectations. Let not North Carolina fail!

—Calvary church, on the recommendation of Pastor Bates, recently introduced the practice of asking general questions about the Bible. These are printed and given for home study. The answers are written and graded. The object is to bring about a greater familiarity with the Bible as a whole. Those who read only the Sunday school lesson texts have a very imperfect knowledge of the Book. In our earlier Sunday schools, when there were no lesson helps, the Bible was taken into class and chapter after chapter was read. That practice made some fine Bible scholars in the sense that they knew what the Bible says. To get at the meaning of the Scriptures it is necessary to know what the Scriptures say.

—We would call attention to the request of Rev. I. A. Barnes for information about old Methodist Protestant churches.

CENTENNIAL GRATITUDE GIFT

Our Gratitude to God

We want to thank God for what He and the founders of our church have done for the Kingdom and for us. We want to thank God for what He and we shall do for the Kingdom and for posterity.

We should begin by raising $100,000 and then sing "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow" as we go to the next task. T. M. Johnson.

My Debt of Gratitude

Of course I owe a debt of gratitude to the Methodist Protestant Church. It has been my church from childhood. I am grateful for the sheltering care given me and the doors of opportunity opened to me wherein I might serve the Kingdom of our Lord.

Surely, I would not forget my own church on its one hundredth birthday. Roland C. Stubbins.

The Greatest Debt of Gratitude

Our greatest gratitude should be to our Heavenly Father for the gift of eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord, and for the church where this life is generated, fostered and perfected. The church is the only institution where the various agencies function. Our church, born one hundred years ago out of the travail of a sacred passion for religious freedom, and dedicated to its high mission, deserves our truest loyalty and most earnest devotion. Its traditions and history are hallowed by the cherished memories of the untiring zeal and efforts and the unquenchable love of our fathers and mothers who wrought so nobly, and who have left it as a priceless heritage from God to our keeping.

We shall not disappoint their hope. Let us be eager and quick to give to promote the interests of our church, thereby keeping ourselves, helping others and helping generations yet unborn.

"God loveth a cheerful giver."

G. W. Holmes.

A Blessed Privilege

In subscribing to the Gratitude Gift, we should certainly not regard it as an obligation upon any of us as Methodist Protestants, but rather as a splendid opportunity and blessed privilege of expressing our sincerest love and appreciation for the church that means most to us and for what it has stood all these years. Blanche Hardee.

What the Methodist Protestant Church Has Meant to One Woman

I feel that it has been a great help and safeguard in rearing and training my two boys and three girls, and I shall have no greater joy than to know that these children always "walk in truth" and uprightness.

Then the church appeals to my better nature, representing as it does all the finer things of life, and I am glad to be aligned with Christian people, whose fellowship I enjoy.

Again, it has been a channel through which I have had a small share in the work of the local church, contributing my mite to the building of a college, the First church, and through the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies to the support and education of children and young people other than my own. I count this privilege a happy one.

I am sure that we cannot express our gratitude in dollars and cents, but I am delighted to say that the First church, High Point, enjoyed a real lovefeast last Sunday morning when Dr. J. H. Straughn so eloquently and forcefully presented the Centennial Gratitude Gift plan to us, and out of grateful and spontaneous hearts approximately $1,000 was contributed. Blanche A. Pickens (Mrs. R. T.).

704 W. Broad St., High Point, N. C.

In Gratitude for My Church

In thinking of what the Methodist Protestant Church has meant to me, I find that there are so many things that I hardly know where to begin.

Years ago when a child, I found peace with God at the altar of our beloved church and there took the vows of the church. During all these years I have communed at her altars, have heard her ministers proclaim the truth from her pulpits. She has raised me as a mother does her offspring, cared for me and should I not show my gratitude to God on this her one hundredth birthday, by bringing my gift to her? I do not feel that I would be worthy to be her child should I fail her at this time.

If mother were living, I would count it my greatest privilege to remember her on her birthday with a gratitude gift, even though I had to sacrifice to do so. Let us not fail our spiritual mother at this time.

Mrs. D. A. McLaurin.

Concord, N. C.

MY GRATITUDE GIFT

P. E. Lindley

Mine shall be a gift of joy. Not to measure my love for our church, but to express it, am I eager to offer some tribute in the form of a gratitude gift. The offering can only be a token, symbolic of my love. Yet I would be unworthy to share the blessings and name of Methodist Protestantism should I withhold my present on this glorious anniversary. Money is no equivalent for love, but it expresses it. So the gift must come; not as an attempt to gauge my affection; not that it will even begin to repay my church for its precious services to me, but purely because my heart overflows in thankfulness this season for all His benefits towards me.

These priceless "benefits" of grace have come to my heart and life directly through our church. Whatever others may say for the church, my position remains the same, simple truth; the church has done far more for me than I have ever done for the church! In fact the church has done about all, while I am the recipient. Under its light and love my humble home was founded. Its holy influences sustained and fashioned my unconscious years, and early crept into my timid soul, there to be the lamp of my inner life. By the torch of the church my parents lighted our childish pathway, and on reaching their last milestone, passed it on that we might hold it high. My inheritance of grace, like yours, is precious beyond measure. And with the passing of this church century we want to praise our Heavenly Father for His goodness. To Joshua it was given that a certain day be extended that the will of the Lord be done. And we well know that a day next May, even of double duration, will prove insufficient to gather the testimonies of praise from the thousands of rejoicing hearts!

Yes, I want to join these thousands who have found nurture and peace in the Methodist Protestant Church as they bring rich gifts of love. Let us be glad that we live at this particular time. We behold the turning of an epoch; we see the first century close. We must close it with all the solemnity of our being, in reverence, in magnanimity and in prayer. It is the closing scene of the first great drama. And soberly the players are taking, each his role, to ring down the curtain in a glorious climax, befitting the noble pageant of our first century.

So I am happy to bring a little gift. I am constrained to do my best because (1) the church loved me ere I knew it; (2) this church provided me spiritual sustenance as the riper years advanced. Then (3) since my parents found refuge in the Methodist Protestant Church, they bequeathed to me their wholehearted devotion to its doctrines. And now (4) I enjoy the increasing fellowship and larger rewards as I labor in the employ of the denomination. (5) Through the agency of the church my talents, though frail, find expression. The church magnifies my efforts in the lives of hundreds of young men and women, thus honoring and utilizing my little endeavors for the expanding kingdom of God. Fially (6) I am determined to make this gift for it is the last such event I will ever see. Let our successors celebrate the close of the second century as they please. And I doubt not they will rise most gloriously to the occasion. But it must not be said that the membership of the first centennial marred the sacred records with their cold and stony hearts of chilling ingratitude!

CELEBRATING ONE HUNDRED YEARS OF EXISTENCE

As May approaches, every loyal and thoughtful Methodist Protestant has foremost and uppermost in his mind concerning his church, the centennial celebration.

As I have meditated over the idea, my thought has wandered into the following channels; namely, should we make some recognition of the fact of our 100 years of existence? If the foregoing be true, why should we and how should we let it be known that we are 100 years old. The answer to the first question was so clearly in the affirmative that the wise leaders of our beloved church have not waited for the rank and file to say yes to this question, but have gone ahead and made plans for the observance of our 100th birthday in a way that ought to have the hearty approval of every Methodist Protestant.

When I began to think of some of the reasons why this event in our history should be properly recognized, I preferred to make it personal, thinking what is true in my case is also true in the case of 'most every member of the church. It would be hard for me to estimate what I owe to the Methodist Protestant Church, for it was through the ministry of this church I first found Christ, to whom I owe everything which I have been able to undertake that has been worth while. It was through this church I got my early tarining as to the requirements of the Christian life.

As my thought ran on I began to think of the high standard of moral living in my community due almost wholly to the influence of the local Methodist Protestant Church. The ideals of clean and upright living were instilled into the heart largely by the preaching of the Word from the sacred desk of this church. When I think of the clean young men and women who have gone out from this community to bless the nation and the world, what a thing to be grateful for, and for those that can see the church in her magnanimity a reason for being grateful for the history of a church that has so well represented the cause of Christ in the world.

Since it is unanimously conceded that our 100th birthday should be properly and fittingly observed, the question of how this might be done was a natural conclusion reached by me and every one who has thought the thing through. Here again the leaders of our church, instead of trying to get the opinion of every member of the Methodist Protestant Church, which would have been an impossible task, have in innumerable conferences reached the conclusion that we can best express our gratitude in the same old way, namely by giving. Hence the Gratitude Gift. We may think a lifetime but we could not think of a better way to make real our spirit of gratitude. Then let us be thankful for those leaders who have thus led us, by doing our duty to God who has so wonderfully blessed us and the church which has given us our Christian training.

IMPORTANT INFORMATION WANTED

The editor of the Methodist Protestant has requested me to prepare a brief sketch of all the Methodist Protestant churches that are 100 years old. This sketch will be published in the Centennial Number of the paper which is to be issued during the Centennial week, celebrating the 100th anniversary of the organization of the Methodist Protestant Church.

I hereby appeal to every minister and layman who may know of an organization that dates in 1828, to please give me any facts or dates, names of charter members and minister who organized it. Also any one knowing a building that was erected in 1828, or before, please give me its original name, location—state and county—and if it is possible send me a picture of the building. A good kodak picture will answer. We know of a few of these old mother organizations, and it would be very unfortunate if any one should be left out of the picture of our great celebration. So, brother minister and layman, won't you please help with any information that you may be able to find. Any expense that you may incur in securing picture or data will be refunded to you.

There must be some of these old churches in Ohio, North Carolina, Maryland and Pittsburgh conferences.

Thanking you for any help that you may give me,
I am yours for service,

I. A. Barnes.

Fairmont, West Va.

PALESTINE

Edward W. Blatchford, who for the past five years has been in charge of the Near East Relief orphanages in Palestine, has seen 1,500 children outplaced or graduated from these orphanages into self-support. In order to give the boys who have gone from the orphanages the assistance they need while endeavoring to fit themselves into the economic life of Palestine, Mr. Blatchford has organized four Working Boys' Clubs; two in Jerusalem, one in Nazareth, and one in Jaffa. The four clubs have a membership of 90 boys. By living in such clubs the boys not only have a home and good food but are able to save from 20 to 35 per cent of their wages. The boys work at all sorts of trades. There are tailors, shoemakers, blacksmiths, carpenters, photographers, surveyors, pharmacists, marble-cutters and coopers.

By study and service, we come to understand Jesus and God.—C. E. World.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

Union Board Meeting

The Union Board met in Baltimore February 22. This was the regular semi-annual meeting. All members were present except Mrs. Andrew Lester, Mrs. S. W. Rosenberger, and Rev. B. M. Mitchell.

The reports coming from the three different fields were, for the most part, very encouraging. Especially was this true of our work in Japan and India. The war still rages in China, so it is still impossible to do any advance work in that field. Our lone missionary there, Mr. Horace S. Williams, at the time of his report was in Kalgan. He had been there since one week before Christmas and was planning to remain just as long as possible.

This was a very strenuous board meeting. We met at 9 a. m. and remained in constant session, except a short recess for luncheon, until 9:30 p. m. Even while we were at our luncheon we gathered around one table and talked business while we were eating.

This was the meeting in which we had to consider and determine the budget for each field for the coming year. This part of our work was very seriously and prayerfully considered. Each of our three missions made an earnest request for an increased budget: Japan, to make some greatly needed improvements upon Nagoya College and for special religious work among the students; India, to provide another needed evangelist and extension of the work, constantly looking forward to the overcoming of the crowded conditions in our Boys' School; China, to add a little to the already meager salaries of our native workers owing to the increased cost of living due to war conditions. Certainly the requests for increase are reasonable. Not a single request came from any of our missions for an increase in salary for our missionaries.

While facing these reasonable requests for an increased budget from each field, the board was also face to face with an overdraft for our work and a constant falling off of the budget. During January the Board of Foreign Missions received $522.67 with which to meet a budget of $4,621.08. The offerings to the W. F. M. S. have been much less than ordinarily this year also. Consequently we were forced to make the following reductions in last year's budget: Japan, $1,000; India, $754.50; China, $500.

To reduce the budget for our missions was a heart-breaking experience for the board and will be a great disappointment to our missionaries and native workers. But we can only carry on and promote the work as the necessary funds come to us from our constituency. We thus appeal to the church for more liberal contributions. If any Sunday school treasurers or annual conference treasurers have not yet sent in all the Children's Day offerings that have come into their hands, will you not please do so at once? We are greatly in need of these funds. They ought to have been in our hands months ago. The need is pressing and the call most urgent.

While your Union Board regrets very keenly the step that we felt forced to take, yet we have not lost faith. We still believe in our church, we trust our constituency, we know that God will bring His cause to a successful and glorious end. In the fulness of time the "kingdoms of this earth will become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ." But when that glorious day comes will we, as Methodist Protestants, have invested our full share in bringing it to pass? Dare we do less than we are doing? Your board sees the need, we know the heart-yearnings of our missionaries to see the work go forward and the willing sacrifices they are making to see it advance, and we hear the Macedonian call to come over into the places still without the gospel. We would go forward and not backward, advance and not retrench. Will not we, oh Methodist Protestants, make this possible through our monetary contributions?

S. W. Rosenberger, Executive Secretary.

EDUCATIONAL INTERESTS

President Ward is making heroic efforts to secure the last of the pledges for the endowment of Western Maryland College. The General Education Board extended the time to March 15. Of the $375,000 pledged, $32,000 was lacking. This must be paid or the $125,000 promised by the foundation will be forfeited.

The enrollment figures for four of our schools for this year are as follows: Adrian, 292; High Point, 335; Western Maryland, 522, and the Seminary, 41. Westminster completes her records at the beginning of the third quarter when definite figures will be available. The total will be the largest in the history of our educational activities.

The campaign in Adrian and Lenawee county for $155,000 for new buildings, repairs and equipment is still under way with nearly $90,000 secured. Of this amount approximately $15,000 was pledged by the college students. This will go into the endowment, the income to be used for the benefit of the library.

Thirteen students comprised the first class graduating from High Point College last year. There will be over forty in this year's class.

Depauw University, Greencastle, Indiana, does not permit students to own or operate automobiles except during the first five and the last five days of the school year. Exceptions to this rule are made where an automobile is necessary for the student in his work, juniors and seniors of high standing, and those who live at home and drive to and from school.

Albion College, Albion, Michigan, has received a gift of $200,000 to be used toward the endowment of the office of the president.

The Board of Education is giving financial assistance to 61 young men and women this year through its loan funds. Of this number 41 are ministerial and 20 non-ministerial students. Over $9,500 is required to meet these obligations. These students are found in each of our schools.

The number of students in our schools preparing for the ministry of the Methodist Protestant Church totals this year 84, as compared with 70 last year. They are distributed as follows: Adrian, 12; High Point, 14; Westminster College, 11; Western Maryland, 15; Seminary, 32. At least 100 young men are preparing for the ministry of the Methodist Protestant Church.

The offerings for last fall's Rally Day service begin to come in soon after September 1. The amounts sent in by the annual conference treasurers since that time are as follows: Maryland, $3,782.64; Ohio, $3,124.39; Pittsburgh, $1,466.62; Eastern, $929.61; West Virginia, $808.80; Indiana, $700.00; North Carolina, $565.98; Onondaga, $340.03; Illinois, $338.46; Kansas, $299.35; Iowa-Missouri, $164.28; Michigan, $78.00;

Washington Mission, $50.00; Texas, $50.00; Mississippi, $22.15; Missouri, $13.50; Louisiana, $10.75; Colorado-Texas, $6.57; Florida, $2.55.

Only the amounts received by Mr. Staley before April 30 will count on this year's records. It is very important that these offerings be sent forward as soon as possible as the needs of the Board of Education are very great.

FRANK W. STEPHENSON,
Exec. Sec'y Board of Education.

OUR CONFERENCE IN 1830-1831

The conference of 1830 met August 5 at Whitaker's Chapel. The 1829 meeting convened October 1 and the 1831 session March 17, so they are not in a very true sense annual. The minutes of this meeting and succeeding ones are much longer and more filled with detail than are the former ones. Only matters which seem to be of particular interest are, therefore, noticed here.

Two items in connection with the seating of members deserve attention. The lay members "gave in their certificates" and an effort was made "to make the lay delegation equal to the ministerial." No order has been recorded for certificates to be issued and no former journal has stated that they were. How the custom began is not clear but it continued. Nothing has been said heretofore about equal representation.

That the movement from the M. E. Church was still going on is shown by the resolution, "That Joseph B. Hinton be received in the communion of the Associated Methodist Churches in the same official standing as he held as a minister of the gospel, at the time he withdrew from the M. E. Church." We find here, too, the first record of an ordination service, that of Rev. Richard Davison.

The president presented a bill for $23.07 expense money in addition to his salary of $200. He had received $111.00, so the conference was much concerned about the $112.07 deficit. Several motions were referred to aspecial committee, but its report is not recorded. Among these suggestions for the solution of financial problems is one for a form of every member canvass in which the steward was "to ascertain from the members and heads of families the minimum amount they are willing to give." Rev. W. W. Hill accepted re-election, so some provision must have been made for payment.

The ministerial delegates to the general convention were Revs. W. W. Hill, Willis Harris, and J. R. Horn; the laymen, Spier Whitaker, John F. Bellamy, and Ivey Harris. Bros. Hill, Willis Harris, and Whitaker attended the meeting. The others were absent. The following record appears: "The delegates to the convention at Baltimore are instructed to insist upon equal rights of all members of churches being represented, and their characters and conduct tried by their own churches. That they shall not concede any other test of membership than the general rules of Mr. Wesley. That they shall insist upon the government being formed upon simple, liberal and scriptural principles."

The appointments were made by a separate motion for each circuit as to the "preacher in charge." The preachers who were to labor with them are not named in the Journal.

It was ordered that "the papers belonging to the Union Societies within the State of North Carolina be handed over to John F. Bellamy to be recorded in a book and referred to the annual conference for inspection." The next conference had a committee to inspect this book and upon its report ordered that the book be kept by John F. Bellamy and the originals be returned to Wilson C. Whitaker. Dr. Paris evidently had access to these papers about 1849, for he quotes freely from them. I have not been able to locate them. If they have not been destroyed, their discovery should be of great concern to all who love the history of the church.

The session of 1831 was held at Rehobeth in Granville county. Among its most important actions was the adoption of the constitution as drawn up by the general convention in Baltimore (November, 1830). Only one vote was cast in opposition but the Rev. Richard Davison presented a formal protest which was filed with the secretary for future inspection. Unfortunately it was not recorded in the volume before me.

The conference is noteworthy for the proportion of work done by committees. We find the first boundary committee, the first stationing committee and others on the mode of election of members of the next annual conference and on "ways and means to raise funds for the support of our itinerant preachers, their wives, widows, and children."

The entire conference was divided into two circuits, Guilford and Roanoke, and one station, Cook's Station. Alson Gray became superintendent of Guilford and John F. Speight of Roanoke. Each of a large group of preachers is assigned certain churches and in the case of many the words "and wherever he may choose" are added.

For the first time we are dealing with the "minutes of the annual conference of the Methodist Protestant Church." A committee is also to prepare material for publication in The Methodist Protestant, no longer called The Mutual Rights.

I have been interested in the fact that two days, "the first Fridays in April and October are set apart as days of fasting and prayer for the prosperity of Zion."

WHAT SHALL WE DO ABOUT GROUP INSURANCE?

A letter from Dr. Sebrell, the agent for the insurance company with whom our conference voted to insure, brings the information that we are still short 15 men for the required number to take group insurance. Insurance regulations require 75 per cent of the conference to go into it before it becomes effective. Sixty-eight have signed up for it while 83 are required. In glancing over the list of those who have not signed, I see that with just a few exceptions most of the men are among the younger men of the conference. Perhaps they feel that they do not need insurance; however, perhaps this is the last chance that many of our older men will ever have to get insurance. Because of their age many of them could not take ordinary insurance as the rates would be prohibitive. And then, too, many of them could not stand a medical examination. It seems to me that here is a splendid opportunity that the younger men have of helping the older men and especially the families of many of our older men. If we do not put the proposition across this time, I doubt seriously whether it is put across at all or not. If there are those who will sign up for it yet, mail your signature to Dr. J. E. Sebrell, Box 809, Charlotte, N. C.

OPTIMISM | The President's Letter | EVANGELISM

THE NEXT CONFERENCE

The standing district committee, Rev. C. H. Whitaker, chairman, reports that the Winston church has extended a cordial invitation to the conference to meet there in its next session. The committee has gladly and unanimously accepted the invitation and their action, we are sure, will have the hearty approval of the entire conference. Thank you, Winston. We shall all be glad to meet there in our next annual session.

Meeting of Two Boards

Tuesday, February 28, the board of conference trustees met at Grace church for the purpose of reorganizing the board and securing a new charter, the old charter having expired. The board learned, through Mr. J. Norman Wills, that a bequest had been left to the church by Mrs. S. V. Pickens, of Hendersonville, who died recently. Mr. Wills was instructed to engage Mr. J. Ed Swain to look after the church's interest in the matter. One thousand dollars was left for ministerial education, and the conference will probably receive from four to five thousand dollars for other purposes.

In the afternoon of the same day the board of church extension met in the First church, Burlington. The board faced many calls from various parts of the conference, and faced, also, a meager amount with which to meet these calls. The church should provide $10,000 a year for this board. Numbers of promising fields are open to us, and we could enter, with encouraging prospects of useful churches in the near future, if only we had the money with which to do it. The conference should find a way of greatly increasing our church extension fund.

The board made tentative appropriations, covering anticipated receipts.

Draper

Sunday, March 4, we were with Pastor Totten and his faithful band at Draper, preaching at 11 a. m. and 3 p. m. The congregations were not large, but appreciative. The communion service was observed at the morning hour, and after preaching in the afternoon, we talked to the people about the Gratitude Gift, and met a response that was inspiring. In a very few minutes their total allotment of $50.00 was pledged.

This was our first visit to Draper, and our impressions are favorable. Our church there has a field. The community is not over-churched, and with patience and proper direction our cause here should prosper. We believe that a change of location would add very much to our usefulness and growth. Our present site is too far to one side and away from the people. We need to get down into the town where the folks are. Some steps were taken last year to relocate; we hope that this may be renewed and that a better location may soon be found. Pastor Totten and his wife are zealously prosecuting the work, and we are hoping and praying for them a year of happiness and success. We enjoyed our Draper visit.

Specials

Send money for representative's expenses to general conference, and "Special" for church extension, pledged at the Asheboro conference, to Rev. J. Clyde Auman, Enfield, N. C. He was appointed by the conference to handle these funds. The money for conference maps is also to be paid to him, and up to the time of adjournment of conference, this was done. Bro. J. L. Trollinger is now trying to deliver the remainder of the maps, and those who subscribed for them will pay to him, and he will make final settlement with Bro. Auman.

Gratitude Gift

We will not attempt to enumerate this week the charges reporting on Gratitude Gift, as we presume Chairman Ross will have plans for handling that through the HERALD in due time. We must say, though, that the signs are encouraging. Strong charges and weak charges are responding most admirably to this appeal, and we are confident of ultimate success.

Please send all collections for Gratitude Gift to Mr. J. D. Ross, Asheboro, N. C.

Key Man

By common consent, this designation goes to the pastor. The very fact that he is chosen of God and assigned by the church as leader of his charge makes him the "Key Man." This gives to him a challenging opportunity, and at the same time entails upon him a tremendous responsibility. As he is spiritually, so will be his charge; likewise, his liberality, his faith, his progressiveness will be contagious. The "Key Man" must live close to Christ, and in the forefront of all that gives power and progress to the church.

Pastors' Reports

Reports for all charges except four are in, and the following facts have been taken from these reports:

Seventy-eight charges report Sunday school running all the year.

Sixteen charges report other than M. P. Sunday school literature used.

Seven charges report parsonages being built or bought.

Eighteen charges are building churches, or contemplating building. But in most cases the building is in progress.

Ten charges are adding Sunday school rooms.

Fifty-three charges have no satisfactory plan for raising budget.

Fifty-six charges report stewards "active."

Many charges report no activities by class leaders. The need for this office in the early church seems to have been met by other forms of church activities in these modern days. Is that true, or not?

Forty-seven charges are not able to pay pastors monthly.

Forty-two churches report "adequately supplied with standard song books," which means, of course, that the congregation is supplied with books. A church recently bought some M. P. Hymnals, but only enough for the choir, which is to say, "The other folks are not expected to sing." And they don't. The Psalmist said: "Let the people praise thee, O God; let all the people praise thee. Would that his voice might ring in the churches today, through pastor and song leaders, until the people learn to praise Him by singing in the church service.

Seventy-seven charges report $16,562 paid to pastors during the first quarter, an average of $215 per pastor for three months, or $72 per pastor per month. This means that many pastors have received but little to date. The total for more than half is under the $200 mark. Several range between $60 and $100, as the total received for the quarter. The lowest is $39.

The reports show that about 62 per cent of church officials attend quarterly conferences.

One hundred and eighty new members have been added by 34 charges. First church, Burlington, leads off with 22; Bess Chapel follows, with 17; Denton is next, with 15; Concord reports 12; Calvary and Fallston tie with 10.

Twenty-three charges report church officers inducted into office by installation service. We are sure that this practice should grow. A man was late at a church meeting recently because he had to go to his lodge to be installed as an officer. Why should he not be inducted into his office in the church by an installation service?

Almost without a single exception the reports indicate a sense of the need of an intensified spirit of evangelism in the church. The old forms of evangelism are being relied upon very largely, and in addition some pastors are trying to organize their churches for evangelism.

These reports are helpful, both from the standpoint of the encouragement that they bring and the problems that they reveal. We are grateful to pastors for their response, and we wish to assure them and their people that we rejoice with them in all of their successes, and their problems are sources of our concern and objects of our earnest prayers.

Appointments

March 10, with Bro. Ashburn in second quarterly conference at Mitchell's Grove.

March 14—With Pastor Totten in quarterly conference at Draper at 7:30 p. m.

March 16, with the Father and Son Banquet at the Asheboro church.

March 17, with Bro. Suits in quarterly confeernce. This is to be confirmed by rBo. Suits.

March 18, with Bro. Kinnaman in South Winston, A. M., and P. M. at Union Grove.

March 25, with Bro. Love on the Richland charge.

April 1, with Bro. Anderson at Albemarle.

April 21-22, with Bro. C. E. Ridgeon, Davidson.

April 28-29, with Bro. Powell on Greenville charge.

S. W. Taylor.

March 6, 1928.

SONG BOOKS

I wonder if the editor and music committee will permit an expression from the organist of a rural church in regard to the use of the M. P. hymnals.

The M. P. hymnals are a great hymnal, filled with songs we love so well, songs that help to a worshipful attitude that is so needed in the rural church, songs that fit our minds and hearts for the reception of the divine message.

I think every M. P. church should use the hymnal in all its services, unless it is a special day service like Easter, Children's Day, etc., when the boards furnish the programs. Our church owns about 35 hymnals. Do we use them? No! Why? First, because our people don't want to. They think the songs hard to sing. They have never used them enough to learn them. The more you sing these dear old hymns the more you love them. The more you love them the better you like to sing them. Our older people do not sing them, therefore our young folks never learn them. I hope all will pardon me if I relate some of our experience. In our church and in a good many rural churches we do not find an organized or trained choir. Very few really know music, either vocal or instrumental. Ofttimes the organist leads the singing, and this is hard in using the hymnals unless one is very familiar with both the words and music of the song. Then too all pastors do not urge the use of the hymnal. I believe any church would try to use the hymnal, especially where they already have them, if the pastor would insist and assist.

When we have a pastor who wants us to use the hymnal in the church service, we do so. He often selects the hymns and gives the numbers to the organist a few days in advance that she might familiarize herself with them.

I do not say the singing at the church service was altogether as good as at the Sunday school and prayer meeting when we used other song books, but the fault lays in us. Fewer persons sat in the choir when we used the hymnals, and scarcely any of the young people or children tried to sing.

We never use our hymnals anymore. This morning I noticed them all lying in a heap on the floor in the back of the church. That was the spur that caused this letter.

I do hope the music committee may arouse enough feeling of denominational pride and loyalty that no M. P. church in North Carolina will dare use any hymn book save our own.

Best wishes for the work of the music committee.

A VERY PROBABLE SOLUTION

I would suggest that the undecipherable name of which Bro. Kennett speaks, in his article, "The N. C. Conference in 1829," is Contentnea, as there is such a name in Greene county, being the name of a stream, a stream larger than Deep or Haw rivers, the lower part being navigable. The said stream is known as Contentnea creek, or Moccasin river, generally going by the name of Contentnea. Also, in that section, Speight is a prominent name. We used to visit, in 1890, Capt. James P. Speight, a leading man in the county, and also a leading Methodist Protestant of Tabernacle church, a part of LaGrange circuit. As Rev. Seth Speight was assigned to this charge—whatever its name—it being on the Contentnea section, and the Speight section also, they being one, makes it almost certain that the seemingly undecipherable name was Contentnea.

I remember seeing a small Bible, in a case, at Capt. Speight's that had been the property of a Rev. Speight. I'm not sure of the name, but think it was Rev. Seth Speight. This section is 20 miles north of LaGrange, N. C., and about 16 east, or south, of Wilson, in Greene county. It is a good farming section, and quite a number of wealthy families of the old school southern people. That we had churches in this section early in our history is certain, as we remember hearing Rev. J. L. Michaux, D.D., say more than once that his first circuit, as a young preacher, extended from Gaston on the west, in Halifax county, to Columbia on the east, in Tyrrell county, and to Tabernacle on the south, in Greene county, this being in the Contentnea-Speight section. Bro. Michaux died in 1898, around 70 or 75 years of age. So it is likely that he traveled in this section in the '40's.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

Senior Topic for March 18: "What Are the Real Values of Church Membership?" Scripture Lesson Col. 3:8-17.

I

Plans for the Meeting

Perhaps one of the outstanding needs of church members everywhere is a deeper devotional life. Worship, "the lifting of the heart to God," a waiting upon Him to reveal His will and speak the word of comfort and inspiration, is not emphasized in the preaching hour, the Sunday school nor the Christian Endeavor meeting as it should be. Give the first ten minutes of this meeting to worship. Read devotional passages of Scripture, sing hymns of worship and praise and strive to get each member to pray at least a sentence prayer—prayers of thanksgiving, adoration, praise, confession, submission, consecration.

II

Hints for the Leader

1. Emphasize the place and position of the church. The church is the greatest institution. As the topmost peak of a mountain range towers above the other peaks of that particular range, so the church towers high above all other institutions. The church is a beacon light beckoning and leading people to the higher life, leading them from darkness into the sunlight of God's eternal love.

2. Make a very keen distinction between a church member and a Christian. To be a member of the church does not necessarily mean that an individual is a Christian. During a revival meeting, a minister said to a young man, "Are you a Christian?" The young man replied, "No." Yet that young man was a member of the church and also a member of the Board of Stewards. Bring out the awful tragedy and pathos of misrepresenting Christianity, of living a hypocritical life.

III

Pertaining to the Topic

The list given here by no means exhausts the real values of church membership. Others will be named and discussed by the members of the society.

1. Salvation from sin. The church does not save. But church membership is confessing Christ before the world and an evidence of the fact that an individual has accepted Him as a personal Saviour.

2. Christian fellowship. This fellowship is sorely needed. It strengthens, encourages, lifts, inspires.

3. Christian nurture and growth. The chief business of an individual is to be a Christian. He is to grow in grace and in the knowledge of Christ. He is to grow up into the fullness of the stature of Christ. The church is a great and invaluable aid in this growth.

4. Service. "Whosoever would save his life shall lose it; but whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it." The church offers opportunities for service. The church presents a great challenge.

IV

Correlation With S. S. Lesson

Today's topic for the Sunday school lesson is "Jesus Teaches Sincerity." Bring out in a clear and forceful way the teachings of Jesus concerning hypocrisy.

To Be Read and Commented Upon

1. Fellowship. Acts 2:42.
2. Help. Acts 11:27-30.
3. Brotherliness. Rom. 12:9-16.
4. Comfort. II Cor. 1:3-5.
5. Fruit of the Spirit. Gal. 5:22, 23.
6. Citizenship. Eph. 2:19.
7. Peace. Phil. 4:6, 7.

VI

At the Point of a Question

1. How may a church member make known the real values of church membership to the non-believer?

2. What is meant by "Ye are the salt of the earth?"

3. What is meant by, "Ye are the light of the world?"

4. Are the majority of church members as enthusiastic in Kingdom service as they should be? Why?

VII

Suitable Poetry

I love thy kingdom, Lord,
The house of thine abode,
The church our blest Redeemer saved
With His own precious blood.

For her my tears shall fall,
For her my prayers ascend;
To her my cares and toils be given,
Till toils and cares shall end.

Beyond my highest joy
I prize her heavenly ways,
Her sweet communion, solemn vows,
Her hymns of love and praise.

Sure as thy truth shall last,
To Zion shall be given
The brightest glories earth can yield
And brighter bliss of heaven.

—Timothy Dwight.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

March 18—Jesus Teaches Sincerity

Scripture Basis—Mark 7:1-23.

Golden Text—"Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life." Prov. 4:23.

Ceremonial Conflict

To learn some of the ceremonial requirements of the old Jewish law, one may read parts of the Book of Leviticus, especially the 14th and 15th chapter concerning defilement. And to more fully realize the effect of the attempt to abide by these laws, let us imagine ourselves to be strict adherents to such a code, as the Scribes and Pharisees claimed to be. The very heart of the gospel would be removed, and nothing but empty forms would remain.

Trying to trap the Master, some of the Scribes and Pharisees, coming from the feast of the Passover at Jerusalem, inquired of Him the reason His disciples did not adhere to the tradition of the elders and wash their hands for ceremonial purification before eating. Jesus was always ready to answer them conclusively and in no uncertain language. To support His answer, He quoted from the propheey of Isiah (29:13), condemning them for their hypocrisy.

"In vain do they worship me," saith Jehovah by the mouth of the prophet. Rather severe denunciation, we may say. But does it not apply to many of God's children today? What does our worship amount to, wherever we may be—at home, in church, in the woodland? So vital is worship to our spiritual growth that we cannot afford to neglect it to any extent.

Truthless Traditions

Rejecting the commandment of God to keep tradition was the accusation of Jesus to these Jewish leaders. Not only did they make their own laws of conduct and worship, but they substituted these laws for those of God. Instead of expanding and explaining the laws of Moses as they claimed to do, they violated them and made them ineffective. Their traditions were lifeless and truthless.

By way of illustration, Jesus cited "the first commandment with a promise." (Exod. 20:12; Eph. 6:2). The law of Moses required that a man who disobeyed was worthy of death. (Exod. 21:17). God provided this law and its penalty. The Scribes and Pharisees added a clause which weakened the effectiveness and made a loop-hole for unworthy sons and daughters to dishonor their parents. "Just say 'Corban,'" said they, "and your responsibility to them is at an end."

"Corban" originally meant a sacrifice or gift to God, but in the New Testament the Jews used it merely as a word of vowing. Should a man use this word regarding his property, he would thus relieve himself of providing for his parents, since his property was considered sacred unto God. Still, he could keep it and use it for himself.

When tradition or anything else provides excuses for us to fail to keep the commandments of God and of Jesus Christ; or gives us a way of escape from the practice of true love and regard for parents and others; we are doing what Jesus accused those false teachers of practicing, "making void the word of God by your tradition." "If ye love me, keep my commandments." "Love one another." "Love thy neighbor as thy self." These are some of our Lord's teachings. Carrying them out in our everyday life is the way to make the Word of God effective.

Real Religion

Upon casual reading of the 15th verse of the lesson, we may disagree with the Master. Much that goes into a man defiles him. Men who imbibe intoxicants, narcotics, etc., in various forms defile their bodies, which are the temples of God. (I Cor. 3:16; 6:19). But Jesus was speaking of the petty things which the Scribes and Pharisees considered of a defiling nature. An insect lighting upon them or contact with the heathen in a crowd, or eating meat that was forbidden were sources of defilement. Men need not be greatly concerned about these things.

What did really defile? "That which cometh out of a man defileth him," Jesus de-cleared. Then he enumerated to His disciples a number of unclean products of our inner selves. (Verses 21, 22). Had these staunch adherers to the ceremonial law and traditions been more careful about their inner lives, their teachings and influence would have been far more uplifting.

Real religion, then, is a matter of purity of heart which prompts right conduct. "Create in me a clean heart, O God," we may humbly pray, should defilement of any sort be found therein. It is a ruse of the devil to lay to the charge of circumstances, companions, environment, natural depravity, and the like, the sins that are conceived in our hearts and minds. Jesus has all power in heaven and earth. He has power to cleanse and purify the human heart. He has power to keep clean those who put their faith in Him. Are we willing to let Him have His way with us?

HOME MISSIONS

Easter Celebration

Never in the history of the Methodist Protestant Church was there the great interest manifested in the celebration of Easter as this present year. The denomination at large has come to realize that in the services of the sanctuary we should give emphasis to the victory we have over sin and death in the resurrection of our Lord from the tomb. Paul well said "if Christ be not risen then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain. If in this life only we have hope we are of all men most miserable. But now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept."

It is appropriate that every church, however small, should hold a service some time during Easter. The General Conference has authorized the Board of Home Missions to prepare a program suitable and flexible enough to meet the needs of all the churches. This has been done and sample copies sent to every pastor and Sunday school superintendent whose names and addresses could be secured.

The offering is to be given to Home Missions and, as we have many times stated, counts on the General Conference Budget. The churches are requested to join in a great concerted effort with a pre-Easter service looking to members of the Sunday school and congregation confessing Christ and uniting with the church.

The orders for the service to date exceed those of last year. If you have not sent your order, please do so at once.

Easter Offering

Rev. W. A. Melvin, 1412 William Street, Baltimore, Maryland, pastor of Lowe Memorial Methodist Protestant Church, has a plan for raising funds for the Easter offering for Home Missions which is unique and could be used very effectively in many of our churches. By this means he increases the offering in his own church at least five times what it would otherwise be.

He will cheerfully furnish the plan to anyone in the entire Methodist Protestant Church who will write him. I commend his plan to those who may wish assistance with their offering for the coming Easter. He will be glad to hear from anyone.

EDWARD P. GATES

General Secretary of the International Society of Christian Endeavor, and one of the speakers of the Centennial Young People's Convention, Baltimore, Md., May 10-15, 1928.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONVENTION

One of the features of the Methodist Protestant Young People's Convention in Hampden Methodist Protestant Church, Baltimore, May 10-15, will be the organization of the "Crusade with Christ" campaign for the young people of our denomination. This crusade was launched by Daniel A. Poling, president of the International Society of Christian Endeavor at the International Convention held in Cleveland, Ohia, last July. It will include the young people of most of the evangelical denominations of North America, having already been endorsed by the Epworth League, the Baptist Young People's Union of America, the International Council of Religious Education, and other organizations in the field of young people's work. The major emphases of the Crucade are Evangelism, Christian Citizenship, and World Peace.

Edward P. Gates, of Boston, General Secretary of the International Society of Christian Endeavor, has assumed the active leadership of the Crusade for the Christian Endeavor Societies of North America. His time will be given over for the next several months very largely to the promotion of the Crusade in state conventions, denominational conventions, ets. His outstanding leadership in many phase sof young people's work fits him eminently for this important task. Mr. Gates was trained in law and spent a number of years in that profession, giving of his volunteer time very generously to church work with youth. Because of his remarkable hold on the youth of the church, he was called out of his chosen profession to that of Christian leadership. For a number of years he served as Field Secretary of the Illinois Christian Endeavor Union, one of the strongest state unions in the country. As the General Secretary of the International Society for the past several years, he has distinguished himself and the Christian Endeavor movement by his untiring zeal and enthusiasm for the cause of "Christ and the Church." He was one of the most intimate friends of Dr. Francis E. Clark, the beloved founder of the Christian Endeavor movement.

Mr. Gates will address our Young People's Convention at Hampden Church on Friday morning, May 11th, and will lead a conference on Christian Endeavor principles, program and methods.

REDUCED RAILROAD FARES TO CONVENTION

Special excursion fares for the round trip of one and one-half times the one-way rate have been granted by most of the railroads of the country to Baltimore for the Young People's Convention and General Conference, May 10-26. The following conditions upon which these rates will be granted are given for general information.

At the time of the purchase of the going ticket, delegates must request "Certificate Plan" certificates from their home station to Baltimore. These certificates will be furnished ONLY UPON REQUEST. These tickets may be purchased between May 7th and May 12th. The certificates will be validated at the Young People's Convention by Rev. Lawrence Little and may be used in the purchase of a return ticket at one-half the return fare at any time up to May 30th.

Representatives to the General Conference and to other special meetings held in Baltimore and Washington near the dates of the Young People's Convention will save considerable railroad fare if they purchase tickets during the dates given above and attend part of the Young People's Convention.

Arrangements have been made for two special trains for Methodist Protestant delegates to these meetings, one leaving New York City on the early afternoon of Thursday, May 10th, and arriving in Baltimore in time for supper. The other will leave Pittsburgh, Pa., on Thursday morning, May 10th, and will arrive in Baltimore at 6 p. m. Arrangements are being made whereby delegates from points west of Pittsburgh may make connection with this special train.

Complete information concerning fares, accommodations, and special trains will be gladly furnished by Rev. Lawrence Little, 193 Odell Street, Concord, N. C., who has charge of arrangements for the convention program.

CENTENARY PROJECT LESSONS FOR JUNIORS

LESSON II

"The Part of Our Methodist Protestant Family That Lives in the Kentucky Hills"

Facts for the Centenary Discoverers

1. The new Methodist Protestant Church, when it was organized in 1828, was made up of 14 Annual Conferences. In later years, the Kentucky Annual Conference was formed, but did not grow rapidly because of the need of trained leaders. There were a number of small and scattered Methodist Protestant Churches dotting the hills and valleys of the Blue Ridge mountains in Kentucky, some of which were struggling and others closed because of untrained leadership.

2. Nineteen years ago, the report came to Mrs. M. O. Everett, of Washington, D. C., of the conditions of our Methodist Protestant churches and people in Kentucky. Mrs. Everett longed with all her heart to go to the state of Kentucky to help teach and train the people hidden away from the rest of the people of the United States behind the hills. That same year, she went to Kentucky to begin her work there. The women of the Rhode Island Avenue Methodist Protestant Church, Washington, D. C., of which she was a member, gave her ten dollars per month for her work.

3. When Mrs. Everett organized her first Sunday school in an abandoned Methodist Protestant church, only the women and children would attend; the men rode around the building shooting off their guns, and threatened to kill their mothers, sisters and wives for attending the services. But, in a little while, Mrs. Everett had so won the hearts of the people that she was a welcome guest in almost all the homes.

4. Three years later, when Mrs. Everett, together with the Woman's Home Missionary Society, started our school in Pine Ridge, Ky., the people of Wolfe County contributed one thousand dollars for the school building. A woman in Ohio loaned the W. H. M. S. two thousand dollars to help build the building, and was given the privilege of naming the school. She named it Alvan Drew after her father. This first building is still in use; it contains a chapel, four class rooms, a library, and a basement for manual training.

5. Mrs. Everett gave herself to the people of Kentucky for nine years; broken in health, she left the hills, but gave as a parting gift a cottage and twelve acres of land. About eight years ago, Dr. and Mrs. T. R. Woodford left their happy and comfortable home in Columbus, Ohio,, and, sending their two children away from home to school, went into Kentucky to give the fruits of their lives to the work so splendidly started by Mrs. Everett. The work grew so rapidly under Dr. and Mrs. Woodford that new buildings had to be erected. Mrs. Everett, learning of the need, sent $600 toward the building of a girls' dormitory, a home for the girls who were attending the school. Because of her generosity, the girls' dormitory, the joy and delight of so many girls, was named Everett Hall in memory of our first missionary to the mountains.

6. The work started by Mrs. Everett and now being carried forward by Dr. and Mrs. Woodford has grown until it has become a real community. We call it our Pine Ridge Community. There in Wolfe County in Kentucky at Pine Ridge, we have, along a new state road which is now being hard-surfaced, a Graded School, a High School, three large dormitories, a big farm, a store, some barns, and several homes. Here a part of our big Methodist Protestant family is living and getting their education. They have come from the small mountain homes to our big Methodist Protestant School-home.

7. Some of the boys and girls who attend our Pine Ridge school work on the School farm, others work in the dormitories; the girls weave rugs. This they do to help support themselves while they are in school. This, however, does not hinder their school work. They do splendid work in school and have about all the privileges of one attending public school, including music, dramatics, and manual arts; in addition to this, they have the joy and privilege of a fine, Christian, wholesome environment.

8. Some of the boys and girls who finish at Alvan Drew in Pine Ridge go back into their own home communities to teach school or to improve farming conditions there; others go away to college when they can secure financial support. Wherever they go, they carry the fine Christian ideals of the School.

9. Every boy and girl going to school at Alvan Drew takes this pledge: "To think out of a clear mind, to read helpful books and to destroy all unclean literature that may fall into my hands. To speak as pure English as possible and to avoid the use of slang and impure language. To avoid extremes in my dress and in the use of cosmetics. To avoid the use of cigarettes and other forms of tobacco. To refrain from questionable or harmful amusements of any kind. To be true to myself and honest in my class room work as well as in my examinations. To so conduct my department as to invite the best in friendships—to be a worthy member of our school, and an honor to my home and nation."

10. New improvements are being made at Pine Ridge all the time; just now the water system is being improved. Dr. Woodford is expecting to have very soon a fish pond, a chicken house and a dairy to furnish food for the students in the school.

Suggested Activity

Use of Map: Locate Kentucky on your large muslin map; paste on the map at Pine Ridge, Wolfe County, some pictures of our Pine Ridge Community, of Mrs. Everett, Dr. and Mrs. Woodford, and the rest of the workers there.

Pictures in Photograph Album: Name one of the pages in the Photograph Alums "Pine Ridge Community." Let each child collect pictures of our workers and buildings at Pine Ridge to paste in his individual Album. Besides Dr. and Mrs. Woodford, there are the nurse, the community worker, the supervisor of the farm, and the teachers.

Use of Birthday Cake Poster: Last week you made your poster with the one hundred candles; now begin drawing your lines out from the candles and write on the poster at the end of the lines some of the facts which the Centenary Discoverers have collected.

Use of "My Church's Birthday Book": Let each child add his tiny candles and the fact for each candle; by this time each child will have gathered a great many facts about that part of our family living in Pine Ridge.

Reports of Centenary Discoverers: All members of the group have become Centenary Discoverers; let each tell what new things he has discovered about the beginnings of our big Church Family and that part of our family that lives in the Kentucky hills. These reports should be given before the facts have been added to the poster and booklets.

Worship Service

Theme: The Joy of Helping.

Quiet Music: "Fairest Lord Jesus," No. 122 in Hymnal for American Youth, played softly and quietly.

Call to Worship—Leader: Look up and not down; look forward and not back; look out and not in; and lend a hand.

Children: How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings.

Praise Hymn: When the Morning Gilds the Sky, No. 2, Hymnal for American Youth.

Story: "Jesus, the Teacher who helped." (Make your own story from the following facts:

1. Jesus had been with the crowd until He was tired; He called His disciples to a quiet place for rest. Multitudes followed.

2. After he had taught them all the afternoon, seeing they were hungry, He fed them.

3. First, He taught them; second, He gave them to eat.

4. Jesus used a small boy, who wanted to be helpful, to show kindness to the multitude.

Hymn: "I Would Be True," 170, Hymnal for American Youth (Last verse.)

Conversation: Do you know of any one from our big Methodist Protestant Family who, even when they were tired, found joy in helping; who went far away from home to teach boys and girls; who, like Jesus, taught on the hillsides? How can we help the members of our big family who live in the hills of Kentucky? How can we help to teach these members of our family?

Prayer: 1. That we may learn the lesson of finding joy through helping. 2. That strength might be given to those who are bringing good tidings. 3. That the gifts of the rest of our big family might make it possible for us to reach more of the boys and girls of Kentucky.

Prayer Hymn: "Lord, Speak to Me, That I May Speak," Verses 2 and 4, No. 208 in Hymnal for American Youth.

Memory Work

Have the boys and girls to memorize the pledge which every Pine Ridge student must take when he enters Alvan Drew School as found in No. 9 under "Facts for Centenary Discoverers."

Suggestions for Leaders

1. Send fifty cents to Dr. T. R. Woodford, Pine Ridge, Ky., Wolfe County, with the request that he send you some pictures of the Pine Ridge work.

Collect pictures of our Pine Ridge work, cutting them from back numbers of church papers or from literature sent out by the Woman's Home Missionary Society.

3. Story material for this lesson may be found in Lessons 2, 5, and 7 of Missionary

Programs for Juniors published by the Woman's Home Missionary Society. If some representative woman in your church does not have a copy, write to your Branch Secretary of Literature or Young People's Work of the W. H. M. S. for a copy. You will want it for the next two lessons in this series.

4. Announce your next week's lesson to the Centenary Discoverers so that they may be collecting facts about our Children's Home at High Point, N. C., and our Bethel Home, at Weaverville, N. C. Lesson for next week will be, "Some of Our Family in Big Love-Homes." Begin collecting pictures for the lesson next week.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Burris

Miss Martha Burris died February 18, 1928, aged 77 years, five months and eight days. She was the only daughter of Joshua and Mary Burris. She leaves to mourn their loss two brothers, Noah T., and Joshua, the latter with whom she made her home. Three brothers preceded her to the grave.

She was laid to rest in the cemetery at Love's Grove, the funeral conducted by Rev. G. Hendry of Concord, assisted by Rev. J. W. Hulin. A FRIEND.

Shatterly

John M. Shatterly died February 18, 1928, being 89 years, three months and seven days old. His wife, Martha Shatterly, died July 31, 1890. His son, William Henry Shatterly, had already passed on. The following survive him: T. M. Shatterly, R. N. Shatterly, S. A. Shatterly, Lem Shatterly, J. W. Shatterly, Mrs. W. M. Meachem, Mrs. P. B. Core, Mrs. Jessie Alexander.

For many years he was a faithful member of Rock Creek M. P. church. His funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Revs. Dean, Baptist minister, of Burlington, and Offman, of the Lutheran church. His remains were laid to rest in Friendship cemetery.

J. A. BURGESS.

Hunt

Roena Hunt, wife of James Hunt, departed this life February 21st, 1928, aged 77 years. Mr. and Mrs. Hunt had lived together longer than the usual average—61 years. Mrs. Hunt was a good woman and was held in high esteem by all who knew her. She is survived by her faithful companion, five sons, and six daughters.

The funeral service was held from St. Paul's M. E. Church February 23rd, with Rev. J. H. Brendall and the writer in charge. The large congregation attending the final rites and the beautiful floral offerings attested the high esteem in which she was held.

FOREIGN MISSIONARY HONOR ROLL

Auxiliaries of the W. F. M. S. that have gone "over the top" with their budgets: Harmony, Hickory Ridge, Reidsville, Rock Creek, Thomasville Community, West End.

Please help us to have a long list next week. Only 26 days more in which to work.

MRS. S. W. TAYLOR, Treas.

In another week each auxiliary will receive from the Foreign Missionary Society's Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Minnie P. Harrell, a report blank to be filled out and returned to her so that she can make up her report for the Branch meeting. It may not be amiss to make some suggestions as to how these blanks should be filled out, and how to report to the various Branch secretaries.

The President of each auxiliary should see that all of her officers report to the proper officers of the Branch. The Corresponding Secretary shall, with the help of the President and Treasurer, fill out and send at once the report black to Mrs. Harrell.

The Treasurer shall send all money to the Branch Treasurer, Mrs. S. W. Taylor, 126 Tate Street, Greensboro, in time for it to reach her before March 30th. She will have to send the money to Mrs. East on the 31st as no check dated later than that will count on this year's work. Last year one Branch failed to receive credit for most of its budget because the treasurer failed to send the money soon enough.

In addition to filling out your blank for Mrs. Harrell report also to the following secretaries:

To Mrs. J. E. Pritchard, Asheboro, the number of Missionary Records taken by your auxiliary.

To Miss Mary Young, High Point College, all work done by children and young people, meetings held and money raised.

To Mrs. M. H. Waynick, 214 Northridge Street, Greensboro, all scholarships, Bible women or native workers supported by your auxiliary.

To Mrs. S. R. Harris, Henderson, the names of all life, memorial and perpetual members received since March, 1927, and notify her if any life members have died during the year so that their names may be put on the memorial list.

To Miss Velna McCulloch, Greensboro, your Thank-Offering meeting, what kind of program you had, and amount of money raised for this purpose.

To Dr. Harris Glascock, Greensboro, the number of tithers and intercessors in your auxiliary, and whether you have used any literature on these subjects or not.

To Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, High Point College, the amount of Student Loan fund raised, whether you have used the Question Box in your meetings, and what method you employ in using it. I suppose each member of the W. F. M. S. who reads the Record noticed on page 21 of last year's Annual Report that two girls preparing to become missionaries were assisted with money from the Student Loan Fund. Nearly one thousand dollars was taken from this fund and added to a legacy to establish a permanent scholarship in Adrian College for girls preparing to go as missionaries for our church. That gift was the initial step towards a similar scholarship in each of our colleges, but this money must come from the women of our auxiliaries. You are asked to give ten cents a year per member to go to this fund. The Board would appreciate ten dollars or a hundred dollars if some woman should be moved by the Spirit to give that much. If you can not go yourself, help prepare someone else to go and preach, or teach, the gospel.

The committee to prepare the program for Branch meeting will meet next week. Please send the names of your delegates to Mrs. Harrell at once so we may be able to use some of them for the Branch meeting program and on committees.

If you would like to have Miss Forrest the latter part of March, notify me as soon as possible.

The work of the W. F. M. S. in North Carolina has had a steady growth since its organization in 1909. Each year the attendance at Branch meeting, and the interest in our work in the foreign field, has increased. Let us spare no time or trouble to make all reports this year just as complete as possible, so that the report of our work as a whole may surpass any previous year. Then let us go to Branch meeting with a consciousness of the fact that we have done, not our bit, but our BEST, praying that God will bless our work and increase the "loaves and fishes" that we bring to Him until multitudes may receive the Bread of Life.

MRS. GEORGE R. BROWN.

MARRIED

Lambert-Smiles

In Brunswick County, Virginia, on the 21st of February, Mr. Eugene Lambert, of Littleton, N. C., were united in matrimony by the ton, N. C., were united i nmatrimony by the writer. J. B. O'BRIANT.

Cawthorne-Ferguson

On Monday evening at 10 o'clock in the First Methodist Protestant parsonage in Burlington, Mr. J. R. Cawthorne and Miss Mabel Frances Ferguson were united in marriage by the pastor of the church. Only the necessary witnesses were present for the marriage. Mr. Cawthorne is the son of Mrs. Emma Cawthorne, of Henderson, while Mrs. Cawthorne is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Ferguson, of Gibsonville. Both of these young people are members of the Methodist Protestant church, Mr. Cawthorne at Henderson and Mrs. Cawthorne at Gibsonville. It is understood that they will make their home in Henderson. The good wishes of their many friends go with them. L. W. GERRINGER.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Enfield.—Our Sunday school and church services have been splendid for the past two Sundays. Our superintendent is always right on the job, on time, and that certainly helps in keeping a wide-awake school.

Our pastor, Rev. J. Cylde Auman, is delivering to the people in Enfield some fine gospel sermons. I have heard a number of his hearers say, "That certainly was a good sermon. I believe he gets better and better each time."

Last Sunday we enjoyed having with us Rev. C. J. Edwards and Mrs. Edwards. Mr. Edwards favored us with a sermon at the morning service. We hope to have both of them with us again sometime.

The Ladies' Aid has secured Rev. N. G. Bethea to lecture the night of February 28th. We are looking forward with pleasure to his coming.

To each and every worker, let's fall in line and make this a year of real service in each department of our church work!

MRS. ELI I. BELLAMY, Reporter.

Mt. Carmel, Forsyth.—February 19th.—Rev. R. C. Stubbins delivered an excellent sermon from the subject, "The Empty Purse."

The Sunday school is far better than it was for the first quarter of last year. The Bible class will have charge of the opening exercises the first Sunday in March. The young people have organized themselves into a "Willing Workers' Class" with the motto, "Watch and pray lest ye enter into temptation." The class colors are blue and white, representing Truth and Purity.

The Christian Endeavor continues to be more and more interesting. The Intermediates entertained the Juniors at a Valentine party at the home of the writer. The young people held a social at the home of their superintendent, Mr. C. L. Stringer. Both were successes. The Seniors will have charge of the devotional exercises the first Sunday night in March.

A box supper was held at the home of Miss Esther Shepherd and the sum of $51 was realized. A contest was held in which Miss Jennie Mast was selected as the prettiest girl and Mr. Russell Spaugh as the ugliest man.

REPORTER.

Ai, Kernersville Charge.—The C. E. Society met with me last Saturday night and was entertained with a Leap Year party. After a number of games and contests, refreshments were served.

Our pastor, Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk, met with us last Sunday and gave us an inspiring message on prayer. He took his text from Prov. 15:29, "The Lord is far from the wicked: but he heareth the prayer of the righteous."

There are two classes of people; the righteous who can pray, and the sinner who cannot. When we say that a sinner cannot pray, we mean that he can get no communication with God, unless he is really sorry for his sins.

There were many churches last year which added not a single soul to their roll because their prayers did not reach God. We must do as David of old, who searched his heart and found nothing wrong; but was not satisfied with his inspection and asked to search him and try him. If we expect a revival it must start in our hearts.

Prayer accomplishes wonders, but if we do not get communication with God it accomplishes nothing. If we go to the telephone and can't get the message through, we say that the line is wrong. If we can't get a message to God and a response from Him, there is something wrong. The Holy Spirit is the center of the line and God is the rewarder of all those who worship him.

In order that we might know how to pray, God has given us directions, such as, "Ask and it shall be given you, seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you." "Whatsoever ye shall ask in my name that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son." "And all things, whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive." These ought to be sufficient directions of prayer for anyone.

In conclusion, he asked that each of us hold family prayer in our home that night.

Let each of us work and pray to make this the most successful year in the history of our church.

BLANCHE STAFFORD.

Pleasant Grove Brotherhood.—The Brotherhood met in the home of B. E. Payne Saturday evening, March 3, with 16 members present.

Bro. Z. B. Morris conducted the devotional exercise, and then turned the meeting over to Brother Reynolds. He spoke to the Brotherhood on sacrifice. He explained how the church would be benefited if we would only do our part. Possibly some of the boys who are being trained in our Sunday school would be called into the ministry. Without some sacrifice we could not expect to be blessed either as a church or individuals.

It was decided in our meeting to spend $2.50 to beautify the church cemetery; $100 was subscribed at the meeting, with over $60 in the church treasury to be added to this. A committee has been appointed to raise money from the ones who have friends and loved ones buried in the cemetery.

After the meeting, all met in the dining room where supper was served.

Brother J. M. Kennedy has been confined to his home for some time, but was able to be with us at our meeting.

BROTHERHOOD REPORTER.

Greer's Chapel.—The little church of Greer's Chapel was organized in January of 1927 with the very small membership of 18 earnest workers. The diligent laborers have increased its enrollment to 56.

This section has not been without a temple of worship, as Wesley's Chapel flourished under the direction of the M. E. denomination from 1903 until its removal to Tyro in 1927. The M. P. denomination then came to the rescue of Christ's Kingdom and quickly filled in the gap made by the departure of the M. E. Church. The little wooden building was soon replaced by a comfortable brick edifice. The structure is now nearing completion and the small group of co-laborers are exultant with pride and praise, for it stands as a memorial of their own handiwork. Each one has donated generously of his time and means, and these efforts are being crowned with success. The ladies, as well as the men, have sacrificed days at the church, laying the brick and erecting the wood-work by their own manual labor and the sweat of their brow.

Mr. C. F. Fitzgerald has been the great moving spirit in the problem and has been the most worthy guide and pilot from its very beginning. He has not allowed interest to lag and neither has he held back anything from the cause of the Lord's work.

The most able pastor, Rev. R. S. Troxler, has graciously bent every nerve and sinew to aid his members in the task they have undertaken. His deep consecration has rendered him a most beloved shepherd who at all times watches anxiously over his tender flock.

The Sunday school, too, has increased from a small corps of 25 to 100. This is certainly most gratifying as the Sabbath school is the staff and backbone of the church. With high hopes and cheerful hearts God's children are pressing on for the glorification of their Lord and Master.

The Heavenly Father, looking down upon his children and seeing their great faith as they build their house upon the solid foundation of love and hope, is sure to bless their efforts and to reserve a place for them in that house not made with hands.

The community was saddened by the death of one of our most faithful and beloved members, Mr. A. O. Moore.

While this was our great loss, it was his gain, as he has gone to reap the reward that is waiting for those whose privilege it is to hear the words of the great Master, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of the Lord."

LOUISE COATES, Reporter.

Burlington, First Church.—Sunday a fairly good day for us. Attendance for the Sunday school was 284, an increase of 43 over the previous Sunday; offering was $24.20, which goes to the Children's Home at High Point, as the custom is to send the entire offering each first Sunday to the Home. We are still having excellent music in the school furnished by our orchestra under the direction of Mr. W. T. Way.

The attendance at the morning preaching service was gratifying and at this time the ordinance of the Lord's Supper was observed with right many taking part. The congregation at the evening service was not as large as that at the morning hour. At this time Brother Gerringer preached a powerful sermon especially to young people, having a number of the younger members of the church take some part.

The second quarterly conference and business meeting of the church will be held Wednesday at the church at 7:30 and a full attendance of the officers and members of the church is greatly desired. At this meeting nominees for delegate to the Annual Conference will be selected. A committee of 12, consisting of ladies and men of the church, to look into the matter of a new church building will meet at the parsonage Tuesday evening, March 6, to discuss matters under the head of new church in order that they may have something to recommend to the quarterly conference Wednesday evening March 7.

Three of our beloved members have been called to their eternal reward within the past few weeks, as follows: Mrs. R. A. Laughlin, of Greensboro, N. C.; Mrs. Lorena Garrett Lindsey, of Florida; and yesterday at 5:30, Brother Z. V. Coble, of this city, passed away. We bow in humble submission to our Heavenly Father's will in our sorrow and realize that our loss is Heaven's gain and we pray God's blessing on each of the relatives of these departed members.

Many of our members are on the sick list. Brother John Quakenbush is still confined at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. A. R. Davis, and his condition remains about the same, it seems. Brother Quakenbush is one of our loyal members and is missed at the services very greatly and we hope it will be so he may soon be able to attend services again. The measles situation is some better, it seems, but still many cases as yet, and we are hoping it will not belong until the health of the people will be normal.

Next Sunday at the evening service, Miss Annie Forrest, a returned missionary, will address the congregation on the subject of "Missions," under the auspices of the Missionary Societies of the church .

We were pleased to have Rev. C. B. Way, of Lexington, N. C., as a visitor with us Sunday. It makes us think of past years to have Brother Way with us, as he went out from our church into the ministry.

L. A. BRAXTON.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—Last fourth Sunday Miss Annie Forrest was with us and gave as an interesting talk on foreign missions, which was enjoyed by all present. After the talk she took up a collection which amounted to $18.

Brother Curry is doing some good preaching, and we are learning to love him very much. He meets with us once a month in the different homes in congregational meetings and we are sure if we will attend these meetings that we will get much help from him.

Some time ago Brother Curry organized a Woman's Home Missionary Society. We have held two meetings and we hope to do much good through this Society.

We are planning to have an Easter program.

Sunday school is moving along nicely, and much interest is being shown in all parts of our church work.

The new church is going up in fine shape. It will be of brick veneer with Sunday school rooms. It is the dream come true of many who are gone and will be an honor to those who are living.

Pray for us in this work. Any help we can get will be appreciated.

West End, Greensboro.—The oyster supper on Tuesday night of last week for the benefit of the Sunday school annex was given by the Senior Philathea and Baraca classes. A neat sum had already been paid on the building fund through bazaars and suppers by the same group of young people. The Ladies' Aid is now at work raising funds with which to buy furniture for the future parsonage. At a meeting yesterday of this society there were present 23 members and guests, and a very enthusiastic business session was held. The social hour was enjoyed. The hostess, Mrs. Bonkermeyer, West Green Court, was assisted by her daughter, Mrs. Ferree, in serving refreshments.

The choir, directed by Mr. Foust, is at work on a beautiful cantata for the Easter service on Sunday night.

Evangelistic services will begin the fourth Sunday in March and continue until Easter morning. Rev. H. F. Surratt, of Charlotte, will aid Dr. Williams in conducting the services. REPORTER.

Corinth, Littleton Circuit.—At the 11 o'clock service yesterday, Pastor Crutchfield delivered a very interesting and helpful serman, after which the Lord's Supper was observed.

There has been lots of measles in our community and it has caused our Sunday school to run below normal. Yesterday Rev. Thompson said he wanted to organize a class for the men; we hope he can be successful and get more of the men-folks interested in the Sunday school.

. The committee composed of M. J. Morris, B. F. Morris and W. E. Carter, is at work on the Gratitude Gift and we hope to have encouraging reports from it.

Quite a number of our people went to Aurelian Springs last Thursday night to hear Rev. Bethea lecture on his recent trip through the Holy Land.

On February 13th, Mrs. Hettie Carter, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Morris, Mr. Bonney Morris and Miss Virginia Insco attended the funeral of Mr. Hunter Winborne at Purvis, Va. He was the youngest brother of Mrs. Carter. Our deepest sympathy goes out to her in the loss of a dear brother.

On February 21st, Mr. Eugene Lambert, one of our members, and Miss Lucy Smiles, of Warrenton, were married in Virginia. This is a very young couple and we wish for them much happiness.

MRS. B. F. MORRIS, Reporter.

Shiloh, North Davidson.—Sunday, March 18, will be M. P. C. G. G. Day. May every one who feels that they have anything for which to be thankful bring a liberal gratitude gift. We don't expect an offering as big as your blessing —no one can do that; but let your gratitude overflow onto God's altar. Think, without the Christian religion and the church, where would you be; and without God's willing servants who serve and give, where would the church be? We are counting on you.

MRS. WILEY SHOAF,
M. P. C. G. G. Chmn.

Pleasant Grove.—Our Sunday school has been hit rather hard for the last few Sundays because of sickness. Mrs. S. L. Murphy, one of our primary teachers, has been out for three Sundays because of measels in her home. The children are better now and we hope soon to have her back in school. Mrs. J. R. Meredith, teacher of the Philathea class, has also been sick. Besides her own sickness her father, who lives in Concord, has been sick for several months. This has caused her absence for several Sundays. Brother Maynard Kennedy and Brother Hubert Robbins have been out for several Sundays because of sickness. Brother Kennedy has been suffering from an ulcer in one of his eyes. Brother Robbins has also been suffering from the effects of a nail that accidentally found its way to one of his eyes. Both are improving and we hope soon to have these brethren back in our church services.

The Brotherhood decided last Saturday night to spend $250 in beautifying our church cemetery. The shrubbery and trees will be placed in the cemetery during March. This comes as good news, not only to the church, but to many others who have loved ones buried in the cemetery. Pleasant Grove is 98 years old this April and the first burial here was in 1847. G. L. REYNOLDS.

Friendship, North Davidson Circuit.—The attendance of our Sunday school has improved since our last report, and we hope by the first Sunday in April to be back to standard in attendance and interest.

We were sorry that Reverend Troxler was sick the third Sunday in February and unable to be with us, but he filled his regular appointment Sunday, March 4th, and gave us a good sermon. We were sorry that Mrs. Troxler was unable to be with us.

On the third Sunday, March 18th, at 7 p. m., a pageant, "The Church of Our Fathers," will be given by the Intermediate and Senior classes at Friendship. We hope to have a large crowd present and a good service.

We cannot yet make any definite report on the Gratitude Gift, but hope to be able to do so at an early date. REPORTER.

Siler City.—The Ladies' Aid and Missionary Societies served a dainty luncheon to the Rotary Club at the M. E. Church last Monday, March 5th, also the Monday preceding. The net proceeds from the two luncheons amounted to $41.70.

Our hearts reach out in sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Los Wrenn, who have recently been made sad because of the death of Mrs. Wrenn's mother, Mrs. M. Foley, of Aberdeen.

REPORTER.

High Point.—February 26th, Dr. J. H. Straughan presented the Centennial Gratitude Gift very eloquently and forcefully, and the sum of approximately $1,000 was subscribed spontaneously and from grateful hearts. To the Sabbath school belongs the credit of contributing $38.50 to this cause. Mr. Joe Ross, of Asheboro, chairman of the committee for North Carolina, was present, and seemed very happy over the result.

A supper, which proved to be highly successful, was given March 1st, jointly by Circle No. 4 of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and the Ladies' Aid Society. A delicious menu was served at 75 cents per plate, and the sum of $140 was realized, which will be divided equally between the societies.

On last Sunday morning, Dr. S. K. Spahr occupied the pulpit and delivered a beautiful and comforting message.

The general meeting of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies convened at the church on Monday afternoon with an attendance of 33. Both societies will raise their budgets before Branch Meeting at Grace church, Greensboro, in April. Officers for the coming year were elected as follows: in the Home Society, President, Mrs. Ben T. Moore; Vice-President, Mrs. H. A. Moffitt; Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. R. T. Pickens; Secretary "Buds of Hope," Mrs. H. G. Ferree; Secretary Student Loan Fund, Mrs. E. L. Douglas; Secretary Tithers and Intercessors, Mrs. S. D. Shelton; Secretary Young People's Work, Mrs. R. M. Andrews; Secretary Literature, Mrs. J. H. Pritchard; Secretary Blessing Boxes, Mrs. S. C. Vuncannon; Secretary Life, Memorial, and Perpetual Members, Mrs. Jones Burns; Delegates to Branch Meeting at Greensboro in April are the following: Mrs. Ben Moore and Mrs. R. T. Pickens, by virtue of their office as President and Secretary; Mrs. H. U. Oakes and Mrs. J. H. Walker, Jr., alternates; Mrs. J. H. Pritchard and Miss Elizabeth Welch. The Junior Missionary Circle, Mrs. R. M. Andrews, Superintendent, and Mrs. J. C. Whitesell, assistant, contributed $12.00 to the Home work, but this will not be counted in the Society's budget.

In the Foreign Society officers for 1928-29 were elected as follows: President, Mrs. C. L. Whitaker; Vice-President, Mrs. C. F. Barton; Recording Secretary, Mrs. J. H. Allred; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. P. S. Kennett; Treasurer, Mrs. J. S. Pickett; Secretary Life, Memorial, and Perpetual Members, Mrs. J. A. Gray; Secretary Education, Mrs. R. M. Andrews; Secretary Tithers and Intercessors, Mrs. J. H. Pritchard; Secretary Thank-Offering, Mrs. S. S. Coe; Secretary "Precious Jewels," Mrs. H. U. Oakes; Secretary Young People's Work, Mrs. R. M. Andrews. The annual Thank-Offering service for the Foreign Society will be held next Sunday evening in the church, and the Secretary, Mrs. S. S. Coe, is making plans for a program of much interest.

The Senior C. E. Society held a very interesting meeting Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock, and the topic discussed was "What Is It in Jesus That Attracts Young People?" with Misses Irene and Inez Reynolds as leaders.

Rev. E. L. Ballard is giving some entertaining talks on the history and polity of the denomination at the mid-week prayer services. This series will be continued this week.

We are pained to announced the illness of one of our faithful and beloved workers, Mrs. H. A. Moffitt, who will undergo a serious operation in two weeks. Her daughter, Mrs. Clyde Cox, with her little daughter, Sarah, and infant son, Clyde, Jr., have returned to their own home after spending a few weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Moffitt.

Vance Circuit.—The second quarterly conference will convene at Flat Rock church on Friday evening before the third Sunday, March 16th, and this will be the time for nominations for delegates to Annual Conference. A special program is being arranged and it is hoped that all the churches will be represented.

M. P. CHAMBLISS, Pastor.

Lincolnton.—Our meeting will begin Monday evening, March 12th. Rev. N. G. Bethea, of Lexington, will be our pulpit help.

In spite of the epidemics, our Sunday school has held up reasonably well, while the C. E. society is doing better work than at any time since I have been here, and the attendance at preaching services has greatly increased.

More people are attending the socials. There was a fine gathering of young people at Mrs. Bertha Dellinger's on Saturday night before the fifth Sunday in January.

If we can breathe into our young people social endeavor one of the problems of Lincolnton church will be solved.

Sunday school classes are doing much to bring about these social activities by class contests formulated by Rev. D. B. Johnson, superintendent of the Sunday school.

You perhaps are aware of the fact that very little has been done on Conference claims; the reason for this deficiency is that the mills have been shut down so much this winter.

Bros. R. G. Wood, D. B. Johnson, James Gardner have been appointed by the pastor to serve as a committee for the Centennial Gratitude Gift.

Helen Wood, Ruth Johnson, Mrs. Norman and Mrs. Nora Lingerfelt have been appointed as Herald agents. W. L. CARSON.

Enfield.—Sunday the writer filled the regular appointments at Whitaker's Chapel, Roseneath, and Whitakers. The two last named places the writer has been asked to serve until the president can supply them with a pastor. The congregations were good at all three places. Roseneath is not at the present in the stationing list of the Conference, but if what I saw last Sunday is the average, it should by all means be. We had a good congregation, being one of the largest of the day. They need encouragement. At Whitaker's Chapel there was a fair audience, being large enough, I suppose, to say good. This is our oldest church in the Conference and has ability to do things if applied. They have been very thoughtful of the pastor and his family. The Misses Whitaker have recently remembered us with table supplies. Also Dr. and Mrs. Staley Whitaker. For these and all other kind remembrances we are grateful.

Although Whitakers has no regular pastor, yet this brave little church is holding its own in a remarkable way. They are making plans to get the people as a whole to respond to the Gratitude Gift.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Cid, Denton Charge.—Rev. E. A. Bingham filled his appointment Sunday and delivered a very good descriptive sermon on the M. P. C. G. G., something that every Methodist Protestant should be interested about. Rev. Bingham spoke well to a right good sized congregation. Cid's quota was partly made up.

The people like Rev. Bingham real well.

Our prayer meetings are still in progress. It will be at Mr. Lemmie Lambeth's next Saturday night.

We had several visitors Sunday from High Point and Thomasville and Fullers, R. F. D. Mrs. Delia Wright, who is spending the winter in Thomasville, came down home Thursday to be at her church Sunday. She is a good helper. REPORTER.

Kannapolis.—We have been working very hard and are moving along slowly, ye we think, surely. We have been having good attendance at the church services, and our attendance at Sunday school is better than the church attendance, and the offerings from the Sunday school are unusually good. The interest in all services is very good.

We are glad to report several new members since the beginning of the year, all coming by letter from other churches. We have also just recently organized two new classes in our Sunday school, which gives us seven large classes and all are well attended.

The Ladies' Aid Society has been, and is, working very hard; they have been making and selling different kinds of fancy-work, and they have had several suppers, for which they have realized quite a neat sum of money which they are using to purchase some furniture for the parsonage, and to pay for the piano in the church. They have also just about completed a name quilt which they hope to sell in the near future, and we are hoping to realize quite a bit from this source.

Our people here are behind on finances owing to the fact that the mills have been running on short time for quite a while now, but we hope that these conditions will soon be better. Our pastor is paid to date, and we are glad to report that Kannapolis over-subscribed its quota of the M. P. C. G. G.

We are planning to re-locate our church. It has been decided that unfortunately we located in the wrong section of the city, and we think it best to re-locate in some section of the city which is at present unchurched, and we feel that we should do this as soon as possible.

Our faithful pastor and his good wife have been working very hard among us and we feel that they are doing a very constructive piece of work. We extend to them our deepest sympathy in the illness of their son, Robert. He is getting along very nicely and we hope for him a very speedy recovery. Our pastor lost a niece on last Friday morning and he was called to Mount Mourne, his old home, for the funeral on Saturday, but was with us again for all services on Sunday. Brother Cowan preaches splendid gospel sermons. His messages are always interesting and inspiring, and full of good spiritual food for thought. We are glad indeed to have him in our midst this year and we pray God's blessings upon our laboring together here.

We feel that our work is going along very nicely, though not as fast as we might wish for, but we think that when we re-locate we shall grow faster than at present. We ask the readers of the Herald to pray for us that we may continue to grow, and that we may be able to do a good work for the Master in Kannapolis this year and that we may have a good report to send in to the Annual Conference. Best wishes to the Herald and all its readers. MRS. C. B. McCOMMONS,
Reporter.

Henderson.—Following the splendid and interesting sermon by Pastor Hunter on "Opportunity" February 26th, subscriptions and collections were received for our quota on the Centennial Gratitude Gift. Over half the quota was pledged and paid and we are earnestly hoping that the remainder will be on hand on or before May 1st. Surely we are not willing that our local church should fail in this great privilege and opportunity, which comes to us only once in a life-time.

During the past month a number of boys of our church have been organized into a Boy Scouts group. Each church appointed a Scoutmaster and training is done once each week at their respective churches and a class meet held once a month in the armory building. Under the leadership of Scoutmaster Clyde L. Finch, we are expecting a well-trained group of Boy Scouts soon.

The Philathea Class held its business meeting in the classroom, Thursday night, March 1st. The president, Mrs. A. B. Young, presided. Following the general routine of reports, etc., the class voted to assist the Missionary Society in giving Miss Annie Forrest a birthday surprise party on Friday evening, March 2nd. Other plans were discussed and voted on, after which the meeting closed with prayer.

Sunday morning, March 4th, we were given a touching and impressive sermon by our pastor. It was Holy Communion services and a large congregation entered into the worship. The evening services were given over to the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and the annual Thank-Offering program was as follows:

Reading, "The Gift of Gold," by Mrs. C. Finch. Another reading by Mrs. John Lee Wester, "Prayer," was greatly enjoyed. Miss Annie Forrest's talk was the main feature of the program and was indeed most interesting and touching in every respect. We are so glad to have had Miss Forrest with us and feel very grateful to her for her help in bringing before us the great need and call for the gospel in the foreign lands today. A trio was then given by Mrs. S. R. Watson at the organ, Mrs. F. R. Harris at the piano, and Lawrence Harris, violin. The total amount of the Thank-Offering was $70.50.

We regret to report that Miss Katie Cook is again confined to her bed; also that Mr. George B. Harris is improving slowly from an attack of La Grippe.

A new roof has been put on the parsonage and wall papering is to begin there soon. We are also expecting to begin some repairs and improvements on the church soon, with the J. Baxter Coghill gift of $500.

REPORTER.

Bess Chapel.—The attendance last Sunday was unusually good. Our secretary took note of the last year's record and found that we had over twice as many in Sunday school last Sunday as we did the same date a year ago. On February 26, 1928, 140 enrolled, 104 present, $3.36 collection. The same date a year ago, 102 enrolled, 47 present, $1.11 collection.

We are glad to see the young men of our community take an interest in Sunday school. Our pastor is working to keep up interest in our Sunday school. Let's try to help him.

Mrs. Dora Beam is confined to her room with measles.

Wayne Beam, the little son of Mrs. W. R. Beam, was accidentally struck by the car of Wilford Bess last Wednesday and seriously injured, but it is thought now that his injuries will not prove fatal.

Our community was saddened by the death of little Ruth Hoyle. She was a member of our Sunday school.

Our Woman's Home Missionary Society met at the home of Mrs. T. L. Beam last Saturday. They are planning a great work for this year.

REPORTER.

Grace Church.—The Sutton Philathea Class, one of the livest in our Sunday school, held its regular monthly meeting last Friday evening at the home of Mrs. A. S. Pettit on Me-Adoo Avenue. The usual monthly business was transacted. The class voted to give $50 on the quota of Grace church for the Centennial Gratitude Gift. This class can always be depended upon to do its part in anything Grace church undertakes. The meeting was largely attended.

Since coming to our church, our minister, Mr. Ronald J. Tamblyn, has been in great demand as a speaker among the civic organizations, schools, and meetings at other churches. Recently he spoke to the Workers' Council of West Market M. E. church on "Religious Education."

He said at the beginning of his talk that Protestant religious teaching should not be compulsory in state schools. The Jewish, Catholic, and Protestant tax-payers support the schools, so why should one religion be preferred? He stressed the need of some form of religious education, not necessarily along sectarian lines. He made it clear that the home is the best place to give religious instruction. The church and Sunday school may accomplish much, but it is in the home where the most is done. "The realities of religion need continued emphasis," he declared.

His splendid sermons attract crowds each Sunday. They are inspiring and helpful, for he gives us much food for thought.

C. J. J.

Asheville.—Sunday morning Herbert Caskey gave us a wonderful message. Mr. Caskey was for 12 years engaged in Y. M. C. A. work in China. He is thoroughly consecrated and a gifted speaker. Sunday night Bro. Van Meter blessed us again with a most helpful message.

Our Ladies' Aid made $15 on a rummage sale Saturday.

Miss Nan Clause led the C. E. meeting and had the support of every one present. On Thursday night of this week the monthly C. E. business meeting will be held in the home of Bro. and Mrs E. H. Pratt.

Bro. E. L. Hanner gave a fine Bible reading on "Walking With God" last Wednesday night. He will continue the study this Wednesday night, Bro. Van Meter following with his usual delightful interpretation of the Scriptures.

Next Sunday night our Woman's Foreign Missionary Society will hold its annual Thank-Offering service. Dr. Louise Ingersoll, a returned missionary, will be the principal speaker. A good meeting is expected, and a good offering.

Our offering for the C. G. G. will be taken Sunday morning, March 18th, being postponed from March 11th.

We regret the continued illness of Miss Florence Johnson. Mrs. J. S. Williams is recovering from an illness of three weeks. Miss Norvella McIntyre hopes to return to her duties at High Point College in a few days. Brother E. L. Hanner has been indisposed the last week.

Our members are reading the Fellowship of Prayer.

A pre-Easter evangelistic campaign will be conducted.

REPORTER.

Asheboro.—It is not our purpose to have something in the Herald every week, however, several things of importance have taken place here recently. The women of the Foreign Missionary Society observed the Day of Prayer on February 24. Mrs. W. C. Hammer had charge of the morning program, which consisted of readings, prayers, and meditation. At the noon hour luncheon was served in the social room of the church. In the afternoon, Mrs. R. M. Andrews, of High Point, gave a resume of the mission study book, "A Straight Way Toward Tomorrow." The entire service was of a very high order and all those who attended were greatly impressed. This was the first time a day of prayer has been observed here but the results exceeded our expectations.

On the fourth Sunday in February we launched the drive for our part of the Gratitude Gift. At the morning service we secured pledges to the amount of $315.50. The committee, of which Brother W. F. Redding is chairman, is working on the list of those who were not present. We expect to reach our quota of $500.

Yesterday we had 176 in Sunday school and a large congregation at the morning service. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed and almost the entire audience partook.

Next Sunday morning while the pastor will be preaching at Winston-Salem, Brother Robert Lloyd will preach here. The pastor will return in time for the evening service.

Those folks who have been saying that the Sundays this winter have been colder than the other days of the week are very good at guessing, for by the official records here the mean minimum temperature for the 13 Sundays of December, January and February has been 26 1-13 degrees, while the mean minimum temperature for Wednesdays of the same months has been 32 and 9-13 degrees. The bad weather has been hard on Sunday congregations, but we have come through it in fairly good condition.

A PROBLEM OF IMPORTANCE

I have been wondering for a long time why it is that so many Methodist Protestants who move from one section to another, and especially those younger people moving into the towns where we have churches and fail or refuse to connect themselves with our church in town, but go to other churches.

There must be some cause for it.

One person stated recently that if they are real Methodist Protestants they will look up their own church and attend it when we have one in the town, but I found a man once a member of one of our country churches who did not know it was Methodist Protestant.

If a survey should be made we would find a great many young people in the towns from our country churches who might have been gotten into our own church had someone known of them before they connected themselves with another denomination.

This is a great loss, and has been for years. Many people of means and influence in other churches were once obscure young folks in the Methodist Protestant Church.

I sometimes wonder if they are ashamed of the church from which they came, or is it our church in the town? Why should we not find out what the causes are and make an effort at least to remedy them. If we are really a united church, let's work together.

Three other negro students also received medals in connection with the same contest.

SPLENDID YOUNG WOMAN PASSES

Mrs. Lorena Garrett Lindsey died in St. Augustine, Fla., February 26th. The funeral was held Monday afternoon at the Mt. Hermon Methodist Protestant church. Rev. J. A. Burgess had charge of the services, being assisted by President W. A. Harper, of Elon College, Dr. T. C. Amick, and her pastor, Rev. L. W. Gerringer.

Mrs. Lindsey was the daughter of the late James Garrett and Elmina Garrett, her mother still surviving. She was born and reared in Alamance County but had been away about six years. She still retained her membership in the First Methodist Protestant church of Burlington.

Rev. Mr. Burgess, Dr. Harper and Dr. Amick all spoke in the highest terms of the many fine qualities and virtues of this splendid young wife and mother. She leaves a husband and an infant son, and a number of brothers and sisters besides the mother to mourn her going.

May divine comfort sustain those who are bereaved.

L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.

Lincolnton, W. L. Carson, pastor, is the only new charge added this week. Our standing now is, 69 charges with credits; 23 blank. We are glad to add Lincolnton this week, and shall be equally glad to add other charges next week. We must hope that NO charge will be without payments much longer. Saxapahaw pays in full on the college, and Mt. Pleasant also, which pays them out, despite the fact that Pastor Millaway is nursing a broken arm. We hope and pray that he may soon be whole again.

As announced last week, we are running now only the weekly reports of Treasurer Idol. Full reports will appear monthly. This change has become necessary to give space in the Herald for matter that is being crowded out. S. W. TAYLOR.

VOLUME XXXIV GREENSBORO, N. C., MARCH 15, 1928 NUMBER 19

The Problem of Feeding the Multitudes

The problem of feeding the five thousand men and women and children that confronted Jesus on the lake shore was a small one compared with that of feeding the multitudes that Jesus sees scattered or congregated on the earth today. The millions of New York or London—where will they get their dinners a month from today? All will gather hungry around tables. What an immense amount of food will it require to feed them all. A million dollars would not be enough that each might receive a little. Yet all will eat and be filled and great quantities of fragments will be gathered up. Where will the food come from to feed these mighty hosts? God knows and God will provide. And how God does it is nothing short of a miracle. Some of the food comes from distant parts of the world, but it comes and comes in time to prevent suffering. Suppose the forces of supply should fall a month behind the forces of demand. What hunger, what distress and death would ensue. But God keeps up with the demand. He feeds not only men, but all living creatures. All receive their food in season. To supply with so little friction and so little waste the world's ever insistent demand for food is a miracle daily enacted. We pray, "Give us this day our daily bread," and our mouths are filled.

We know not how Jesus multiplied or magnified the loaves and fishes, and we know not how God converts the stones or the earth into bread, but He does it. All is miracle, and the greatest miracle is that He keeps on doing it for men so ungrateful and so unworthy.

The Miracle of the Spring Time

Was it a miracle when Lazarus came forth from the tomb? Did those who saw it realize that they were witnessing a striking manifestation of the power of God? Don't we behold a miracle in the spring time when we see the dull, dead earth cover itself with verdure and beauty? How can we account for this except by the power of God? The same voice that said to Lazarus, "Come forth!" now calls forth the beauty and life of the spring time. Each returning spring is a new demonstration of the existence and power and goodness of God. We are so accustomed to this miracle that it has ceased to impress us as it should. The heavens declare the greatness of God, reveal His mighty power, but the earth in springtime reveals to us the fineness, the delicacy of God's feelings. Some one has said that it is easy to love and believe in a God that made the flowers. Every bursting bud of spring time speaks to us of the goodness of the Divine Artist and displays His marvelous skill.

—Our Annual Conference will now look forward with pleasure to meeting with our Winston brethren next November. All will appreciate the kind invitation, and expect a good time. Winston has entertained us before.

People Who Prefer Dogmatic Theology

There are more of them than we think, probably. Not only among Roman Catholics but among Protestants. It is easier to exercise faith than to exercise reason. Hence most people prefer to take their theology on faith. It is the minister's business, they think, to tell them what is true and their business to believe it without asking why. When the young minister comes out of the theological seminary where the air is charged with the spirit of controversy and begins to rehash the controversies of the schools, they are not interested. In fact, they are repelled. They want something else. They don't want to be taught to think. They want positive, emphatic assertion of the doctrines they have been accustomed to hear all their lives. "It was good enough for my fathers, and it is good enough for me."

We may not admire this attitude, but it is the attitude of many, and we must adjust ourselves to it the best we can. Blind faith is better than blind unbelief, better than no faith at all. Many people are guided through life by a child-like faith, living lives of piety and full consecration. In fact, there is a great sphere in which this faith is our only guide; reason has no light for us there. Our Savior referred to this faith "as of a little child." We all must exercise it in its sphere. Yet we recognize the fact that the exercise of reason is called for in other realms of the religious life. How to minister to both classes, the reasoning and the unreasoning, is a difficult problem that every Protestant minister must solve.

A Pitiable Multitude

Representative Stephen G. Porter has introduced in Congress a bill to establish two "narcotic farms" for the care and treatment of drug addicts. These nerve-wrecked men and women form a great multitude scattered over the country. More than two thousand of them have committed crimes which have landed them in federal prisons at Atlanta and Leavenworth. In fact, these prisons are overcrowded to twice their proper capacity. Either the prisons must be enlarged or the drug addicts must be otherwise provided for. It is the object of Mr. Porter's bill to provide two institutions in which drug addiction may be treated and cured. Many addicts are intelligent, honest people in their normal condition. But such is the power of the drugs to which they are addicted that they cannot resist the temptation to commit crime in order to obtain the drug and appease the terrible gnawing appetite. If the bill passes and the two federal institutions are provided, it is the expectation that some of the states will establish similar institutions for their own population.

But is there not some way to stop the formation of the terrible narcotic habit? There are laws against the sale of narcotics, but they could be improved, perhaps, and it seems that the schools and churches should do more teaching against this great evil. And let it not be forgotten that tobacco is a very hurtful narcotic, though not so bad as some others.

N. C. CONFERENCE 1832-1835

The sessions of conference are now becoming truly annual. In 1832 the meeting opened on March 1 in the city of Raleigh; in 1833, on February 14, at Whitaker's Chapel; in 1834, on February 27, at Mt. Hermon, and in 1835, on February 25, at Rehobeth.

The Raleigh conference heard an enlightening report from the retiring president, Rev. W. W. Hill. He speaks of having now completed a "full constitutional term," but yet says, "The spirit of our system invites me to retire and, as precedents are important, I shall do so." He rejoiced at the fact that hundreds of conversions had occurred during the past year. Two ministers had died. Of one of these, Rev. James Hunter, an interesting sketch is given, he having been a presiding elder in the M. E. Church and one of the early reformers expelled from that church for his activity. The other death was that of Rev. Swain Swift. Mr. Hill expressed pleasure in the fact that "the machinations of those who would divide us whether by persecution or by flattering and fawning have failed."

For the first time a report of membership is recorded. There were 507 members on Roanoke charge and 303 on Guilford, a total of 810. The number of ministers was 24.

The financial report shows that the three traveling preachers in the eastern part of the state had received a total of $237, which was to be divided among them, making $79 for each. They were Revs. Wm. H. Wills, Samuel Harris and John F. Speight, and had been allotted $100 each. The allowance for Rev. Alson Gray on Guilford circuit was $281.60, and he had received $93.25. A surplus fund of unnamed amount was ordered divided among the four.

Other items worthy of notice are the fact that the question and answer method of transacting business in use by the M. E. Church was followed to some degree; a communication from John J. Harrod, of Baltimore, about the work of a recently organized book committee; and the election of Rev. Willis Harris as president and Rev. Wm. H. Wills, secretary.

A resolution of thanks was passed to "the Baptist brethren for the friendly manner in which they have opened their church to us." Does that mean there was no M. P. Church in the city?

The ministerial membership reported in 1833 was 27. The total membership was then given at 1,415 as against 810 one year earlier. Of this number there had been a net gain of 513 members on Guilford circuit under the pastorate of Rev. Alson Gray. However, his salary of $280 lacked just $160 of having been paid. The president had received $22.50 for his year's work, but two pastors had received their salary in full, $100 each.

Rev. Wm. Price had died during the preceding year. He was a revolutionary soldier and, being captured by the British, was for some time a prisoner of war. We are told that he "repelled with indignation the seducing charms of British gold when offered with a view to detach him from the cause of liberty and his country."

At Mt. Hermon the session was stormy. There had been a superabundance of ministers in all the early Methodist period. Drinkhouse states that there were so many young men coming into the M. E. pastorate about 1809 that practically all the married men located, the itinerants being almost altogether single men. It was about the status of the located or local preachers as much as lay representation that the controversy of Mutual Rights was waged. Now at the Raleigh conference just discussed there were 24 ministerial members. There were, on the other hand, only three circuits. Two of these had an assistant. All had a superintendent. In other words, there were five ministers who had official duties and received a salary. The others are stationed as extra ministerial aid. The constitution, however, said that the Annual Conference should be composed of all "ordained itinerant ministers" and an equal number of laymen. The next year a committee was appointed to take "into consideration the past and probable operation of the constitution," and as part of its report said in regard to this action, "apportioned their labor and services under the term of 'extra ministerial aid'; which term is not found in the constitution and if persevered in, will vacate their seats in this conference." A resolution was then passed by a close vote to interpret the clause in the constitution to mean: "That every ordained minister of the district who shall consent to receive from the stationing power of this body any amount of official labor is thereby made an itinerant minister in the constitutional sense." When conference met at Mt. Hermon charges were brought against Revs. Wm. Bellamy, W. W. Hill, and J. H. Cobb for neglect of official duty. The details are not given and in no case were the charges sustained but the vote was close. The resolution intended to interpret the constitution was then repealed and after long discussion another was passed recommending certain changes in the constitution.

This conference gave its assent to the establishment of Sunday schools by the agents of the S. S. Union who were welcomed among Methodist Protestants. It also elected Rev. Alex Albright president; chose Rev. Willis Harris and Spier Whitaker representatives to the General Conference, and reported a membership of 1,852.

The conference of 1835 showed a total membership of 1,964. Mr. Albright reported that he had received $57 on salary. He was re-elected president. We note here for the first time a committee to examine candidates for itineracy and orders; the seed of our modern conference faculty.

P. S. Kennett.

MY RESOLVE

"I will start anew this morning with a higher, fairer creed;
I will cease to stand complaining of my ruthless neighbor's greed.
I will cease to sit repining while my duty's call is clear;
I will waste no moments whining and my heart shall know no fear.

I will look sometimes about me for the things that merit praise;
I will search for hidden beauties that elude the grumbler's gaze;
I will try to find contentment in the paths that I must tread;
I will cease to have resentment when another moves ahead.

I will not be swayed by envy when my rival's strength is shown;
I will not deny his merit, but I'll try to prove my own;
I will try to see the beauty spread before me, rain or shine;
I will cease to preach 'your' duty and be more concerned with mine."

FOREIGN MISSIONS

Items of Interest Fresh From Japan

The third quarterly report of the Japan Mission has recently come to hand. The note of optimism and hopeful outlook was sounded from every department.

All of the superintendents of the six kindergartens gave very satisfactory reports and were greatly encouraged over the progress being made. This success is due to the faithfulness of those in charge of this important work. Six hundred and seventy calls were made by the teachers during the quarter. Earnest work of this type is destined to reap a fruitful harvest in the future. There were 88 meetings for children.

Of the High and Primary School work in Yokohama, Miss Hodges writes:

"The regular school work has been particularly satisfactory during this quarter. Both teachers and students have been well and there has been little absence from classes.

"The circle room of the Honmoku kindergarten, no longer needed there as the Sunday School room of the church is now used for a circle room, has been removed to Maita and made into the much needed assembly room for the Primary Department.

"Two organs, one sent by Miss Hempstead and the other by Mrs. Aldrich, of Kendallville, Ind., are now at the customs and will soon be available for use at the school, thus helping out in our music.

"Our hearts were gladdened by the baptism of two of the graduates of the school. One of these girls is a teacher in a high school for girls and the other one is a student in the Normal School, which is now located near our Yokohama First Church. Two other girls from that school were baptized at the same time and a number of others attend the church services regularly.

"Friends of our school have formed an association to aid the school. One of the first things they propose to do is to raise an endowment fund for the school, as it seems probable that soon the government will require all private schools to have such a fund. It is already required of new schools.

"Rev. E. I. Obee informs us that an additional gift of $125 has been made to the Tokyo School for the Blind for school apparatus. This gift was made by Baron Hirayama, a friend of our school. This is the second gift that has been made to this school just recently, the other being $317.50 given by Count Mutsu for models, as reported in last quarter's report. But certainly this school is worthy of such gifts. It is estimated that there are more than a million uncared-for blind in the world. One hundred thousand are to be found in the United Province of Northern India alone. Not a few of these blind people are to be found in Japan. No religion has ever done anything for these blind people until the Christian folk began to gather a few of them under their care. Our school in Tokyo is making manifest, in varied ways, the Spirit of the Master as those in charge thus care for the blind of Japan. This is one of the greatest agencies for the spread of the Gospel of Christ in this Sunrise Kingdom."

The following incident in the experience of the principal of the school, Rev. Wada, is highly interesting as well as depicting great faith and courage:

"Principal Wada recently had a rather strange encounter with a highway robber. Returning home late one night on a dark street he was held up suddenly by a man who made terrible threats and demanded his money. Bro. Wada, however, being good, brave, and clever, was not to be frightened. He consented to the demand for money and presenting his change purse gave the rogue about twenty-five sen and at the same time opened on him a severe lecture. The thief being surprised at such nerve gazed at Bro. Wada in astonishment and then slunk away and disappeared. The teachers and pupils are now prouder than ever of their principal, who is an old man past 73 years of age. He is very thankful for the way the Lord has protected him and wishes still to live and labor in the vineyard of his Master."

Not all the banditry of the world is to be found in the United States.

THE EASTER SERVICE

The effort Rev. J. M. Sheridan, D.D., executive secretary of the Board of Home Missions, is putting forth to make Easter one of the greatest days in the history of the Methodist Protestant Church deserves our heartiest support. Easter is the day of days in the Christian calendar and may be used to the spiritual benefit of every disciple. As an important part of the Church of Christ we cannot afford to neglect the opportunities it offers. If Dr. Sheridan's program is followed it is certain to result in great good to all and a large in-gathering of members and funds.

The special days are the one opportunity the boards have of making a direct appeal for the support of the work committed to their care. The offerings received then make up the main source of our income. If these fail, it is a serious matter. Dr. Sheridan needs the generous support of our people. They can show their appreciation of him and his work in no better way than to make a special effort in behalf of the Easter offering. If you believe in the cause of Home Missions as it is being promoted by our denominational board, you can show your faith by helping your local church observe the day fittingly and by helping to make the offering larger than ever.

Frank W. Stephenson,
Exec. Sec'y, Board of Education.

DO OUR SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS KNOW THE TRUTH?

A grave fear sometimes comes that many of the scholars in our schools are ignorant concerning the simple, yet profound fundamental, facts and doctrines and duties of the Christian religion. They know, at least appear to know, little or nothing about sin, their own personal sinfulness before God; their need of a perfect righteousness; their utter inability to provide such a righteousness for themselves; the facts concerning the provision made by Christ to supply such a righteousness, both imputed and actual; the consequent need of faith in Him and of repentance; the consequent need of a diligent use of the means of grace in order to growth in knowledge and piety. All these things need to be taught, and hence expounded; that is, explained, illustrated, made clear, in order that the duties of faith and repentance may be learned and performed, and the means of grace made use of. —Selected.

OPTIMISM | The President's Letter | EVANGELISM

Evangelism

It is said that 60,000 churches out of 200,000 of four leading Protestant denominations in the United States did not report a conversion during 1926. If these churches average a membership of 100, their total membership would be 6,000,000. Think of it! Six million church members in twelve months' time not winning one convert to Christ! What is the trouble? Has the gospel lost its pwoer? Is God's arm shortened that it can not save? "Thou dying Lamb, thy precious blood shall never lose its power." The trouble is not with God nor the Gospel, but with the church. We are not thinking, working, planning, nor praying in terms of evangelism, and the result is the church is shorn of its power to save. O Church of God, how long before these dry bones shall live?

Pastors will not forget, we trust, that March is Evangelism month, during which time special stress is to be laid on this matter from the pulpit. Here again the minister is the "Key Man." If the church becomes evangelistic, it will do so because the pulpit is afire with this spirit.

Our Evangelism HERALD number is being prepared, and will appear next week.

Worship Programs

One of the noticeable things about a great railroad station is the order in which everything is done. The crowds may be large, but there is never confusion. The explanation is easy: everything moves according to a well arranged program. This should be true of every church service. Next to the preparation of his sermon should be the pastor's planning for the orderly arangement of the service. His preaching is important—highly so—but the way the service is conducted is also important. The order in which worship is conducted plays an important part in the effect that the service has upon the people, and it is further important in the training that it gives to them in public worship. If order is God's law in the universe, it is also His law in worship. The pastor of an important church said some time ago: "I spent thirty minutes this week selecting my hymns for the Sunday services." With him, the fitness of things is evidently an important factor in public worship. Another pastor, in a recent comment on a Sunday service, said that one of the auditors remarked on the helpfulness of the service, and one of the special features that helped her was the harmony between the hymns and the sermon. All of which means that there is worship-value in an orderly arranged service. The pastor, who is the leader in worship, standing before the congregation, and, with book in hand, announcing the hymns, and calling on the people to sing, is certainly a fitting and helpful part of the order. The manner of receiving the offering is important. A very brief prayer by the pastor before passing the plates to the collectors is timely and impressive. Directing the congregation when to kneel, to stand, to remain seated, is necessary to a well-ordered worship program. Worship services should never be made stiff and formal, but always orderly. We most heartily commend the order of worship in our hymnal. With, perhaps, some modifications this order of worship should be acceptable to all of our churches.

We believe that our services can be improved by following orderly arranged programs of worship.

Mitchel's Grove

This is one of our churches that has recently provided a marker for the church. The church is located at the conjunction of two prominent highways, and every traveler who passes will know what church that is, nestling back there among the trees. Why shouldn't they know?

We were there Saturday in quarterly conference of the charge, and also Sunday at the eleven o'clock preaching service.

The quarterly conference was well attended, with every church represented. Delegates were nominated, as required by the conference law, and other business promptly and harmoniously transacted. The confeernce instructed the trustees to sell the parsonage property located at Jamestown. The Sunday schools of the charge are all running and doing helpful work. We found the school at Mitchel's in session on our arrival Sunday morning, and were pleased with what we saw of their work. The finances of the charge are considerably behind, but we are confident that the months ahead will show progress along this, and every other line. Mitchel's is planning to be an honor roll church, and we bespeak this for other churches on the charge. We are still saying that Guilford circuit should be one of our choice fields.

We enjoyed worshiping at Mitchel's Grove Sunday. The people were attentive to the service, and a splendid spirit was in evidence. The communion service was a pleasing and helpful feature of the program. We found the people interested in the Gratitude Gift, and ready to respond. Only a few minutes were required to secure their allotment of $36.00. Midway, on this charge, has also subscribed in full. Guilford, with one of the oldest churches in the conference, will make a good showing on this call. Pastor Ashburn is popular with his people and zealous for the work.

St. Paul

Sunday night we had the privilege of worshiping with the congregation at this place. The attendance was not large, but this was made up in large measure by the deep interest and appreciation on the part of those who were present. They were helpful listeners, as we tried to preach. The Gratitude Gift was presented, and $71.00 secured. A part of this, $28.00, had already been provided through the pastor's plans. It should be said that $10.00 of this amount is a conditional subscription, ratification of which has not yet been reported to us. We are sure that St. Paul means to do her part in this matter. Pastor Brittain speaks hopefully of the work, and indications point to a good year. We are deeply interested in each of these charges and shall pray earnestly for their success.

M. P. C. G. G.

The outlook is still good for securing our full allotment —$12,000. Only a small per cent of our charges have reported here; we do not know how many Bro. Ross has heard from. But the showing, as we have it, is highly encouraging, and we are confident that the reports yet to come in will give us the great joy of having reached our goal. We can not afford to be callous now, and unresponsive to a great and timely call like this, and we will not be.

Send all Gratitude Gift money to Mr. J. D. Ross, Asheboro, N. C.

Centennial Day

Early in the year we discussed with the committee advisory to the president, a plan for holding a denominational day sometime during the early spring. For quite a while we have been trying to keep this before the church as one of the parts of our conference program of the year. In view of our approaching centennial it seems altogether fitting that such a day should be observed in our conference. We are, therefore, designating the fifth Sunday in April as Centennial Day. On this day we hope to have thousands of our people coming together in great inspirational meetings for the purpose of quickening anew our love and loyalty to the church, and, above all, our devotion to Christ, our great Head. We trust that pastors and people will begin now to make this a great day in our conference program.

And may the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus. Amen.

SOME FACTS ABOUT WHITAKERS CHAPEL

(For some time I have been wishing that some one would give us some of the leading facts about the early history of Whitakers Chapel, the church just east of Enfield in which the first sessions of the North Carolina Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church were held. In a personal letter to me Rev. C. H. Whitaker, who was born and reared in that community, has given the facts about as well as they can be gathered now, I suppose. I read his letter with a great deal of interest. And, believing that the readers of the Herald will be glad to have this brief history of that church, I pass it on. Bro. Whitaker, I am sure, will not mind.—A. G. D.)

Dear Bro. Dixon:

Emma Lewis writes me that you wanted me to give you some data about our old church. I am afraid I can not help, because nobody thought to write it down. Or if there were writings, they were not preserved.

Tradition is that my great-great-grandfather settled in the old neighborhood between 1740 and 1750. That date could be verified, I supose, by searching the old records in Tarboro. He built his own dwelling about two miles south of the spot where the church is, and is supposed to have immediately erected a chapel on the higher ground in the middle of the tract consisting of several thousand acres which he had by grant from England. He gave no deed for the ground, nor did his son. The first legal title was conveyed by his youngest grandson (grandfather of the W. C. Whitaker whom you knew), who died in 1852. The first building was of logs, of course. There is a tradition that a second log house took the place of the first; followed by a frame building that was moved down to the farm now occupied by my nephew, Lawrence H. Whitaker, having been replaced by the present building, which was erected about 1845. It stood on the opposite side of the Enfield to Scotland Neck road.

I have never seen Bishop Asbury's diary, but I have been told that he mentions stopping at my great-grandfather's home and I think preached in the church. If you could get hold of the above mentioned book, you could get the date from that.

In conversation with my uncle, the late J. S. Whitaker, the talk turned on the age of the "Chapel," as we always called it. He said he had seen an old deed or plot that was more than one hundred years old at the time of our conversation, which was about forty years ago. This plot or deed called for the Whitaker Chapel Church lot as one of boundary marks. Here is where I failed. I did not ask him who had the paper, or whether it was recorded.

The first Annual Conference was held there, which is proof that the house was older than the M. P. Church.

It was probably used by the Church of England first; then by the M. E.'s until the organization of the Union Societies; ever since by our church.

Wish I could refer you to some records. There is not a thing anywhere that I know of.

CENTENNIAL GRATITUDE GIFT

The Methodist Protestant Church is rounding out 100 years as a harbinger of peace and good will to men. May we stop a while amid the bustle and confusion of the times, and with introspective thought be enabled to catch a vision of the wonderful opportunities that have been ours. Possessing a heritage surpassed by no other church, we ought not to be satisfied until the Gratitude Gift is raised in full. It is a birthday present to the church we love.

My parents, grandparents, and great-grandparents were members of this church. This church cradled the writer in her arms and taught his young heart and mind reverence for all things sacred. The small gift that I shall make will not express my love and gratitude. H. L. Isley.

Giving For Gratitude Ancient Custom

In enumerating reasons for the Centennial Gratitude Gift, besides personally I know of no conference having greater reason for gratitude than our own North Carolina conference. A few years ago there was no Children's Home, no college, and no Bethel Home, but today we look upon all of these splendid institutions with pride and pleasure. It is indeed fitting that we express our gratitude by the laying of our worldly goods upon the altar from which greatest good may be accomplished. The memorial plan (payment of $50.00) is ideal for those who have blazed the trail to a larger and more prosperous denomination. Memorial certificates may be secured later and would most fittingly honor our early heroes, among whom were the pioneers in our great church—especially those to whom we affectionately refer as "circuit riders." These certificates would adorn the walls of our most beautiful churches, and would pay tribute to those to whom honor is due. Methodist Protestants in North Carolina more than in any other conference have cause for gratitude and to them is extended an opportunity of "Giving for Gratitude," an ancient custom.

MRS. WM. C. HAMMER.

Asheboro, N. C.

My Church by Choice

It is with a bit of regret that I cannot claim the Methodist Protestant Church as my mother church, and sometimes I am inclined to be envious of those who have been nurtured in it. Yet I am reminded of the words of Jesus, "A prophet is not without honor save in his own country," and I wonder if this is not applicable to some members of our denomination concerning the Methodist Protestant Church. Since I have known something of another denomination, I can probably appreciate the merits of the Methodist Protestant Church more than if I had been born and bred in it.

The Methodist Protestant Church is my church by choice, and I love it. Moving from home to another town, I had an opportunity of joining any one of a dozen other churches, but I chose the Methodist Protestant Church. In the ten years I have been affiliated with it, it has done so much for me that I could not estimate it in dollars and cents. When I think of the opportunities for joyous service it has afforded me, I can sincerely sing with the poet:

"For her my tears shall fall,
For her my prayers ascend;
To her my cares and toils be given
Till toils and cares shall end."

And when I consider how I have been blessed through the small service I have been permitted to render, I want to pay tribute to her and show my gratitude. This Centennial provides the opportunity to give and give until it hurts, and I am eager to grasp it.

If an adopted child loves the Methodist Protestant Church thus, how much more should her own children love her!

MRS. E. LESTER BALLARD.

HAVE FAITH IN GOD

Have faith in God; for He who reigns on high
Hath borne thy grief, and hears the suppliant's sigh:
Still to His arms, thine only refuge, fly.
Have faith in God.

Fear not to call on Him, O soul distress'd;
Thy sorrow's whisper woos thee to His breast;
He who is oftenest there is oftenest blest.
Have faith in God.

Lean not on Egypt's reeds; slake not thy thirst
At earthly cisterns. Seek the Kingdom first.
Though man and Satan fright thee with their worst,
Have faith in God.

Go, tell Him all. The sigh thy bosom heaves
Is heard in heaven. Strength and grace He gives,
Who gave Himself for thee. Our Jesus lives.
Have faith in God.

MEETING THE TEST

Before the World War, the editor of The British Weekly received some poems, obviously from the hand of a young girl. "They showed real feeling, and were the work of a fresh and upright heart," he says. "Then came the war. Thereafter the poems which this young person sent me, whose name I do not know, and whom I have never seen, became, as was natural, more sententious.

"Reading between the lines, it seemed to me that some one very dear to herself was facing death daily in some battle area. Still later her verses became more poignant. Her first natural faith had obviously foundered on some horrid rock. It seemed to me, indeed, still reading between the lines, that this one who was dear to her had fallen on the battlefield. For a time the poems persisted in an exalted mood, the young heart beating against the silence, seeking to comfort itself in the hope of reunion beyond this stricken life.

"One day a letter reached me from her, short, sudden, and hard. The light that was in her had become darkness! She asked me to burn all her verses! She wrote in a short, sharp way that she recalled and regretted them all! That she saw nothing in life but a field of senseless incident! I wrote to her as I could, but have heard nothing since.

"Such is the effect which experience might have upon any bright and eager spirit unfortified by a personal faith," declares this distinguished editor in concluding an article based upon the parable of the Ten Virgins, which he calls "A Story of Ten Young Girls."

The point of this story which was uttered by our Lord is that five young girls went to the bridal feast with an extra supply of oil in their lamps, while five young girls took with them only the oil in their lamps. Those five made no provision for any unusual demand. They did not think of life as something which calls for precautions.

Those five said to themselves, "If things turn out all right, then we shall be all right." They had enough oil for the occasion should the occasion take place exactly as they hoped it would. If the bride and bridegroom arrived at the likely moment, they had enough oil to keep their lamps burning until they should meet them. But what made them foolish was that they had nothing to fall back upon in case they found circumstances turning out differently from what they expected.

When the bloom of youth is in the cheek and vitality oozes from every pore, one is inclined to conclude that all of life will be easy. But experience teaches that there are hard days ahead. We may as well face the fact. Jesus faced it, and in sympathy and in love He tried to tell His hearers that those who fail to make provision for the time of disappointment and disillusion are indeed foolish.

Jesus had great concern for young people, as is shown in the story of the ten young girls. He surveyed life in its entirety and declared that the mere exuberance of physical vigor would not avail for the dark tragedies. Only with a strong faith in God can we meet the test.—Forward.

—There is a curious kind of mental hysteria abroad today which vibrates between the false extremes of megalomania and melancholia. Now, you find a man who deifies himself and denies any other god. He regards history as bosh, religion as blarney, the Ten Commandments as a stale taboo, and his own personal prejudices and passions as the only infallible rule of faith and practice. His ignorance is matched by his impudence and he has a hilarious time.—Henry Van Dyke.

OUR STORY PAGE

AN UNEXPECTED HOLIDAY

Edwin Baxter lived in Greenwood, a town in the southern part of the United States. He had never seen any snow, for it was seldom cold enough to snow in Greenwood.

The older people told of snow that they had seen years ago. But during Edwin's six years there had never been as much as one snowflake in this part of the country.

One day the newspapers reported that very cold weather was coming. The boys hurried home from school, for the wind was already cold and biting.

"It's going to snow," said Jack Spaulding, "and I'm going to get out my sled."

"Your sled!" cried all the other boys. "Have you a sled?"

"Of course I have; haven't you?" asked Jack in surprise. "Where I used to live in Boston all the boys had sleds."

The Spaulding back yard was a busy place that afternoon. Every boy of the neighborhood was there, eager to see Jack's sled. How they polished the red wood and ran their hands along the cold runners to see how sharp they were. The sled was a beauty! At dusk Edwin went home for his supper, But he was so excited he could hardly eat. All through the evening he kept shading his eyes and looking out of the window. Just before going to bed he looked for the last time, but there was no sign of snow. He began to be discouraged.

But during the night little white snowflakes began to collect in the corners of the hedge where the wind blew them. They came faster and spread out over the grass. All night long they fell, until by morning, when Edwin looked out, the snow was a foot deep and every branch and twig was outlined in white.

But Edwin was not as pleased as he expected to be. "School!" he complained to himself. "To have to go to school on a day like this!"

After breakfast he helped his father shovel the sidewalk. The snow was so light it was just like shoveling feathers. This was not work at all, but play. So they went right along and cleared the walk next door.

"I'll finish this snow," said father. "You'd better get your books and run along to school."

But Edwin kept on shoveling. He worked away silently for a few minutes. Then he heard the biggest commotion. It sounded like a band of Indians coming down the street, whooping and calling.

"No school today!" they shouted. "It's a holiday—no school!"

The boys soon collected in the commons, where they rolled huge snowballs and built a fort. Jack had his sled and they took turns coming down the hill as far as the mill.

Edwin liked the coasting best of all. But there were so many boys that his turn to ride came only twice during the whole morning.

When the twelve o'clock whistle blew Edwin started home for dinner. Just as he reached his own house he saw a man coasting in the middle of the street. The man came to a stop right in front of him—it was his father on a brand-new sled!

"That's the quickest time I ever made coming from the office. I've coasted all the way from High Street," he said to the surprised boy. "Well, how do you like your new sled?"

Edwin was more pleased than he could say. He forgot about his dinner for a long time and coasted until he was hungry.

After dinner the boys were all out on the hill again. Coasting was more popular than ever, because now there were three sleds. Jack was there with his, and Harry Thompson had a new one almost like Edwin's. Each boy's turn to ride came very often now.

It was almost dark when Edwin had his last ride on his new sled.

"See you tomorrow!" the boys called as they parted.

But the next morning the sun came out bright and warm and by eight o'clock there was not a sign of snow.—Selected.

HOW DID YOU SAY IT?

"I'll go, mother."

So you said when she spoke about having some errand done; and yet mother did not permit you to do the thing you said you would do. No. This is what she said:

"Never mind now, daughter. We'll get along some way."

And did you wonder why it was? It may be you felt a sense of relief when mother told you it was not necessary for you to go on the mission of which she spoke. You really did not want to go. Now, did you?

And do you not suppose something of the feeling in your heart found its way out when you were saying, "I'll go, mother"? She was quick to understand. If you said cheerily, "Sure, I'll go, mother dear!" her heart would have leaped to respond: "It is good of you, my daughter, I will thank you very much!"

For so much shines out through the sound of the voice. It may be love, it may be hate; possibly your words do not indicate it, but something of indifference or doubt or positive dislike may show in every word you speak.

And think of this. The world loves the girl with the ring of love in her voice. How often we see the injunction, "Watch your step!" Why not add this new one to the list? "Watch your voice."

Often we make a misstep; down we go flat! A sore arm or a bruised shoulder, just because we did not watch our step carefully. Well for us if we do not come out of it with a broken limb that will shut us up for many a day, and perhaps never be just as strong as it was before.

But when we suffer a slip of the voice, ah! how much more that does hurt! Sore hearts, broken hopes, good resolves, all ruined, good friends alienated—all these troubles and many another come from not watching the voice.

Why not begin just now to do that very thing? The moment we detect the slightest ring of impatience or indifference in our voice—check it up before it belies our words. —Exchange.

Companionate, yes, but we oldsters may be excused if we question whether the word marriage is just the proper term in this context. Certainly much of the real meaning of the word is being overlooked or has never been fully understood by those using it so glibly.—Pittsburgh Post Gazette.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC

March 25—"What is my share in the Missionary enterprise?"

Scripture Text: I Thess. 1:1-10.

I

Plans for the Meeting

This meeting should be opened by a sincere worship service—a service of consecration. Truly the missionary field and work has too few thoroughly consecrated enthusiasts or even followers. Devote ten minutes to earnest worship. Set an aim for this meeting and work to it. You may aim to inaugurate some project of home or foreign mission nature. You may work to build up a permanent interest in missions in your society by starting a scrap-book or library of useful interesting information. You may strive for a more vital effort in the individual lives of your own members to carry out the command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." Whatever your aim, be sure to make your plans tend to realize that end.

II

Hints for the Leader

Here is the time and opportunity to give to each person present a right concept of missionary work, be it foreign, home, or, may we say, "local?" Emphasize "MY" as related in the topic. Help each to see that he has a definite share. Giving and praying are excellent but not enough. Before results are had we must have both knowledge and attitudes. Encourage a deeper study of the mission work, giving inspiring reasons for study and get each one to feel a growing sense of responsibility. Then, we must not only expand our energies and capacities to the utmost, but we must be missionary missionaries—getting other interested also. Don't forget to cause each one to look at his own community, his own "estate" from the back door—not the front.

III

Pertaining to the Topic

Paul, writing to the church at Thessalonica, devotes a whole chapter expressing his gratitude for the fine spirit with which the newly founded church was taking hold of the new enterprise. Remember, Paul, has been doing pure foreign missionary work and had every obstacle of idolatry and low-living to overcome against which our present-day workers have to contend.

For the accomplishment of such commendable work, Paul notes several factors which are pertinent today. Paul and his associates, Silvanus and Timothy, are thankful—thankful for those with whom they worked and for those souls reclaimed. He commends them for having those necessary Christian virtues: "work, faith, labor, love, patience, hope." We have the same power of the Holy Ghost to carry the word and to live the example as did Paul. And as then, those whom we win become examples in turn and our influence is perpetuated. Today we, as Paul, can do much by bringing about the proper contact between the man of the world and the Christian influence—the Holy Spirit.

IV

Correlation With S. S. Lesson

The Sunday school lesson for today is a review: "Jesus Proclaims the Kingdom of God." Here is a splendid chance to tie up the present missionary work with that of John the Baptist and Jesus.

V

To Be Read and Commented On

Scope of work. Acts 1:8.
Backed by Church. Acts 13:1-3.
For distant lands. Rom. 15:19-21, 28.
Regular support. I Cor. 16:1, 2.
For all people. Gal. 3:28.
Fellowship. Phil. 1:3-5.

VI

Think About This

1. What is my church's share in the missionary program?
2. What is my society's share in the missionary program?
3. What is MY share in the missionary program?
4. Is preaching the essence of missionary work?
5. What are the missionary needs of my own community?

VII

Pertinent Poetry

If I had a talent for service,
I would count it a talent rare.
For she who bathed the Master's feet
And dried them with her hair
Did but a simple service,
But service expresses love;
And inasmuch as ye serve the least
Of these, ye serve the God above.

If I had a talent God-given,
Which had lain at the altar's fire
Till it had burned away the canker
Of all selfish desire,
Then I might give with simplicity,
Or serve with an humble heart,
And, forgetful of self and earthly gain
Become of God's plan a part.

Summary

So many important events and lessons are found in these first seven chapters of the gospel of Mark that it is impossible to enumerate and discuss them. Among other things we find: God's seal of approval upon His Son as He begins His public ministry; Jesus proved Himself to be a friend of the outcast, the down-trodden, the sinner; none suffering with physical or spiritual disease were ever disappointed in His power; as He increased in popularity, opposition to Him grew in proportion; He pictured the kingdom of God in parables that could only be understood by the spiritually minded. He was the Teacher with authority, and the Physician with power.

ANOTHER PROBLEM OF IMPORTANCE

In last week's issue of the Herald, Brother R. F. Williams, one of the finest men among our laity, gave us a question to think about, using a heading, "A Problem of Importance." In reading it, I feel that I can give at least one reason why the country people moving to town fail to join the town churches, especially of our denomination and conference.

In the city where the writer is serving one of the best small town churches of the conference, there are to his knowledge, more than a dozen Methodist Protestant families living within a radius of one mile of the church, and not attending church anywhere. Upon inquiring after the membership the writer was informed, "We belong at ——," naming a rural church 15 or 20 miles from town. "Why don't you people come out and line up with us and go to work?"—and the tragedy of a lack of unified effort on the part of the pastors of the conference was revealed in the answer: "My pastor down home doesn't want us to move our membership, and we just don't feel at home here."

I think, Brother Williams, this situation has something to do with it. If some of these overgrown rural charges whose members are living in town, near one of our churches, would do some work for the safeguardof the souls of those people, and for the strengthening of the Methodist Protestant Church in our industrial centers, they would have greater blessings. These people belonging in the country and living in this and other towns not attending church anywhere, and refuse to come because they do not feel at home, and can't feel at home because pastors don't want them to move their membership to town, need to feel that their souls belong to themselves. They are no good to their pastor nor his church, no good to God, and their own souls are becoming shriveled.

A TOWN PASTOR.

CENTENARY PROJECT LESSONS FOR JUNIORS

LESSON THREE

"Some of Our Methodist Protestant Family Live in Big Love-Homes"

Facts for the Centenary Discoverers

1. Our Big Methodist Protestant Family has three big Love-Homes. We learned about the one at Pine Ridge, Kentucky, last week. This is a love-home where the boys and girls of our Pine Ridge School live while they are going to our graded school and high school. If you could just see how happy they are when they all come into the big dining room, then if you could see the members of our family all over the United States working to keep up this school and home, you would think that it was a real love-home.

2. We have another love-home at High Point, N. C.; it, too, is a love-home for children. Our Pine Ridge love-home is for children in the Kentucky mountains who do not have the privileges in their homes that you and I do; they go to our love-home to get an education. Our love-home at High Point is for boys and girls whose father or mother is dead; it is for orphans; some have neither father nor mother. This big love-home is being supported by our big Methodist Protestant Family of which you and I are a part.

3. Our Children's Home was started in 1910 by the North Carolina Branch of the Woman's Home Missionary Society in an old schoolhouse in Denton, N. C., with less than $50 in the treasury. At that time there were eight thousand orphans in North Carolina who were not being cared for in North Carolina orphanages.

4. In a few months, the old building became so crowded that a new and permanent location was secured. A farm of 38 acres, two miles from High Point, was purchased and a modern brick building, large enough for 50 boys and girls, was erected at a cost of $30,000.

5. A few years ago the second large brick building was erected and is being used as a home for the boys, the girls living in the first building which was erected. All around both buildings there are large yards with shade trees where the boys and girls enjoy some of the very games which we play.

6. During the years, additional land has been purchased until the home now has 130 acres, 90 of which are being cultivated to provide food for the boys and girls and for the stock on the farm.

7. The boys work on the farm, raising the food and caring for the 12 Holstein cows which provide the large family with milk and butter, and the pigs which supply them with meat. Besides doing the work in the home, the girls do all of the laundry work by means of their modern steam laundry. They are also taught to sew and to make many of their own clothes.

8. All of the boys and girls who are old enough go to school; those in the grades attend the orphanage school, but the high school students attend the Jamestown High School. In struction in the Bible is given to all the boys and girls in the home. On Sundays, the children attend Sunday school and church at the Methodist Protestant church at High Point.

9. Our big Family is helping to support another big love-home. This one is for sick people—for sick people with tuberculosis. It is located on the side of Hamburg Mountain at Weaverville, near Asheville, N. C. Mr. Homer Casto started this love-home and is still in charge of it.

10. Mr. Casto wanted to be a preacher, but took sick soon after leaving school. He went to the mountains, where the air is the purest and freshest, to make his fight for health. His health, making it necessary for him to remain in the mountains, he purchased a cottage on Hamburg Mountain and opened a home for tubercular men; here he began his ministry of healing.

11. He started with just a few dollars and great faith. His Bethel Home has been enlarged until it now contains 12 beds. There are two lovely porches for the sick. Patients lying on the "cure porch" can look off in the distance westward and see some of our tallest mountains—Mt. Pisgah, The Rat, The Three Sisters, and others. A home-mother went to live at Bethel Home a little while ago, so that now, not only men, but women also may go to ours and Mr. Casto's Bethel Home, which is owned by Mr. Casto, but which our big Methodist Protestant family is helping to maintain.

Suggested Activity

Map Work: Locate on your map of the world High Point, N. C., and Weaverville, N. C. Paste pictures of the Children's Home on map at High Point and pictures of Mr. Casto and his Bethel Home at Weaverville. Pictures may be secured from back issues of church papers.

Your Photograph Album: Let each child paste pictures of the Children's Home and of Bethel Home in their individual albums.

Facts on Birthday Cake Posters: Add as many facts about Bethel Home and the Children's Home as possible to your Birthday Cake poster.

My Church's Birthday Book: Let each child write in his, "My Church's Birthday Book" facts which he has discovered about the Children's Home and Bethel Home.

Centenary Discoverers at Work: Let each child start collecting his facts and pictures for next week's lesson which is on our Americanization work at Empire, Ohio, and Pittsburgh, Pa.

Getting Ready for Baltimore: Let us all keep in mind that there is to be in Baltimore a demonstration of all the work which our big family is doing. All the things which we make will be sent to Baltimore in May, and after General Conference will be mailed back to us.

Worship Service

Theme: God's Care for Us; Our Care for Others.

Quiet Music: "Just As I Am Thine Own to Be." No. 131 played softly and quietly on piano.

Quiet Unison Recitation: Twenty-third Psalm.

Hymn: "How Strong and Sweet My Father's Care." (First verse.) Page 17, back of Hymnal for American Youth.

Unison Bible Reading: One hundred and twenty-first Psalm.

Hymn: "How Strong and Sweet My Father's Care." (Second verse used as a prayer.)

Pre-prayer Conversation: Our Father is so strong and He cares for us. How does He take care of us? (Let children answer). Do we really and truly need His care? What might happen if He didn't take care of us? Is there anyone in the world who needs our care? Who are they? Does God use other people to help Him care for us? (Lead the children to remember what father and mother do for us, what the policeman does, the postman, the milk man, the farmer, the manufacturer, etc). Does God need us to help Him take care of folks? How can we help? How is our big Methodist Protestant Family helping:

Prayer: (Let the prayer be the children's own expresion; encourage sincere praying by the pupils.)

Hymn: "I Would Be True." No. 170 in Hymnal for American Youth.

Memory Work

Have the boys and girls memorize the 121st Psalm and the facts suggested for Centenary Discoverers.

Suggestions for Leaders

1. Story material for this lesson may be found in "Missionary Program for Juniors," lessons 1, 4, and 7.

2. Keep before the boys and girls the idea that they are Centenary Discoverers, finding out what the denomination has done in a hundred years.

3. Make large use of pictures; clip them from denominational papers.

4. Send a card to Mrs. H. W. Maier, Thomasville, N. C., telling her that you are using the Centenary lessons; this is to be done by the leader of each group using the lessons.

5. Notice that in these lessons the major emphasis is placed upon the activity of the pupils; watch your opportunity to teach such lessons as sharing, kindness, respect for the rights of others, respect for rules and courtesy while the boys and girls are doing their handwork together. Notice the different methods which are employed in teaching any one of the lessons, manual method, discussion method, report method and the story-telling method. We speak of the projeet method, but it is rather a principle underlying all modern methods. The project method is simply teaching through activity.

6. Notice, also, that the lessons are all correlated, the facts for Centenary Discoverers, memory work, activity, and worship are all correlated for a given lesson and each lesson is correlated with all the other lessons.

HERALD SUBSCRIPTION RECEIPTS

MISSIONARY YEAR NEARING THE END

As the work of our Home Missionary year approaches the close we have many reasons for gratitude for the manifold successes which have crowned our efforts. At the same time, we are reminded that if we had had a larger enrollment and we had been more active the results would have been much more satisfactory. The treasurer's books close March 31st and every effort should be made to meet the budget in full. Reports indicate that some of the auxiliaries are considerably behind, but with persistent "last minute" endeavor, it is possible for every society to meet its quota. The demands are heavy upon every institution in which we are interested, and unless each society meets her apportionment the work will suffer. It is important that each auxiliary secretary make a detailed account of her work in the auxiliary in order that the reports of the Branch and Board officers may be complete.

The Branch meetings will be held in Greensboro April 17-19 and prospects are that there will be the largest attendance in the history of the organizations. The Home Missionary Society in North Carolina was organized in 1908 and it has grown from year to year. May we not adopt the aim, "Every Woman in Every Society Working for Every Phase of Work in the Church" next year?

Names of delegates should be sent in at once to Mrs. J. M. Stone, 514 Fifth Avenue. Greensboro, for two reason: First, that they may be assigned homes, and, second, that committees may be named in order to expedite work at the meeting.

All money should be sent to the treasurer, Mrs. H. A. Garrett, Burlington, R. F. D., and reports of work in general to Mrs. H. C. Nicholson, corresponding secretary, Mebane.

The Greensboro ladies assure all Methodist Protestant women, whether members of societies or not, that entertainment will be provided.

Pres. N. C. Branch, W. H. M. S.

WEST END W. F. M. S.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of West End M. P. Church held its March meeting at the home of Mrs. J. R. Bull. A good number were present and an enthusiastic business session was held.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, Mrs. J. R. Holden; vice-president, Mrs. M. H. Waynick; treasurer, Mrs. R. L. Rice; corresponding secretary, Mrs. S. H. Stapleton; recording secretary, Mrs. P. A. Burns.

Secretaries for the new year were: Record agent, Mrs. J. K. Osborne; Young People's, Mrs. Bonkemeyer; Thank-Offering, Mrs. A. L. Pleasants; literature, Mrs. C. A. Cooper; tithers, Mrs. S. E. Ratledge; Golden Jubilee, Mrs. M. H. Waynick.

We are very proud that the end of the year finds us with our assessment paid up and a clean sheet to start the new year on.

MRS. S. H. STAPLETON,

HEARD BEHIND THE PREACHER'S BACK

It may be rather late to be telling things that happened about conference time, but somehow it keeps on my mind, so I will try and get it off. And then again it may not be polite to talk about a preacher just because one happens to be on the back seat and can't help hearing what he says to one of his good lay members.

I had often wondered, and was bold enough once to ask him how he managed to be so successful in raising the conference claims. It seemed that he hardly knew, but I have found out for myself.

Why, that man did not wait till he got home but actually talked and planned his church work and his methods of raising the budgets and his pastoral help for the revivals all the way home from conference.

And I see from the reports in the Herald that his plans are working.

He goes at it just like it had to be done, and doesn't wait till the year is half gone and then make a feeble, half-hearted effort to raise a few dollars on the different claims. I found that his success came from his head, which was brim full of ideas. But don't all our preachers have heads?

And again I find that he is not afraid to talk to his members about the money they must raise for this and that. And the funny part of it is his people are not trying to run him off the charge, but think they have the best pastor going. (I am not saying he is not.)

He is not extra good looking, but averages up pretty well with the rest of the bunch. He makes no big display in the pulpit and you migth have to look at him twice to tell that he was a preacher, if you met him in the road.

But somehow he has learned how to do some things that all of our preachers have not learned. The only reason that I can see is that he gets to work and uses his brain as well as his tongue. Perhaps some one may say all our preachers don't have brains. If they don't, they deceive their looks and I am sorry for them, for they surely need them when they go to handling people.

I had better not tell this preacher's name, for fear he might deny some of the charges against him, but I will say there are nearly a half dozen of the same name but they are all such good men it will be hard to pick him out.

And I had better not tell my name either, for I may want to go to his church sometime and hear him preach.

A READER.

—The Department of Commerce announces that, according to the returns received, there were in the United States 16 churches of the Apostolic Over-Coming Holy Church of God in 1926, with 1,047 members. Of the 16 churches reporting, 13 were located in the state of Alabama. This denomination was not reported in 1916 and there are therefore no comparative figures.

—Speaking of marriage fees, a minister tells this story: He had just married a couple and was asked to name his fee. Before he had named any amount, the bridegroom, perhaps with a view of reducing the fee to a minimum, said: "We have talked it over and agreed that if we ever have any children, we will send them to your Sunday school."

No new charges are added this week, we regret to note, though the report is not without encouragement. Concord church on Saxapahaw, O. C. Loy, pastor, and Union Hill church, West Forsyth charge, C. H. Whitaker, pastor, pay college assessment in full. These churches now have this claim out of their way, and they can turn their attention to other obligations. Just as early as possible these financial claims that are so important to our conference programs and to Kingdom interests, should be met. Let us pray very much while we press these matters, and see if the money needs of our Lord are not more easily met. He is able to make all grace abound toward us, so that we, having all sufficiency in all things, may abound unto every good work. Nothing that we are for God, or do for Him has to be stinted. It is our privilege, and obligation, too, to abound in what we are and what we do for him.

Our standing is unchanged from last week in the number of charges reporting. Sixty-nine (69) have credits; twenty-three (23) are blank. Whose charge is in the blank list? We are sure that no charge wants to be in the blank list. Local problems, no doubt, have deterred. Let's try a little more work and a little more prayer. The Lord bless you and give you zeal and success in your labors for Him.

S. W. TAYLOR.

LAUGH IT OFF

If the weather's bleak and cold,
Laugh it off!
If the wind begins to scold,
Laugh it off!
Let it blow away your fears,
Smooth your frowns, dry your tears,
Put your faith in smiles and cheers,
Laugh it off!

If friends say that you look ill,
Laugh it off!
Should they urge a harmless pill,
Laugh it off!
Doctors, druggists and disease
Like to do just as they please,
You can save their costly fees,
Laugh it off!

If life seems to go all wrong,
Laugh it off!
Drown your worry in a song,
Laugh it off!
Do your work with smiling face,
Look ahead and keep the pace,
Be a winner in the race,
Laugh it off!

—For the first time in 16 years no money was borrowed on an eastern Carolina farm because of a home garden and the resulting sales on the local curb market.

—The Southern Railway System has just placed the largest order for motive power and rolling stock ever given by it, having purchased 68 locomotives, 3,000 coal cars, 2,250 automobile box cars, 250 ballast cars, 200 caboose cars, and 25 all-steel mail and baggage cars for delivery during the spring and early summer of this year.

BE KIND TO THE AGED

A man was very busy cutting a tree when his little boy said: "What are you doing, father?" But his father seemed not to hear. The boy then said with a loud voice, "I say, what are you doing?" Then his father replied, "I am making your grandfather a trough to eat out of." "How nice," replied the little boy. "When you get old I will make you a trough so you won't spill your coffee and drop your bread on mother's white tablecloth."

Older people get some good lessons from their children. This is one of the great reasons that parents ought to walk straight before their children. "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap."

I believe the aged are not cherished as they should be. The rising generation should realize that our parents have borne the heat of the day, some have fought for our country, some falling by the American flag.

I never like to hear boys and girls calling their parents "mam" and "dad," or "old man" and "old woman." It pierces my heart to hear such language. My father always taught me to respect old people and if I should catch a chance to help them along the pathway of life to do so. I have great respect for the aged. The first reason, I was taught in my father's home to speak kind words to the aged people. The next reason is that a man cannot be a true follower of Jesus Christ unless he loves and honors the aged people. We are having some of the very heart of our North Carolina Conference dropping over on the superannuated list and this only means that the young preachers will have to do lots of studying and lose lots of sleep if the Conference stays in a maximum condition. I believe that our parents prayed much. I can recall when I would go in some homes to spend the night the father of that home would bring or take down his old Bible, read a chapter and probably call on some of the boys to pray, and you could hear them talking to Jesus as if they were face to face. I love that old-time religion that makes people pray and praise the Lord. I am inclined to believe that the Christians will have to get back in an attitude of prayer and erect a family altar in their homes, and quit going to the hellish dances and indorsing notes for the sinners to go to hell on.

Our General Conference is drawing near, and we should get our hearts and pocketbooks together and be ready to lay our quota in the hands of the committee, and realize that God is pleased with our efforts. It seems that every member of the Methodist Protestant church should feel glad to have a part and parcel in this Gratitude Gift. Surely no one could deny showing his appreciation of those old veterans of the Methodist Protestant Church, such as Nicholas Snethen, and others.

In conclusion I will say that I have a warm place in my heart for the aged, their advice is worth lots to me, and my door stands open for them any time they come my way.

May God's richest blessing abide and be with you all. Amen.

C. W. SAUNDERS.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Yarborough Chapel.—On account of rain our crowd at Yarborough Chapel Sunday was small. We have not had reports from here, but have a faithful little crowd of Christian workers. Our crowds have been increasing from time to time.

We have had an epidemic of measles and mumps which has hindered us greatly. However, now with springtime just at hand we are looking for great success.

Yarborough Chapel has paid pastor's salary ahead, so you see they are an active little band.

Harmony: I preached at Harmony the fourth Sunday at 11 o'clock and night with the largest congregation of the year. This is a very live church, a happy band of Christian workers who love their pastor and do not forget to minister unto his needs. We have received many nice things from both churches during our stay here. Wish to thank each and every one who has ministered unto us.

We hope to raise our Gratitude Gift and our subscriptions to the Herald.

On February 14 at 5:30 we received a telegram from Lexington, N. C., stating to come home at once. Mrs. Surratt's father was paralyzed, not expected to live. We left Cross Anchor at 6:30, arriving at Lexington at 4 o'clock next morning. We stayed with him for a few days and ministered unto him the very best we could. We left him improved in some ways, but he will be an invalid the rest of his life. Pray for us in this sadness.

My little boy, Walter, Jr., is in bed with the worst case of measles I have ever seen. Mrs. Surratt is in bed with "flu" and taking measles. My two younger children have high temperatures and guess they are taking it.

Our first quarterly conference was held at Harmony on the fifth Sunday in January at 6:30 o'clock. Rev. S. W. Taylor was present and held the conference. Business transacted in a spirit of love and harmony. The charge is hopeful of raising all claims. We were glad to have our beloved president with us and to have him in our home.

What has become of our reporters? Wake up; we are expecting to hear from you.

Pray for us. W. B. SURRATT.

Randleman Charge.—A goodly number of the brethren and sisters have remembered us in a kindly and generous way since our last report. Their names follow: Mesdames Will Wood, B. F. Hendley, Rom Ward, C. D. and C. M. Hardin, G. P. Snyder and Pearl Troggdon; Misses Myrtle Causey, Nora B. Hughes and Kate Parsons, and Mr. J. H. Skein. For all these givers and gifts we are grateful.

The young ladies' class of Mount Lebanon Sunday school has taken the initiative in a drive for funds for painting the church.

A new church at Worthville is a reality. It is a wood structure, but will be second to none of like construction in a small village. The storm sheeting and roof are on. The window frames are in. The weather boarding is inside the building ready to be put on. Much free labor has been given. Mr. A. R. Groce is chairman of the board of trustees. He is a big man far in excess of two hundred pounds, but all his weight is being used in pushing the project. The Leward Manufacturing Company, of Worthville, gave the splendid site, and are hauling the building material free. Mr. W. L. Ward, secretary of the above named company, is also back of our building project, and has rendered valuable service as planner, adviser and contributor.

At present Sunday school and regular preaching services are held in the public school auditorium.

If you would like to help a worthy cause and a worthy people, send your check to Colon Allred, treasurer, Worthville, N. C.

Watch the Herald for further reports of our progress. WM. H. NEESE.

Randleman, N. C., March 12, '28.

State Street.—Yesterday was a great day for State Street church. Hon. Zeb Vance Walser, once attorney general of North Carolina, made our Centennial address. Mr. Walser was brought up a Methodist Protestant, and still claims to be one, though at present a member of the Presbyterian church. He, like a great many others, went into another church because we had no church convenient, raised a family in that church and, of course, does not care to change back and leave his family where they have not known anything but the church where they belong.

The thing that touched all our hearts was when he told us about our opening hymn, number 58, written by Alexander Clark. He had with him on his watch chain the last medal that Yadkin College gave as a college, and that medal was delivered to him by the author of that hymn; stirred his emotions, of course, and it was an experience that only those who were present and heard him express himself could realize.

Mr. Walser dealt with history of the past right here in Davidson County, and it was very encouraging to those of us who are struggling to establish a church right here in our county center that has meant so much to the county. Why it has been delayed so long we do not understand. But perhaps "we have come to the kingdom for a time like this."

Our little band went beyond the amount we were supposed to raise for our M. P. C. G. G. and we indeed felt like singing the doxology at the close of the services.

We had an unusually large congregation to hear and see the pageant, "Church of Our Fathers," which was so well rendered by our young people at the evening hour.

If all our established churches will do as well accordingly as this struggling little band our part and over will be forthcoming. May the Lord give us interest and liberality enough that this may be so.

N. G. BETHEA.

First Church, Concord.—Our evangelistic meeting came to a close last Wednesday evening. The meeting was a great success. Rev. John C. Cowell, Jr., was to have been assisted by Mr. W. J. Ramsay as choir director, but Mr. Ramsay was held longer than he expected in another field and did not come. Mr. Cowell did a fine work. He is a safe and sane preacher. There were a great many reconsecrations and conversions during the meeting. The following have been received into full membership of the church: Miss Eula Burris, Mrs. J. T. Blackwelder, Miss Ruby Griffen, Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Holland, Miss Ethel Howard, Evelyn Jenkins, Miss M. Jenkins, Mrs. Corum Lillie Bell Johnson, Oscar Little, Mrs. Daniel Little, Loretha Lowder, Mrs. Viney Teeter Morgan, Miss Carona Maulden, Bertie Maulden, Mr. Woodly Thompson, Mr. Edgar Lee Wensil, and Mearle Wylie. A pastor wanting to secure the assistance of an evangelist will do well to secure Mr. Cowell. We have thus far received 31 members into the church this year and are expecting many more before the year closes.

Owing to the meeting which has been in progress we could not hold our Centennial Gratitude Gift service when others were holding theirs the last Sunday in February. But yesterday we created the committee and before night they had secured the entire quota of $450. It is not all paid in but will be in ample time.

We have just completed laying sidewalks about our church where needed. The Moore Street side of our property and the approach to our new building is now completed and when grading is done, for it is now going on, our grounds will present a much better appearance.

We had a good day yesterday. It was rainy, but the people attended the Sunday school and the preaching services in large numbers. Our Senior Christian Endeavor Society is outdoing itself. Last night the weekly prayer meeting was well attended and had a good program. There were more than 50 young people present.

We are now trying out a special sort of service directed at "Carry-On-Evangelism." A large chorus, a prayer league, and a group of personal workers are joining the pastor in an effort at winning the lost in larger numbers.

Our reporter covers the ground so thoroughly and so well that I am not careful to remember all that ought to be reported.

This church is planning a delegation both to the Young People's National Convention and the General Conference both meeting in Baltimore in May. We have decided that if we can secure enough people who will attend the Young People's Convention that we will charter a bus. There is not enough in our own local church to make that possible, but, listen, if you are going, we will take you in; it will cost $17.00 round trip; that will include a full day in Washington, sight-seeing, etc. If you are interested, write me about it and I will give you particulars.

G. H. HENDRY.

Fountain Place.—The work here has been handicapped recently on account of an epidemic of measles, whooping-cough, mumps, and smallpox in our section of town. It is now clearing up some and we are expecting the usual attendance at all services soon. The attendance is now on the increase.

Regardless of the small attendance at the meetings of the different organizations the work has gone along very nicely. The Ladies' Aid is very much alive, while the C. E. societies, W. H. M. S. and S. S. are moving along in fair order. The W. H. M. S. meets tonight (Monday), with Mrs. G. L. Amick for the purpose of electing new officers.

The church was favored with a visit by Rev. C. B. Way, of Lexington, at the morning service last Sunday. After some persuasion on the part of the pastor, Mr. Way reluctantly consented to preach, and gave us a very splendid message which was enjoyed very much. Come again, "C. B."

Special services scheduled here for near future dates are as follows: Miss Annie Forrest will speak to the congregation on Wednesday evening of this week at 7:30 o'clock. Rev. Lawrence Little will speak to the young people on the first Sunday evening in April, at 7:30 o'clock. The Sunday school will hold a banquet at some date between now and Easter. The date is not yet set. Our revival will begin, probably, the first Sunday in April. The date will be set next Sunday. Pulpit help has not yet been secured.

Since his last report the pastor has been favored with many nice gifts from the church, which were appreciated very much. The moral and material support from this church to the pastor is very fine. This small congregation of 117 members is carrying a larger financial burden than some charges with a membership of a thousand.

W. M. LOY.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge. — The Juniors had charge of the C. E. meeting this evening. A good program was rendered. Mrs. W. R. Harrison was the leader. Our pastor brought us two splendid messages today. The congregations were good for rainy weather. There were only 50 present for Sunday school. We are hoping when the weather gets better that more of our people will come in time for Sunday school.

We are planning to have an old-time singing next fourth Sunday night, so come and bring your songbooks.

Mebane.—The attendance at preaching and Sunday school has been very good considering the weather and sickness. Our people are just now recovering from the worst epidemic of measles this writer has ever witnessed. This, coupled with sickness of other nature, and bad weather, has kept several from the services. We are glad to note that there are signs of improvement.

Yesterday we started our drive for Gratitude Gift and think we made a good start. We hope we will be able to secure a pledge from every member in our church.

The pastor wishes to join Mrs. Suits in thanking the members of the Ladies' Aid Society for a number of nice, as well as valuable, gifts, which they brought to the parsonage at their last meeting. These ladies are a great help to the church in many ways. When we say we appreciate their kindness and their efforts to help the church along we speak the sentiment of every member of the church. EDW. SUITS.

High Point.—At the 11 o'clock service last Sunday Dr. S. K. Spahr delivered a message on "Royal Virtues," after which he announced that he would be absent from the pulpit for two Sabbaths.

The Sunday evening service was given over to the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society for their annual Thank-Offering service. The music at this service was unusually beautiful. Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, president of the local social, gave an interesting address portraying the early history of the Foreign work, and telling of the struggles of the founding of the Society in North Carolina in 1900. It was not until 1906 that the women of First church, High Point, were successful in organizing a permanent Society during the pastorate of the late Dr. C. L. Whitaker. Today we have a membership of 117 with 70 "Precious Jewels," or little folks under six years of age, a list of the latter being read by Mrs. S. S. Coe, which proved quite interesting to the congregation. We have also a Junior Mission Circle of 18 boys and girls from 6 to 12 years of age, who meet monthly with Mrs. R. M. Andrews, superintendent, and Mrs. John C. Whitesell, assistant. This circle contributed $30 this past year to the Foreign and Home Societies. The Mission Band is being revived and a most promising Young Women's Auxiliary is being formed under the leadership of Miss Mary E. Young. Mr. E. L. Ballard then made an entertaining talk on "What and Why the Thank-Offering," explaining that this offering is used for new buildings in our foreign fields in China, Japan and India. A delightful play, "The Color Line," was then presented by the C. E. Society of the college under the leadership of Miss Mary E. Young. This play dealt with the racial problems of the Chinese in America, and was given in a bright, snappy manner by Misses Annie Livengood, Blanche Ingram and Lucy Nunnery, and Messrs. Jabus Braxton, Monroe Bennett, and T. J. Whitehead. The congregation enjoyed the presentation of this play, and the members of the Foreign Missionary Society extend many thanks to the young actors. The collection amounted to $86.85.

The Ladies' Aid Society held its monthly meeting Monday afternoon at the church.

As a compliment to the Board of Stewards, one of their number is serving a supper this (Tuesday) evening at the church to this band of faithful workers. The S. S. Workers' Council, which was postponed, will be held this evening at 8 o'clock, when Principal L. R. Johnston, of the high school, will deliver an address.

At the C. E. weekly meeting Monday evening Miss Mary Koonce was leader of the topic, "How Can I Help Others to Follow Jesus."

The Brotherhood, or Men's Club, will hold a meeting Thursday evening and supper will be served to them by members of the Ladies' Aid Society.

We are pleased to announce that Mrs. W. C. Hammond, the efficient secretary of the Board of Public Welfare of our city, has been chosen a delegate to a world-wide convention of welfare workers to assemble in Paris next June. Mrs. Hammond is not sure that she can attend, but has the question under consideration. This is a well-earned compliment to a faithful worker.

We are pleased to learn that Mrs. Johnsie Oakes Jackson, who has been a patient in Guilford General Hospital following an operation for appendicitis, has recovered sufficiently to return home.

Mr. C. E. Bulla, who has been suffering from influenza, has gone to Asheboro to spend a week recuperating.

Mrs. H. G. Perry, of Thomasville, who is taking treatment at Guilford General Hospital and has been dangerously ill, is improving, to the gratification of a large circle of relatives and friends. She is the mother of Mrs. J. Hobart Allred, Miss Margaret Perry and Mr. John Perry, well known by our church people and students of the college.

Booth Tarkington's clever play, "Tweedles," depicting the frivolity of trying to live on the rank and station of our ancestors, was given by the Dramatic Workshop of the college Monday evening to an appreciative audience. This presentation was directed by Miss Mary Todd, and the young actors show great talent and promise.

Kernersville.—The secodn quarterly conference will convene at Sandy Ridge church at 2 P. M. Saturday before the fourth Sunday in March. All official members, both men and women, are especially requested to be present. The people of this charge are glad that the next Annual Conference is to meet in Winston-Salem, N. C.

E. G. LOWDERMILK, Pastor.

Spring Hill, West Thomasville Circuit.—Rev. G. W. Andrews delivered an excellent sermon March 4. We all enjoy hearing Bro. Andrews. Rev. Carroll will fill the next appointment.

On March 4th a number of relatives and friends of Aunt Ann Westmoreland gathered at her home where a nice dinner was served in honor of her 85th birthday. All seemed to enjoy the occasion very much despite the disagreeable weather.

Sickness has been hindering our church attendance. Mrs. G. E. Glascoe has been sick for some time and does not improve. Mr. A. D. Sink is improving after a serious illness.

Mrs. I. I. York is able to be out after having the flu.

Some work is being done on our new church, wiring for lights and ceiling being done the past week. REPORTER.

Pleasant Grove.—Brother Reynolds gave us an inspiring sermon Sunday morning, using as a subject, "Let Us Lay Aside Every Weight," from Hebrews 12:1..

This Christian race compared to the Olympian game, a foot race. So like the foot race, in order to run successfully we must lay aside every weight that hinders and keep our eyes on the goal at the end of the race.

We are planning to have an Easter program to be given by the Beginner and Primary departments.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society will also give a pageant under the supervision of their efficient leader, Mrs. L. F. Honeycutt.

The Ladies' Aid Society held its monthly meeting Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. F. H. Clark. After the devotional and business session, Mrs. Clark served delicious refreshments to the largest number that had been present for some time. There were 24 of the 27 members present.

REPORTER.

Mebane.—Sunday at the morning service pledge cards for the Centennial Gratitude Gift were given out and some pledges secured while other are expected to respond, and we feel confident our quota will be raised.

The Ladies' Aid Society held their March meeting at the parsonage with Mrs. Suits. Twenty-three were present. At this meeting a miscellaneous shower was given Mrs. Suits, each lady taking some useful article for Mrs. Suits instead of taking something for the basket. This was a very interesting meeting. After the business session a social hour was enjoyed.

Monday evening at 7:30 the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies met at the home of Mrs. J. W. Nicholson with good attendance. Officers were elected for another year in both societies. Delegates to the Branch Meeting were elected as follows: Mrs. George Wyatt and Mrs. A. H. Jobe from the Home Society; Mrs. Jack Smith and Mrs. Edward Suits from the Foreign Society. Both societies have done splendid work the past year. The Home Society has raised its budget in full. The Foreign Society is somewhat behind on its budget, but are hoping to raise the amount before the Branch Meeting.

The William Nicholson Mission Band will give a program showing training they are receiving along the line of Home Missions on the fourth Sunday night in this month.

REPORTER.

Bethesda Church, North Davidson Charge.—Hurrah for Bethesda! You know when I got up Sunday morning and looked and saw that it was raining, I said, "We will not get the Centennial Gratitude Gift today." I was just a bit blue, not that I did not have faith in the folks, but I knew we would have a small congregation, and I did not know just how they would respond. Five girls and the writer gave the pageant, "Faith of Our Fathers," then we began to take pledges and, my! you never saw folks take hold of anything so well. It was only a few minutes until we were in ten dollars of the top. Bethesda will go over the top. Bros R. E. Leonard, Lee Wagner and J. B. Wagner are our committee, and they are doing faithful work. It was really the easiest money I ever tried to raise. At the last we all stood and sang praise to God from whom all blessings flow, and everybody went home happy.

Next Sunday we expect to raise our quota at Shiloh and Friendship; Shiloh at 11 a. m., Friendship at 7:30 p. m. We are expecting to go over the top at these two places.

Yours for the Centennial Gratitude Gift.

R. S. TROXLER, Pastor.

State Street.—At 9 o'clock this (Tuesday) morning, Miss Virginia Walser and Mr. Helms, of Charlotte, were united in marriage at the parsonage by Mr. Bethea. Miss Walser is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jess Walser of this city, and has been secretary of the Sunday school almost ever since its organization. We will all regret very much to lose Virginia, for she is a loyal member of all the branches of work of the church. Mr. Helms was at one time manager of the A. & P. store here, but has been transferred to the store of the same company at Charlotte, and he and his bride will make their home there. Both are popular young people and their hosts of friends wish for them a prosperous and happy life.

Mr. Bethea leaves today for Lincolnton to conduct a revival meeting and will be away until next week. Brother Way will preach for us next Sunday.

Sunday night the pageant suggested by the Gratitude Gift committee was given. Mr. Bethea opened the pageant with Miss Pauline Falkner representing the child of the church. Mrs. C. L. Koontz the first quarter century, Miss Lila Aron the second, Mrs. Harold Lanier the third, and Mrs. Rodgers the fourth. All parts were beautifully rendered and much enjoyed by a large congregation.

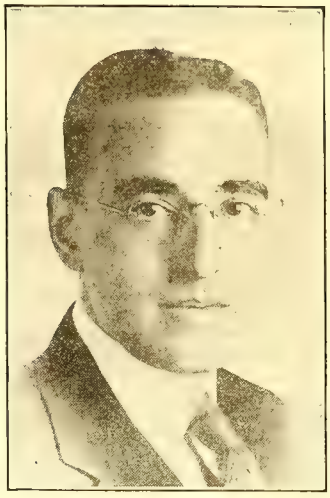
CENTENNIAL SPEAKER



FRANK D. GETTY
Director of Young People's Work, Presbyterian Church, U. S. A.

Those of our readers who attended the Methodist Protestant Denominational Young People's Convention, held in High Point, N. C., in 1920, will remember with a great deal of appreciation the very splendid addresses made by Rev. Frank D. Getty, of Philadelphia. The Convention Committee is very fortunate in being able to secure Mr. Getty for the Centennial Convention to be held in Hampden Methodist Protestant Church, Baltimore, May 10-15.

Mr. Getty is Director of Young People's Work of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., with headquarters in Philadelphia, and has under his direction the leaders of more than a million Presbyterian young people. He is recognized as one of the most outstanding leaders in the field of young people's work in the entire country. His wide knowledge of this work, his effective leadership qualities, and his deep consecration to the whole program of Christian Education make his coming to our Centennial Convention a matter of general interest and appreciation.

The Departmental Conferences on Senior Work, to be held on the mornings and afternoons of the convention will be in charge of Mr. Getty. He will outline the latest and best methods of department organization and administration, the development of an adequate worship program for youth, and the organization of service activities that will enlist the interest and co-operation of young people. As a part of this outline, he will present the "Christian Quest" program which is becoming recognized by the leaders of Religious Education throughout the United States and Canada as one of the finest collections of leadership materials ever assembled.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Resolutions of Respect

It is with hearts full of sadness that we, the members of Orange Chapel Missionary Society, record the death of one of our most consecrated and faithful members, Mrs. W. J. O'Daniel, whose death occurred February 25, 1928.

In her passing the husband has lost a true wife, the children a devoted mother, and the church a loyal member. She was willing to do what she could to help others, especially in time of sickness. She was a regular attendant at church and Sunday school. Mrs. O'Daniel's life should be an example to us. Therefore, be it resolved:

First, that we cherish her memory, appreciating what she has done for us by her unfailing love and faithfulness;

Second, that we shall strive to follow her beautiful example of helpfulness rendered at all times and under all circumstances;

Third, that we extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved family and commend them to the Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well.

Fourth, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be spread upon the minutes of the Missionary Society, a copy be sent to the Missionary Record, and also to the Methodist Protestant Herald for publication.

O city of infinite beauty,
Your glory and bliss we would share;
But strongest of all it is this longing,
We want to meet Mrs. O'Daniel up there.

MRS. J. L. MAYNARD,
MRS. H. L. ISLEY.

Leonard

As the sun sends her rays over the western horizon and makes the close of the day the most beautiful, so the closing years of the life of Brother Ed Leonard shone with most brilliant radiance. After having spent most of his manhood in the far West, his heart again yearned for the old familiar scenes and beloved faces; so he, with his wife, came back home to pass the closing years of his life with those he loved most.

Soon after coming back to the old home he came into the fold of the Master, at which time there was great rejoicing in the hearts of his sisters and brothers and of the old sainted mother and father.

He was 58 years of age when God called him home. "Uncle Ed" was a great sufferer for eight months or more and he bore it all with patience. When the call came he was ready and we believe his spirit is resting with his Saviour where there is no suffering.

In all of our church there was no more devoted and faithful Christian than was "Uncle Ed." He never sought praise, yet he was an inspiration to his pastor and his Sunday school teacher, always interested in orphans and a great help in the foreign work—in fact, he was glad to support every department of the Lord's work.

He will be missed by his church and every one that knew him. The smiling face we all loved to look upon is gone, and the voice

e loved to hear is still. A place is vacant the home and church which can never be led. Yes, he is gone, but not forgotten, d never will his memory fade, for we all ved him so much and our thoughts will al- ays linger around the grave where he was id.

Even the little children loved him and miss m in our community and church. We can't derstond just why he was called from us, t God knows best and doeth all things ll, and we, too, must lay down our lives st as this dear brother has, and may there a grand reunion around the great white rone when our life on earth is ended and have gained our home.

Stephens

Sister Elizabeth Stephens, of Connelly rings Circuit, died Harch 5th, 1928. She s 82 years, 10 months and 24 days old. She s the mother of 10 children, nine living, e dead; 76 grandchildren, 64 living, 12 ad; 98 great-grandchildren, 88 living, 10 ad; three great-great-grandchildren, two ing, one dead.

She joined the Methodist Protestant urch in her early girlhood, lived a con- tent Christian life, and died in the faith. ter Stephens was a Miss Martin before her rriage, a sister to Rev. L. P. Martin.

D. M. PEW, Pastor.

Coble

Brother Zebulon Vance Coble died Sunday, rch 4th, at his home in Burlington. He l been in failing health for three years did not take his bed until about a week ore his death. Brother Coble joined the Pleasant Methodist Protestant Church en a 12 or 13-year-old boy, where he re- ined a member until 1916 when he trans- red his membership to the First M. P. urch of Burlington. He was a faithful mber of this church until his death. The tor had learned to look for his presence the services. He had a regular pew, I ık, and when sickness kept him away he s missed.

The funeral was conducted from the First urch Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock by the tor. We regretted that Brother Taylor, was his pastor for seven years, did not word in time to be present. Many beau- l floral designs and a large congregation friends and fellow church members gave imony to the high esteem in which he held.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Sarah le, seven sons and five daughters, two thers, and a number of grandchildren and er relatives. Most of his children are mbers of the First Methodist Protestant rch of Burlington, and are among our stantial members.

s another has said of him: "Mr. Coble a quiet, unassuming man, who attended is business, looking after his family, and riended his fellowman whenever he could. was a substantial citizen, and will be sed in his home, his church, and com- ity."

he relatives have our deepest sympathy his time of great loss. May the God of comfort make His grace abound to you in this time of need.

L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.

Moss

On Thursday morning about 3 o'clock, January 25, 1928, Mr. Leonard A. Moss died at the age of 48 years, one month and 17 days. He was a well known citizen of Vance County and lived near Henderson, N. C.

He united with Gillburg Church in early life, to which he always remained a good member. He was also a good man in his home.

He leaves to mourn their loss his wife and 11 childrden besides many relatives and friends. May God's richest blessing rest upon them and lead them in the straight way, that they may meet him in a more beautiful world where sorrow is unknown.

The funeral services were held at Gillburg Church, conducted by Rev. M. P. Chambliss, pastor of the church, assisted by Rev. H. F. Fogleman. His body was then taken to the residence of Mr. G. M. Stainback and laid to rest in the family cemetery under a beautiful mound of flowers. A very large crowd was present to show their last tribute of love and respect for him.

The family has the heartfelt sympathy of all for the loss of one so dear in the home as father.

A NIECE.

Jones

In the passing of Brother Alfred Jones on February 21, Tabernacle Church has lost another of her oldest members, he being 79 year old. On February 7, 1874, he was married to Miss Ellen Hanner, and to this union seven children were born, all of whom are living. Early in life he was converted and joined Tabernacle Methodist Protestant Church. He was faithful to this church until death. He said to his loved ones just before passing, "I love Jesus and am going to heaven."

Rev. W. F. Ashburn and the writer conducted the funeral at Tabernacle February 22. His body was then laid to rest in the nearby cemetery.

May grace be multiplied to his widow and children who are left behind.

H. L. ISLEY.

Eller

Mrs. Sabria Eller, of near Weaverville, died February 20, and her body was laid to rest in Clark's Chapel cemetery the following day. She was the wife of Uncle Ab Eller, who preceded her to the glory world 16 years. She was the mother of seven children. The living are: Mrs. L. B. Hackey, of Canton, N. C., and Mrs. Cornelia Sams, of Weaverville; besides these she leaves 13 grandchildren, 18 great-grandchildren, four great-great-grandchildren.

She professed faith in the Lord Jesus Christ at an early age and united with the Weaverville M. E. Church, South, later moving her membership to Clark's Chapel M. P. church, remaining there until the end came.

God blessed her with a great number of years, she having reached the age of 98 years and eight days at the time of her death. The writer is confident from the wonderful testimony that she left behind her that all these years were spent in the service of the Master.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer assisted by Rev. H. B. Dandy.

Hearts are sad when we think of her going, but we should rejoice and strive to follow her footsteps to the better land.

J. D. CRANFORD.

Brown

Our Gibsonville church was permitted to go through the last conference year without a death among its members. But since conference one of our oldest members passed, W. A. Brown.

Brother Brown was born in Mecklenburgh County, Virginia, seventy-one years ago, came to North Carolina forty-four years ago, and to Gibsonville twenty-one years ago. On moving to this community he joined our church. Because of declining health, he was unable to attend church regularly.

He was industrious, deeply interested in his family and their welfare, performing such work as his strength would permit.

During an acquaintance of a year he impressed me as possessing those traits of character that constitute a true man and real Christian gentleman. He bore his suffering uncomplainingly,and gave evidence of being prepared to make the change, feeling that for him it was better to depart and be with Christ and his life companion, who preceded him to the glory world nearly three years ago.

RECORD OF LYNCHINGS KEPT BY TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE

I send you the following concerning lynchings for the past year as compiled by Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research. I find there were 16 persons lynched in 1927. This is 14 less than the number 30 for 1926, 1 less than the number 17 for 1925, the same number 16 as for 1924, and 17 less than the number 33 for 1923. 12 of the persons lynched were taken from the hands of the law, 6 from jails and 6 from officers of the law outside of jails. 4 of the persons were burned to death, 2 were put to death and then their bodies burned.

There were 42 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. 8 of these were in northern states and 34 in southern states. In 24 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In 18 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. 68 persons, 15 white and 53 negroes, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 7; attempted murder, 2; rape, 2; attempted rape, 3; improper conduct, 1; charge not reported, 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Arkansas, 3; Kentucky, 1; Louisiana, 1; Mississippi, 7; Missouri, 1; Tennessee, 2; Texas, 1.

—During the last fiscal year of the government, closing June 30, 1927, there were manufactured and sold in our country more than ninety-three billion cigarettes. During the six months from June to November, inclusive, the total was 51,982,136,717. This indicates that the total for the current year will be more than one hundred billion.

WAR AGAINST CANCER

North Carolina is joining the other states in a definite effort to combat the steadily increasing death toll of cancer. Dr. H. H. Bass of Durham has been appointed director for the State of the American Society for the Control of Cancer.

In North Carolina deaths from cancer have almost doubled in ten years. In 1914 the total number of cancer victims was 821. In 1926 this total had grown to 1,367, an increase that placed cancer among the five leading causes of death in the state. The point has been reached where one person out of every nine who lives to be beyond the age of forty is dying with cancer.

Cancer is neither infectious, contagious, nor communicable. It is curable if discovered in time for proper treatment. An annual or semi-annual physical examination by competent physicians would in a few years greatly reduce cancer as a cause of death.

It will be the purpose of Dr. Bass as director for the State of the American Society for the Control of Cancer to endeavor to spread among the people the known facts about this disease which is so steadily growing year by year. In this he will have the active co-operation of the State Medical Society and the State Board of Health.

Battle With Octopus

When the Tug Warren sank at Port Townsend, Wash., five men on board were drowned. None of the bodies were recovered. A few days later a diver repairing a fish net 50 feet under water sighted a huge octopus making its way along the bottom of the sound and bearing in its tentacles a human body. Seizing a pike pole the diver went after the devilfish and attacked the monster. Again and again the diver thrust and lunged at the octopus which gave battle but grimly held to the body. The diver centered his thrusts on the middle section of the underwater creature, literally cutting it to ribbons. After a while the octopus sank back, all its fight gone, and the diver pried loose the body from the fish's tentacles. The body was later identified as one of the men from the sunken boat.

—The Department of Commerce announces that, according to the returns received, there were in the United Stats 901 churches of the United Presbyterian Church of North America in 1926, with 171,571 members, as compared with 991 churches and 160,726 members reported in 1916. The total expenditures for 1926, as reported by 890 churches, amounted to $6,642,820, including $4,234,127 for current expenses and improvements, $2,393,445 for benevolences, missions, etc., and $15,248 not classified. The total expenditures reported by 974 churches in 1916 were $3,094,945.

The Measuring Units of Life

The fortunes of men are very diverse. There is an element of chance entering in which helps to account for the diversity of fortune, but this cannot fully explain. A larger factor is found in a man's own will and determination. Arnold Bennett asserts that very few men succeed because very few really wish to succeed. There is much truth in the statement. We choose our destiny by choosing the course that determines destiny. According to our effort, so shall it be unto us. This is one of the measuring units of life—our volition, our effort. Persistent determination and putting forth of effort is bound to tell in the course of the years. The man who is too weak or too lazy to put forth effort is fatally handicapped.

Another measuring rod is our faith. "According to your faith be it unto you," said Jesus to the blind men who had said that they believed He was able to give them sight. Faith is a marvelous power that can move heaven and earth. The person of faith, even the little child, has a mighty hold on God and men. God honors faith and so do men. God likes to be trusted and men like to be trusted. Both God and men are averse to disappointing a trusting soul. The scope of your faith measures the scope of your acquisitions and achievements. You may not have much power to put forth effort, but if you have faith, you may accomplish great things through the power that others may lay at your feet. The man of faith becomes a man of power.

Will and faith are both subjective powers by which we determine objective facts. But these are not all. There is another even greater and mightier. It is the power of love. The soul that loves has already made its fortune. The soul that continues to love will make a record of most desirable achievements. He that showeth himself friendly will have friends. He that loves will be loved in return.

By some of these units every one can measure his way to enduring success. An invalid confined to bed for years may by faith and love expressed in prayer change many lives for good and advance to the heights of grace and glory. The shining way of success stretches away from your feet to the hills of God. Whatever your earthly fortune, your prospects are so bright that they could not well be brighter. But all depends on your will, your faith, your love. Will you go on and possess?

Glad He Broke His Arm

Rev. G. F. Millaway fell on ice about two months ago and broke his arm between the elbow and the shoulder. He had it set twice and suffered considerably with it. It is now about well again, and he surprised us by saying that he did not regret the accident. In fact, he said that he would not swap back, though he presumed that no one would voluntarily have his arm broken. He did not explain this surprising remark, but we judge that he had gotten out of the experience something that he felt more than compensated him for all the suffering and inconvenience and loss of time involved. What could it have been? We would be glad to have him explain when he has time. It might help many to reach a more satisfactory view regarding the great problem of human suffering. If he can read the meaning of his pains, it may help others to read the meaning of theirs. Paul was convinced that our light afflictions in this world may work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. Can Bro. Millaway point out the distinct benefits of having a bone broken? We think we can surmise what some of them are, but would prefer to hear him tell out of his recent experience. We hope he will.

Our Childish Vocabulary

The child's vocabulary is limited to terms adapted to his degree of intelligence. Many words intelligible to the adult are unintelligible to him and he never uses them. They are not in his vocabulary. I am persuaded that man's vocabulary in this world is a childish thing to men in the future life. The labored explanations of earth's philosophers are but childish prattle to the man that has passed over and come to know as he is known. Paul was caught up into the third heaven and heard unspeakable words. These words of the heavenly vocabulary will become intelligible to us when we have risen to the heavenly state and outgrown the childish vocabulary of earth. Unthinkable thoughts now will become thinkable then. What we cannot understand now will become clear then, and we will laugh at the absurd explanations of some of earth's ambitious philosophers.

—Bro. Pritchard writes of the appreciation that fails to measure up. Often this failure is only seeming. It exists in the minds of the people, as you will find by talking with them. It expresses itself to others, but it might be better if it expressed itself more freely to the people appreciated. Yet there is a natural reticence that restrains from speaking words of praise to those we approve, especially to those engaged in the service of the church. We feel that they have a reward in their own consciousness in comparison with which our approval would be weak indeed. But when you realize a distinct benefit from a sermon or speech, it certainly would not be amiss to tell the speaker that he has helped you. It will help you if it does not please him. And most preachers are human enough to appreciate sincere words of commendation.

OUR CONFERENCE 1836-1844

It is my intention in this paper to cover briefly ten conferences, though not ten years. They met as follows: March, 1836, at Sandy Ridge; December, 1836, Bradford's Chapel; Shiloh, December, 1837; Rehobeth, December, 1838; Salem, December, 1839; Fair Grove, December, 1840; Whitaker's Chapel, February, 1842; Rehobeth, December, 1842; Mt. Hermon, November, 1843; Fairfield, November, 1844.

Membership at these ten meetings is reported as follows: 1,772, 1,812, 1,858, 1,937, 2,155, 2,261, 2,367, 2,758, 3,008, 3,403. A notable increase during the latter years! The list of presidents includes Alexander Albright, Alson Gray, two terms, Alexander Albright again, John F. Speight, John Coe, Caswell Drake, Wm. Lineberry, and Alson Gray, two years.

At the Sandy Ridge meeting is found the first reference to superannuates in the question if there are any asking such a relationship. The answer was none. However, the stationing committee reported Travis Jones as superannuated. The next year six circuits and two stations appear in the report, and in 1844 a mission was started in the city of Wilmington with Rev. John Paris (the historian) as pastor. He had been received as a deacon two years earlier. It is of interest to note that in 1837 the stationing committee was entirely composed of laymen.

Evidently it was not good form to engage in politics, for in 1836 a resolution was passed to the effect that: "Whereas, Bro. T. L. Cook has virtually (if not officially) renounced his official standing in our church as a minister by becoming a candidate for the legislature; therefore, Resolved, That Bro. Cook be left without an appointment the present year —— and that he be requested to inform the president on the next conference whether he considers himself a minister of the M. P. Church." No report was made to the next conference but two years later a satisfactory letter was received and he continued in the work.

A. M. Thompson, as agent, presented to the conference of 1837 a "proposition from the Virginia conference to establish a Manual Laboring College." He was informed "that the N. C. district feel deeply interested in the success of the enterprise but are unable to afford any financial aid." It will be remembered that this was the year of the first and one of the worst financial panics the United States has experienced, and the financial reports indicate that the conference felt it keenly. The president received in salary the sum of $11.00, while one pastor, Rev. John Speight, received only $6.25. Others were somewhat better paid, and there must have been a spirit of hopefulness for a liberal salary for the time was promised the president for the next year and plans were laid to pay the expenses of the two representatives, Rev. Alex Albright and S. H. B. Whitaker, to the general conference which met the next May at Pittsburgh. Rev. S. B. Harris attended as an alternate and he and Mr. Whitaker presented an expense account of $160.12, which was still in process of collection in 1841, when the time had arrived to discuss the need for new expense money for the next meeting. The president received only $52.13 in 1838 and less than $100 any year during this period.

The age of controversy had not passed. In 1837 and in February, 1842, it was ordered "that if the subject of a general superintendency is recommended in the general conference our delegates are instructed to vote against it in every shape it may assume." However, the problem of slavery was of most concern. "If the subject of slavery is broached in the general conference our delegates are instructed to inform that body that the N. C. district does not consider that a debatable subject," is the wording of the instruction given in 1837. In 1842 the wording is, "That if the abolition of slavery or the advocacy of temperance societies or Sunday schools be proposed as a test of membership our delegates be instructed to oppose it." Note that this is merely "a test of membership"—a temperance resolution was passed in 1838, the only one on record so far, and Sunday school workers had been welcomed some years before. So far as slavery is concerned, however, the tone is much more positive. In 1839 a series of vigorous resolutions was posted, going so far as to threaten to "withdraw from the connection" if the general conference should implicate "the Christian character of southern slave holders." In December, 1842, a resolution was passed in favor of the establishment of "a paper devoted to the interests of the southern conferences," and a committee of correspondence was appointed to care for the matter. The letter which they wrote and which is recorded in full in the Journal of 1843 shows that anti-slavery agitation in the Methodist Protestant was the occasion for this action. The Maryland, Tennessee and Alabama conferences declined to assist and while the president of the Georgia conference wrote a very encouraging letter, nothing was done officially by his conference and the matter dropped.

In 1840 a committee from the Christian church attended our conference to discuss church union. We in turn named a committee to go to their conference at Apple's Chapel. I am unable to find any report from this committee.

JESUS AND THE HUNGER FOR SOCIABILITY

John 6:67

Having discovered the position which Jesus occupies in the financial and scientific world, it should not be surprising to find Him dominating our social life. Such indeed is the fact. Jesus was fond of the people. He loved society as a mass and individuals as an integral part. He recognized the important place each individual had in making up the whole of society. None could be overlooked. And so we find that He was no ascetic. Wherever people were, He was. He thought it not beneath Him to play with the children in the market place. He mingled with the business men of His day. It stirred Him whenever He saw or heard of oppression and fraud. He longed for human friendship, even as you and I. He knew what it meant not to have it. Despised and rejected of men, still He loved them and longed to help them to bear the burden and heat of the day. He was glad and happy when with those who understood Him, and wanted to follow Him. He grew at times very lonely and heartsick.

Society is bound together by indissoluble ties. The merchant cannot say to the farmer, I have no need of thee; nor the farmer to the manufacturer, I have no need of thee. All are dependent upon each other. Let us take the home for an example. Each member while alone is bound up with every other member of the family circle. None suffers alone, they all suffer and also rejoice together. If you touch one, you hurt all. This is a unit of what we call society. Longing for each other's company and happy while in it. This is one of the great laws of Jesus, that men must toil, suffer, plan and love each other. The fact is that men ought to do these things. It is the law that holds society together, "that ye love one another." Love alone will cure the ills that menace our society life. It will break down all wrong. Whenever any question is settled by this law, it will be settled right. More than that, we should recognize the fact that society is no stronger than its weakest link, no matter what it appears to be on the surface. We must look deeper.

Now notice some things as they were for a while. I can only hope to call your attention to this part of our subject. Do you remember the "greed of our great corporations," how they crushed out competition? In this way the great Standard Oil Company was built. By crushing out the smaller producers, going into his territory and selling the product cheaper than he could produce it, until he was forced to sell out to them. This is only an example. Many others did their work in exactly the same way, amassing great fortunes, hoarding up money until great panics resulted. Banks as well as homes and lives were wrecked by these unlawful operations. Even worse conditions than these existed. While I was pastor in Newark, N. J., a great factory caught fire, causing the death of thirty girls who worked there. All because the owner would not make it safe or provide adequate fire escapes. Train wrecks were frequent. Human life seemed no more than so many cogs in a gigantic wheel which must go round, leaving as it turned, death and destruction, and all this for mere money. Life was valuable only as it produced money. Going literally a mad pace. It looked as though nothing could stop it. A wide gap existed between employer and employee. It seemed as though this great chasm could not be bridged. Employees driven as the employer wished, no cordial relations. They hated the employer and this hatred was heartily reciprocated in every way. Most work for the least money. And still, in the face of this deep-rooted plan, a new order was born. The age in which we are living is an age of transformation. The greatest transformations of the ages are taking place in our day. Every day sees a new valuation placed upon life. More and more are men and women being counted for their true values. Employers have recognized the truth that you cannot place a money value upon men and women. The increase of the value of the man is with himself and not his employer in any sense. I can see in it all the majestic figure of the Christ of God moving slowly but surely to a great end. As He moves in legislative halls, there is given to the people a new system of law that recognizes as its basic principle the value of the individual as a man and not as a piece of machinery whose supreme value used to be to wear itself out making money for another. So we also have our brotherhoods and fraternal orders which have been a great factor in bringing all this about.

There has been a great change in industry. We have working successfully a system of profit sharing with the employees. Co-operative plans in the great factories, where those who toil feel that it is worth while. We have our rest rooms and libraries for our young women. I hope to live to see the day when all stores and factories shall have them. The abolishment of the sweat shops and child labor, these have been relegated to the past. Savings banks and kindred institutions are doing no little to bring about this wonderful change.

There has been a great change in religion. Sectarianism has been one of the great crimes of the age. There is no reason that we shall be ever able to give to God for this condition of affairs. It took our church leaders a long time to wake up, but they finally did so, and now in every church gathering there is an earnest discussion, and movements started to further the cause of the great Kingdom of our Lord which at last has been seen to be greater than any denomination on earth. It is true that many things that once were thought necessary to the very life of a denomination have been given up and many more will be abandoned if it is seen that it will hasten the coming of Christ's Kingdom in its fullness and glory. It is not my purpose to discuss any of these things. I am simply calling your attention to some of the marvelous things that have taken place in our day as we come to the realization of the truth that the Spirit of Jesus is abroad in the land and demands recognition everywhere.

This change is also being wrought out in political life. The grafter and crook and ward boss do not control the political life of the nation as they used to. There may be exceptions but those gentlemen are seeking cover and finding none. The cry of the people is for honest men in public office and we are getting them as fast as it is possible. Many instances have recently come to the front, notably the Smith and Vare cases in the U. S. Senate. The Sun of Righteousness has arisen and is shining clearer than ever. Those who are our leaders are taking notice of the drift of things and governing themselves accordingly.

And finally in our social life. There is an awakened pity and desire to help the fallen woman. We must face the truth that no nation is stronger than its womanhood. The tremendous disclosure of the white slave traffic worked a revolution and will bring still further changes. While men demand purity of womanhood, the women have the same right to demand purity of manhood. Away with the double standard of morals. What is wrong for one is evil for both. We must have the same standard that Jesus gave for all. Jesus insists that we all must recognize what men and women may become regardless of what they are. It is for this He asks that we help Him, to hasten the time when all shall recognize His authority and bow in submission to His will. In the face of these awful yet beautiful transformations which Jesus is bringing to pass, He asks, "Will ye also go away?" May God help us to meet the crisis and do it without fear.

THE CONFESSION OF A MODERNIST

A modernist confession comes from the Rev. Dr. Richard Roberts, of Montreal, says Ernest Gordon in the Sunday School Times of March 17, and flatly repudiates the optimism that is the dominant trait of the sect of Modernists. In the Student World he speaks of the "widespread frustration and general moral insolvency among men of good will. Certain situations confront us and we ought to do something about them, but we have neither the wit nor the skill nor the courage to do anything. So we call them problems and talk about them. Talking about problems is the best way to multiply them, and our life today has become a wild litter of problems. And while we are talking about them the world is going to the devil. This spawn of problems that is filling the world with talk is not a display of our wisdom but our impotence and our cowardice." After remarking that the preaching which he has been doing the last ten years has been little more than fiddling while Rome is burning, Dr. Roberts confesses that he does not know what to do. But he knows why we are held up. "Action requires conviction, and we are without convictions. We have opinions, cart loads of them, but only convictions discharge themselves in acts." He describes himself and his colleagues as holding provisional opinion, tentative theologies, as nomads of the spiritual life with no continuing city. Then he confesses that the men who have done anything have been men with positive convictions. The men who put through negro emancipation in the British Empire were the members of the much ridiculed Clapham sect. The leader of the great fight for factory legislation in England was the great and good Earl of Shaftesbury, a man who lived his days in the light of immortality.

The futility and purposelessness of the so-called modern theologians he illustrates in this little parable: "Looking from a hotel window you will notice that while every automobile is going somewhere, the whole mass of them seem to be getting nowhere. It is a figure of modern life, always on the move but getting nowhere; talking, talking, talking, and getting no further."

In an installation address in New York the other day, when a Unitarian was being inducted into a Universalist pulpit, Dr. Fosdick remarked that "we liberalists know what we are revolting from, but the question for us is what are we revolting to." Dr. Roberts has answered the question. The terminus ad quam of liberalism is impotent and sterile talk.

We wish to add a few words: Did Paul and the early Christians talk about "problems?" No. They simply went ahead and did. We never did have any taste for symposiums. We've never had the patience to read many. It to us is much like trying to read a batch of patent medicine testimonials. It is said of Napoleon Bonaparte, that while the enemy—his enemy—was holding councils of war, he took the initiative, crossed the national boundary, and thrashed the enemy on his own territory. It hasn't been many years since, at a certain conference, a certain, supposed-to-be big man was on the program to enlighten the conference as to how to manage certain problems (?). And it was whispered around in no uncertain words, by those who were supposed to know, that this identical man had been a failure at about everything he had undertaken, and especially at the very thing he came to talk about.

We are tired of problems and programs, as if we had never had any problems until yesterday. We've had substantially the same problems all down the past—the problem of sin and the devil. And God has given us the weapons with which to overcome them, but we will not use them. We've lost faith in God's weapons, and so we try to substitute some of our own—and fail. So we begin to import talkers from colleges and universities and other conferences to talk, as Dr. Roberts says. And we confess that these talks have always been disappointing. We need to remember the fable of the farmer, the wheat-field, the old quail and the young ones. The old bird knew that there was no danger as long as the farmer talked and depended on some one else; but when the little birds heard the farmer get out his scythe and begin to whet it, and tell the boys that they could not depend on their neighbors to cut the wheat, the old bird told the young ones, "It's time to move out." So when we quit programs and talking problems, and get down to business, carrying out the great commission, as was formerly done, we'll not be talking problems, but saving souls. The only way to capture a "machine gun nest" is to just rush up and take it. That was the way our boys captured the Hindenburg line—and, there is no other way. And all this modernistic talk about problems doesn't scare the devil a bit; but if we will get on our knees enough, and long enough, and go gunning for the devil with an inspired message from an inspired Bible, something will be done. But we must stop. Study Dr. Roberts' confession. They say that "an honest confession is good for the soul."

We've been seeing for quite a while that modernists "ge nowhere," and now that Dr. Roberts confesses it, it seems t me that the honorable thing to do is for them to get out o the way and stop hindering others, or become settled, "fa in line," and stop hatching problems and talking.

DO METHODIST PROTESTANTS APPRECIATE THEIR PASTORS?

Sometimes I feel that Methodist Protestants are lackin in appreciation of their church and the pastors who serv the churches. Just three incidents that have come under m observation have convinced me that we have some men wh are as big as any denomination can produce. The firs occurred during our revival services here in Asheboro las June. The morning services were union services with al the churches in town co-operating. These services were hel in the M. E. Church. The first union service was largel attended and the preacher was Rev. T. M. Johnson, D.D., o our own church, and the text was Ex. 33:11: "And the Lor talked with Moses face to face as a man speaketh unto hi friend." Very few times in my lifetime have I ever witnesse such an impression as was made. Somehow we just felt tha a man was speaking who knew God and that God was honorin the man with his presence. At the close of the service almos the entire audience came forward, some with tears in thei eyes, to tell the preacher how much the sermon meant to them

The second observation took place in February of thi year and was in the same church as the first. This time was a meeting of the Randolph County Ministerial Association The speaker was Rev. A. G. Dixon, D.D. As he spoke to u of the work of the minister the message got hold of the men Some of the men got out their handkerchiefs, not to wip away the perspiration but the tears that were in their eyes At the close of the address we three threw the meeting ope for a general discussion and almost every man present fro the various denominations said that it was one of the fines addresses he had ever heard on the subject.

The third observation was in the Asheboro Methodis Protestant Church at the Father and Son banquet on Marc 16. Rev. S. W. Taylor was the speaker. As he spoke the eye of every boy in the audience were upon him. I sat and listene and this thought came to me, that though I had heard number of addresses on occasions like that, some of th addresses given by Y. M. C. A. secretaries, some by preacher and some by laymen, but in all my lifetime I never heard a fine an address for an occasion of that kind as the one I wa listening to then.

I wonder sometimes if the laymen do not make it har for Methodist Protestant preachers by not being boosters Some time ago a certain man who seldom ever goes to churc went with his wife to a Methodist Protestant Church an heard the sermon by Mr. Blank. When they reached hom the husband said to his wife, Well, why is it that I have neve heard you praise the sermons of you rpastor? Then he said Was that sermon today about his average? and she said sh did not think it was quite up to his average, and the ma replied that if that were his average he considered the ma an extra good preacher, and the wife replied, Well, I hea him so often I never think much about it. And yet all th time we can hear other denominations talking about thei good preachers and some of folks just feel that they must g and hear occasionally those big men that they hear so muc

India

When this article reaches you, Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Minnis and their two little daughters, and Miss Mildred Miskimen, will just be starting on their well-earned furloughs. Many will be anxious to follow them on their homeward journey so I will give you their trip schedule as given by Rev. Minnis: "March 31 leave Bombay; April 9th arrive in Port Said; April 10 we shall arrive in Jerusalem. With a visit in Palestine and Egypt we shall sail from Alexandria on April 19th and arrive in Naples the 23rd. We are booked to sail from Southampton on May 5th for New York. As the steamer from Southampton is one of the largest, I take it for granted that it will require but six or eight days to make the journey across the Atlantic. I shall write you later and let you know exactly when we expect to arrive in New York. I hope that it will be convenient for you to meet us at that time and possibly you had better bring along a little money to get us through the customs, as we have too many places to visit to have anything but a few post card pictures left in our pockets. Besides Miss Miskimen and Mrs. Minnis frighten me with their talk of shopping in Paris. We are buying our tickets through the American Express Co., so if you wish to catch us at any place on the journey you can use the American Express as our address while in any town. I think that there is an office in all towns we shall visit."

There are a number of items of real interest in the annual reports from India.

In reporting for the Boys' School, Rev. Minnis says: The school is in a most flourishing condition. Our classrooms are full. We have the best equipment now since the school began. The staff of teachers are all normal school graduates and four hold government certificates. The health of the boys has been especially good and their behavior has been the best since we came to the work. The prospects are very bright. During the year eight new desks, four cupboards, map stands, new pictures, enough hockey sticks for two teams to play have been bought, and a gymnasium has been started.

The school has been inspected by the government inspector, also by the Dhulia municipal inspector. Both inspectors seemed pleased with what they found in the school. Since the new furniture for the school has been secured we have done about all we can until we get more room. The year has been a splendid one with about a 33 per cent increase in attendance.

This is the first year that boys who do not remain on the compound have been admitted. The experiment seems to be working well. From coming in contact with the people on the compound one of the Mohammedan boys passed up the walk some weeks ago singing "Jesus Christ is My Savior."

During the school year four boys were enrolled from a neighboring mission.

In October the final examinations were held in the Training College in Poona and all three of our girls passed. The Girls' School was inspected and Miss Miskimen writes:

"The inspector seemed quite pleased with our work and his remarks were very complimentary. We have a fine staff of teachers now."

The President's Letter

OPTIMISM | EVANGELISM

Easter

We regret that more of our churches are not making plans for an Easter service. Doctor Sheridan writes that only 58 orders for programs have been received, against 118 last year. It is too late now to order and prepare a program; but it is not too late to take an Easter offering for the Board of Home Missions. Pastors and superintendents, please see that this is done. Half of all the money that the church has for this purpose comes through the Easter offering. Whatever is raised will count on the budget of the local church.

Some pastors will, no doubt, be planning for Easter evangelistic efforts. We hope and pray that these efforts may be greatly blessed. Dr. Sheridan will supply decision cards where they are desired.

Centennial Day

The fifth Sunday in April has been so designated as a part of our spring conference program. This was agreed upon by the committee advisory to the president in the early part of the year. From time to time we have been calling attention to it. The whole church is thinking now of our 100 years of denominational existence, and it is but fitting that we should come together in large central groups, where this can be done, to rejoice in this God-blessed achievement of our church, and to dedicate ourselves anew to our Zion, and to Him who is our great Head.

The details of the program are to be worked out by pastors and district chairmen. The idea is to get our people together and to give due recognition to this event. However, what can best be done will be worked out by the leaders in the respective districts. We believe that this should be a great day in our conference, and we most earnestly call upon all of our people to help make it such.

Draper

March 14.—Wednesday night we were with this church in their second quarterly conference. An encouraging number were present, and the interest all that could be asked. Nominees for conference delegate were chosen, and all of the other business transacted. The finances of the charge were not up to standard, but plans were made that will result in prompt improvement, we believe. Bro. Totten is earnestly leading in the work, and it is our opinion that Draper will report a year of progress at the next annual conference.

Asheboro

March 16.—Friday night it was our pleasure to be with Bro. Pritchard and his people in a Father and Son banquet, held in the banquet room of the Asheboro church. Fathers, sons and sponsors were present—about 75 in number—some up toward the three score and ten mark, some in middle life, and some just starting the journey. Fathers, sons and sponsons and sponsors—all together for a good time, and we had it—good fellowship, good inspiration, and good eats. We thoroughly enjoyed this occasion. Every church should have a Father and Son banquet. Bro. Bates attended the banquet also, and gave us the pleasure of having him as a traveling companion.

Mocksville

March 17.—Saturday was given to Mocksville charge in quarterly conference at Union Chapel. Dulins, Byerly, and Elbaville were not represented, owing to rain, we presume. The other churches, being close by, were well represented. Delegates were nominated, as required by the conference law, and other business of the conference was transacted. The pastor recommended that a better parsonage be provided by the charge. No action was taken by the conference, but we shall not be surprised if this improvement is made in the near future. It should be done. The finances of the charge are behind, particularly the budgets. The illness of the pastor for most of the year accounts for this. We were glad to find him in better health, and now as soon as he can get out more among his people, we are sure the financial reports will be better. Pastor Sink is serving his fifth year on this charge, and is popular with his people. This charge holds for us particular interest because the memories of our earliest childhood days are connected with it. We have very vivid recollections of the straw on the ground floor of the arbor at Dulin's and the revivals held there when we were but a child. It was a pleasure to us to find, as faithful members of this quarterly conference, some that we knew in those childhood days. The progress of this charge in recent years has been highly gratifying to us, and we hope for it an ever enlarging growth.

South Winston and Fairfield

Sunday, March 18, was given to these churches. At 11 a. m. we preached at South Winston, and enjoyed worshipping with our faithful band there. They are in a growing section of the city, and the prospects are good for establishing a church there. They have a lot already paid for, but it is our opinion that they should consider a change of location. We have visited the field in company with the committee on church extension and survey, and discussed the matter of location with the pastor and members there. They will give it due consideration. We are confident that future growth will justify all that we can do in establishing a church in South Winston.

In the afternoon at 3 o'clock we preached for Bro. Ashburn at Fairfield. The house was well filled and the response to the service was good. Fifty dollars was raised for the Gratitude Gift. Bro. Pierce was present, and assisted in the service.

At night we returned to Winston for a service at Union Ridge. This church is now within the city limits of Winston-Salem. Considerable additions have been made recently to the church building, which greatly facilitates the work of the Sunday school. This church is well located, and should have a steady growth. Thirty dollars was raised here on the Gratitude Gift. Bro. Kinnaman is faithfully pressing the work, and the prospects for growth are encouraging. We enjoyed this day of work and worship at all of these points.

Better Roads

Many of our churches are in the country. The mode of travel has changed altogether since these churches were built. Everybody now goes in an automobile. This necessitates better roads. Bad weather makes it impossible to get to many of our churches. This should not be so. Every rural church is entitled to a good road. Brethren, go after this until you get it.

M. P. C. G. G.

Chairman Ross will make his report next week. We want every charge in on this report. Many churches have more than subscribed their allotment. The response at many places has been all that could be asked. But the success of the undertaking is to have every charge listed with credits in this worthy undertaking. Not to respond now is to suffer regret later. By all means, brethren, get in on this, and have your reports in the hands of Chairman J. D. Ross, Asheboro, N. C., not later than Tuesday of next week. Thank you! Thank you!

Appointments

March 29, with Bro. Hutton in second quarterly conference at Lebanon.

April 1, with Bro. Anderson at Albemarle, 11 a. m. In the afternoon with Bro. Hill at Porter, and Friendship at night.

April 8, with Bro. Ashburn at Vickory, 11 a. m.

April 15, Siler, 11 a. m.; Liberty at night.

April 21-22, with Bro. Ridge, Davidson charge.

April 28-29, Centennial Sunday with Bro. Powell on Greenville charge.

May 6, with Bro. Ferree on Anderson charge.

With loving concern for every minister, and an abiding interest in the success of every charge, I am,

S. W. Taylor.

EVANGELISM

Evangelism is an oft-repeated word. To Protestant Christians it has a very definite meaning—that of the conversion of sinners to a belief in and the acceptance of Jesus Christ as their personal Saviour. The evangelist is the one engaged in this definite work and we have become accustomed to think of the revival or protracted meeting as the time when the evangelist comes and the church expects recruits.

I suppose the object of these discussions now offered the readers of the Herald is to stir up their pure minds by way of remembering their duty and their privilege in this great work. For in these days of high speed, fast living and material thinking it is quite easy for us to forget both the church's and the claims of God upon us. And that is what too often happens to us. How few there are who are really concerned over bringing people to Christ. We have our daily work, are eager to get on in the world, but are not greatly concerned about the unsaved. I mean to say too large a percentage of the church members are like that.

And, too, the churches are all busy over raising their quotas in money for so many causes that the unsaved are forgotten. But money cannot make a church great or good. Money cannot bring one soul to Christ. Yet money does render a service to the church. But it takes more than money to make a church an evangelistic church. And it takes more than an educated membership to make a church a soul-saving church. Likewise, it takes more than social standing to make the members of a church the people of God. It takes consecration—people who are devoted to Christ; people who think more of Christ than of themselves; who enjoy his daily presence more than they do the presence of worldly men and women. They must be willing to pay the price of personal work, ready to endure hardship and self-denial in order to bring to pass the revival in the church.

I believe our church still has devoted souls who seek to do the will of Christ more than their own will. That there are men and women here and there who are ready to pay whatever the price may be to have a revival of religion in their communities. As in the days of Elijah there are more who have not bowed the knee to Baal than the leaders in the church think. Therefore, let us be encouraged, let us unite in prayerful effort to make this the greatest year in all the history of our church for the ingathering of souls. R. M. Andrews.

OUR STORY PAGE

THE LOST VERSES

It was a wintry night, and the frost was already beginning to whiten the outside of the windows. John and Jeanne Ross sat before an open fireplace in the big family living-room watching the flames leap and fall. Suddenly a heavy log which was on top cracked and split open.

"Look at the big hole in the middle of the log," cried Jeanne. "It must have been a hollow tree!"

"And look at what's in the hole," added her brother, pointing to something that was wedged tightly in place.

Jeanne clapped her hands.

"Maybe it's treasure," she said.

"Maybe," said John. "But I doubt it. I think it's just an empty tin box."

Jeanne, however, was sure that it might contain something of value.

"Whoever hid it away," she said, "wouldn't have taken so much trouble with it if it was just an empty box."

She reached into the fire with a poker and rescued the box from the flames. When it was cool enough to touch, she opened it and looked inside. What a surprise! And what a disappointment! The box was filled with faded yellow papers.

"Just full of old paper," said John.

"But there's some writing on the paper," cried Jeanne. "And it must be very, very old because the paper is very, very yellow."

John was interested for a moment. "Let's see the writing," he requested. Then, when he looked at it, he returned the papers to Jeanne and said in disgust:

"Poems."

"What shall we do with them?" asked Jeanne.

"Put them in the fire," answered her brother.

"No," decided Jeanne. "I'm going to keep them, and if they are good I'll recite some of them at the entertainment next week."

Jeanne read all the poems, which were written in now faded ink, and liked some of them so much that she learned them by heart and decided to give them at the party. The night came around, and the auditorium was filled with people. John was in a play and after his part was finished he came down to where his sister was seated.

"Going to give the lost verses?" he queried, laughing.

"Yes, I am," retorted Jeanne. "I think some of them are very good."

"Well, you and I have different ideas on the same things," John said. "I think they are very poor. Some milkman must have written them."

"I'm going to recite them just the same," said Jeanne.

When it came her turn, she walked up the steps to the platform and said:

"More than fifty years ago, some poems were written by an unknown poet and placed in a tin box for safekeeping. The tin box was later hidden in a hollow tree, where it remained until seven short days ago. Even then it was discovered only by chance—while a log from the tree was being burned in an open fireplace. The paper upon which the poems were written was faded and yellow, but the poems themselves were still fresh and beautiful. As a tribute to the unknown poet, I shall recite some of them."

And she began:

"Have you ever waked at night to the call
Of a dear forbidden name?
Has some perfume sweet on the dusty street
Turned your body and mind to flame?

"Have you sometimes slipped from the hum-drum rush
Of a workday afternoon,
And followed the gleam of a long lost dream
At the lilt of a passing tune?"

Here she stopped. Not because the poem was ended or because she had forgotten the rest of it, but because an old gentleman with white hair had stood up in the audience and was speaking to her.

"I wonder if the young lady would excuse me," he said, smiling kindly, "if I recited the rest of that poem?"

Jeanne was too surprised to say anything.

"I may not know it exactly," went on the old gentleman, "but doesn't it end like this:

" 'Then look with a tolerant heart, my friend,
On others who hear the call—
When we take the trail at adventure's hail
It is easy indeed to fall!

'And we who but loiter to dream awhile
Are brothers to those who sin.
By the cries which start in each human heart
We may know we are gypsy kin.'

"That's it, isn't it?" he asked.

Jeaen nodded her head. Two gentleman had recited the last two verses almost as they had been written.

"Then it isn't—an unknown poem?" she faltered, with tears of disappointment in her eyes.

"Not to me," replied the old man, "because, you see, I am the author."

What a surprise that was to everybody!

"I wrote the poems of which the young lady speaks when I was a boy, living here in Youngstown, and when I left home for the west, I hid them away as she has described. The purpose of my visit here this winter was to find my lost verses and have them published. I have found them, as you see, in a very remarkable way."

Then he asked Jeanne to recite the other poems she had chosen. He listened carefully to the ones she gave, and nodded his head pleasantly as they recalled some pleasant incident of his boyhood life. After the dramatics were over, he came to where Jeanne was standing with her brother.

"When may I come and claim the tin box?" he asked smilingly.

"Well, you can come tomorrow," answered Jeanne. "I shall be sorry to lose the verses, but I am glad to have found their author."

"You sha'n't lose them," promised the old gentleman. "I have already decided that you may keep the originals. I just want a copy for the publishers."

Then he noticed John, and Jeanne told him that John was her brother and helped to take the box out of the fire.

"And what did you think of them?" queried the poet.

"Well," said John, a little uneasily, "I thought they were just—just poems."

"Well, they are!"

"I mean like the teacher makes us read," explained John. "But when Jeanne recited them with everybody listening so quietly, I could see that they were different. I liked them. Honest, I did."

"I'm glad you did," answered the old gentleman.

Four months later, Jeanne received a flat parcel through the mail. She eagerly opened it and took out a beautiful new book –a book of poems. She read the title, "The Lost Verses," and inside on the flyleaf she saw:

"Dedicated to Miss Jeanne Ross, who loved these poems even before she knew they had been written by a famous author."—Selected.

RUTH'S FAMILY

"It's all very well to talk about life's being rich and full," said Sara Crandall, "but if you had no family at all—no relative in the world nearer than a second cousin—you wouldn't like it much yourself."

Ruth Lawton looked at her friend thoughtfully. "I haven't," she said at last.

Sara stared incredulously. "Ruth Lawton, what do you mean?" she cried. "Why, ever since I've known you you've been talking about your grandmother and your little brother. I can't tell you how homesick you made me feel when you invited me to share the good things your grandmother sent you. And your little brother—"

"I am adopting a family," Ruth interrupted, smiling in a half-merry, half-wistful way. "Grandmother and Billy are the only ones I've acquired so far; of course no one expects families to grow in a minute. But I have in mind one or two other persons whom I hope to have as relatives soon. I understand how you feel, Sara. I spent a miserable, wasted year pitying myself; then I suddenly realized that if it were a new gown or a new position I wanted I'd go to work and get it; and I asked myself why I should not also go to work and get a new family. I'd been sitting there crying when all the while there were thousands of other lonely people in the world, and many of them were worse off than I, who am young and strong and able to make friends."

Sara's eyes were wide open.

"As soon as I realized that there were other lonely persons," Ruth continued, "I realized that I had missed a whole year of having a grandmother. I had known Grandmother Barrett all my life at home and used to run in to see her a dozen times a week. She had three children then. Now they're all dead except one son, who is in the navy. So grandmother and I adopted each other. As for Billy, he was in my Sunday school class. He is an ambitious little fellow, but there is no one at home to help him; his people can't appreciate the value of an education. But Billy is working for one. I'm going to be mighty proud of him one of these days."

"And who is to be your next relative?" Sara asked.

Ruth hesitated. "Next I want a—a sister," she said. "If I had a sister I think she and I could adopt Poncita, the most adorable three-year-old Spanish baby that you ever saw. She is in the day nursery at the mission, for her mother has to work. Some one should make clothes for the child, and teach her things that her mother has neither time nor knowledge for, and—" Ruth's voice faltered.

Sara saw the pleading look in her friend's eyes and leaned forward. "O Ruth," she exclaimed, "would I do? Could I be your sister? Would you teach me how?"

"Would I?" Ruth cried. "O, Sara, would I!"—Youth's Companion.

MISS HARRIET'S CORNERS

Round the restaurant table sat a little company. The meal was proceeding pleasantly, until—the waiter upset a cup of chocolate in the girl's lap!

"My dear Harriet, your pretty suit is ruined."

"Oh, there are more in the shops," was the gay rejoinder.

The waiter, having got a smile from the heroine of the accident, went off in a dazed condition.

"Now, look here, Miss Harriet," began the man with the white hair, "tell us how you did it!"

"Did what?" mischievously.

"Kept your equanimity, when most women would have—well, no matter! I was looking right at you when it happened, and the corners of your mouth went back instantly in a smile, and—"

"Oh, you did notice that?" asked the girl, suddenly interested. Then, she checked herself, coloring; but the others scented a story, and insisted, until Miss Harriet yielded, laughing.

"Well, I had a new hat sent home once, the night before Easter. I was to sing in church, and that hat was the prettiest thing! When I left my room a moment, my puppy found it and had a personal interview with it.

"No, I didn't shake the puppy—he was a dear. I just dropped into a chair and contemplated the ruins.

"But presently I caught sight of my face in the dressing table mirror, and I forgot even the ruins! I was so shocked that I said right out, 'Is that you, Harriet Corey?' Why, it was the most woebegone, forbidding countenance—my mouth made a perfect capital U, turned upside down.

"It came to me that that was how I probably looked when things went wrong.

"Well, I experimented immediately. I made the corners of my mouth move back up, and I decided that a presentable face was better than an Easter hat. And I concluded right there that when things went wrong, I'd at least see that the corners of my mouth stayed up.

"Really, you've no idea how it helps when horrid things happen. You just can't feel cross and blue if you keep your corners right."

Miss Harriet, absorbed in her narrative, had been unaware of admiring eyes. Now her cheeks began to redden.

"It's better than controlling corners in wheat!" murmured Mr. Pierce.—Exchange.

Do Methodist Protestants Appreciate Their Pastors?

about. I believe we have the finest church government in the world, I believe that we have just as good preachers as any denomination, and when we think of the handicaps under which a great many of our preachers labor, it seems to me that Methodist Protestant ministers have accomplished some things that other folks could not do.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC

April 8: (Easter Sunday) "Why We Believe in Immortality"

I

Plans for the Meeting

Have a number of members to prepare papers on the subject, "Immortality." Have these read and discussed as a part of the discussion. Be sure to have the music committee to select appropriate Easter songs bearing on the topic. Have them sung joyfully since it is really a happy Easter-time.

II

Hints for the Leader

This is a topic that has been discussed for ages. The philosophers of the centuries have come to the conclusion that there is an after-life.

When one views nature there one finds the resurrection in the natural world. The grain of corn, the wheat seed, etc., come forth from mother earth. The Easter flowers and the bursting forth of the spring plants tell us that miracles happen every day.

After death comes life. Jesus was crucified in a garden. He was buried there. He arose there and gave us assurance of immortality.

III

Scripture References on Immortality

Job 19:23-27.
Mark 16:1-10.
Luke 24:1325.
John 12:24-25.
John 20:26-29.
Romans 8:35-39.
Revelations 22:1-5.

IV

Poetry to the Point

I saw a tree once leafless, bleak and bare
Pour out its rich flowered fragrance on the air,
And swift-winged came the thought,
"He is not dead; He is risen as He said."

I saw a torn and blackened battlefield,
Once more its golden bounteous harvest yield;
Quick flashed the truth, transcending law and creed.
The Lord is risen indeed.

I saw a soul, low-fallen, scarred with sin,
Rise strong, triumphant, nobler goals to win;
Out rang the glorious message o'er and o'er,
"He lives to die no more!"

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

April 8: The Resurrection (Easter Lesson)

Scripture Basis: Mark 16:1-20.

Golden Text: Because I live, ye shall live also. John 14:19.

Facts of the Resurrection

Repeatedly have most of us heard the story of our Lord's triumph over death and the tomb, but each time its presents new meaning and renewed inspiration. After having lain in the sealed tomb for three days (according to Jewish reckoning), the Lord of life manifested conclusively His power over death in His own body, as He had shown it over death in the bodies of others during His three years' ministry, by bursting the bands that held Him, leaving the fast-closed sepulchre, and defying the Roman guard.

Without the Damascus gate of the city, on a hillside, may be observed from a distance the likeness of a large skull. Nearby is a cave like unto an unused sepulchre. These are called "Gordon's Calvary" and the "Garden Tomb." Since this place corresponds to Golgotha, the place of the skull (Mark 15:22), and as no victim was crucified within the walls of the Holy City, Protestants believe that evidences point to this as the true Calvary and Aramathean sepulchre, and not that held by Roman Catholics under cover of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre.

Faithfulness of the Women

Last at the cross and first at the sepulchre—such is the record given of the faithful Marys. Mary of Magdala of Galilee had never forgotten her new Master who had relieved her of the seven demons with which she had been possessed. Her love and grati tude impelled her to be loyal to Him even in a lifeless state. The other Mary, the mother of James the less and Joses (Mark 15:40), may have been a sister of Jesus' mother. It was the custom of the Jews to wrap preservative spices mingled with ointments about the dead body, since they were not as thorough in their embalming as the Egyptians. This they came to do with the body of our Lord, very early in the morning, even at the break of dawn.

Although Christianity had not as a religion begun to honor and respect woman, yet Jesus in His ministrations had set the example in His attitude toward the gentler sex. Among His most faithful disciples and cherished friends were women. Into no home was He more welcome than that of His three Bethany friends, Martha, Mary and Lazarus. And even in His agony on the cross, He made provision for His mother, a woman. So today no religion honors womanhood as much as the Christian religion, and womanhood is faithful to the trust that has been hers throughout the ages.

First Appearances

Jesus' first appearance was to Mary Magdalene, which seems to have been in appreciation of her faithfulness. (See John, Chapter 20). The two disciples on their way to Emmaus, as they disappointedly discussed the events of the cross, were the next to whom He made His appearance. (Luke, Chapter 24). The next time Jesus showed Himself to the ten, Thomas being absent. In the same chapter above stated, Luke gives us a fuller account of this than Mark. About a week after this, (according to John 20th chapter), Thomas with the others witnessed His appearance in their midst, and his doubting was changed to honest confession of his Lord. In fact, Jesus spent His last 40 days on earth confirming His resurrection by communing with His many disciples, in groups as well as individually.

Forth-Telling Commanded

Jesus did not leave the 11 faithful ones without instructions. We have no idea how many things He may have said to them about the formation of His church. But He did leave a command that has pierced the centuries since His day and has come down to us in equally as imperative language as then. Read it: Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. This has been the driving shaft of the machinery of the Christian Church, the steam, as it were, being the impelling love of Christ. In obedience to that command, men and women have braved the adverse elements, faced the sword and the cannon, smiled peaceably in the faces of the hungry lions, and been true to their Captain's orders whatever their fate.

Final Triumph

Leading them out of Jerusalem to the Mount of Olives, He left their midst and ascended on high to occupy the royal position which He had with the Father before He took upon Himself the form of a man, even before the world began. His disciples stood in bewilderment until He was lost to their view. It required the services of two messangers of God to remind them that there was work to be done, so in obedience to one of their Lord's last commands, they returned to Jerusalem to be endued with power to go forth and preach. The Acts of the Apostles and the history of the Christian Church record subsequent events.

Along with the many other triumphs of His life—the virgin birth, the transfiguration, the triumphal entry, the resurrection—ranks that of His ascension, for by it "He ever liveth to make intercession for them" who are His.

TRANSITION

Life to me
Was a great gaunt tree
With branches stark and bare;
No leaves were rustling overhead,
No robins nestling there.
The roots were dead,
For love had fled,
My heart was full of care;
Life to me
Was a great gaunt tree
With branches gnarled and bare.

Life to me
Is a great green tree
With blossoms rare and bright,
For love is there
And binds her hair
With petals pure and white.
Life to me
Is a great green tree
With blossoms rare and bright,
That shine with radiant beauty
In love's soft golden light.

—Elizabeth Kleiser.

DAFFODILS

Bowl of daffodils on my sill,
Bringing sunshine closer still,
From your shrine of "crackle" gray,
Nodding as the light winds play,
Freshly picked from Nature's sod,
Nurtured by the hand of God,
Spreading gladness everywhere,—
Tell me, is that why you wear
A crown of gold?

—Elizabeth Kleiser.

—Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk told one of his congregations that if they had nothing to be grateful for, they need not contribute to the Gratitude Gift.

CENTENARY PROJECT FOR JUNIORS
"Our Big Methodist Protestant Family in Baltimore"

LESSON FIVE

"Some Would Not Have Churches If It Were Not for Our Big Family"

Facts for Centenary Discoverers

1. We will remember that the laws for the Methodist Protestant Church are made by both the minister and layman. Each church has some laws and these are made by the pastor and the members of his church. All the Methodist Protestant churches in a certain state are organized together in a conference, so we have the Maryland Conference, the Illinois Conference, the West Virginia Conference, etc. Each Conference makes some of the laws for all the churches in the Conference. All the Methodist Protestant churches in all the Conferences are organized together, and we call this the General Conference. Our General Conference, like our Annual Conference, is made up of an equal number of ministers and laymen. The General Conference meets ever four years to make laws and plan program for all the Methodist Protestant Churches. The General Conference holds its next session in Baltimore, Md., in May when we will observe our 100th birthday.

2. Our General Conference has a number of Boards through which it does its work. We call them Boards, but they are just a group of people organized to do a certain part of the church's work. We have two Boards which are directing our foreign missionary work; one is called the Board of Foreign Missions, which carries forward the missionary work for all the church; then the women of the church have what we call the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. These two Boards work together to do missionary work in India, China and Japan. We also have two Boards for carrying forward the Home Missionary work, the Woman's Home Missionary Society and the Board of Home Missions. The school work at Pine Ridge, the Americanization work at Empire, Ohio, and Pittsburgh, Pa., the Children's Home and Bethel Home are being supported by the Woman's Home Missionary Society. The Board of Home Missions is doing even a larger piece of work; it is helping to build churches for people who can't afford to build for themselves.

3. Fifty years ago, people didn't think they needed beautiful and attractive churches; they thought that a small building with one room was sufficient. But the more we have learned about boys and girls, the more we know that the church must contain many rooms if we are to give them the kind of religious training they need. It requires a great deal of money to build the kind of church we need today. When churches want to build new church buildings and can't afford to do it all themselves, our Board of Home Missions sends them some money to help build their church. Of course, the Board of Home Missions can't help all churches, but it helps as many as it can, and it tries to pick out churches which need help the most. Sometimes it just loans the money to the church, but with some churches it gives it to them.

4. Our Board of Home Missions has built a great many churches in some of our great American cities. Many years ago, some of our big Methodist Protestant Family, when they moved from the country to the city, had to join churches of other denominations because there were no Methodist Protestant churches in but a few of the cities. Our Board of Home Missions started to build Methodist Protestant churches in many of our cities; in most cases, they started with just a few people, some of which were Methodist Protestants, the rest being neighborhood people. It took a great deal of money to build these churches; many thousands of dollars for some of them. In most cities one is not allowed to build a church unless it is a very good building. Then these new churches had to have pastors and pastors had to have homes in which to live. So the Board of Home Missions has built churches and parsonages and helped to pay the salaries of ministers.

5. The following is a list of churches which have received help from the Board of Home Missions: Birmingham and Montgomery, Alabama; Macedonia and Magnolia, Arkansas; Kearney, Millville, Moorestown, and Ventnor City, New Jersey; Tarrytown and White Plains, New York; Jacksonville, Florida; Comanche, Eagletown, Enterprise, Hugo, Idabel, Quinton, Tipton, Luna, Haworth, Redlands, and Social Circle, Oklahoma; Lincoln and Mansfield, Arkansas; Canton, Ill.; three churches in Chicago, Ill.; Frankford, Ind.; seven churches in Indianapolis, Ind.; four churches in Kahoka, Mo.; Keokuk, Iowa; three in Kansas City, Kan.; Winnfield, La.; five churches in Baltimore, Md.; Cumberland, Md.; Dover, Del.; Newark, N. J.; three in Philadelphia, Pa.; two in Washington, D. C.; Wilmington, Del.; Bradley, Adrian, Flint, Lansing, and two in Detroit, Mich.; Meridian, Miss.; Asheville, Charlotte, Lexington, two in Greensboro, and two in High Point, N. C.; Coshocton, Middletown, Mt. Vernon, Zanesville, McConnellville, two in Cincinnati, and three in Columbus, Ohio; Arkport, N. Y.; two churches in Pittsburgh, Pa.; Corsicana, Coolidge, Fort Worth and Paris, Texas; three churches in Seattle, Wash.; Buckhannon, Clarksburg, Grafton, Morgantown, Parkersburg, Rowlesburg, Spencer and Weston, West Virginia.

6. Thousands of boys and girls and men and women have had better religious training and better equipped churches because of the work of the Board of Home Missions.

Suggested Activity

Map Work: If you have not drawn a large map of the United States on muslin, do that this week. One and one-half yards of sheetings will be about the right size. Purchase a box of colored seals. Locate on muslin map all Home Mission churches as listed under "5" in "Facts for Centenary Discoverers" with a seal. Where there are more than one Home Mission church in a given city, write the number of churches in the city on the seal. After the seals have been pasted on the map, and the name of the city has been written on the map in ink, draw lines from the seals to a point in the middle of the piece of muslin 12 inches above the lower edge of the muslin. There should be 22 inches between the lower part of your map and the lower edge of the muslin. In this space, around the point where all lines unite, group as many of the pictures of Home Mission churches as can be secured. Nine-quarter sheeting will be sufficient for the map.

Your Photograph Album: Let each Centenary Discoverer paste in his photograph album pictures of as many of the Home Mission churches as can be found.

Birthday Cake Poster: Add facts regarding the work which is being done by the Board of Home Missions to your Birthday Cake Poster.

My Church's Birthday Book: Let each Centenary Discoverer add as many facts to his "My Church's Birthday Book" as he can discover regarding the work which is being done by the Board of Home Missions.

Essay Contest: Have the Centenary Discoverers to each write a 150-word essay on "What kind of churches shall the Board of Home Missions build? How shall they be equipped; and can the money be secured?" Send the best essay to Baltimore in May.

New Work for Centenary Discoverers: Next week, we will study about our work in India. Begin collecting pictures from the Missionary Record of our work in India.

Worship Service

Theme: "Sharing Our Blessings."

Quiet Music: "Holy, Holy, Holy," played softly and quietly.

Call to Worship: Leader—I will extol Thee, my God, O King; and I will bless thy name forever and ever.

Children—Every day will I bless Thee; and I will praise thy name forever and ever.

Praise Hymn: Doxology.

Leader: Today as we study of the people who are without churches we ought to be thankful for our own churches and for those who have worked and sacrificed to build the temples in which we worship each week.

Second Praise Hymn: No. 38, Hymnal for American Youth (last verse).

Leader: For our own church, for our Home Mission churches and for all the churches in our land, we thank Thee and bless Thee.

Third Praise Hymn: Repeat the Doxology.

Memory Pictures: Let us close our eyes for a few minutes and see some memory pictures. (Leader will describe some pictures while eyes are closed.)

First Picture: In one of our great cities there is a community of 3,500 people who would have been without a church if our Board of Home Missions had not helped them to build their church. Now they have a lovely brick building with Sunday school rooms for every age group and a piano in each room. After the Board of Home Missions had given them a start, they were able to do a great many things for themselves.

Second Picture: In a town of about 2,500 people, the Methodist Protestant church was a small red brick building which had been built more than 50 years ago. All the other denominations had well-built and equipped churches. People were going to the better churches and we were losing some of our big family. The Board of Home Missions helped these people to build their church and now they are worshiping in a beautiful temple.

Third Picture: Down in a Southern industrial town, there were people without a church. The Board of Home Missions helped them and now they are growing and increasing in membership.

Leader: How do you think these churches have been built? By all the Methodist Protestants sharing what they have with others. If we have a lovely church, then certainly we should share what we have to help others have a church they can enjoy.

Hymn: "I Would Be True," No. 170, Hymnal for American Youth. (Last verse.)

Prayer—

1. Of thanksgiving for our church.

2. That the Home Mission Board might be able to build a great many churches for a great many people.

3. That I might share what I have that others might enjoy a lovely church.

Prayer Hymn: No. 141, Hymnal for American Youth. (First and fourth verses.)

AN INVITATION

You are cordially invited to attend the sessions of the Methodist Protestant Centennial Convention of leaders and young people in Hampden Methodist Protestant Church, Baltimore, Md., May 10-14, 1928. We would like to have you with hundreds of our other leaders enjoy its challenging program.

JOHN N. LINK, Baltimore, Md.,
Chairman Central Committee.
LAWRENCE LITTLE, Concord, N. C.,
Executive Secretary.

—Brother J. F. Dixon, father of Dr. A. G. Dixon, passed out of life last week at the age of 83 years. He was a man of unusual vigor of mind and body and was active up to almost the end of his life. He lived on a farm near Reidsville. The funeral was largely attended. The interment was a Midway near which church he formerly lived when he was rearing his large family. He served for years as Sunday school superintendent and as a local preacher, if we are not misinformed.

—Methodist Protestant colleges have no smoking among their women students.—Frank W. Stephenson.

—Fertilizing fruit trees in the home orchard is not generally practiced in North Carolina, but better yields of quality fruit would be secured if this plan were followed.

—The North Carolina hen will be honored during the week of May 1 to 7, which has been designated as "National Egg Week."

—Fifteen farmers of the Costner community in Gaston county have decided to grow the same strain of Cleveland cotton this season in an effort to standardize the varieties of cotton grown in the community.

—One of the reasons why cancer is so frequently fatal lies in the fact that those who are attacked are at first inclined to temporize with it.

—The testimony which people offer to prove that cancers have been cured by home remedies and the recipes of old Indians and gypsies is utterly unreliable. Often the condition treated was not cancer at all.

—The family doctor is the key man in the control of cancer. It is to him that a person should go for diagnosis and treatment. If the family physician is not certain of the diagnosis, he should not wait, but refer the patient to some other physician or to a hospital or clinic where special facilities exist for the examinations which are required.

CENTENNIAL SPEAKER

DANIEL A POLING

President of the International Society of Christian Endeavor, Editor of The Christian Herald, and one of the speakers at the Centennial Convention, Baltimore, Md.

Among the speakers who will address the Methodist Protestant Centennial Convention for Leaders and Young People which will be held in Hampden Methodist Protestant Church, Baltimore, Maryland, May 10-15, 1928, will be Daniel A. Poling, president of the International Society of Christian Endeavor, president of the Greater New York Federation of Churches, and editor of the Christian Herald.

Dr. Poling is recognized as one of the outstanding leaders of young people of this continent and always has a message of vital interest to age as well as youth. His message on "Crusade with Christ" was one of the most important messages delivered at the International Christian Endeavor Convention in Cleveland last July. This crusade has been officially adopted by the leaders of most of the youth organiations of this country and, beginning with Easter Sunday, all Christian Endeavor societies and other similar agencies of most of the evangelical denominations of North America will begin a concerted effort for evangelism, Christian citizenship, and world peace. Features of this crusade will be presented in Dr. Poling's address at our Young People's Convention.

The session of the convention which will be addressed by this great leader will be held in the auditorium of the Lyric Theater on Friday night, May 11th. The Christian Endeavorers of the other denominations in Baltimore will be invited to attend this meeting.

Among the other leaders of the Christian Endeavor movement who will take part on the convention program will be Edward P. Gates, general secretary of the International Society, and Carroll M. Wright, director of the Department of Recreation and Travel.

A SURPRISE BIRTHDAY DINNER

Friends and relatives gathered at the home of Mr. A. G. Laughlin March 11th to give him a surprise birthday dinner in honor of his 78th birthday. Knowing that Mr. Laughlin would be at church, the folks began to come in early with boxes and baskets filled with good things to eat, and presents for the host. His pastor, Fred R. Love, and his wife came home with him and he was expecting no one else. Imagine his surprise when he began to realize what had happened. His heart was filled with joy and gladness. As he expressed himself, he felt like he wanted to sit down and cry. We feel these occasions are invaluable as they not only bring joy to the person so honored, but new acquaintances are made an old ones renewed, and a general feeling of good fellowship and brotherly love prevails.

The host's brother, Rev. G. A. Laughlin, was master of ceremonies and pronounced the benediction.

After the dinner was served the people gathered around wherever they could find standing room and spent a very pleasant social hour. We are sure that all who were present will join in wishing Mr. Laughlin many happy returns of the day.

C. F. LAUGHLIN.

—Rev. W. M. Pike preached in Winston last Sunday.

—Grace church had its annual congregational dinner last night.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Asheville. Sunday was a joyous day with us. Brother Casto, in his gracious manner, presented the Gratitude Gift cause. The offering amounted to $103.80, cash and pledges. After the evening service was over, a young man requested to be received into the church. He will be formally elected to full membership next Sunday. Brother Van Meter had given us a wonderful message on the power of the Holy Spirit.

Mrs. Frears, who recently returned from Kentucky, is seriously ill in the home of her daughter at 29 Vermont Ave., West Asheville.

Mrs. James Moore continues ill.

The Ladies' Aid Society on Friday afternoon of last week was well attended. Mrs. F. R. McIntyre, the hostess, was showered with loving tokens in memory of her birthday. She was completely surprised. There were several visitors.

We are praying for a large ingathering in all our churches at Easter-time, and at all other churches as well. We are expecting to win many in Asheville. A small group is being faithfully taught to do personal work. The prayer meeting last Wednesday night was opened by Brother Younginer with a Bible reading on witnessing for Christ.

REPORTER.

Anderson Charge.—I filled my appointment at Liberty Hill March 25 at 11 a. m. It was raining and the roads were bad, but this did not stop the people from coming to church. We found a good congregation as usual. I do not think we should let rainy weather keep us from going to church, as we do not let it interfere with our every-day work. Why should we let it interfere with us in the Master's work? When the people get the love of Christ supremely in their hearts it will be a joy to them to serve Him and not a drudgery

At the evening hour we had an old-time singing which was enjoyed by all. The church was well filled. After a good program we were dismissed by Brother Lee Poole with prayer. We have a good Sunday school at this church and also at Fairview.

There will be an old-time singing at Fairview the first Sunday in April at 2:30 p. m. Come and join us.

Christian brothers and sisters, pray for us that we may progress in the work of our Lord. We are very thankful for the many good things that have been given us by the members of both churches.

Many good wishes to the Herald and its readers. G. B. FERREE, Pastor.

Philadelphia, Greensville Circuit. — We haven't sent in a report in some time, but we're still on the job. At present we're working on the M. P. C. G. G., and hope we will be able to secure pledges from every member of our church. Five of the girls and the pastor will give the pageant, "Faith of Our Fathers," at our church on fifth Sunday in April. It seems that every member of the Methodist Protestant church should feel glad to take a part in this gratitude gift—for if anything deserves a big birthday gift it is certainly the Methodist Protestant Church which has lived one hundred years. Don't neglect the Centennial Gratitude Gift! Let us remember that "It's more blessed to give than receive."

The second quarterly conference will be held at Matthews Chapel Saturday, April 30th. We're looking forward for the president's visit with us that day and also the following Sunday.

Our Sunday school has been handicapped recently on account of an epidemic of measles. However, spring-time is here, and we're expecting the usual attendance at all services soon.

Best wishes to the Herald.

BERNICE PEARSON, Reporter.

Concord.—The services Sunday were all well attended, though the weather was very unfavorable. There were 242 present in Sunday school. The pastor preached a very impressive sermon at the morning hour on "Living Love." At the evening hour the service was in charge of the Woman's Missionary Society. A splendid missionary program was given by the women, with the chief address by Miss Bettie Brittingham. Our missionary societies have raised $200 during the year which will be sent to the Branch treasurer at once.

Our people enjoyed a visit from Miss Annie Forrest on the third Sunday.

The children are practicing for the Easter exercises. The program is in charge of Mrs. Robert Cline and Mrs. Hendry.

Committees from our church and other churches of the city are busy now with plans for the State Sunday School convention, also the Gypsy Smith evangelistic meeting, which will be held in the city in April.

We were fortunate in having Rev. A. R. Corn, of Adrian, Mich., visit our church on Monday, March 19. Mr. Corn showed moving pictures of our schools, colleges, and some of our workers, also some views from the Holy Land.

Mrs. Grover Honeycutt, of Albemarle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Sides, underwent a very serious operation at the Albemarle hospital last week.

MRS. D. A. McLAURIN.

Brower's Chapel, Richland Circuit.—Our Sunday school is moving on very nicely. We are planning for an Easter exercise.

Sunday was Pastor Love's regular appointment. He brought with him President Taylor, who delivered a wonderful sermon. Every one present enjoyed it very much. Owing to sickness in the community, and the unfavorable weather, there were not as many out to hear him as otherwise would have been. We are hoping with the coming of spring that our church will take on new life, and that our number at Sunday school and preaching will be greatly increased.

MRS. M. C. HENLEY.

Pleasant Union Church, Mt. Pleasant Circuit.—Our Sunday school is moving along nicely and making steady progress. We have had Sunday school all winter with good attendance considering the bad weather and sickness. Sometime ago the Baraca and Philathea classes were delightfully entertained by Miss Dorothy Causey. On last Tuesday evening, March 20th, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Causey entertained the Senior Bible Class at their home. One of the most interesting features of the evening was a Bible baseball game, which was enjoyed by all present. Delicious refreshments were served.

Recently our church has been repainted, both inside and outside, and the class rooms re-curtained. We are glad the annual township Sunday school convention is to be held at Pleasant Union the fifth Sunday in April. Everybody is cordially invited to come.

A few weeks ago Brother Millaway had the misfortune to fall and break his arm. We were very sorry for him to meet with such an accident and to be disabled from his work, but his pulpit was filled by Brother Pike. At 11 a. m. Sunday morning Brother Millaway preached a very able sermon on "The Sin Against the Holy Ghost."

When the call for the Centennial Gratitude Gift was made, Pleasant Union gladly and readily sailed over the top with her amount. We are glad we are living at this time when the Methodist Protestant Church is celebrating its hundredth anniversary, and that we have a part in this work.

Pleasant Union recently lost one of her oldest and most faithful members, H. H. Layton. MRS. J. T. BOWMAN.

Vaughn, Littleton Circuit.—We had a very good crowd for a rainy Sunday. Pastor Crutchfield brought us a very helpful sermon Sunday morning, using as his subject, "Heaven." Sunday evening he used as his subject, "Faith."

We are going to have mid-week prayer service beginning on Wednesday night.

The second quarterly conference will be held at Littleton on Wednesday, April 18. All official members are especially requested to be present. REPORTER.

Union Chapel, Granville Charge.—We were fortunate in having Miss Annie Forrest with us the first Sunday afternoon. She told us of the needs in the foreign lands, and especially of the need of a building in India. An offering was taken at the close of the service which amounted to $27.35, and this money will be used in erecting this building.

The Home and Foreign Missionary Societies met with Mrs. R. M. Edwards Tuesday night, March 20. Miss Nellie Hedgepeth, chairman of Circle No. 4, had charge of the program. Miss Emily Floyd conducted the devotional service. Mrs. L. E. Barnes gave a chapter in the Missionary Study Book, and Mrs. Cappie Edwards read an article on missions. We also used the question box. The treasurer's reports were good. The Foreign budget had been paid in full and the Home society was only a few dollars behind, and this has been paid since that date; and reports have been sent in to the corresponding secretaries. The delegates to Branch Meeting are: Misses Clellie Hedgepeth, Emily Floyd and Leah Davis.

The Mission Band, which has been recently organized, met with Arabel Briggs Friday night with 22 members and a number of visitors present. About ten of the children took part in the service other than singing. Mary Eliza Floyd presided. Lewis E. Barnes led in prayer and the others read poems and told stories along the line of missions. After the business meeting the hostess served fruit and candy and the children played a number of games.

Rev. H. F. Fogleman filled his regular appointment Sunday morning and we had a large number present in spite of the unfavorable weather. Our offering for the Children's Home was $11.

The attendance at Sunday school has not been as good as it should have been; but we think since the weather has opened up the attendance will increase. Instead of having the superintendent take charge of the service each Sunday we are going to have some member of the Sunday school take charge or act as superintendent each Sunday and they will make any changes or put on any program that they see fit to give.

Miss Pattie Coghill, a member of the Christian church, entertained our C. E. Society at a social Thursday evening, March 15. There were 35 or 40 young people present to enjoy the many games that Miss Coghill had ready, and everybody thoroughly enjoyed the evening. REPORTER.

Mt. Pleasant, N. Davidson Charge.—Hurrah for Mt. Pleasant! C. S. Welborn, Roy Hilton, Mr. Kennedy, Vista Troxler and the writer gave the pageant, "Church of Our Fathers." Then we began to take pledges, and it was only a few minutes until they went over the top, even though it was raining, as usual. We wished for fair Sundays, but we have nothing to do with that part of it. It has really been a pleasure to work for the C. G. G. I don't know whether the Lord smiles upon all our church work, or not, but I do believe that He has been working in the hearts of the members of the church; for it has been pleasant all the way through. I have enjoyed it. So you may count on Davidson charge paying her full quota, and more.

Our committee, C. F. Green, C. S. Welborn, L. H. Hilton and Mrs. Perryman, of Mt. Pleasant, have done good work. We are expecting them to keep the good work going.

Yours for the C. G. G.,
R. S. TROXLER, Pastor.

State Street, Lexington.—Our pastor was with us again Sunday after having spent about ten days in Lincolnton conducting a revival meeting. Preaching and Sunday school were both well attended considering the rainy weather.

Immediately after the preaching service Sunday morning a delegation was sent out from each denomination in town to get the religious census of the town. Every house was visited and their church or church preference taken. The ministers of the town are expecting this movement to be of much benefit in their work, as it will give them a perspective they could get in no other way.

The pageant given in our church a few Sunday nights ago was given at Yadkin College Sunday afternoon by Mr. Bethea and the ladies who gave it for us.

Last Wednesday night the C. E. Society gave a social which was greatly enjoyed by all present. The regular service was held before the social and the very interesting subject, "The Value of Church Membership," was ably discussed by members of the society. Miss Cleo Spainhour was the leader both of the topic and of the merriment that followed.

Our Gratitude Gift fund has been oversubscribed and there are some who are going to give that have not made their pledges yet.

REPORTER.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—Last Sunday morning Brother Spencer gave us an inspiring message on "Religion in the Home and Community." Wish more of our people could have heard this message.

The Gratitude Gift was presented by the pastor, and several pledges were made. We hope to reach our quota soon.

The Halifax County Sunday School Convention will meet at our church on May 12 and 13 instead of April 28 and 29, as reported last week.

The second quarterly conference will convene at Eden church on Friday afternoon, April 13, at 2 p. m. We want all the churches on the charge to be represented, as this will be the time for nominations for delegates to Annual Conference.

KATHLEEN SHEARIN, Reporter.

Pleasant Hill, West Forsyth Charge.—The attendance at Sunday school has been very good during this month considering the weather and roads. Several visitors were present Sunday. We were very glad to have them with us.

Dr. Brown was with us the third Sunday in the interest of the M. P. C. G. G.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies met with Mr. and Mrs. Whitaker March 6. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. U. W. Long, April 3.

Miss Annie L. Forrest was with us last Sunday night and gave an interesting talk on Foreign Missions.

The Sunday school is planning to give an Easter service Easter Sunday night.

The Christian Endeavor Society is progressing nicely. The monthly business meeting was held last Tuesday night at the home of Miss Lucille Sprinkle.

MRS. ARZIA DAVIS, Reporter.

English Street.—Mr. C. B. Rollins came on March 4 and began teaching singing at our church, and those interested have had a splendid opportunity to learn about singing, for Mr. Rollins is a patient teacher, and knows his business. He will continue each night next week and then on Sunday afternoon will have different classes to sing.

Our Year Book and Directory has been completed and many copies have been handed out, with some left yet. It is very interesting. On page 3 is the picture of our pastor, Rev. D. I. Garner.

The Senior Christian Endeavor is doing very well and is looking forward to the regular monthly business and social meeting which is enjoyed so much.

The Junior Endeavorers' Superintendent, Mrs. J. A. Bowers, has been sick for several weeks and the Juniors seem to be lost without their beloved leader. We hope for her a speedy recovery.

Our pastor always preaches excellent sermons and those who hear him regularly are receiving spiritual instructions that cannot be destroyed. Last Sunday night he forcefully preached from Rev. 3:16, and those who listened to this message with "spiritual ears" could not help but feel it a terrible tragedy to be a cold Christian, and resolve in their hearts that they would not be a lukewarm Christian. We trust there was not a person who heard who remained entirely unimpressed by the warning from the Lord through the mouth of His servant.

Our revival meeting starts April 15 and we are asking all readers of the Herald to pray for a great awakening in all classes of people. MRS. J. A. LEE, Reporter.

Guilford Circuit.—We are not doing all we ought, but are doing some work. We have collected all our college assessment and have gotten most of our Gratitude Gift quota subscribed. We expect to get it all.. We have gotten a start on our Annual Conference budget.

We expect to hold Easter services at several churches. Sunday schools have been good considering the weather.

After preaching at Mitchell's Grove last Sunday night I went out to my car to start home, and found it filled with good things. This was an old-fashioned pounding. I shall not mention articles nor givers, but there were many. The good Lord knows who they are and I pray His blessings on every one of them. Others have given us nice gifts, for which we are also grateful.

I believe the spiritual condition of the work is good. W. F. ASHBURN.

Kernersville Circuit.—We have had Sunday school nearly every Sunday during the winter and have had good attendance most of the time. Our second quarterly conference was held at Sandy Ridge on March 24 with every church represented. The business was transacted and nominees for delegate to Annual Conference were named, they being Mr. Ad Linville, of Kernersville, and Mr. Rufus Anderson, of Sandy Ridge church.

Our parsonage is soon to be done and the quarterly conference voted to partially furnish it. We are all very proud that we are going to soon have a good home for our preacher.

The ladies of our church are to meet Tuesday afternoon to organize a Ladies' Aid Society. Our hearts go out in sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Will Burgess, whose little baby was taken to be with Jesus just recently. May the great Comforter bind up their hearts and help them to live the kind of life that will enable them to meet baby, and all the dear ones gone before.

With best wishes to all.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S NIGHT AT BRANCH MEETING

The Branch Meeting will be held at Grace Church, Greensboro, April 17-19. Tuesday night will be young people's night. The Branch has turned the evening over to the young people. We are very anxious that every Young People's Auxiliary send delegates and also the churches that do not have young people's societies. This is a great opportunity for young people, so let's do our best. Report blanks have been sent out; if there is a society that does not get one, please send me your report at once.

MRS. T. L. SPEAS.
Sec. Y. P. W., H. M. S.

FLAT ROCK W. H. M. S.

The society met in the home of Mrs. T. P. Hester March 20. The society was called to order by the president, Miss Mary V. White. Devotions were conducted by Mrs. T. P. Hester, after which the secretary called the roll and read the minutes of the past year, beginning with the April, 1927, meeting.

Then came the reports. The treasurer, Mrs. A. J. Parrott, reported $65.25 collected for the year. Disbursements totaled $61.75, leaving $3.50 in the treasury for the new year.

With Mrs. B. W. Jones in the chair, the nominating committee's report was read by Mrs. O. J. Parrott an dadopted, as follows:

President, Miss Mary V. White; vice-president, Mrs. W. B. Reavis; secretary, Mrs. T. P. Hester; treasurer, Mrs. O. J. Parrott; Record agent, Mrs. F. B. Wade; secretary Buds of Hope, Mrs. A. E. White; secretary young people's work, Mrs. F. M. White. Delegates to Branch Meeting, Mrs. W. B. Reavis, Mrs. F. M. White, Miss Mary V. White.

Plans were then made for the coming year, including programs, place of meetings, and a ways and means committee, with appointments to be made at the next meeting.

The society then decided to have an All-Fools' party at the home of Mr. A. E. White Saturday night, March 31.

The program was then taken up. Mrs. W. B. Reavis gave a reading on Ohio Missions. Mrs. A. E. White then read "How to—Not How Not to." The society then adjourned, after which the hostess served gelatine with whipped cream and cake.

We were glad to have with us a visitor, Mrs. Lillie Davis.

MRS. T. P. HESTER, Cor. Sec.

TO W. F. M. S. AUXILIARY PRESIDENTS

The by-laws of the Executive Board of the W. F. M. S. say that "Upon the death of a life member, the name shall be taken from the list."

I am writing this to ask each of you to look over the list of life members on page 68 of the July Missionary Record and if you find there names of people who have died, to notify me to that effect at the close of the missionary year. I am sorry the corrections cannot wait until Branch Meeting, but as the Executive Secretary must have them before that time, you will confer a favor on me by giving this matter your immediate attention.

If you find names of people who have married and will send me the maiden and married names I will be glad to have these corrections made.

It would be a splendid tribute if each auxiliary would secure Memorial Memberships for all its members who pass on to the Great Beyond. MRS. SAMUEL R. HARRIS.

Henderson, N. C., March 21, 1928.

ANNUAL MEETING OF COMMUNITY CHURCH WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

The Woman's Auxiliary of Community Church, Thomasville, held its annual meeting in the church parlors Thursday evening, March 22nd, with a very good attendance. At 7 o'clock we enjoyed an indoor picnic supper to which the husbands and the young people of the church had been invited. Immediately following the supper the annual business session was conducted, the devotionals having been conducted before the picnic supper. Reports covering the year's work were read by all officers and chairmen of both standing and special committees.

The treasurer's report revealed that we had paid $125 for foreign missions, $72 for home missions, and $285 for local church expense and had remaining in the terasury $205.35, $100 of which has been placed in a carpet fund. The amount raised by the Woman's Auxiliary during the year was $617.48. This is more than twice the amount which was raised last year by both the Ladies' Aid Society and the W. F. M. S.

The report of the membership committee revealed that 12 new members had been added and none had been dropped during the year.

The Record agent reported 16 subscribers to the Missionary Record as compared with eight the preceding year. All but three members have access to the Missionary Record.

The parsonage committee reported that new breakfast room furniture, dining room furniture and living room rug had been added to the parsonage during the year.

The kitchen committee reported that careful supervision had been given the kitchen and a careful check-up had been made upon all dishes and silverware.

Secretaries of literature and thank-offering made very interesting reports.

The three circles reported a grand total of 13,000 points covering their activity for the year.

The president reported that the leadership efficiency of the women had increased 200 per cent during the year and pointed the organization to bigger things for another year. Twelve auxiliary meetings, two public services, and 35 circle meetings were held during the year, at which time missionary education was given which included a very definite study of our own home and foreign work.

We sincerely commend our unified program for women and feel that we are able to do larger kingdom service through the unified organization. MRS. H. W. MAIER, President.

FOR AUXILIARY STEWARDSHIP SECRETARIES

The secretaries of stewardship in all the auxiliaries should make their reports to me. Have as many cards filled out at once as you can and return to me. More cards can be had by writing for them. I shall soon make my report both for the Home and Foreign Missionary societies.

Let's try and have good reports from the North Carolina Branch to our general secretaries, Mrs. Stephenson and Mrs. Stroupe. What my report shall be will depend on the work done in the auxiliaries by the secretaries of stewardship. So, secretaries of stewardship, get busy now. Stewardship is one of the most important departments of our work, stewardship for all of life.

DR. J. H. GLASCOCK,
Sec. for Home and Foreign Missionary Societies.

TO SECRETARIES OF LIFE, MEMORIAL AND PERPETUAL MEMBERS, W. H. M. S.

Please send me a revised list of Life, Memorial and Perpetual Members along with any new members you may have recently enrolled. Unless you do this I cannot report to the secretary of the Board as I have been asked to do.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

A TRIBUTE OF LOVE

It is with sorrow that we, the members of the W. F. M. S. of Bethel M. P. church, wish to offer our tribute of love and respect to our dear sister, Mrs. Joseph Stockard, who passed to her heavenly home February 6, 1928, at the age of 82 years and eight months. She was converted in her girlhood and united with Bethel M. P. church. Just 22 years ago, when our W. F. M. S. was organized, she became one of our charter members and remained faithful till God called her home. She was a noble Christian woman and we loved her. No one can take her place in our society and in our hearts. We shall indeed miss her loving presence and pleasant smile. She was ever faithful in the Master's service and gave of her means wherewith God had blessed her to carry His message to those who know it not. She has gone to be with Jesus; therefore, be it

Resolved, that, whereas God in His infinite wisdom has called her from labor to reward, we bow in humble submission to His will, knowing that He doeth all things well;

Resolved, that we extend our sincere sympathy to the bereaved family, and commend them to our Father, who is the Comforter of all who sorrow;

Resolved, that we try to emulate her splendid Christian example and become more active Christian workers because she has lived and labored with us;

Resolved, that as we think of her as the 12th member who has passed from our auxiliary to a larger, fairer field of labor, also of the others who preceded her, that while we weep for we loved them all; we also rejoice to think how our society is growing in heaven. While their influence lives among us, they have entered more fully into the Master's service, and are awaiting our coming. Some sweet day we'll meet again.

MRS. J. M. FOUST,
MISS MARCIA FOUST,
MRS. R. W. LINDLEY.

Phillips

Mrs. Delnora Phillips, daughter of Andrew and Elizabeth Roberts, born near Weaverville, N. C., March 19, 1877, died at her home in Winston-Salem, February 24, 1928. She is survived by her father, two sons, Ralph and Carl, both of Winston-Salem; three sisters, Itaska Kirk and Miss Hattie Roberts, both of Weaverville, and Mrs. Sue Carter, of Asheville. One brother, Ellis O. Roberts, lives in California.

She professed faith in Christ at an early life and joined Mount Zion M. P. church, of which she was a consistent member till the day of her death. Mrs. Phillips lived a beautiful Christian life. She had been in declining health for several years, yet she bore her pain patiently, and although she loved life, she expressed a willingness to go. I think I have never known a person more cheerful and more resigned than she. She lived a beautiful home life, content to find her pleasure in the family circle, where she was loved and honored. The funeral services were held at Clark's Chapel, where interment was made, conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. H. B. Dendy, pastor of the Presbyterian church. J. D. CRANFORD.

Braswell

Mary Elizabeth Braswell (Cousin Mollie) died February 25, 1928, aged 76 years, 11 months and 21 days. She was the daughter of Archelous and Margaret Cutchin Braswell. Her days in this world no doubt were lessened by an injury which she had sustained some few months before her death. She was a good woman in the truest sense of the word. She was of such a nature that on short acquaintance one would not be apt to recognize her depth of character from which her goodness flowed and blessed all those with whom she came in contact. She truly lived her life for others, thus reminding us anew of the nobles purpose of a life in the words of our Master, who said: "The son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many."

She leaves behind her in this world saddened by her passing, Dr. J. C. Braswell, Mr. W. T. Braswell, and Mrs. H. A. Hyman, of Whitakers; and Mrs. Andrew Joyner, of Raleigh.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer, who was one time her pastor, and her body laid to rest in the cemetery of the Speight's Chapel Methodist Protestant Church.

"I know well
That they who love their friends most tenderly
Still bear their loss the best. There is in love
A consecrated power that seems to wake
Only at the touch of death from its repose
In the profoundest depth of thinking souls.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Rice

At 11 o'clock Tuesday evening, February 21, 1928, the spirit of our beloved Bro. John Henry Rice passed through the vale and shadow of death to dwell in that home for which he had been making preparation for a good many years.

Brother Rice was 79 years of age when God called him home. He was a good man and a member of Clark's Chapel M. P. church. He professed faith in Christ early in life, and had given the greater part of his life to the service of God. Brother Rice leaves behind him a host of relatives and friends. The funeral was held at Clark's Chapel by the writer.

Brother Rice was a great sufferer for several years, but he bore it all with that Christian fortitude that characterized his life as a Christian citizen. When the call came he was ready and we believe his spirit is resting with his Saviour where there is no suffering.

May the Lord abundantly bless and comfort those who are bereaved in the passing of this servant of God.

J. D. CRANFORD.

One new charge is added this week—Anderson, with Brother G. B. Ferree, pastor. We are glad to list this charge, and greatly appreciate the amount of the payment. Our standing now is 68 charges with credits, and 23 blank. With nearly one-half of the year gone, surely no charge will be content to remain longer in the blank column. Can you, brethren? Up to this time we are considerably short of last year on both budgets, though a little ahead in receipts for college. If charges that are behind with their payments will come up promptly, we will tell another story about this shortage. We are sure, brethren, that you are going to respond to this need of the church, but winter weather and bad roads have no doubt hindered you. But spring is here now, and weather conditions will be better. We believe that our reports will be better, too.

A complete statement of all payments to date will be given next week.

With full appreciation of the various problems that must be dealt with, and an abiding concern for the largest success of every charge, I am,

Fraternally,

S. W. TAYLOR.

Taking the Devil as a Joke

The time was when men generally believed firmly in the existence of Satan and in his baleful power. This was true in Judea in the days of Jesus. It was also true in other countries of that time. Men believed in and feared the Devil. Demons were thought of as invisible beings that had power over the minds and bodies of men. Diseases and mental disorders were attributed to the possession of devils or demons.

Since that time the thought of the world has greatly changed regarding this matter. Men became skeptical regarding the existence of Satan, much more regarding his power to do harm to men. What had to former generations been a dreadful reality became a doubtful hypothesis. More time passed and Satan's existence became a ludicrous fancy. Men began to laugh about it and make jokes about it.

The question arises whether human thought in this matter has pursued a logical or illogical course. Have we grown wiser or less wise? Should Satan have been allowed to become less real? Should he not rather have been made more real to us?

The fashions of human thought, like the fashions of human dress, change without reason and sometimes against reason. The fact that men do not today believe in the existence of a personal devil, the fact that they make a jest of the matter, is really no evidence that Satan does not live and do his destructive work among us. It is simply evidence that men have closed their eyes to danger. Men have opened their eyes to other dangers. The danger of disease germs, for instance. What fear possesses us regarding the enemies that attack us within our own bodies from the food we eat or the water we drink. We never saw these enemies. We probably never will see them. Yet we fear them and take precaution against them. Still there are some men that are skeptical about them, that laugh at them, that defy them—until they find hemselves on their backs with typhoid fever or smallpox.

Does human life today afford no evidence of the presence and power of invisible spirits of evil? What community does not have some souls infatuated with some sort of evil life? What of the man whose days are given to planning and his nights to executing criminal actions? Where is the man who can positively assert that he has never been approached with an evil suggestion of the Devil? The fact that Satan works now in the dark rather than openly is no conclusive evidence that he does not work at all. It may be wiser from his point of view to keep himself concealed. It would defeat his purpose with men if he should appear in his true person. His reputation is bad, and men have suspicion of his honesty. They are aware of his wiles. His character is known to be bad even by those that doubt his existence. No one now wishes to be consciously led by the Devil.

If Satan was a reality in the days of Jesus and Paul, there is nothing whatever to lead us to believe that he is not a

We had just taken our seat in front of the typewriter and turned on the current for the electric motor when the door bell rang. We keep no liveried or unliveried servant to stand between us and the public. We had to go to the door or pretend that we were not at home, which we never do. We found a genial countryman who asked whether we needed any sweet potatoes, turnip salad, buttermilk, sauerkraut, or home-made cheese. We gently informed him that we felt no need of any of those articles, and he passed on. We had not much more than taken our seat by the typewriter when the bell rang again. This time it was the grocer's boy. He asked what we needed in the grocery line and we tried to assure him that we needed nothing at all. But in his kindness of heart he was afraid we might overlook some need of ours, and he began to go over the list. "Got plenty of butter, breakfast bacon, eggs, salt and matches?" "Yes." "Need any canned tomatoes, pineapple, or asparagus?" "No." "How about bananas, corn syrup, canned beans, macaroni, and chipped beef?" "Fully supplied." "Couldn't we sell you some potted ham, Bre'r Rabbit molasses, or corn syrup?" "Not today." "We have just received a crate of new strawberries. May I send you some of those?" "No, we cannot afford early strawberries." "May we send you a crate of oranges or grape fruit?" "No." "Do you need—" "I think I left the motor running. Excuse me, if I find that I need anything I will telephone you."

We had left the motor running, but the typewriter had not recorded a word. Then there came a rap at the back door. A colored man was there who wished to know whether we had any work for him to do. Again seated at the typewriter, the front door bell rang again. We found there a little girl who wanted to sell us two all-day suckers for a nickel. We tried to dispose of her by telling her that we did not have time to suck them, but she said, "Please, please, Mr. McCulloch, our Sunday school teacher told us to sell them and bring the money to her and she would send it to the missionaries." We gave her a nickel and asked her to keep the all-day suckers and sell them to somebody else.

The next caller at the front door was a well-dressed lady. We asked, "Will you come in?" She said, "I left my baby in his carriage on the sidewalk and cannot come in. I am selling face powders and paints. Do you want to buy some?" We told her that we had never in the whole course of life used such things. She started to argue the question and prove to me how much my appearance would be improved, but at that juncture that blessed baby out in the carriage lifted up his wailing voice and I was delivered.

Then there was a knock at the back door and I found a neighbor boy who wanted to borrow some garden tools. "Yes, help yourself."

An insurance agent was our next front door caller. We soon disposed of him, sooner than most people can, and that

JESUS AND THE HUNGER FOR THE BEAUTIFUL

The intense humanity of Jesus shows itself on many occasions and in none more strongly than this. The trees, flowers and birds were beautiful to Him. In fact it was His Father's world He lived in and all that He had made was not only perfect but beautiful. Not even Solomon in all his glory was arrayed like one of the lilies, which, perchance, was growing wild upon the side of the hill where He was sitting. His deep sympathy is for all in their craving for the beautiful. In His Kingdom, there is small place for the pessimist or faultfinder. In fact there is no place to be found for such. Such cannot enter. The earth is as much like Heaven as we choose to make it. Every bush will still flame with the presence of God if we look long enough to see it. No artist can place the fragrance in the rose, no matter how perfect the likeness; yet, it only needed the touch of God, and there it is. What is still more wonderful is that both flower and fragrance came from a thorny stem. And the beauty of the lily was born out of the fetid marsh. The world is beautiful because God is in it. Every footprint of Jesus was beautiful because made by a beautiful life. There is an inborn longing in us all for the pretty things in the world. It is not sinful. It is right. God is the Author of Beauty. He lives in it. He is anxious that His children share with Him the beauty of the world He has made. If we do not find or enjoy it here, I seriously question if we shall ever get close enough to catch a glimpse of the place where He dwells, whose gates are of precious stones and where angels delight to praise Him.

Beauty is not fashion, neither are all fashions beautiful. A sad sight to see one made in the image of God whose mind and heart is set upon the mad, silly fashions of the day. The merchants of the country grow rich on the silly changes in dress which we call the fashions. It is true with both sexes but more pronounced in women's apparel. Some of the dresses that are worn seem to be as near nothing as possible. It seems certain that the prime object of the designer is to show as much of the figure of the wearer as possible. I often think that our mothers are often to blame for this condition of affairs. I am sure that if our young ladies could hear what the men say about them for wearing such ridiculous things on the street, it would bring a blush to their cheek. I once heard George Stewart say in commenting on the subject of dress, "I do not care what you wear, but for God's sake wear something." To many who may still be inclined to be "old-fashioned" these sights are not beautiful, even if they are fashionable.

Not only in dress do we seem to have lost a great deal of beauty, but what is still worse, our manners have suffered. We have lost the courtly grace and dainty ways of our forebears. We hear a young woman, for instance, speak of her mother as "the old woman" and young man sneeringly call his father "the old man." There are many things that could be said but had better be left to the mind of the reader. It is very painful to speak of such things. The first commandment with promise is that which calls upon young people to "honor" their parents. In many cases our young folks do not seem to care very much about them so long as their own silly whims are gratified.

Here Jesus lays down some great principles concerning the beautiful. First, we are to look for it. While all the world may be aflame with God, only those who look for it ever see. "The rest sit around and pluck blackberries." Jesus saw in the common field lily of His day a glory greater than that of Solomon, because it was the direct work of His Father. Only God can make a blade of grass. How strange are the imitations, and how feeble are our efforts compared to what God does. We are to look for the beautiful in nature. It is here. The waking up of the trees in the spring time may stand as an illustration. There is plenty of God outside of the Bible, so that there is no excuse for any one not knowing and serving Him. If there were only the written Word, it might be different; but as it is, all men everywhere can find Him if they want to. He is not outside of His world; He is the very heart and center of it. He still sustains and keeps it.

Especially are we to look for beauty in people. To Jesus they were the most beautiful of His Father's work. Jesus saw in every one, no matter how low they had fallen, the likeness of His Father, and He knew what they might become, how people who were steeped in sin could be made to be beautiful and to reflect the glory of His Father, and Jesus loved them. Above all else, this will take the spirit of faultfinding and harsh judgment. Some folks take a keen delight in seeing the faults of others and holding them up for others to see besides themselves, and gradually grow to be like, or even worse, than those whom they criticise.

I do sincerely wish that all of us could have the same habit of Jesus, that of looking for the beautiful in the people we know and meet. How our lives would grow more beautiful and reflect the sweet image of Jesus who saw in every one the image of His Father. Let us cultivate the habit of looking for it. I assure you that our lives will be happier as well as more beautiful. I have known some people in whose presence I delighted to stay, not because they were beautiful to look upon, I mean of form, but whose spirit was so sweet that it made them lovely. I have in mind now as I write one whose face is wrinkled and worn with care and toil of many a year, yet I think she is beautiful. She is nearer heaven than she is to earth and has been so for many years. The secret is that she has looked for the beautiful all her life and now she sees it all around her, in everything and everybody. This, I think, is one of the great lessons that Jesus wanted us to learn in the consideration of the lily. The lily was beautiful. It was meant to be so. So ought we to be. So can we be if we try. Our very presence will reflect the beauty that we see in those we meet. And what is the more remarkable, unconsciously to ourselves makes others more like us. I cannot believe that all the saints are in heaven. I like to think that there are plenty of them here on earth, just to give us a taste of what Heaven is really like and make us want to go there. These people are the "salt" of the earth. They preserve it and keep it from going to decay. The carping critical spirit is of the devil, not that of Jesus. He wanted men to be like He was, beautiful in life, words and character. It is not impossible for us to reach this; indeed it is already within our reach. We can be beautiful if we will. The material is in our own hands. Let us use it.

On the other hand, why do we have our window gardens, our public parks with blooming flowers, our playgrounds for the children, if not to satisfy this craving for the beautiful. No one can be wholly evil who loves flowers, nor is ever likely to become a criminal. The sight of the beautiful has a refining influence, silent, but none the less real, upon the lives of men and women. Painters and sculptors have both tried to bring it closer to us. Some of us have seen and thanked God and taken courage afresh for life's battles. To cultivate the habit of looking for the beautiful will bring out the best there is in us and make us more like the Great Teacher who lifted up to our gaze a flower of the field and said, "Consider the lilies." And now in closing, may I remind you that the beautiful comes to perfection in Jesus. He is called "The Lily of the Valley" and "The Rose of Sharon." He is "a diadem of beauty" and "altogether lovely." Our greatest joy is found in Him, and the closer we are to Him the more beautiful we become. Will you not come to Him now? Permit Him to make you what you want to be, and really pray for. Do you really want to be beautiful? Well, now you know how. May God help you to reach your ideal. Amen.

C. M. Compher.

OUR GRATITUDE GIFT

In thinking of the things that we should be especially thankful for in this centennial year, it seems to me that the ideals of our grandparents who founded the Methodist Protestant Church are worthy of our deepest gratitude. Their ideal church was the church that might do the greatest service, and the church that might offer the greatest opportunity for work and development to its members. One has only to look back over its one hundred years of existence to see, through the things it has accomplished and the men and women who have grown up in its arms, that the church has fully lived up to these ideals of its founders. It is impossible to repay the church with dollars and cents for this heritage; but we of today can, in a small part, show our gratitude and love through our gifts.

Personally, the little mite that I am able to give to my church as a birthday offering cannot in the smallest way express my appreciation of what the church has meant and has done for me. For the hundred years of its life my family has been in the Methodist Protestant Church; doing its little bit and receiving its immeasurable reward from the church. For my ancestor who was among those noble men in the establishment of the church, for the influence of a Christian Methodist Protestant home, for the inestimable privilege of doing my own little service, for the value of the church to my children in their young lives, for these and countless other blessings I am individually grateful at this centennial time.

We are blessed only as we give of ourselves and our means; and the greater the sacrifice in giving, so much greater is the blessing we receive. Not for the blessing, but for the sheer joy of giving may we all give to the limit in the celebration of the one-hundredth birthday of our mother church.

without making him our lifetime enemy. Then we hoped to be left to manipulate the typewriter for a little while, but it was not to be. The front door bell rang violently and repeatedly. We hastened to the door and found that same little girl with the two all-day suckers. She said: "I could not sell them to anybody else, so I brought them to you." "You may have them and suck them yourself," we ventured to say. "I have already sucked them all I want to," she said, and thrusting them into our hand she departed.

Next there was a call from the back door. It was from the printer boy asking for more copy. "Here it is," we said, "though it is not what we hoped it would be."

—The courage of the early Christians must be matched in us today.

THE VITALITY OF WORDS

The English language is marvelously rich and varied in its vocabulary. Infinite shades of thought and feeling can be expressed by means of words of comparatively simple character. It is interesting and instructive to study such words and to note their vital effect upon our everyday life.

Some words transport us to the skies, others plunge us into abysmal gloom; some hold undisputed sway like absolute sovereigns, others do only menial service; some stab as with a rapier, others soothe like a mother's caress; some have the ingratiating modesty of a high-born maiden, others intrude like an unbidden guest; some sing in the memory like the lingering notes of a nightingale, others haunt the mind like an ominous decree; some are like living personalities, others like dim memories of bygone days; some are like the dance of animated sunbeams, others like the sigh of mournful pines; some are like a beacon light, others like a flickering candle; some are like a quivering image on water, others set as a face of flint; some are like a symphony of the stars, others like jangling notes out of tune; some are hot as a fiery volcano, others cold as a winter blast; some are as soft as a whispering breeze, others loud as a cannon-peal; some are as gay as a troubadour, others somber as a starless night; some are as lustrous as a jewel, others dull as a brooding sky; some are as nimble as dancing water, others heavy as a weary footstep; some are as beautiful as the rosy flush of dawn, others ugly as a venomous toad; some are as definite as the glance of a child, others vague as a fitful dream; some are as picturesque as a fairy pageant, others plain as a desolate moor; some are as sonorous as organ notes, others faint as a dying wind; some are as leisurely as an aristocrat, others impulsive as youth; some are as pompous as a court official, others humble as a penitent; some are as joyous as the trill of a lark, others sad as a tender requiem; some are as quiet as the hush of night, others turbulent as a mountain torrent; some are as ethereal as moonbeams, others heavy as the tramp of armed men; some are as swift as a winged arrow, others slow as a funeral dirge; some are as frank as the call of a bird, others subtle as a creeping tiger; some are as gentle as falling dew, others harsh as avenging fate; some are as efficacious as a healing balm, others fatal as a serpent's sting; some are as refreshing as a summer shower, others oppressive as desert heat; some are as majestic as the mountains, others insignificant as dust; some are as exquisite as celestial music, others raucous as a vendor's cry; some are as delicate as a spider's web, others firm as adamant; some are as enduring as the everlasting hills, others evanescent as air-built castles; some are as mellow as a cathedral chime, others ominous as a doomsday knell.

Dr. Gray Lectures at Moody Bible Institute

The public is invited to hear two series of lectures to be delivered during the summer term by Rev. James M. Gray, D.D., president of the Moody Bible Institute. These fifteen or twenty lectures will be heard in the Institute auditorium on Thursdays at 9:30 a. m. and Saturdays at 10:00 a. m., beginning May 24. One series will deal with Angelology and will treat of both holy and evil angels, with special emphasis on Satan and Satanism, Spiritism and Demoniacal Possession. The other series will treat of the inspiration of the Scriptures and will deal with the nature of inspiration, its limitations, extent and proofs, and the difficulties and objections that have been raised against it.

FOREIGN MISSIONS—INDIA

Evangelism

During the first week of last November Rev. I. B. Bawa, of Poona, conducted an evangelistic meeting on the Boys' Compound. Each missionary has some good word about these meetings. Rev. Bawa was converted from the Moslem faith in his youth and has spent his entire life preaching the gospel. He is now an old man and almost blind, but, says Rev. Cassen, "he presented the message with a freshness that made each meeting a joy." Twice each day he preached in the Boys' School and once each day in the Girls' School.

November 28, 1927, Rev. and Mrs. Cassen started out on their district work. They follow largely the method of the Apostle Paul, except it is done in modern methods of travel. Starting out in their Ford, they visited about 25 villages, some twice, and preached the gospel. Their daily schedule follows: "Every morning, except Saturday, we spent in one or more villages, preaching to the people before they started out to work in their fields. Every other afternoon, from 5 to 7, we spent in preaching in the nearer villages, and every other night we used the magic lantern in presenting the message, Sunday afternoon and night being excluded. We found the schedule very satisfactory, and well balanced." In closing his report, Rev. Cassen tells us that his report would not be complete without mentioning that it was his privilege to baptize Betty Jean Minnis, along with three little Indian babies.

Miss Frank, in reporting evangelistic work among the women, says, "We feel that a great deal has been accomplished the past year. The greatest work has been in getting the Bible women to recognize the need and to give their message to the people in a way they will understand.

That we may see something more of the status of womanhood in India and the need of the Christian message and the difficulty of leading them to Christ, I quote from her report of the last quarter of 1927:

"This has been a quarter of more intensive work in the evangelistic department. As mentioned in my annual report, the Bible women are improving in their method of giving forth the gospel, and we have been covering more villages than in the past, owing to our improved travelling facilities.

"I wish, however, that our praying friends realized a little of the difficulties under which this women's department must necessarily work. Although we must be patient and faithful in giving out the Word of Life from day to day, and month to month, and year to year, yet, because of woman's 'inferiority' (?), and her subjection to her husband, we cannot expect the women of the Indian villages to openly take their stand for Christ, and consent to be baptized. If this were to happen, we should have to be prepared to support these women entirely, as there would be no longer a place for them in their homes. The Indian women with whom we come in contact in the villages are so afraid of their husbands that if they think the husbands are anywhere around at the time we are preaching, they will not show themselves outside of their doors. They are taught that they are of less value than the sacred cow that they worship, and that they have no souls. Is it any wonder, then, that it is difficult to get them to realize their need of salvation? Many times, when we are telling the story of salvation from the very fullness of our hearts, at the close we say, 'Do you understand this story of love?' and some man sitting nearby will speak up, 'She is only a woman. How do you expect her to understand anything?'

"I am not writing this because I am discouraged, but because I want the people at home to pray more definitely about these definite hindrances to the saving of souls. More and more I have been coming to realize that unless one is thirsty, he will not come to the waters to drink. I feel our biggest work in the villages these days is to present the gospel in such a way that they will get hungry, and thirsty, for only then will they be interested in the Bread of Life and the Well of Water springing up into everlasting life! Please help us pray to this end.

"There are parts of our field of labor to which we have not as yet been able to go, because we have no knowledge of the Urdu language. This is to the Moslems, of whom there are quite a number in Dhulia, and some in the surrounding villages. Therefore I feel that it is quite to the advantage of the work to study Urdu, and have already begun my lessons. I am not taking time from my regular duties for this, nor am I asking to have my expenses paid."

S. W. Rosenberger, Executive Secretary.

CORRELATION OF OUR EDUCATIONAL INTERESTS

Practically every religious denomination has felt for a number of years that there should be a close correlation and integration of its denominational program of religious education as promoted through its Church School literature, its leadership training agencies, its colleges and seminaries, and its agencies in the various fields of young people's work. The Methodist Protestant Church has similarly faced its own problems in this field.

With the thought that a study of this entire problem should be made by the agencies engaged in these activities, committees were appointed by our Denominational Boards of Publication and of Young People's Work for a thorough study. These committees met in joint session in the Drinkhouse Memorial Room at 516 North Charles St., Baltimore, Md., March 6. Representatives of the Board of Education were also invited and were in attendance. Those attending the meeting were Crates S. Johnson, D.D., editor of the Sunday School Publications; G. W. Haddaway, president of the Board of Publication; F. Lawrence Brown, D.D., president of the Ohio Conferecne; Robert Rawsthorne, member of the Board of Publication; A. G. Dixon, D.D., president of the Board of Young People's Work; Leonard B. Smith, D.D., member of the Board of Young People's Work; E. A. Sexsmith, D.D., former executive secretary of the Board of Young People's Work; Frank W. Stephenson, D. D., executive secretary of the Board of Education; and Lawrence Little, executive secretary of the Board of Young People's Work.

G. W. Haddaway, D. D., was elected chairman of the joint committee and Lawrence Little was elected secretary. Three sessions were held, morning, afternoon, and night. The spirit of earnestness was very evident as was the spirit of unity of purpose and of heart. There was a general feeling that we were facing tremendous responsibilities and opportunities as a denomination and that our several boards should be willing and anxious to make any adjustment that might enable our work in religious education to make progress toward our common goal. A frank study was made of our aims as a denomination, our agencies engaged in the realization of these aims, our overlapping in certain phases of our work, our lack of common understanding of the entire task, etc., etc. Two possibilities of a closer co-operation were suggested and discussed at length, namely, (1) an entire reorganization of our boards engaged in religious education and an integration of the entire program under one board, and (2) a correlation of the activities of the three boards engaged in this work through a council or commission composed of representatives selected by the three boards. After a serious and prayerful study of the entire problem and the possibilities of the two plans, it was decided that the latter plan was the most feasible one for the present moment in our educational development. The report of the Committee on Findings, after amendment, was adopted and referred to the three interested boards for recommendation to the General Conference. This report was as follows:

Report of Committee on Findings

We, the Committee on Findings, of the Joint Committee on Correlation of Educational Interests, appointed by the Boards of Education and of Young People's Work, make the following report:

1. We express our satisfaction in the spirit of unanimity evidenced in all the papers read and the discussions made.

2. We have been encouraged by the presence and helpful participation of Rev. Frank W. Stephenson, D.D., executive secretary of the Board of Education, who had been invited by the above named groups to attend this meeting by virtue of the relationship of his board to the denominational program of religious education.

3. We recognize that while there has been a degree of sympathetic co-operation among our several agencies engaged in the field of religious education, we believe that a closer correlation is not only possible but desirable and necessary.

4. We, therefore, recommend that overtures be made to the General Conference by our respective boards, severally and collectively, to authorize a plan for the closer co-ordination and higher efficiency of the religious educational activities of the denomination.

5. In harmony with the above recommendation, we recommend further that the following items be proposed for adoption by the General Conference:

(a) That the objective in religious education be defined. (As a suggestion, we propose the following definition of objective, as adopted by the International Council of Religious Education and various co-operating denominations: "The aim of religious education is complete Christian living which includes belief in God as revealed in Jesus Christ and vital fellowship with Him, personal acceptance of Jesus Christ as Savior and His way of life, and membership in a Christian church; the Christian motive in making of all life choices, and whole-hearted participation in and constructive contribution to the progressive realization of a social order controlled by Christian principles.")

(b) That there be created an Educational Council whose duties shall be to correlate and integrate the denominational program of religious education with the understanding that such correlation and integration shall not interfere with the autonomy of any of the component boards.

(c) That this Educational Council be composed of nine members, three of whom shall be the executive secretaries of the Boards of Education and of Young People's Work and the editor of the Sunday school publications, and six others who shall be elected two each by the Board of Education, the Board of Publication, and the Board of Young People's Work, because of their especial fitness for this task and irrespective of their membership on any of these boards.

(d) That each board elect its representatives on this council at its first meeting after the rise of the General Conference and that the council, so elected, shall meet for organization within thirty days after election at the call of the editor of the Sunday school publications.

(e) That the expenses of this Educational Council, not to exceed the sum of $500 per annum, be paid out of the contingent fund of the General Conference, and that any necessary additional expense, if any, be met proportionately by the several participating boards.

It was the general feeling of all who attended the meeting of the Joint Committee that the authorization of these plans by the General Conference would be a great advance step in our educational practice.

LAWRENCE LITTLE,
Secertary of the Joint Committee.

Taking the Devil as a Joke

reality now. Men have ceased to believe in Satan, not because anybody has demonstrated his non-existecne, for nobody has, but because of the mental habit men have of believing only in what they see, what is impressed on the senses. "Out of sight, out of mind." The same evidence that men accept to prove the unreality of Satan would prove the unreality of the dead of the human race. Our fathers and mothers, our ancestors of all generations—where are they today? We have had no token from one of them since they passed away. Have they ceased to exist? We cannot tell where they exist nor in what form they exist, but our highest hopes are bound up with the thought of their continued existence.

It would be very difficult to construct a reasonable argument to prove that Jesus did not believe in the existence of personal devils. It has been attempted, but never successfully that we have heard of. If Jesus believed in devils, then there were devils. If there were devils, how shall we escape the belief that there are devils?

The thought of a personal devil is so ugly that men do not like to entertain it. They think it should not be mentioned in polite society. Unfortunately our safety requires that we sometimes speak of the ugly things about us, the disease germs, the sources of infection and pollution. Next to the man that tries to laugh the devil away, is the man who hopes to drive him away by ignoring him. Satan laughs at the laughter of the skeptic, probably, and it will be easy for him to ignore the attitude of the man that ignores him. If Satan is true to his reputation, he does not care how much men may ignore him or laugh about him, so long as he can induce men to do his bidding.

Peter did not take the devil as a joke. He said: "Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour: whom resist steadfast in the faith."

—The first duty of the Christian is "to learn Christ," that is to say, to study Him. We can never become like Him if we do not know Him; we can never follow in His steps unless we see His steps and where they lead. Pray that we may read about Him more intently and with greater care than ever.

OPTIMISM | The President's Letter | EVANGELISM

Once More

The Easter offering: please, pastors and superintendents, see that it is taken. The Board of Home Missions is much in need of funds, and half of all that the board hopes to get comes through the Easter offering. Whether you do or do not have the Easter program, don't fail to take the Easter offering at every church, and urge the people to make it liberal. Take credit on the G. C. B. of the local church for what is received and forward the amount promptly to Mr. V. W. Idol, treasurer, High Point, N. C.

We also hope and pray for the largest measure of success for the churches that are stressing evangelism at the Easter season.

M. P. C. G. G.

Chairman Ross will report the full standing of all charges this week. It has been a great delight to see the way that many of our churches have responded to this gift. Others have not done as well as it seems they should have done. However, the report will be heartening, and the matter will be pressed until our entire allotment of $12,000 is in hand. Failure in this would leave with us an everlasting regret.

Why Not

March 24.—Saturday we were on this charge, but with opportunity to visit only one church, New Zion. At different times we had passed this church on the highway near Seagrove, but had no idea that it was one of our churches. A marker would have told us.

We preached here at 11 a. m. and held the second quarterly conference at 1:30. Lovejoy and Macedonia were not represented in the conference. The other four churches were well represented, and the business of the conference transacted with zeal. The finances were found to be considerably in arrears, but no doubt the winter weather and bad roads, in some measure, account for this. New Hope church is on the honor roll of last conference; we trust that the entire charge may be there this next conference. Why not, "Why Not?" This charge has entirely too many churches for one pastor to develop. If some of the churches could be merged, or the charge divided, better service could be given, and more satisfactory growth assured.

Pastor Trogdon is deeply interested in the work, and will press all the conference programs for the best possible results. We expect to visit the other churches on the charge during the year.

Richland

Sunday, March 25, we were at Brower's Chapel for the 11 o'clock service. The congregation was not large, but the people evidenced an encouraging interest. We found them practicing for an Easter service—a fact that pleased us. We trust that Easter may be happier for them because of this program, and that their offering may be liberal. The Gratitude Gift was presented at this point, and the entire quota of the church—$35—provided, part of which had already been pledged.

We found the finances of the charge considerably behind, but we hope for better results in the months ahead. We should like to see Richland rich in good works. The charge has recently built an attractive parsonage on the highway just east of Asheboro, and Pastor Love and his wife are comfortably housed there. The charge has done well in providing this home. Pastor Love is young and earnest, and we hope that this is going to be one of the most fruitful years in his early ministry. We are to be with him soon in his second quarterly conference, and expect to visit the other churches of his charge during the year.

College Maintenance Fund

We trust that each charge will make the collection for this fund at the earliest possible date so the college may have the money with which to meet the closing expenses of the college year. If we can do this, the college will be saved considerable embarrassment. Several charges have made special effort and paid this assessment already. Bro. Pastor, please get your charge in this list very soon. Let us see that no charge fails in this.

Evangelism Number

We are grateful to the editor for space, to Bro. Bates for special work, and to all contributors who helped toward the success of this number of the HERALD. All articles could not be run in the special number for lack of space. They will appear from time to time until all have been published. We, of course, do not expect that this one effort will key the church up to its full measure of evangelism responsibility. Nor would many other like efforts. However, we believe that it will not be unattended with good results. The paramount need of the church is the quickening of the spirit of evangelism, and anything that tends in that direction is worth while. We urge that pastors continue to emphasize it from the pulpit.

Centennial Day

The fifth Sunday in April. Brethren, let us make it a great day. The first century birthday of our denomination justifies the effort. Let us bring our people together in various groups all over the conference that we may rejoice together in this great achievement of our church to which God has brought us, and dedicate ourselves anew to Democratic Methodism, and anew to Him whose we are and whom we delight to serve. Put your best into it, brethren, and make this day memorable in the programs of this conference year!

Budgets

It has been fittingly said, "The kingdom can never be established by raising money; but it can never be extended without raising money." Press the budgets, brethren. This is an important way by which the church serves God. He wants His kingdom extended. That was the last charge that Jesus gave to His disciples. Money is a necessary means of doing it. Let us insist, then, earnestly, persistently, and prayerfully upon the budgets. With half of the year nearly gone, there are still a few charges that have no budget credits. Surely these charges will not allow this to continue.

Appointments

April 3, with our work at Kannapolis.

April 4, committee meeting of pastors' summer conference and Young People's Training School officers.

April 8, with Bro. Ashburn at Vickory, 11 a. m.

IS THERE ANOTHER SIDE?

It is said that there are two sides to every question. What is the other side of the tobacco question? The No-Tobacco League distributes among school children thousands of copies of the following about the tobacco habit:

"Why smoke anyway? (1) It takes time. This is the most precious thing in the world. (2) It befouls the air. Pure air is God's first and best gift to man. (3) It burns up money. Money is the circulating life-blood of commerce and society. (4) It hinders work. By work we win in this world. (5) It weakens the heart. The time is coming when you will need every bit of its strength. (6) It endangers health. Grant and Mark Twain both died of tobacco poison. (7) It is a habit-forming drug. You become its slave. (8) It is not recommended by your mother. The boy's best friend is his mother. (9) It is unclean. Paul says, "Keep thyself clean." (10) All smoke is waste and impairs health. Tobacco smoke is doubly so. He who abates it is a benefactor."

That is one side of the question as seen by the No-Tobacco League. The league does not believe there is "the other side." If there is, it wants to know it and will pay for the information. A prize of $10 will be paid for ten valid reasons in favor of a boy or girl in the adolescent, habit-forming age acquiring the tobacco habit. A second prize of $5 will be given for five good reasons. Is there another side! Prove it and take the reward. Address No-Tobacco League of America, Chas. M. Fillmore, General Secretary, 820 Occidental Bldg., Indianapolis, Indiana.

THE EXPLANATION OF IT

A colored servant of a wealthy man complained to his master of having constantly to fight the temptations of the devil. The master, an irreligious man, told the servant that he was never bothered by the devil, and tried to show the religious negro that the position of the one not tempted was the best. Later, on a hunting trip the man shot two ducks, killing one and wounding another, which fluttered away as fast as it could. He shouted to the servant to let the dead one alone and to catch the one getting away. Bringing back the wounded duck the servant said: "I see it now! I see it now!" "What do you see?" asked the man. "I see," said the servant, "why I'm tempted and you are not. I am the duck trying to get away, but the devil don't need to bother about a dead duck; one that he has already caught." Many, many men and women of today occupy the position of the dead duck, and the devil will not disturb them as long as they lie still and do not try to escape.—Selected.

SMALL SINS DANGEROUS

The dangerous sins are small sins. A man who would shrink from a great transgression allows himself a small one without fear. Thus the breach in his moral defenses is made, and soon widens, so that larger temptations can enter. "It is the first step that counts."—Young People.

YOUR BROTHER

A ship was wrecked on the northwest coast of Ireland; and a mother tried in vain to persuade her son, who had volunteered to go to the rescue of the last man on board the burning ship, to give up the perilous task. She pleaded that his father and brother had never come back from the sea, and that she would be left alone if he were lost. He resisted her entreaties and put out to the sinking vessel. When the boat came back through the surf the crowds on the shore shouted, "Have you got your man?" The reply came, "Yes, and tell mother it's Brother William!" Are we sure that the imperiled souls around us are not our brothers?

"'A friend in need,' my neighbor said to me—
'A friend indeed, is what I mean to be:
In time of trouble I will come to you.
And in the hour of need you'll find me true.'
I thought a bit and took him by the hand:
'My friend,' said I, 'you do not understand
The inner meaning of that simple rhyme—
A friend is what the heart needs all the time.'"

—Dr. Henry van Dyke.

LAYING ASIDE EVERY WEIGHT

Charles A. Lindbergh is the hero of the hour. Experts in air service said when he started on his daring flight that the chances to succeed were only one in fifty. When he landed in Paris two hours ahead of schedule, every one was singing his praises.

Many lessons will be drawn from his luck, his courage, from the thoroughness of his preparations, from the kind of life he lived and so on. There was none of the happy-go-lucky spirit of bravado about him. His plane was built with utmost precision and care. He chose the most direct route. He flew strictly by the compass.

One outstanding fact will long be remembered. He carried no excessive luggage. He discarded everything that was non-essential. His food supply consisted of two ham sandwiches, two roast beef sandwiches, one hard boiled egg sandwich, two cakes of concentrated food, two canteens of water, no coffee, no liquor of any kind. He carried no life preservers, no parachutes. There will be those who will censure his elimination of some of these things. Yet how loudly his method emphasizes the apostle's words, "Laying aside every weight . . . let us run with patience the race set before us."—Selected.

WORK ON

The story is told of a woman who had a rare rosebush. She watched and worked over it for weeks, but saw no results of her labor. One day she found a crevice in the wall near the bush, and running through the crevice was a shoot of her rosebush. She went to the other side of the wall, and there she found her roses blooming in all their splendid beauty. Some of us have to work on, year after year, seeing no results of our labor. To such comes this message: "Work on. Do not be discouraged. Your work is blooming on the other side of the wall." There is no such thing as wasted time or labor if we are serving Christ.—Great Thoughts.

—Suppose that this springtime the grass should fail to grow and the flowers should fail to bloom and the birds should fail to sing. You would think that God had forsaken us.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

SENIOR CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC

April 15—The Dangers of Slang and Cheap Talk. Matt. 12:33-37.

I

Peptograph: "Thirty days! Condemned for murdering the King's English!"

II

Plans for Meeting

1. Have some of the members select all the slang in daily use by their associates and bring this information to the society meeting. Take these and in a serious way endeavor to place the proper word before the group.

2. Have appropriate songs and special music. "Wonderful Words of Life," "Lord, Speak to Me That I May Speak," etc.

3. Have some one who loves beautiful language and appreciates good English to write a paper on "Clean Speech an Index to Clean Character."

4. Consult the Methodist Protestant, the Christian Endeavor World and the Standard Christian Endeavor Quarterly for further plans.

III

Hints for Leader

This is a very interesting topic since it is one that touches each individual. All of us like to talk, but we do not always say something worth while when we talk. "Let the words of my mouth and the meditations of my heart be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength and my redeemer," should be the prayer of each individual. If so, many feelings would go unhurt, many misunderstandings avoided, and many friendships unbroken.

Good speech is an education of thoughtfulness, kindness, good training, Christlikeness, clean habits and good sport, plus everything that goes to make a real man or woman.

IV

Pertaining to Topic

Once upon a time a king sent forth his attendants to have prepared a meal for a great occasion. Only the best meat was to be used. "Tongue" was the food chosen. At a later meal the same attendants were sent forth to prepare another banquet and the worst meat was to be used. "Tongue" again was selected as the chief food. The king, noting this, called the attendants and inquired why "tongue" was chosen for both meals when the "best" was to be used in the first, and the "worst" in the second. Those called before the king replied:

"O king, 'tongue' is the best of all when used to speak beautiful words, but the worst of all when uttering slang and cheap talk."

Poetry to the Point—"Her Words"

My mother has the prettiest tricks
  Of words and words and words.
Her talk comes out as smooth and sleek
  As breasts of singing birds.

She shapes her speech all silver fine
  Because she loves it so.
And her own eyes begin to shine
  To hear her stories grow.

And if she goes to make a call,
  Or out to take a walk,
We leave our work when she returns,
  And run to hear her talk.

God wove a web of loveliness,
  Of clouds and stars and birds,
But made not anything at all
  So beautiful as words!

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

April 15: Transfiguration and Service

Scripture Basis: Mark 9:2-29.

Golden Text: He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same beareth much fruit; for apart from me ye can do nothing.—John 15:5.

Jesus Transfigured

Because Luke gives indications that the transfiguration occurred during the night (9:32, 37), we may express preference to his account. He not only tells us that the three favored disciples were heavy with sleep, but that the healing of the demoniac boy took place the next day. If this be true, we may picture in our minds, imperfect though it must be, the glory of the scene enacted upon one of the lofty Mt. Herman's spurs during the night. It must have been as if the peak was aglow with transcendent splendor, as the Son of God for a brief period donned the heavenly robe of superior whiteness and brightness in the presence of the immortal representatives of the Old Testament, Moses and Elijah, and the awe-stricken disciples, Peter, James and John. No wonder that they wanted to abide there in such a company as this. That was not best for them, for God's purpose in revealing His Son to them in a glorified state was to seal Peter's confession of Him more firmly, and strengthen their faith in His Messiahship just prior to His passion and death.

Disciples Troubled

Being charged with the secret of the transfiguration until after the resurrection, these three questioned among themselves concerning the latter. They were babes in understanding when it came to this. But how could they understand? They had never seen such a Man as Jesus rise from the dead. In fact, they had never been acquainted with such a Man before. Naturally they would be puzzled and be inclined to ask the Master certain questions relative to the coming of a forerunner in the personage, as the Scribes claimed, of Elijah. Jesus declared that John the Baptist was he. Well did Jesus say when He exalted humble service by washing the disciples' feet, "What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter," for they had much to learn.

Faith Tried

The faith of a group and of a father were tried in the valley, after Jesus and the trio descended the mountain. The group was that of some of the other disciples of our Lord. In the presence of a multitude of people, they had attempted to cast the demon out of an only son of one of the scribes. Their faith was not strong enough; they had failed. Upon hearing the story of the failure of His disciples to perform this miracle, the Master's heart must have sunk in disappointment. After rebuking them for their lack of faith, He appealed to the faith of the distressed father. In substance He inquired, "Do you believe?" With tears of anguish the father replied, "Lord, I believe; help thou my unbelief." The compassion of the Master was too great to ignore that, so He restored the loved one to the parent. His faith was victorious. The inference of Jesus' explanation to His disciples when they were alone as to the cause of their impotency was that they depended too much upon their own power and not enough upon the divine.

Lessons Taught

Among the many lessons taught by these incidents in the life of our Lord are these:

1. It is well, yea, imperative, that we go to the mountain top with Jesus now and then. In these days there are so many attractions that we are loathe to tear ourselves away from them to spend a while with Him. "Take time to be holy" applies to this day as much as, if not more than, it did at the time it was written. And we will see and learn things there that are beyond our fondest dream. Jesus never disappoints those who meet Him on the heights.

2. To abide on the mountain top with our Lord, away from the cares and disappointments of the daily routine, is a natural desire, but it is not feasible or beneficial. With Jesus on the peaks of ascetic experiences strengthens our faith in Him, gives us a taste of His glory, and fits us for service in the valley. It is a selfish spirit that prompts us to desire separation from our fellowmen in their need of sympathy, fellowship and love. Jesus led the three of the inner circle back to the valley of service.

"Without faith it is impossible to please Him," and with faith it is possible to do all things. How we struggle to accomplish things in the service of Christ in our own power. We think we know how. Maybe experience strengthens our self-confidence. But we fail because we did not take Him into our partnership. But having the simple faith of the father of the demoniac boy, and humbly seeking a stronger supply, we may easily achieve the seeming impossible.

"Oh, for a faith that will not shrink,
  Though pressed by every foe;
That will not tremble on the brink,
  Of any earthly woe."

CENTENARY PROJECT FOR JUNIORS

"Our Big Methodist Protestant Family in Baltimore"

LESSON SIX

"A Part of Our Family Live in India"

Facts for Centenary Discoverers

1. The Centenary Discoverers will remember that we have two Church Boards doing Home Missionary work and two doing Foreign Missionary work. Our two Foreign Boards are called, "The Board of Foreign Missions" and "The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society." The Board of Foreign Missions carries forward a work which is supported by the whole church—men, women and children: The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society carries on a work which is supported mostly by women. When representatives of these two boards meet together, they call themselves "The Union Board of Missions."

2. These two Foreign Mission Boards have charge of all the Foreign Missionary work of our Big Church Family. These men and women on these two Boards look after our Methodist Protestant churches in Japan, our Methodist Protestant churches in China, and our Methodist Protestant churches in India; they secure our missionaries and see that money is given for their salaries; they build and maintain hospitals and schools in India, China and Japan. The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society organizes Missionaries societies in as many Methodist Protestant churches as they can.

3. This week we are to discover all we can about the people of India, how they live, how they worship, and how they are educated. We are to find out particularly about our Methodist Protestants in India and what our Big Family in America is doing for that part of our Big Family in India. We have eight missionaries in India and one Mission Center which is located at Dhulia. You will want to remember the names of our Missionaries:

(a) Miss Mildred Miskimen, a young woman who went to India the year she graduated from college; we would all love Miss Miskimen if we all knew her.

(b) Miss Grace Perley, a trained nurse in our hospital in India.

(c) Miss Thesesa Frank, an evangelistic worker in India.

(d) Dr. Edith Lacey, our medical missionary to India.

(e) Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Minnis, a young minister and wife who are giving themselves for the education and evangelistic work of India.

(f) Rev. and Mrs. Paul M. Cassen, two young people who are devoting their lives to India and the Indian people.

4. Our Missionaries in India carry on three kinds of work: Evangelistic, educational, and medical. The evangelistic department tries to win the Indian people for Christ and His way of living; it organizes churches and Sunday Schools; it sends native Bible women out from the Mission Center into the Indian homes to teach them about Jesus and His way of life. Our educational department in India builds and maintains schools; it employs native and foreign teachers and while the Indian children are learning many of the things we learn in school, they are also being taught how to live the Christian life. Our medical department in India has built and is maintaining a hospital. Both our doctor and our nurse not only treat the sick people who come to the hospital, but go out into the towns far and near from Dhulia to heal the sick. While they are healing bodies, they are also teaching about Jesus, the Great Physician.

5. We have a Boys' School in Dhulia, India, with an enrollment of 66, and a Girls' School with an enrollment of 83.

6. We have a hospital at Dhulia, India, with a doctor and a trained nurse in charge. Last year, when the nurse was working alone without a doctor, 116 were cared for in the hospital and 555 patients were treated outside the hospital.

Suggested Activity

Map Work: If a large muslin map of the world has been made, you will want to locate on it Dhulia, India. Draw a colored line out from Dhulia to a blank space on the muslin; here paste as many pictures of our work in India as you can secure. Pictures of our buildings and workers will be most helpful and can be found in the November, 1924, issue of the Missionary Record, as well as other issues of this same publication. If you have not prepared your world map, you may prefer making just a map of Asia on which you will locate Dhulia, India.

Birthday Cake Poster: Add your facts about our India work to your Birthday Cake poster. Keep your poster hung before the group so they may watch it as it nears completion.

My Church's Birthday Book: Add facts about our work in India and any facts which the Centenary Discoverers may have found about the life and customs of the people of India.

Your Photograph Album: It ought not to be difficult to secure pictures on our India work; the Missionary Record contains many of these pictures and there are several copies going into every church every month. Paste your pictures of our work in India and any which portray Indian life in your Photograph Album.

The Organization of My Church Poster: Secure a large piece of cardboard in some attractive color. Cut from another piece of white cardboard the same size a large ring, three inches deep, twenty inches in diameter; this will represent the tire of a wheel. Paste this on your poster. Draw a line all the way around the tire one and one-half inches from the outer edge. Around the outer edge of this line print, "All the Methodist Protestant Churches—in All the World." Around the inner edge of this line print as many of the names of Annual Conferences as there are room for, Ohio Annual Conference, West Virginia Annual Conference, etc. Abbreviate whenever you can. Leave space for "Japan Mission Conference," "China Mission Conference," and "India Mission Conference." This may be abbreviated as "J. M. C.," etc. Cut a sphere, four inches in diameter, from white cardboard; paste this in the middle of the poster to represent the hub of the wheel. Print on the hub, "General Conference." Prepare seven spokes for the wheel cut from white cardboard; this will represent the Church Boards. Let the children put four spokes in this week; print on one, "Board of Home Missions;" on another, "Board of Foreign Missions;" on the third, "Woman's Home Missionary Society;" and on the fourth, "Woman's Foreign Missionary Society." The rest of the spokes will be added later in the project.

Worship Service

Theme: World Friendship.

Quiet Music: "This Is My Father's World," played softly on piano. No. 46 in Hymnal for American Youth.

Call to Worship: Leader—"The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof; the world and they that dwell therein."

Children—"For he hath founded it upon the seas and established it upon the floods."

Conversation: This is our Father's world; He has made everything in it; He made the trees and the flowers and the grass to grow; He maketh every living thing; He is the Creator of the peoples of the great world family. Even as He made the American, so also has he made the boys and girls of India, China and Japan.

Hymn: This Is My Father's World. No. 46 in Hymnal for American Youth.

Conversation: Not all of the world's children have learned of Jesus, the perfect man; not all of them are trying to follow His way of living; many are still worshiping idols or a grand-parent who has been dead a long time. We want to tell the story of Jesus to the whole wide world, don't we? To be sure, we can't do it alone, but we can all help to do it. We have a story to tell to the nations of the world; it is the story of Jesus.

Hymn: "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations." No. 260 in Hymnal for American Youth.

Conversation: Other nations have something to give to us; we can learn lessons in politeness from Japan; we can learn lessons from China about respect for parents. After all, we are a big world-family and should share what we have one with the other. We are not superior to others just because we are born in our lovely America; we are all in one big friendship circle.

Prayer: That we might have a friendly feeling for the peoples of every race and nation; that we might share what we have with other nations; and be willing to receive their gifts to us.

For our work in India; for the people at home that they might help support our work in India; for our missionaries.

Memory Work

Memorize the words of the hymn, "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations."

Suggestions for Leaders

1. Story material for this lesson may be found in Missionary Records. Select a story which will portray something of Indian life. The story on "The Spirit of World Friendship" as found on page 43 in "Missionary Programs for Juniors" will be a very fine story to use in your worship program for this week.

2. Keep in mind the fact that all the things which are made in this project should be sent to the Baltimore convention in May. Write to Mrs. H. W. Maier, Thomasville, N. C., telling her that you are using these project lessons; please do not neglect this as it is very important.

The report this week is in full to date for all charges that have credits. One new charge, Weaverville, Bro. Cranford pastor, is added this week. The number of charges that have credits now is 74. Eighteen (18) charges are still on the blank list. Guilford joins the charges paying college assessment in full, and Denton church is listed with the churches paying college assessment in full. We are glad to see this list growing, and we trust that it may go on rapidly until every charge is in it. The college needs, and must have, the money to meet running expenses.

We will not have time to study the full report now before it goes to press. If any errors are found in it—we try to avoid them—call our attention to them, and we shall be glad to correct them.

We are approaching, now, that part of the year that brings us good weather, and along with it we are hoping for better results in our church work along all lines. God is with us, and He will reward our labors to establish His Kingdom.

With full appreciation of what has been done thus far, and a strong faith that better things await us, I am,

S. W. TAYLOR.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Pleasant Grove Brotherhood.—The Brotherhood met in the home of our pastor, Rev. G. L. Reynolds, Saturday evening. After the devotional service a business meeting was held. The Brotherhood voted to buy 50 church disciplines to be given to new members as they are taken into the church.

Since our last report shrubbery has been set in the cemetery. We are very proud of this and we hope in the near future that we will be able to sow it in grass. We are very thankful to the ones who have contributed for this cause.

Bro. Ballard, associate pastor of First Church, High Point, and Bro. Leach, of Thomasville, were visitors. Bro. Ballard made a splendid talk which was enjoyed by all present. We hope that he may be able to be with us again. Visitors are welcome at our meetings, either to come and see the works we are doing or give some helpful ideas that we may do more towards the upbuilding of our church.

After the meeting refreshments were served by Mrs. Reynolds, Mrs. B. E. Payne and Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Honeycutt.

Winston-Salem.—Mrs. B. M. King delightfully entertained the Philathea class of the First Methodist Protestant church, Winston-Salem, having as joint hostess Miss Maggie Snipes.

The devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. F. D. Voss, with Miss Nanny Watson leading in prayer.

Minutes were read and approved, and splendid committee reports were given.

A contest was enjoyed during the social hour. Mrs. B. K. Milloway won the prize, after which members of the class having a birthday this month were delightfully showered. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess.

Corinth, Littleton Charge.—Rev. Mr. Crutchfield brought us a splendid message yesterday. At this service an Easter offering was taken. As we were not able to have an Easter program on account of so much sickness in the community, Rev. H. S. B. Thompson and M. J. Morris suggested that we clean up our church yard and plant flowers. Rev. H. L. Powell, of Triplet, Va., spent Tuesday night at M. J. Morris'.

Mrs. A. S. Glasgow, of Winston-Salem (formerly Miss Fannie Barnes), has been visiting in our community recently. We regret not seeing her while here.

The second quarterly conference will be held at Littleton church Wednesday, April 18, at 2:30 p. m.

Rev. Mr. Crutchfield and Rev. H. S. B. Thompson and family were visitors at M. J. Morris' Sunday.

REPORTER.

Asheville.—The many friends of Mrs. Annie R. Edwards were shocked to know of her sudden illness and passing Friday afternoon. She was stricken early Thursday morning and carried to the French Broad hospital, but did not rally. Once or twice there was some indication of improvement, but the promise was only for a moment.

Mrs. Edwards came to Asheville in the fall of 1927 and was keeping house with her daughters, Miss Leonora and Miss Blanche. We were all hoping that she might be spared to them and the other children for many years. Although she and her daughters lived just opposite our church here, Miss Leonora and Miss Blanche having joined this church in 1927, Mrs. Edwards was able to attend the service only a few times. Our hearts go out in deep sympathy to these young ladies and their brothers and other relatives.

Mrs. Fears continues critically ill. Mrs. F. R. McIntyre has been ill for two weeks. Mrs. J. D. Cranford (wife of the Weaverville pastor) is in the French Broad hospital recovering from an operation.

Last Sunday was in many respects the very best day for us in a long time. Walter Bevans was received into full membership. The messages at both services were of the very best. Brothers Casto and VanMeter are beloved by us and love us as our very own. There were a number of visitors at both services Sunday. REPORTER.

Friendship, North Davidson Charge.—Rev. R. S. Troxler filled his appointment Sunday, April 1, with a very inspiring sermon. We had much better attendance than we have had for several Sundays, but there is still quite a little sickness in the community. Our Sunday school is working, and we hope to do better work this year than we have ever done before.

It has been stated that prayer meeting once a week will be continued this spring since weather and road conditions have improved. We have not had prayer meeting during the winter months.

On Easter Sunday night, April 8, there will be an Easter service at Friendship, consisting of readings, special songs, etc. Our pastor will be with us, he announced last Sunday, and we hope to have a good service. Everybody is cordially invited to attend.

We were glad to have Miss Virginia Byerly, student of N. C. C. W., who is at home for the Easter holidays, worship with us Sunday.

REPORTER.

Randleman Charge.—The new church at Worthville is going good. We hope to move in by the middle of May. We are working out plans for a big day.

A supper sale was conducted by the ladies of the church recently and netted about $50. In this was included the proceeds from the sale of a ten-cent-a-name quilt which was auctioned off at $25. Mr. W. L. Ward, the final bidder, turned the quilt over to the parsonage. The quilt, all told, netted $103.

A finer spirit of co-operation among members has never been exceeded. A more worthy appeal for a little help has never been made.

Mt. Lebanon is being painted, and other improvements contemplated.

Our second quarterly conference will be held at Mt. Lebanon Saturday, April 14, 2:30 p. m. President Taylor will preside.

Miss May Parsons, our efficient church pianist, has been sick several weeks, having had influenza. She has been greatly missed. Mrs. A. S. Barker is also sick.

At a supper sale in Randleman last Saturday night the Ladies' Aid netted around $50.

Our general attendance at Randleman and Worthville is very satisfactory.

WM. H. NEESE.

Greer's Chapel.—The first service held in our new church was the first Sunday in April, 1928, at 3 o'clock. We had Sunday school at 2 o'clock. The male choir of Lexington met with us and sang several beautiful songs, which were enjoyed by all.

Mr. John Leonard, who was with us Sunday for service, taught the Intermediate Sunday school class and made a splendid talk, which was enjoyed by all.

The preacher delivered a most able sermon Sunday afternoon. His text was taken from the fourth chapter of St. Mark. It was thoroughly explained and delivered.

Mrs. R. E. Smith, who has been a faithful worker during the building of our church of worship, but yet was no member of this church until Sunday afternoon, when she and two others joined our church. But we thank our good Heavenly Father for sending them to the rescue and having them join our little band of co-laborers.

God looking down upon us and seeing our need, has sent unto us a church in which we may worship. REPORTER.

Bess Chapel.—Rev. Mr. Henderson gave us a good sermon Sunday.

We have an excellent Sunday school; it is increasing every Sunday. Our attendance record for last Sunday, April 1st, was extra good. Enrolled, 187; present, 133; collection, $23.81. The same date one year ago: Enrolled, 134; present, 55; collection, $1.42.

Let us continue to work together to make our Sunday school bigger and better, for in unity there is strength.

Natra Childres, the 19-year-old daughter of the late Calvin Childres, died at her home last Thursday night. Natra was sick only a short time. She was buried last Saturday morning at 11 o'clock at Bess Chapel. Funeral services were held by Rev. Mr. Henderson.

Our Sunday school will give an Easter program next Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. The public is invited to come. REPORTER.

Enfield.—Last week at the regular meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society Mrs. E. I. Bellamy was elected superintendent of the Intermediate Christian Endeavor Society. Mrs. Bellamy is an experienced worker and leader among young people and I am sure this society will prosper under her guidance. Miss Annie May Lillian Bellamy is the president, and Mr. Luther Parker is the secretary. Our senior society has become one of the very live institutions of our church here. Mr. George Parker is its president. Mrs. P. S. Bellamy has been elected as vice-president to take the place of Miss Myrtic Johnson, who has recently gone to High Point.

An Easter program is in preparation under the direction of Mrs. Hubert Whitaker and Mrs. E. I. Bellamy. The prospects are that we will have a most splendid program. There is a considerable amount of measles in Enfield but we are sincerely hoping that it will not effect our program to any great extent.

Last week the writer was called on to conduct the funeral of Mr. Brinkley Brown, a young man just in the prime of life. Although not a member of my church, yet I was told that he lived a good life. He had been suffering a good many years. He had given up hope of ever regaining his health, and hence was expecting the end when it came. His last words were that he was "going home to be with Jesus." He leaves a wife and four children without a husband and father to give them comfort and protection over life's stormy road.

His body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Tarboro, his home town.

Last Sunday the writer conducted the regular services at Whitakers Chapel, Rosemeath, and Whitakers. All services were well attended. J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Randolph.—The weather and roads have been very much against our services of all kinds during this past winter. We expect a greater interest to be shown as the weather improves.

There have been many deaths on our work. Recently we have lost some of our best. For the second time since I have been pastor of Randolph charge, we have had to give up the superintendent of our Sunday school. The first was Bro. M. Brown. The last was Walter K. Hemphill, who died on March 19. Then Mrs. Arthur Staley on March 20; then Millard Filmore Pugh, on March 26, left us. Yes, many are joining the triumphant throng above.

May their mantles fall upon worthy shoulders which shall carry on the work of the Master. A. O. LINDLEY, Pastor.

Bethany, Randolph Charge.—Sunday was a good day for us. Pastor Lindley brought us an able sermon. Are we thankful as we should be for what we have? for what we are, and all we have, however little, comes through our blessed Savior.

Now to the Gratitude Gift cause. It seems every one would like to have a part in this great gift, and I hope our church will reach its quota. It is just a free will offering. I for one don't want to be left out.

The W. H. M. S. has finished up the year's work. Prayer by Mrs. J. T. Brown. We are beginning the new year with blessing boxes. Pray for this small band of workers, that we may do more the coming year for His Kingdom. With the coming of spring we want to see all who attend this church back in their places, helping us make it the best year we have had.

Best wishes to all,

MRS. C. E. JULIAN.

Yarborough Chapel.—Preached at Yarborough Sunday at 11 o'clock to a good congregation. Administered the Lord's Supper after the close of this service. Preached at the evening service to the largest congregation of the year.

This church to date is ahead on pastor's salary. We have a willing band of Christians who do not forget their pastor.

Mrs. Surratt has been confined to her bed, very sick with measles, for four weeks. She is now able to be up in her room.

The people here have been so good to us and have given us so many nice things. We wish to thank each of you. May God bless you.

Harmony:

Preached at Harmony on the fourth Sunday to a good attentive congregation. This is a true, loyal band of Methodist Protestants. They too minister to their pastor.

This church has a large Sunday school.

We hope to meet all of our claims this year.

Brethren, pray for us that we may do great good on Yarborough charge.

Yours in His service,

W. B. SURRATT.

Flat Rock Circuit.—The work has gone forward in a pleasing and inspiring manner in the past three months. In spite of inclement weather and sickness among old and young, our four active Sunday schools have continued without interruption. Of course, attendance has been small at times, yet interest has been sustained. We expect to gain those that have been lost plus many others soon. Bethany church has been without a Sunday school for the past year, but plans are now under way for organization, and work will be started in the near future.

Our second quarterly conference was held at Gideon's Grove church on the afternoon of March 31. Attendance and interest were excellent, all churches being ably represented. Business was transacted in a spirit of earnestness and order. Reports were good, and plans for future work were discussed. Bros. J. B. Ogburn, of Flat Rock, and Thomas Humphrey, of Bethany, were nominated as delegates to the conference.

On the evening of the 26th, the parsonage was invaded by a large number of our friends bearing gifts. Our pantry was more than filled with excellent things. We were glad to have these good people assemble with us and talk for a while. Wife and I are indeed grateful to all for this kindness. We appreciate the spirit of friendliness and good will shown to us by every one.

J. P. PEGG, Pastor.

Rockingham.—We had a full day here on Sunday, April 1. We had our regular Sunday school at 10 o'clock with fine attendance, and interest seemed to come with the attendance. At 1 o'clock our pastor delivered a very inspiring sermon on "The Blood of Jesus." I think every one present was touched very deeply. In the afternoon the singing convention met at our church. We always enjoy having the convention with us. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon our pastor, Rev. J. H. Trolinger, and some of the members of our church visited the convict camp. The pastor gave them a helpful talk. On Sunday night at 7:30 o'clock our pastor delivered another beautiful sermon. We appreciate our good pastor and dear wife's efforts in the good community work and the time they are giving in the works.

We expect to have another good day next Sunday. We are going to have another sunrise meeting. We hope to have as good a time this Easter Sunday morning at the sunrise meeting as we did last Easter. We will then have Sunday school at the regular hour, and preaching at 11 o'clock. The pastor expects to take some of the members of the church and visit the jail in the afternoon of the day. At night at 7:30 we are expecting to have a very interesting Easter program.

Last Saturday night, March 31, our pastor, Rev. J. H. Trolinger, and wife gave the teachers and official members of the church a good supper. Every one present fully enjoyed themselves. The evening was spent very happily.

Thursday night, April 5, the Lord's Supper will be observed at our church in memory of the night that Jesus instituted it to His disciples.

May the Lord bless all in His service,

(MISS) BIRDIE CONNELL, Reporter.

Halifax Circuit.—We have been very busy for the last few weeks. We are doing some repair work on every church on the work except one. We have put a new top on Ringwood church and we are putting three coats of paint on it now. We are trying to raise our Gratitude Gift, Delegates' expenses to general conference, offering for Home Missions, our college assessment, and A. C. B., all during the month of April. Well, we wish we could do more.

Our people are still pounding us. Since our last report Mr. Jessup, Mr. Boseman and Mrs. Lock have given us a ham. Others have given us chickens and eggs and other things. We have a big circuit down here and some big-hearted people.

We will have our Easter services at Bethesda next Sunday morning and at Hollister next Sunday night.

Our second quarterly conference will meet with Eden church on Friday, April 13, at 2 p. m. We want all of the official members to be present.

C. L. SPENCER, Pastor.

Henderson.—Painting our church outside and inside is being carried on most satisfactorily, and much improvement is being done by many of the individual classes to their class rooms. We have on an attendance contest among six of our adult classes in the Sunday school and splendid work is being done for the improvement of membership and increased interest.

On March 15 the Young Ladies' League held its regular business meeting at the home of Mrs. Annie Mae McIntosh, Mrs. T. D. Beckham, assistant hostess. The president, Mrs. H. A. Jordan, presided. Devotionals were conducted by Mrs. T. B. Burchett. The reports from treasurer, secretary, and other special committees were given and showed much work had been accomplished by the society during the year. It was planned to have a rummage sale and raise the necessary balance to clear the indebtedness of the society up to date. At the close of the business session, Mrs. Finch having charge of the program, gave a very interesting and instructive talk on the origin and progress of the missionary work in Japan. After adjournment the hostess served a pretty salad course.

The Philathea class held its business meeting in the class room March 29. The president, Mrs. A. B. Young, presided. Devotionals were conducted by the president. The various reports were given in and the treasurer reported a total of $148.00 on hand. During the period of new business the class voted to purchase four round tables for the primary department of the Sunday school. It was also decided if possible to arrange to bring the children out of the basement, and give them the Philathea room. The class voted to have their room chairs painted as soon as possible. There being no program, the meeting was dismissed by prayer.

The missionary societies of the church met with Mrs. S. V. Ellington March 19. A splendid attendance was had and a very interesting meeting resulted. This being the last meeting of the missionary year, there was much business and many plans were made.

The delegates for the branch meeting were elected, Mrs. R. A. Hunter and Mrs. E. Faulkner from the home, and Mrs. J. B. Fox and Mrs. C. L. Finch from the foreign. Much to the regret of the society it seemed impossible to raise the entire assessment for the year. The president, Mrs. L. R. Gooch, appointed a nominating committee to prepare a slate of officers to be voted on at the next meeting. The meeting closed by special prayer for those mentioned on the prayer calendar, offered by Mrs. S. R. Harris. The hostess then served ice cream and cake.

Several of our girls have arrived for the Easter holidays. Others will come in the latter part of the week.

We regret to report Mr. Geo. B. Harris is still at Watts hospital in Durham.

REPORTER.

High Point.—The pulpit Sunday morning was filled most acceptably by Dr. R. M. Andres, of the college, who presented a thoughtful message from Nehemiah 6:11. Dr. Andrews said that Nehemiah was called on to oppose many evils that are still prevalent in our day, desecration of the Sabbath, the social evil, and the economic question when corrupt men are entrenched in power. No monument has ever been erected to a coward. It takes a strong man to stand out against the tendencies of his times. Oliver Cromwell, who stemmed the tide of licentiousness at the Court of Charles, was very unpopular and had few friends; Patrick Henry, Washington, "Light Horse" Harry Lee, Ulysses S. Grant, who saved the Union, were all men of courage and fearlessness, and not afraid to express their convictions contrary to public sentiment. Gen. Robert E. Lee, when broken in fortune after the Civil War, the Louisiana State Lottery offered him what at that time was considered a fabulous sum, replied emphatically, "No, gentlemen; my name is not for sale." It is in all of us to like pleasant things and to hear compliments and congratulations, but we cannot get the best of life unless he subjects himself to hard things. Let a man denounce graft and corruption in high places, and he will not be well liked. Let us appreciate the man or woman who has the courage to take a stand for unpopular convictions. At this service the music was of a very high order; the choir rendered a beautiful and appropriate anthem, "The Palm Trees;" Mrs. J. Hobart Allred sang, "Consider the Lilies" in very splendid voice, and Mrs. Walter Kester played Raff's "Cavatina" on the violin with great skill and fine effect. Mrs. Kester, who is a bride and new-comer to High Point, having taught violin in Salem College as Miss Edith Yost, possesses great talent, and is very generous with it. Our congregation appreciates greatly her rendition of Sunday morning. There was no evening service owing to the opening of the handsome new Presbyterian church on North Main street. Many of our people worshiped with them in this magnificent edifice, and we rejoice with our sister congregation in the completion of their elegant church, the most beautiful in the city.

The C. E. Society held an interesting meeting Monday evening, when Miss Marjorie Welborn was leader for the topic, "What Happens When Young People Dare to Follow Christ?" The usual monthly social followed, and proved very enjoyable.

The Sunday School Workers' Council will be held this (Tuesday) evening, at which important business is to be transacted.

The date of meeting of the Missionary Circles has been changed to the first Monday of each month, and the general meeting will be held each third Monday.

Delegates to Branch Meeting will go to Greensboro with splendid reports, and budgets in both Home and Foreign Societies paid in full. The women of these two societies have raised more than $1,000 last year in addition to the work of the Aid Society, whose members are practically the same. Some new subscriptions to the Missionary Record, as well as a number of renewals have been secured.

The new catalogue of High Point College is just off the press, and presents a pleasing appearance. A summary of the student body shows a total enrollment of 344 with a senior class of 45. The faculty numbers 22 members, an addition to which is Ernest B. Stimson, head of the Music department, who has diplomas in voice, piano, and organ from Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, and who has been for four years head of the voice department of Meridian School of Music, Meridian, Miss. Miss Mary Louise McDearman, B. S. of N. C. College for Women, is to be the librarian next year. An A-grade rating has been received by the college, which entitles the graduates of the session 1927-28 to Class A certificates under prescribed rules and regulations. This is signed by Messrs. A. T. Allen, J. Henry Highsmith, and James E. Hillman.

Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Neese went to Charlotte Monday to attend the funeral of a nephew of the former.

We are pleased to learn that Prof. Paul Kennett has recovered from an attack of chicken-pox. He and small son, Stanwood, were victims at the same time.

Mr. and Mrs. George T. Penny are moving into their magnificent new residence near Jamestown on the Greensboro highway.

We are sorry to note the illness of Mr. John Eller, of Davidson County, father of Mrs. W. P. Pickett, who is 97 years of age. Mrs. Pickett has been with him for a week.

Eden, Halifax Charge.—We wish you all a happy Easter. We are looking forward to a very happy one as we expect to have barbecue at Bellamy's Mill Easter Monday. Come and join us.

We are glad to report that our Sunday school is still in existence and now that spring is here we hope to see renewed interest. The Township Sunday School Convention was held with us on Sunday, March 10. Rev. J. D. Kirk delivered an address on increasing Sunday school efficiency. Mr. T. A. Chappell spoke on plans for increasing Sunday school attendance. Rev. J. Clyde Auman talked on how teachers and officers may increase their efficiency. There were five-minute talks by several others, followed by business session and election of officers. We feel that these meetings are quite beneficial.

Our pastor continus to "deliver the goods" in the form of excellent sermons on first and third Sundays. We are considering changing the preaching hour on third Sundays from 3 o'clock to 7:30 o'clock. Wednesday, April 4, has been named as repair day and we are expecting to have the roof and ceiling repaired that day. We are looking forward to our revival. Our pastor has secured very efficient help and we hope that much lasting good may be accomplished.

REPORTER.

Fairview, Anderson Circuit.—We have had measles through this section and our attendance at church and Sunday school has not been very large, but we have had service most every time.

We enjoyed a good sermon today by our pastor, Rev. G. B. Ferree. We feel sure we will have a good year together with as good a leader as we have.

Today our congregation was very good, though the church was not full, but we raised money enough to buy paint and oil to paint the church, to be done by the first Sunday in May for our annual home-coming day. We also raised $51.50 for pastor.

On March 18 we subscribed and paid together our Annual Conference budget; $45.00 has been paid in. We feel very much encouraged now and hope that we may be able to meet all of our assessments in full by the end of the year.

Our Sunday school is doing fairly well, with very good attendance and a very good interest.

We have had a great deal of sickness in our community, but glad to report all better.

N. F.

Hickory Ridge, Forsyth Circuit.—We have been moving along, though our reports have been few. We hope to do better in the future. Mr. Stubbins and family are in the parsonage. He has been giving us some splendid sermons since coming to our work. We hope, when the weather opens and contagious diseases decrease to all get busy and have a splendid year. The Sunday school has held up nicely during the winter.

The Woman's Missionary Society met with Mrs. Robert Cox and sisters the fourth Sunday afternoon. We have a very interesting society and we hope it continues to grow.

Perhaps our next reports will be more interesting.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

MRS. W. B. MERRITT.

April 2, 1928.

Spring Hill, West Thomasville Circuit.—Our hearts were made heavy on March 18 by the death of our Sunday school superintendent, Mr. Herman Haynes. It seems it could not be that one so faithful in the Lord's work should be called away. Mr. Haynes was 44 years of age and was sick only a few days, pneumonia causing his death. He was faithful and ever ready for the work of the Lord. He seldom missed a service. He was a good neighbor, one that was ready to help in time of need. The funeral was conducted at Spring Hill March 21 by the pastor, Rev. G. W. Andrews, and former pastor, Rev. W. M. Loy.

The large gathering of friends showed the esteem in which he was held. We believe our loss is Heaven's gain. REPORTER.

Burlington, First Church.—A number of things that have been of interest and profit to the members and pastor of First Church, Burlington, have been happening in recent weeks. And since Brother Braxton's little boy has been quite ill he doubtless will not write, so I will mention a few things that have taken place.

On March 11th at the evening hour Miss Annie L. Forrest spoke in the interest of missions. It was the occasion of the Thank-Offering service of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. Miss Forrest's address was enjoyed by a fair sized congregation, and the response to her appeal for a thank-offering was gratifying. Miss Forrest was the interesting and enjoyable guest of the parsonage for a week. In this connection I might state that I understand the missionary societies have both raised their entire budgets and that they will have a good report for the Branch Meeting.

On Friday evening, March 30th, the Christian Endeavorers gave a banquet at the hut for the young people of the church. This was a delightful occasion. Besides a good bit of fun and lots of good things to eat, we had a splendid address by Rev. C. W. Bates, of Calvary church, Greensboro. Brother Bates told us in a unique way what Christian Endeavor has meant to him. We are glad to note an increase of interest in Christian Endeavor.

Last Sunday was one of the best days we have had at Burlington since I came here. At the close of the Sunday school hour Rev. Lawrence Little conducted a decision service for us. There were something like 30 or more of the Sunday school boys and girls who made decisions for Christ. Then at the 11 o'clock hour Brother Little preached to a large, attentive congregation. Both of his messages were greatly enjoyed. The preacher folks were delighted to have Brother and Sister Little and Little Betty Little as visitors at the parsonage over Sunday.

Next Sunday we will have the reception of members at the 11 o'clock hour and the Easter program at the evening hour—eight o'clock.

The work is moving along nicely. No marvelous things are being done, I suppose, but there is no room for complaint. We are hoping to have something of very great interest to First Church and her friends to announce before a great while. Watch the Herald.

Many of our people have been ill this winter. I would not attempt to mention all who have been ill with measles or something else. We are glad, however, to report that all, as far as we know, have recovered or are on the way to recovery.

L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.

Pleasant Grove.—Our congregations at church and Sunday school were much better yesterday because of improved weather conditions.

Our janitor, Brother Charlie Kennedy, is able to be out again after being confined to the house for several days, suffering from an attack of influenza. Brother Hubert Robbins is still suffering with his eye, but is improving some. We hope that the sight may be restored. Mrs. J. R. Meredith has returned from Concord where she has spent several weeks by the bedside of her father, who died about a week ago. Mrs. F. H. Clark has been absent from church for several Sundays on account of sickness. We hope soon to have her back in Sunday school and church services.

Our Easter program will be rendered next Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock hour. Mrs. Honeycutt has been busy for some time training the Juniors, also the Beginners and Primaries, to take part in the program.

The pastor and his family had the privilege of entertaining the Church Brotherhood last Saturday night. The attendance was large and we enjoyed having these brethren in our home. Upon request, Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Ballard were present and Brother Ballard addressed the Brotherhood in a very acceptable manner. The Brotherhood has recently placed $250 worth of shrubbery in the cemetery, which will soon add much beauty to the place.

The Ladies' Aid Society meets this week in the home of Mrs. J. E. Cecil on English street in High Point.

G. L. REYNOLDS.

Cid, Denton Charge.—The prayer meeting comes to Cid church Saturday night.

Rev. E. A. Bingham, with wife and children, filled his appointment at Cid Sunday at 2:30 and delivered an inspiring sermon. He also spoke on the resurrection of Jesus.

Sunday school at 9:45. Come and bring someone.

Rev. Bingham and family spent a little while in the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Wright Sunday evening.

Mrs. Hayes Harris' many friends will be glad to learn that she will return home Thursday from High Point Hospital.

The second quarterly conference will convene at Canaan church on Saturday before the third Sunday in April at 2 p. m.

NOTICE! NOTICE!

Owing to the fact that so many pastors have not sent in final reports, it seems best not to publish statement this week of the standing of charges on the Gratitude Gift. This does not mean that the response to this undertaking has been weak. That is not the case at all. The fact is, the response has been highly encouraging. The only reason for not publishing the standing now is that we do not have full and accurate reports from all the charges. We want this, as nearly as possible, before we make our statement. We hope to have it by next week.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Haynes

Herman Haynes passed from this life Sunday, March 18, 1928, at the age of 44 years, six months and three days.

Mr. Haynes was married to Miss Mae Kennedy May 3, 1903. To this union were born nine children; three girls and six boys. He leaves a wife, seven children, a father and mother, three sisters and a host of relatives and friends to mourn his departure.

Some time ago he professed faith in Christ and joined the Spring Hill Methodist Protestant church, where he has been a faithful member and willing worker since.

To know Mr. Haynes was to know a man of high ideals, noble character and sterling quilities. He set for us a high standard of Christion citizenship, and was hightly esteemed by all who knew him. He was a man who made friends wherever he went and met every one with a smile. One of his friends said he was a man you could always depend on for truth and honesty. The church has lost a Christian workers, the community a competent and useful citizen, and the home a devoted husband and father.

The sudden removal of such a life from our midst leaves a vacancy and a shadow that will be realized by all. Yet while there is a vacant place in the home, church, community, and other organizations in which he labored, there is a mansion filled in Heaven above.

He has gone from his dear ones, his children, his wife,
Whom he willingly toiled for, and loved as his life;
Oh, God! how mysterious and how strange are thy ways,
To take from us this loved one in the best of his days.

The funeral was conducted at the Spring Hill Methodist Protestant church by Rev. G. W. Andrew and Rev. W. M. Loy, assisted by members of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics. Interment was made in the Spring Hill cemetery.

Johnson

On March 22, Mrs. B. W. Johnson, one of saintliest and best beloved of women, passed to her heavenly reward in the 75th year of her life. Those who knew Mrs. Johnson, and they were many, grieve the loss of one who loved her heavenly Father and her earthly neighbor. She had been a faithful member of the church for more than 50 years. The Johnson home has always been graciously open to ministers of the gospel, and scores of preachers know of the hopitality and friendliness that made the home one of pleasure and peace to them.

Mr. Johnson preceded her to the glory world on December 13, 1926. Nine children, dutiful, faithful, and honored, mourn the death of a beloved mother.

Interment was made in Flat Rock cemetery on the afternoon of the twenty-third. The funeral service was directed by Rev. J. R. Hutton, of Greensboro, who for many years was Mrs. Johnson's beloved pastor. Rev. W. F. Kennett and the present pastor at Flat Rock assisted Brother Hutton. There was an etremely large audience of friends and relatives present for the funeral service. The tributes of love and respect paid the deceased and her family were of the highest, but were only our sincere and heart-felt expressions. The best that could be thought and expressed was appropriate. The floral presentation consisted of many beautiful and gorgeous wreaths. These flowers were the symbolic expressions of many loving and saddened hearts.

Flat Rock church has lost one of its most honored and faithful members; the Stokesdale community has lost a friend and neighbor of the sincerest and noblest nature; the family has lost a mother who was near and dear to them. Yet her passing was a victory for the Christian faith. We know our loss, too, we know heaven's gain. In her victorious passing there is a noble example of enduring faith that moves one with a new hope and a higher inspiration.

J. P. PEGG, Pastor.

Faucett

Mrs. Harriet C. Faucett passed away March 28th in her home near Littleton, N. C., aged 70 years and 10 days. Her husband preceded her to the glory world. Mrs. Faucett was a member of Littleton M. P. church and was a good Christian woman. It was the writer's privilege to visit her home often while we were serving Littleton charge. It was always pleasant because of the hearty welcome that she gave us. She was a sweet-spirited woman and had many friends.

She leaves behind three sons and two daughters; 25 grandchildren and 18 great-grandchildren. These have the sympathy of the church and community. Funeral services were held in the home March 29 by the writer and her pastor, Rev. M. I. Crutchfield, after which her body was carried to Littleton cemetery and laid to rest.

STREET PAVED WITH EGGS

You have heard of people walking on eggs. Last Friday morning we saw a street paved with eggs, broken eggs, much scrambled eggs. This happened near the Herald office. Bro. J. A. Stout, of Climax, was coming into the city in a car containing many eggs. Going in the opposite direction was a car containing Mr. Ray and Mr. Sauls, printers in the Herald office, with a son of Mr. Sauls, on his way to school, standing on the running-board. It was raining hard. The printer's car turned to the left to enter a side street. Mr. Stout failed to see it in the blinding rain and drove into it, injuring both cars, hurting the young man on the running-board, and covering the street for quite a distance with broken eggs. The worst result was the injury to the young man, but no bones were broken and it is hoped that he will be over his bruises before many days. That side street entrance is a danger point in the road and we believe the highway commission should put up a warning sign. There is a bend in the street just before reaching it, and there have been many narrow escapes from collision there.

SURPRISE BIRTHDAYS

Several years ago I remember that one of our most noted preachers said: "More people are born on Sunday than any other day." Now, he was judging from the number of "birthday dinners" on Sunday. I have just read an account of Rev. A. G. Laughlin's friends and relatives giving him a surprise birthday dinner a few Sundays ago. But one thing that struck me so forcibly was that Brother Laughlin, though 78 years old, (and in March), went to church. I thought what a splendid example he was living before us who are much younger. God bless you, Brother Laughlin, and may you have many more happy birthdays.

But I want to tell about two of the oldest members of the Ladies' Aid Society of Kernersville church who have recently celebrated their birthdays.

On the afternoon of Friday, March 30, the members of the Aid Society, accompanied by a few invited guests, gathered at the home of Mrs. Lucian Hepler to celebrate the 80th birthday of her mother, Mrs. Fannie Wadkins. After each one had bestowed upon her a shower of good wishes and gratitude for her long life of usefulness in our midst, some of her favorite hymns were sung and prayer was offered by the pastor. Then all were ushered into the dining room where we beheld the birthday cake, which was aglow with numerous golden candles. The cake had been baked and decorated by Mrs. Walter Linville. Cake, cream and salted nuts were served. The living and dining rooms were decorated with lovely jonquils and hyacinths.

Then on Saturday afternoon, March 31st, this same Aid Society gathered at the home of Mrs. Cora Ann Ballard to celebrate with her her 85th birthday. She was given a miscellaneous shower of good things. This beloved sister has been blind for more than two years. She is a dear mother in Israel; so patient, gentle and sweet. She, too, seemed to enjoy very much the singing and devotional program. It cheered our hearts to hear her talk so freely of how she is just waiting for the Master to summons her to come up higher.

I am sure it should be a great inspiration to each of us to have these two saints of God as members of our Aid Society, and may we ever honor and be more thoughtful of those who are more advanced in years.

GRATITUDE GIFT OVER-SUBSCRIBED BY EASTERN CONFERENCE

One thousand dollars more than the apportionment has been subscribed by the churches of the Eastern Conference. This was revealed in the report of President Day at the South Jersey District meeting in Second Church Millville on Tuesday, March 27th. Two churches in the South Jersey District and one in the Metropolitan have not yet reported—Glassboro, Christ Church, Atlantic City, and Beulah Church, Kearny.

The Eastern Conference pastors entered with commendable enthusiasm and hopefulness into the proposition of making a worthy Centennial Gratitude Gift at the General Conference in May, and the churches responded even beyond the expectations of the most sanguine.

DANIEL'S CONFESSION AND PRAYER

We see so many good articles on evangelism and one of our greatest needs is evangelism. We ask what will bring the great awakening that all churches of all denominations need. Daniel seeth a vision and where there is no vision the people perish. Daniel 1:3: "And I set my face unto the Lord God, to seek by prayer and supplication, with fastings and sack-cloth and ashes, and I prayed unto the Lord my God and made confession and said, O Lord, the great and dreadful God, keeping the covenant and mercy to them that love him and to them that keep his commandments, we have sinned and have committed iniquity, and have done wickedly and have rebelled even by departing from thy precepts and from thy judgments. Now therefore, O our God, hear the prayer of thy servant and his supplications and cause thy face to shine upon thy sanctuary that is desolate for the Lord's sake. O my God, incline thine ear and hear, open thine eyes and behold our desolation and the city which is called by thy name, for we do not present our supplications before thee for our righteousness, but for they great mercies. O Lord, hear. O Lord, forgive. O Lord, hearken, and do defer not for thine own sake. O my God, for thy city, and thy people are called by thy name; yea while I was speaking and praying and confessing my sin and the sin of my people, Israel, and presenting my supplication before the Lord my God for the holy mountain of my God, yea whiles I was speaking in prayer, even the man Gabriel whom I had seen in the vision at the beginning being caused to fly swiftly touched me about the time of the evening oblation and he informed me and talked with me and said, O Daniel, I am now come forth to give thee skill and understanding; at the beginning of thy supplications the commandment came forth and I am come to show thee for thou art greatly belowed; therefore understand the matter and consider the vision. We always get the goods when we pay the price. Ask and ye shall receive. Awake, thou that sleepest, and Christ shall give thee light. MARTHA PARSONS.

—Calvary church has a site of unusual attractiveness. A visiting preacher said recently that it is the prettiest church site he ever saw. Part of its attractiveness is due to the trees in the midst of which the church was built. One of these trees, tall and straight, has been hugged to death by a climbing ivy vine. It seemed too beautiful to cut down and was spared by the building committee. But last Saturday night a wind storm laid this tree low, and did it in such a way that it did no injury. It was surrounded on three sides by the church, the church hut, and a residence. It was near enough to fall against either of the three, but it fell so as to strike none of these.

The Church's Proper Attitude Toward Social Dancing

There has been difference of view and difference of practice among churches in regard to dancing. Some churches have regarded it as a very objectionable if not sinful form of amusement and have forbidden their members to have part in it. Other churches have tolerated the practice and have in some cases encouraged it among their own young people. The usual justification in such cases has been that it keeps the young people from degrading associations in public dance halls. Scattered over the country, mainly in the large cities, are quite a number of churches that have allowed dancing under the auspices of the church. In Chicago some Methodist churches have been found among this class. When Rev. N. M. Harrison was pastor of a Methodist Protestant Church in Chicago, he was asked by his Christian Endeavor Society whether they might not have a dance at the close of their Christian Endeavor meeting. Of course he did not consent, but the incident illustrates the difference of views that obtain in the church world.

The editor of The Kit, a magazine devoted to social recreation, has been studying and investigating this subject. He has gathered together testimonies from many sources regarding the effect of the church's becoming a patron of the dance and has published these testimonies. The impression made by reading this mass of evidence is well expressed by the editor of the magazine as follows:

"The church has a fundamental and unavoidable responsibility to set up a high ideal for individual and social conduct in all of life's relationships, including the use of leisure, not only in the matter of standards, but in the actual provision of adequate recreational activities. Such a program must be based, not upon expediency or a mere desire for valuable by-products, but on the fundamental recreational needs and desires of the people themselves.

"Since, however, the church stands for the development of full-rounded individual personality, and for the guidance of all social relationships by Christian principles, it can use to attain these ends only such means as are entirely consistent with its high purpose. We are convinced from this study that the modern dance is fundamentally defective as a recreational instrument. It is completely commercialized; it tends to destroy respect for the personality of others; and it is based upon a direct erotic appeal which makes self-control extremely difficult for some participants.

"Therefore, its use by the church is not justified under any conceivable circumstances. Careful surveys of many churches over a period of years fails to reveal a single instance where any results have been obtained by the use of the modern dance which could not have been better secured by other means. However sincere the motives behind it, or apparently

Women's Ways in Leisure

Rev. J. H. Page used to say that there were no hypocrites in the army. In their leisure hours the soldiers grouped themselves according to their affinities, and it was observable that there were two distinct classes, men who were sincere Christians and men who were godless.

A similar observation may be made regarding women in their use of the leisure that has come to them. One class of women are using their leisure to promote the cause of missions or to devise ways to help the poor or some other class of unfortunates. And with these women this work is not a mere fad entered into for the sake of novelty or notoriety. They pursue the work week after week and year after year. It is evident that their hearts are set on the work.

Another class of women devote their abundant leisure to an effort to amuse themselves with games or shows or social small talk. It is evident that they have no serious purpose in life. They are gay butterflies. They are very busy with unworthy employments. They are in pursuit of happiness—their own. They seem not to have any sympathy for the multitude of the world's needy and suffering. What a contrast between their lives and the life of Jesus of Nazareth. His life is the pattern of all true lives, and we may be sure that His life is the kind of life that God approves.

The remark we have made regarding women's lives is true also of men's lives, but is perhaps not quite so evident in the case of men. What we do in our leisure, our times of freedom, shows what we are.

Time to Honor Local Pioneers

April 29 has been set for Centennial Day in all our churches that can observe the day. The thought is that all people join in celebrating the founding of our denomination one hundred years ago. It will be fitting that each church also celebrate its own founding, especially if far enough in the past to require an effort at reminiscence. There were pioneers in the founding of each local church. It is fitting that their worthy achievements be recognized on this occasion. Some of them were obscure laymen, but they must have had in them the spirit of sacrifice and devotion to lead them in the effort to erect a new altar unto the Lord. It would add to the interest and value of a local celebration to have sketches of the lives of the founders read. We suggest this item to those making out programs for the Centennial Commemoration.

—Are presidential election years bad for business? A few of them have been; most of them have not been.

—Premier Mussolini of Italy has fought a great fight against the criminal organization known all over the world as the Mafia. He seems to have won. After four years in the courts 154 men and women have been tried. The penalties of those convicted amount to almost twenty centuries of hard labor.

JESUS AND THE HUNGER FOR KNOWLEDGE

"Learn of Me"

Matt. 11:29

In the light of the modern printing press, cheap good literature and our magnificent public school system, it is a crime to be ignorant. There is no excuse now, if there ever was, for being ignorant. The great daily press brings to your door every morning the news of the world, so that Africa and America join hands with Asia in telling you what is being done all over the world. So that we are able to speak intelligently concerning the recent events in any nation under the sun. The wireless telegraph nearly bridges the ocean and we are able to follow the great steamer across and konw what is going on in mid-ocean. Now this is one of the real hungers of the human heart, to know, and in the acquired knowledge to rejoice. To know, and to know that you know, gives assurance and confidence and people to whom you speak listen eagerly. A man is speaking who knows. One of the ancients said, "He that knows, and knows that he knows, is a safe man, follow him." The measure of a man's knowledge is the measure of his responsibility to both God and men. If his knowledge be great, just in corresponding proportions are his responsibilities increased. The clamor of the world is for the one best fitted for the position offered and for life's duties. The one who knows receives advancement, while the one who has neglected to take advantage of the opportunities that have come to him, so that he might know, increases the great army of what we call "faithful slaves." There is always room at the top for those who are willing to pay the price and endure the strain of the climb. Now, there is no law in the natural world but what has its parallel in the spiritual. It is true here. Jesus said, "Learn of Me," and "ye" shall find rest. In Him is the secret of knowledge. In the doing of His will brings the highest happiness and chief joy. "If any man will do His will he shall know," is part of a quotation from Jesus which applies here. If a man is really anxious to know the truth, he can. Jesus was, and is, the truth, and it is the same concerning both the "Watt" and the "Life." He is still the world's greatest Teacher and His authority never grows less. The greatest men, scientists and statesmen alike, learn of Him. Jesus inspires for knowledge. It is a natural longing to go to school and learn. The child, as the man, is anxious to know the "why" of things which he sees but cannot explain. So we send our child to school. Now our public schools are not free from fault, but they will be better than what they are. They are not what they will become. It is one of the greatest blessings that has come to our children. The state has established it, it is true, not because the school is a good thing for the child but that his ignorance is a bad thing for the state. The state cannot afford to have ignorant citizens. For ignorance means crime and crime means expense to the state, hence we have our public schools as a preventive. We have compulsory educational laws. The state takes the boy from the plow and sends him to school. What for? That he might know better. So he becomes a citizen worthy the name. But Jesus offers something better still. He offers to teach the boy all that he receives in school, plus satisfaction for his soul. I hope to live to see the day when the fundamentals of our religion will be taught in all our public schools. I do not mean sectarianism, but the basic principles of the religion of Jesus upon which we all agree. I do not believe that any person could do his country a greater service than the preparation of such a text book. One of the great leaders of England once said when the public school system was first broached, "Gentlemen, if you only propose to educate the children you will make them clever devils." What he meant was that education minus religious training was a dangerous thing, not only for the child but the state also. I see no reason why a belief in God, the immortality of the soul, and mutual dependence upon each other cannot be taught in our public school life and not be in any sense sectarian training. I am in no sense advocating the Parochial Schools of the Catholic Church. Still I believe that the vital principles which I have mentioned ought to be taught our children that they may not grow up in ignorance of the living authority and power of the Great Teacher. Behind all our schools and colleges, I can see the majestic figure of the Son of Man pointing out the path of true knowledge, and asking that all shall learn of Him. In so doing they may find rest to their souls. He is still the source and inspiration of all science worthy the name.

Jesus feeds this hunger for knowledge. He is continually letting men into His secrets and telling them His thoughts. So new and wonderful discoveries are being made known to the world in rapid succession. No person can tell what the next twenty-four hours may bring forth. The very air seems surcharged with His presence as He leads men on and on into great and more wonderful things. Men want to know and Jesus is telling them as fast as they are willing to learn. As he feeds, He takes men into the secrets of His own life and says, "Learn of Me." Lord Kelvin said, "The greatest discovery that I ever made was when I found in Jesus all that my soul needed to know." To be able to think God's thoughts after Him is a wonderful gift and that He continues to reveal them to those who are willing to learn should cause us no surprise. The mighty achievements of engineering skill are the revealing of His plans and thoughts for the advancement of the race. The great Panama Canal may stand as an example of this.

Jesus not only inspires for knowledge and then feeds it, but He satisfies it as well. He always completes what He begins. He does nothing half way. If the leper is cleansed, he is every whit whole. If the dead are raised, it is to complete life. If the sick are cured, they are entirely well. And if a man's sins are forgiven, they are all forgiven. Bless His holy name for His wonderful works to the children of men. His work is ever complete and glorious. For this reason as well as many others, He is worthy to receive honor and dominion and glory forever.

"Learn of Me," He said, and ye shall find, not social preferment, not political honor, neither wealth nor riches of any kind, but just sweet and blessed rest. Somehow, I like that. It is very sweet and helpful to me. "Rest." He is the only Teacher who ever said it. No one else could say it. He did, and it is perfectly natural and right for Him to say it. It would be out of place with any one else. If men really want to have knowledge, they can have it. But must learn by the doing and not by dreaming of what they would like to do. In your search after truth, you will find it only in Jesus. He is the embodiment of the truth. He is the truth. No "ism," no doctrine of man can satisfy the craving of your soul. He can. So instinctively we come back to Jesus, to lay our acquired knowledge at His feet and ask Him to use it for His glory alone. We may search the Scriptures and find there an "eternal life," but only because they testify of Him. We have all things in Him. He is our rich reward in our search after knowledge. He gives power to the mind of man to grasp the truth which He unfolds and then trusts them with His secrets of His life. The great thinkers of the world own Him Lord and God of their thoughts as well as their actions. He is the greatest discovery you can make. Why, then, will you be ignorant of Him? Come to Him and learn. He can and will teach you. Be His pupil. Receive Him into your heart and know for yourself concerning the great doctrines of His Kingdom. My dear friend, may you ever strive to learn of Him. Amen. C. Morgan Compiler.

FAMINE IN CHINA

A cable message from the Famine Relief Commission of Peking just received by the Federal Council of Churches, New York, states that according to reports from misisonaries in the northwestern part of the Province of Shantung appalling famine conditions prevail. The situation, which has been growing worse for many months, is now so bad that nine-tenths of the population are reported to be eating unwholesome food substitutes. A half million people are actually starving and 4,000,000 more face similar conditions in the next two months. Deaths are increasing. Men have abandoned their homes and gone to Manchuria in search of work. Children are being offered for sale; boys of six selling, in some instances, for twelve silver dollars, the equivalent of $5.00 American currency.

Some hundreds of thousands of dollars, which have been available during the winter for carrying on relief work, are now completely exhausted, so that relief agencies find themselves without funds to carry on even the meager relief work which had been conducted by various missionaries at their own stations and by other agencies. The International Famine Relief Commission has surveyed a number of projects for road construction and river conservation in order to give employment to famine sufferers, but finds itself entirely without resources necessary to carry on this work.

CONVERSION

This is the vital fact that the church must bring or fail. When the church loses its power to convert, it loses its right to be called a church. Unless it is making bad men into good men, weak men into strong men, uncertain men into certain, selfish men into unselfish, and men lacking the God-consciousness into men radiantly realizing God, it is failing as a church of the living Christ. And nothing can take the place of this fact of conversion.

Through psychoanalysis you may come into the kingdom of the somewhat relieved mind; through social emphases you may come into the kingdom of a better and juster social organization; through education you may come into the kingdom of interesting fact; through systems of mental suggestion you may come into the kingdom of improved health; through self-culture you may come into the kingdom of refinement, but if you come into the kingdom of God, you must be converted. When Jesus, Son of Fact, uses the word "except" in connection with conversion, then there is no exception to that "except." The church will never sophisticate itself away from this need of conversion. For the strong man of affairs knows that, after all, these are the only "affairs" with which he deals. He knows that they do not touch the inmost need of his heart overlaid with ashes—he needs conversion as deeply as "the down and out." For "conversion," according to Sabatier, "is a creative and inaugural experience," loosing untold possibilities in human personality and inaugurating life into adjusted and spiritually authoritative living. It brings to life a solid happiness." "You have found God—by your energy and happiness you show it," said a Hindu to a Christian at the close of a Round Table. He had, for conversion is that "inward happy crisis by which human life is transformed and an issue opened up toward the ideal life. Through it men find power to live by, for it is not so much a doctrine as a dynamic."—From "Christ at the Round Table," by E. Stanley Jones.

THE GLADIOLUS

The Washington Evening Star is, naturally, for the most part concerned with national and district politics and the news of the world. Yet this great paper takes time and space to place in its editorial columns a leading article on this wonderful flower that is rapidly becoming a general favorite with American flower lovers. The editorial follows:

The gospel of the gladiolus has been so widespread during the past ten years that this spring will see thousands of these bulbs planted to every one that might have been put into the ground before the World War.

The peerless beauty of the "glads," combined with their ease of culture and freedom from disease and insect pests, makes them the finest of the summer-flowering bulbs.

With these sterling qualities in their favor, it is not to be wondered at that literally millions upon millions of these bulbs are planted every year in America.

Each spring, too, sees thousands of old gardeners, who for one reason or another have ignored the gladiolus, taking it up, to yield, in their turn, to its fascination.

The gladiolus is, in reality, a glorious form of lily, its name being pure Latin for "little sword," designating the shape of its rapier-like leaves. It was once called the "sword lily."

Possibly no other flower in commerce, with the exception of the tulip, has had such an interesting history. A native of South Africa and other countries, the wild species of this flower during the last one hundred years, have been crossed and recrossed.

Hybridizers of all lands have joined in the breeding of new and better gladioli, so that today it may be truthfully said that in these flowers, as in some others, what God made man has improved upon.

Primeval forests never saw such wonderful blooms as any one may have in his own garden today for a little money wisely expended. Even the form of the flower has been changed. The color combinations are only to be described by the word exquisite. There are plain and ruffled specimens, and a wholly different type known as "primulinus."

Not to know the modern gladiolus is to confess oneself behind the times in the floral kingdom. To miss its beauties in the home garden and, as a cut flower, in the home itself, is to deprive oneself of real joy.

Methodist Protestant Church Organized in India

Inspiring news from our India Mission has just reached me and I pass it on to you. It is the account of the organization of the first Methodist Protestant Church in India. The account is given by Miss Grace Perley, the secretary of our India Mission.

"The year 2028 will have a double meaning in the history of the Methodist Protestant Church, for not only will the people in the Homeland celebrate the 200th anniversary, but our Indian brothers and sisters will celebrate their 100th anniversary.

"The long-cherished dream of the Indian Methodist Protestant Church has been realized. History has been made. The India Methodist Protestant Church has been organized in a very fitting and pleasing manner.

"Several years ago, when Dr. F. C. Klein and Dr. J. C. Broomfield visited our Mission station, two of our Indian preachers were ordained and both have labored in that sacred capacity ever since. One has been stationed at the Farm or Settlement and there acts in the capacity of superintendent as well as pastor. The other one has served the two Mission schools and the Christian community.

"The committee in charge arranged the schedule of procedure which consisted of a series of lectures to instruct the people in Methodist Protestantism, emphasizing why and what we are in contrast to other Methodisms. Our two missionary preachers, Rev. J. F. Minnis and Rev. P. M. Cassen, were chosen to deliver these lectures.

"A portion of the Church Discipline was translated into the vernacular which permitted the Indian Christians to follow step by step. Twice daily, from January 31st to February 3rd, the people came together. In the morning to be instructed and in the evening to pray and meditate.

"On February 4th all things were ready for the organization. Since we have no church building and no other building large enough to accommodate such a gathering, we assembled under a huge tree in the Boys' Compound, at 4:30 p. m. Rev. S. B. Kasote preached the sermon and 140 came forward and presented themselves as charter members. These represented all stations in life—Americans and Indians; old and young; men and women; boys and girls; educated and uneducated. As fine a looking army of Christian soldiers as any church in the Homeland could muster.

"From this august body of Christian believers a Standing Committee was elected to 'carry on' until a permanent pastor could be secured and the regular officers of the church were installed.

"The following day being Sunday, could anything be more fitting than to observe this first Sunday of our organization with special services and inviting a neighboring American missionary, Rev. Clark, D.D., of the American-Marathi Mission at Ahmednagar, to preside?

"To arrange for a speaker and the day's program a special committee was appointed. This committee consisted of our two Indian pastors, our two head masters, one Indian brother not regularly employed in the Mission work, and two missionaries. Quite the cream of the intellectual element of our little Christian community. They arranged for baptisms, reception of more members and the observance of the Holy Communion. Truly it was an impressive service.

"Our guest of the day, Dr. Clark, has had a long and serviceable missionary career. His flow of Marathi and splendid delivery of the Word of God touched us all. Those words of comfort, counsel, encouragement, responsibility and spiritual admonition will not soon be forgotten. Two hours did not seem half long enough and when the Apostolic benediction was at last pronounced we all felt that we had taken a big step forward and were confident that we had not taken the step alone and unguided."

The organization of this church is not only a great step forward but it is a step in the right direction and shows that our work in India is progressing. We have a fine corps of workers there. Now the next step to which we are all looking hopefully and expectantly forward is the organization of an Indian Mission Conference. This step will soon be taken.

THE CONTAGION EVERYWHERE

Occasionally we hear of some preacher saying that there are no Modernistic influences touching his people and that he does not need to warn them against the current skeptical Liberalism from his pulpit. Such brethren are mistaken. The contagion of the subtle, present-day rationalism is everywhere. It is finding its way into every community through books, magazines, daily papers, and in other ways. And only those to whom its fraudulent pretensions have been made clear and who are intelligently anchored to the truth of God's Word, are safe. Never was there a time when pastors needed more to indoctrinate those under their spiritual care than they do now. The failure rightly to magnify this teaching function of the Christian ministry is, in our opinion, largely responsible for the ease with which the Modernists have confused the minds of many church members and have swept them from their moorings. No preacher in charge ought indifferently to turn over to any other agency the work of instructing his congregation religiously. As God's divinely called and commissioned ambassador, it is he who must give an account to Him for the manner in which that work is done.—Selected.

BE SERIOUS

A statesman retiring from public life occupied himself in his latter days with serious thoughts.

The friends who came to visit him reproached him with being melancholy. "No," he replied, "I am only serious. All around me is serious, and I feel the need that heart and mind should be in unison with my surroundings."

"For," he added, with such solemnity as to impress all present, "God is serious as He watches us. Jesus is serious when He intercedes for us. The Holy Spirit is serious when He guides us. Satan is serious when he tempts us. The wicked in hell are serious now, because they neglected to be so when on earth; all is serious in that world whither we are wending. Oh, my friends! believe me, it is all true; let us at least at times be serious in our thoughts and in our actions."

Lebanon

March 29.—On ths date we were here with Pastor Hutton in his second quarterly conference. Delegates were nominated, and all of the other conference business promptly and harmoniously transacted. The reports indicated a normal condition for the church. A movement has been started by the C. E. Society for the erection of a Hut. This, of course, will have to take the regular form, as prescribed by the church law. We trust that the church may find it a proper move and give it necessary endorsement and support. The M. P. C. G. G. was not all provided at this time, but we trust that the full allotment may be secured by the first of May. With Lebanon to the front, High Point will stand 100 per cent on the Gratitude Gift. We were glad to be with our Lebanon people again, as always. Pastor Hutton will earnestly press the work, and this church will, we are confident, have a good showing when the counts are all in.

Albemarle

April 1.—We were with our Albemarle church on this date, attending Sunday school at 9:30 and preaching at the 11 o'clock hour. Since their building was burned in the early part of the conference year, they have been worshipping in a large storage room situated on one of the prominent streets of the city, and near the location of their burned church. They were very fortunate in securing this building, as it affords a very satisfactory temporary arrangement for their work. True to their history, this little band has shown a courageous spirit since the loss of their church by fire. The excavations are completed for the basement of their new church, and in a short time they expect to begin the construction of the building. The new church is well located, being on one of the main streets of the city, and in the midst of our constituency there. The plans call for a commodious and well constructed building, with large auditorium and modern Sunday school housing. The church will be a credit to the conference, and an inspiration to our cause in that section of our territory. Any help that can be given them will be timely and to a good purpose. Pastor Anderson has a strong grip on the people, and is zealously and wisely pushing the work. We were delighted to share the convenience and comfort of the new modern brick bungalow in which we found him and his interesting family housed. We were glad, also, to find here friends of other days, and to share again their fellowship. We have at Albemarle a loyal and faithful band, and our predictions are that the future holds for them a steady and gratifying growth.

Porter and Friendship

The afternoon and evening of the same day was given to these charges. At 3 o'clock we preached at Porter to a well-filled house of interesting and interested auditors. This was our first visit to this charge, and we hasten to say that we were favorably impressed. The church is located in a pine grove in the little village of Porter, and is surrounded by a beautiful stretch of productive farm lands. The building is painted inside and out, and neatly kept. The grounds had recently been cleaned off and beautified. We found the Sunday school in session and we were impressed with what seemed to be encouraging opportunities. After the sermon the Gratitude Gift was presented, and with pleasing response. The allotment of $23.50 was over-pledged by one dollar. Porter was an honor roll church last year. We have no doubt about that good record being maintained this year.

At 7:30 p. m. it was our privilege to visit Friendship and preach to a large and attentive congregation. We were glad to have Pastor Greene, of a nearby M. E. Church, worship with us, and assist in the service. Friendship is a strong and promising rural church. The building occupies a commanding position on the Albemarle-Concord highway, and is in the midst of a prosperous farming community. Recent repairs on the building, and a modern lighting system add much to the attractiveness and efficiency of the church. The Gratitude Gift was presented, and pledges to the amount of $20.00 were received. Other pledges had been secured prior to this. Pastor Hill is very zealous and diligent in his work, and he and his family enjoy the full confidence of his people. His charge will make a good showing when the year's work is over.

We fully enjoyed our visit to these three fields, and we are grateful to pastors and people for their unfailing kindness and hospitality. We will follow them in deep interest and earnest prayers through the year.

Easter

Many of our churches rendered our denominational Easter program; some, in addition to this, made special evangelistic efforts. We trust that there were many who gave themselves to the Lord and to His church, and also that the Easter offering was liberal. Now, please, pastors and superintendents, send the offering at once to Mr. V. W. Idol, treasurer, so it may be forwarded by him to the general church treasurer for immediate use by the Board of Home Missions. This is important. Please see that it is done, and take credit for it on the budget of your local church—G. C. B.

Centennial Day

Fifth Sunday in April. Some charges are planning to make this a great day. We earnestly urge that it may be so all over the conference. We should have from ten to fifteen thousand grateful and loyal Methodist Protestants assembling in the inspirational meeting, that through the thrill of this day they would be led to give themselves anew to Christ and to the church. This day will take the place of the district rally held heretofore. Pastors and district chairmen will co-operate in arranging the program to suit local conditions. The only thing that we are concerned about is that our people shall come together in centennial gatherings, and that new emphasis may be laid upon the origin, purposes, progress, hopes and aims of the Methodist Protestant Church. The details of this program we can well afford to leave with the local managers. But, brethren, see to it that enough of effort, purpose and prayer go into the program to make the day highly worth while. One hundred years of denominational life and service, honoring to God, makes the most that we can put into this day all too little.

M. P. C. G. G.

Bro. Ross could not make his report last week because enough pastors did not get their reports to him in time. However, it will appear in the HERALD this week, and will make interesting study. Several charges have raised their allotments, and a few more than they were asked to raise. A great many charges are yet to report. So the work of raising our allotment of $12,000 must go on—on and on and on, until every dollar is raised. Let no one think that we can't or that we won't do this. Our denominational loyalty is at stake; our gratitude is at stake; our enviable heritage as the oldest conference in the connection is at stake; and our appreciation of the men of our own conference who were vital factors in establishing the church, is at stake. Fail in this? No. Twenty-eight thousand North Carolina Methodist Protestants will not let their church come to her first century without doing her just honor. We will raise our $12,000 Gratitude Gift. But what we want is that every church and every charge shall be in it. Is yours there? See the report.

Appointments

April 14, with Bro. Neese in quarterly conference at Randleman, 2:30 p. m.

April 15, with Bro. Fogleman on Granville for three services.

April 21-22, with Bro. Ridge on Davidson.

April 28-29, Centennial Day, with Bro. Powell on Greensville.

May 6, with Bro. Whitaker on West Forsyth, for two services.

May 6, Bro. Hendry will represent us on the Anderson charge. We will make an official visit there later in the year.

It is a great privilege to be a Christian; it is a great privilege to be a leader of Christian forces, and for our comfort it is written: "And God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work."

Yours in affection and labor,

S. W. Taylor.

The Church's Proper Attitude Toward Social Dancing

successful the results, the use of the modern dance by any church frustrates the full realization of the values in which the church is most interested.

"Those churches which now permit or promote the modern dance should, in our opinion, take immediate steps to work out a comprehensive recreational policy for their organizations, and through an educational process direct the younger people to an appreciation of the best recreational interests of modern life, with the aim of eventually replacing the modern dance with more desirable activities.

"Churches at the opposite extreme, which by legislation have prohibited modern dancing, will save unhappy compromises by removing such legislation and substituting therefor a vigorous program of recreational education and of directed activities. The dance issue will never come up in the church which meets the needs of the people with an adequate social program.

"The legitimate appeals of the modern dance can be met through more desirable rhythmic and social mediums. It is frankly understood that any permanent substitute for the modern dance will take more effort, more time, more leadership than is required to promote dances. It means a comprehensive, efficiently directed, well-equipped, year-around program of social recreation, but the results will amply justify its cost. The recreational program itself is to be considered an integral part of the total work of the church. The effectiveness of the educational function, the challenge to service which the church provides, and the vision to higher living which its devotional and worship functions furnish are the ultimate and adequate substitute for a poor, defective, degenerate modern dance."

THE WHOLE MESSAGE

England was waiting in doubt and dread; no one knew how the tide of war was going. London was wrapped in fog and in the deeper gloom of depression, when a signal message reached the city which read, "Wellington defeated." The great city mourned and lamented. But the fog lifted, the light grew clearer, and it was discovered that the message had two additional words. It read, "Wellington defeated the enemy."

So runs a story of Waterloo. It is a story of life as well. It makes all the difference in the world whether we look at our dangers and difficulties through the fog of gloomy hopelessness and unbelief, or through the clearer atmosphere of faith and courage. Few messages of misfortune are so entirely and finally evil as we think. They often have some added words, if only we stand our ground and wait for them. This world is not a place for weakness or for the spirit that gives up easily.

A young business man was manager and part owner of a large concern which was entirely destroyed by fire. His friends waited anxiously for his account of the disaster; when it came it was brief and dealt chiefly with the future. "The fire was fierce, but it is over," he wrote. "We have moved into quarters not far away, and are going on as well as we can. The old building was inconvenient in some ways, and we shall remedy that in putting up a new building; so what has happened may prove a blessing."

The world has little room for weakness and cowardice. If it had, it would be a poor place to develop strong, resourceful, courageous manhood and womanhood. Whatever else we are here to do, it certainly is not to fail, and our lives cannot be uesless while we keep faith and do our best. We cannot always see the result of our efforts, or understand the meaning of all the hindrances and defeats that come to us. When the gloom seems too thick to be pierced, when but a fragment of the message reaches us, and we feel that defeat is upon us, then is the time for the highest courage that sees the future through the eyes of faith and refuses to admit defeat. If lamenting and mourning London could have pierced the fog it would have known that it had no cause for its gloom, and it is still the same with many of the happenings that we fear spell defeat and loss. We are reading but part of the message. By and by, in a clearer light we shall see that things which were hard, were not so much to our hurt as we thought, and the words we missed may make success instead of failure. —Forward.

Of the 12 churches reporting in 1926, 11 with 1,519 members were located in urban territory.

OUR STORY PAGE

THE BOY WHO DIDN'T GIVE UP

David and his sister Vera both went to the same school. Vera was two years older, although as David was large for his age, they were very nearly the same size.

Vera had a good deal of care of David, as she had been warned to help him cross the streets safely, and to keep watch that he did about what was expected of him at school. Sometimes David resented these attentions, and insisted on having his own way, and then Vera and he were likely to have words and perhaps a little trouble. But neither one remembered anything of this kind very long, for they were really very fond of each other and the best kind of playmates and pals.

From time to time at the school which the children attended, it was customary to have a program of interesting exercises, and parents and friends were invited to attend.

David was much excited when it came his turn to be one of the speakers, and he greatly enjoyed the preparations and practice which the teacher, Miss Bess, planned for this event. There were to be folk songs and dances and recitations and a little playlet in which the girls took part with their dolls, each doll coming to buy some kind of fruit from a basket carried by one of the older girls who was dressed up as a fruit-vender.

David enjoyed this playlet greatly, and especially as Vera was to take part with Pon Pon, a new trick doll, which would go about in circles on her tiny roller skates when she was wound up.

David's own part in the program was to recite a number of verses of poetry. The name of the piece was "When I'm a Man," and it made David feel very important to be telling the others of the wonderful things he would do when he grew up.

But alack and alas—when the day of the school entertainment came, poor David began to feel quite nervous, and to wish that someone else had his part. Even the sight of the little frosted cakes and the big pitchers of lemonade did not make him forget his anxiety.

What if he should get up before all of the other children and the visitors, and not remember what he was going to say? How awful that would be! He imagined the older people would smile, and the children would titter, and Tommy Teezer would taunt him when the school party was over.

Perhaps if David hadn't worried so much about what might happen, and had thought more about just what he was going to say, he would have got along better. For sure enough, when he marched forward to the middle of the platform and saw all of those eyes staring at him, his heart began to jump and he couldn't think of even the first word! And the longer he stood there, the larger those eyes looked and the deeper they seemed to pierce into him.

His mind was just a blank, and he had all he could do to keep the tears back. He could hear Miss Bess trying to tell him the first words of "When I'm A Man," but that didn't help at all. And at last she came forward with a smile and took him by the hand and led him out of the door at the end of the platform into the hall. Vera was out there and her cheeks were very red, and David knew that she was about ready to cry. Her part of the program was over.

"Oh, Miss Bess," she begged, "please let me take David right home before the party is over, for the other children will be sure to laugh at him!"

But David had ideas of his own. He backed up against the side of an open doorway.

"I'm not going home," he declared. "I came here to speak a speech and I'm going to do it!"

"But you can't! You'll forget!" wailed Vera.

"I'm going to speak that speech!" retorted David, stubbornly. His head was down and his chin was quivering. "Tommy Teezer isn't going to have a chance to laugh at me!"

"David is right," Miss Bess said firmly, "and he shall have another chance. If you want to help him, Vera, hear him say 'When I'm A Man' over two or three times. And remember, David, to let your mind go just a little ahead of the words you are saying, so you will know what comes next. And if I were you, I would not look right at the people, at least at first, but a little over their heads until you get accustomed to the sound of your own voice."

The program was nearly finished when a small boy marched for the second time to the front of the platform. Tommy Teezer snickered, but David didn't pay any attention, and with a firmness which was commendable, began:

"When I'm a man,
I'll be a printer if I can,"

and once he got started, he had no trouble at all, for the verses came very readily and easily by doing what Miss Bess had told him—that is, thinking a little ahead of the words he was speaking.

Before he was half through David was able to look at his hearers, and the eyes he faced did not disturb him in the least. He made just the proper kind of a bow and walked away. Now Tommy Teezer would have nothing on him!

When the program was ended, a very fine-looking gentleman sought David out.

"I want to shake the hand," he said with a wonderful smile, "of the boy who wouldn't give up."

David flushed with pleasure.

"I came to speak a speech," he explained eagerly, "and I was going to do it!"

"That's right," laughed the gentleman who was none other than the person who was at the head of the schools in the city. "Keep right on doing that way. Don't be a quitter, and once you have started some undertaking, never give up!"

David went down the steps of the schoolhouse with a light heart. Even Tommy Teezer was looking enviously at him, for hadn't the distinguished visitor of the day taken notice of and praised the Boy Who Wouldn't Give Up!—Selected.

MEN OR MACHINERY?

Dr. W. H. Griffin Thomas once said: "The church is looking for better methods; God is looking for better men."

The question naturally arises, do good men and good methods mutually exclude each other? By no means. And yet we had better have consecrated men than the best methods that can be suggested. Methods mean machinery. The best machines are the simplest. The best organizations are those that work most smoothly and efficiently. Thus do they serve a good purpose. A machine is little worth apart from the man who directs it. God give us men. When the right man appears he will call into being such methods as are necessary and join to Him who said, "Apart from me ye can do nothing."—Watchman Examiner.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

SENIOR CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC

April 22: "Why and How Should Christians Support the Eighteenth Amendment?"

Scripture: Exodus 21:28, 29; Prov. 23:29-32.

I

Plans for Meeting

a. Have some community or city official to speak on "The Value of Christian Influence in Law-Enforcement."

b. Suitable song selections: "America the Beautiful," "Stand Up for Jesus," "The Fight Is On," "Onward, Christian Soldiers." Have special music by quartets or duets, etc. Make the program a unit of worship, information, and instruction.

II

Pertaining to Topic

Why? That raises a question and leaves room for answering reasons. Here are some: 1. Because Christians dissatisfied with the immoral conditions of society caused by the liquor demon brought about the law which forbids the demon. 2. Christians should support the Eighteenth Amendment not only because it is a law brought about by Christians but because Christians everywhere should be good law advocates and supporters. Paul taught the Christians of his day to be good citizens of two kingdoms, both the existing order, and the kingdom of God. 3. Because the fruit of prohibition speaks for itself. What would the conditions be in the industrial world with whisky handy for every one? Would it be safe on the highway in an automobile in a case like that? How about the living conditions? What of charity? The industrial world demands sober men. With the highly developed machinery of today the industrial world demands the best trained individuals. Whiskey decreases efficiency and jeopardizes society. Saving accounts and improved living conditions are other fruits of prohibition. The problem of charity decreased is another. The truth that there are many homes that know nothing of the blight of liquor and many of those homes are the ones in our own communities.

How? Here is the real test and each one should make this a personal question. The following ways are suggestive. Be a real Christian citizen in your community with respect to law. Make Christ the ruling power of your life and ask the question: "What would Christ have me do?" regarding questions of prohibitions.

III

Talk by Some S. S. Leader

Five-minute talk on "The Part the Sunday School Took in Bringing in the Prohibition Law."

IV

Try These Questions

1. How can the prohibition problem be improved in our community?

2. Tell why you would not want open saloons in your community.

3. In what ways will temperance education help solve the problem?

4. Has prohibition helped your community? State? Nation? How about the world?

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

April 22—Jesus and the Home

Scripture Basis: Mark 10:1-16.

Golden Text: Honor thy father and thy mother (which is the first commandment with a promise). Eph. 6:2.

Love in the Home

Home is a divine institution. It preceded every other. It served as the first ecclesiastical body, for the laws of God were first taught in the home. "God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them." (Gen. 1:27). "Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh." (Gen. 2:24). Thus the home was begun by divine creation and command. Jesus adds, "And the two shall become one flesh." (Mark 10:8).

Jesus implies that love must bind the hearts together in the home, though He does not say so in so many words. Let us consider this as one proof: Is there any greater love than that of true parents? None greater on earth. What they have done and will do for their children is never realized fully until the children become parents themselves. Yet Jesus implies that the love of a worthy man or woman, as the case may be, should be so strong and genuine that a son or daughter should withdraw himself from parental love and care to respond to the impelling power of the love of another. How sacred is such pure love!

Nor should love end there. When the children come and begin to grow to manhood and womanhood, thus fulfilling God's scheme of the propagation of the race, love must be the link which connects the hearts of children with parents, brothers with sisters, and so on. Regardless of whether it be a cottage or a mansion, the home is not happy where love does not reign supreme in the hearts of members of the family.

Loyalty in the Home

"What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder." (9th verse). We wonder many times whether or not God joins some couples together, when we observe how unsuited in many ways they seem to be, and when we learn that one divorce is granted for every 7.6 marriages. The United States, nominally a Christian nation, leads the Christian world in divorces. How shameful! How are we going to cope with it?

It is true that we cannot legislate people into being good, but laws are necessary to hold national integrity up to a high standard. Hence, we need more rigid marriage and divorce laws in the states. Better still, we need a uniform federal law that will aid in the reduction of the ratio. When certain classes of people realize that it is easy to obtain a divorce in one state if not in another, they marry with the consciousness that separation is a simple legal process.

Another agent that insidiously stamps his vile image upon the minds and hearts of the youth of today is the sensual love story published in cheap magazines. A welfare worker gave the information that 500 copies of such a magazine were sold in a certain town of approximately 30,000. One of the greatest forces for good and evil today is the movies. Many of the love stories are suggestive and often three-cornered. Divorce is boldly pictured as a matter of course. And some children are permitted to see such pictures twice, three times, or maybe more times a week. Parents need to guard their children against such poisonous pastimes if they want them to have high ideals concerning the marriage state.

Little Ones in the Home

"We wander wide in doubtful ways,
Our eyes of faith are dim;
The child is freshest from God's hand,
And nearest unto Him."

"And He took them up in His arms, put His hands upon them, and blessed them." (16th verse). Don't let us be too hasty in condemning the disciples for trying to prevent the children from coming to the Master. Let us cast the beam out of our own eyes first. Have we been guilty of declaring that a six, eight or ten-year-old child is too young to come to Jesus? Many have made this serious mistake. Consulting statistics and works on the subject, we find that many ministers and other Christian leaders date their conversion back to early childhood. "Suffer the little children to come unto me," says the Master.

Who blesses our homes with the little ones? Is it not God Himself? Man is able to invent and manufacture wonderful things these days, but he has not the ingenuity to form a seed or mold a body containing life. Then, should we not take them to the Father through the Son that He might bless and sanctify their days of impressionableness? "Forbid them not," cautious parent; forbid them not, pious churchman; forbid them not, faithful Sunday school teacher. Thus will our homes be blessed with boys and girls who have known the Lord in childhood, and who will aid father and mother in their efforts to make Christ the Head of the household.

CENTENARY PROJECT FOR JUNIORS

"Our Big Methodist Protestant Family in Baltimore"

LESSON SEVEN

"Our Chinese Methodist Protestants"

Facts for Centenary Discoverers

1. The Methodist Protestant Family has one mission station in China. It is in Northern China near the great wall in Kalgan. Most of our missionaries have had to leave China because of the Chinese civil war, and because of the wars in China we have not been permitted to send additional missionaries to China. Horace S. Williams, a young man, is our only missionary in China at the present time. Dr. Roberta Fleagle, our missionary doctor, is home on furlough, and Rev. and Mrs. Soderbom, our two other missionaries to China, are also home on furlough. Every six or seven years our missionaries are permitted to come back to America for a while to see their loved ones whom they left when they went into the foreign country. Always while in America our missionaries home on furlough visit the church of our big Methodist Protestant family to tell them of their work and the people of China.

2. The Chinese civilization is indeed very old and used to be much greater than at the present time. Hundreds of years ago, it began gradually to lose its power until it became so weak that other nations came into China and claimed a right to sections of China which they proceeded to occupy. Other nations set up their own government on Chinese soil and made laws which ruled the people in these sections. For hundreds of years, China's four hundred millions of people were asleep; not asleep as you and I sleep a t night; but they seemed not to be conscious of what other nations were doing, and when they learned of it they thought themselves too weak and helpless to change things. China used to be called the "Sleeping Giant." People used to say, "If China ever awakens from her sleep, she may bring trouble and anxiety to the whole world." Because China was asleep and had no national pride her people became very unsanitary and became densely ignorant; they had no laws of sanitation and wanted none. They had few schools and were not concerned about their ignorance. While China slept, other nations took advantage of her.

3. In the last few years, China has been awakening. A few people began to see that China had possibilities; that she was rich in many things; that her people could be educated. Missionaries, and the schools which they have been holding have helped China to awaken; the World War helped China to awaken. Chinamen began to travel into other countries and returned to China with the story of what the rest of the world is doing and this has helped China to awaken. America has helped China to awaken because America has provided for some Chinese students to be educated in America; these students have gone back into China with new ideas, and this has helped China to come to herself. China has been given a new language, a simpler language which all can learn; the old language of China was so difficult that it required so long to learn it that few people ever became educated; but with the new language every one in China can become educated.

4. When China began to awaken she said to the nations which had come in and occupied a part of her territory, "This isn't fair; for years you have taken advantage of us, and we will not permit it longer." Then the Chinese began to feel that they didn't want anything to do with anything foreign; they wanted to be independent; patriotism began to develop; the Chinese government began to organize more schools so that her people might be educated; China has awakened and is possessed with a new feeling of independence. Many of the Mission Boards have turned over much of the work in the mission schools and in the Christian churches, which has been done by the missionaries, to the Chinese. China is just growing up and wants to do things for herself instead of having everything done for her; China feels very much like we do as Juniors; we don't want everything done for us, we want to do some things for ourselves.

5. Many in China are opposed to everything that is foreign; but there are many in China, particularly the Christians, who still want the foreigners and the help that they can give. We must stand by China, and maintain a very kind feeling toward her while she is growing up just as our parents do toward us while we are growing up. During this period, we must not do less for China, but more. As soon as the wars are over, our Methodist Protestants in the United States will send more missionaries to China if they wish them; and they don't we will support the Chinese Christian leaders there so that they may carry on the work which the missionaries have started.

6. In China, we have a boys' school, a girls' school and a hospital. During the absence of Dr. Fleagle, our medical work is being carried on by a Chinese doctor and three helpers. Last year over eleven thousand patients were given treatment through our medical department. In China as in India, we carry on the evangelistic work, the educational work and the medical.

7. We have some Methodist Protestant churches in China and all the members of them are a part of our big Methodist Protestant Family.

Suggested Activity

Map Work: Locate on your map of the world (or if you prefer making a separate map of China) Kalgan, China, which is in the north near the great wall. Draw a line out from Kalgan and paste at the end of the line in an open space on the muslin pictures of our China work and our missionaries to China. Pictures may be found in church papers, particularly in the Missionary Record. The November issue of 1924 has some very good pictures.

Birthday Cake Poster: Add facts about China to your Birthday Cake Poster.

My Church's Birthday Book: Let each discoverer add facts to his, "My Church's Birthday Book."

Photograph Album: Add pictures of China and our work in China to the Photograph Albums.

Missionary Triangle Poster: Let two children prepare a Missionary Triangle poster. Use a large sheet of cardboard; draw on it a triangle; let one point stand for evangelistic work, the second point for educational work, and the last point for medical work. Print these three types of work on the three points of the triangle.

Centenary Discoverers at Work: Begin to discover what you can about Japan and what the Methodist Protestant Church is doing in Japan. Start collecting your pictures on Japan.

Worship Service

Theme: "Making the World Family Christian."

Call to Worship: Leader—"Who shall ascend unto the hill of the Lord, and who shall stand in His holy place?"

Children—"He that hath clean hands and a pure heart, who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity nor sworn deceitfully."

Praise Hymn: "May Jesus Christ Be Praised." No. 2, Hymnal for American Youth.

Conversation: The World Family includes the nations of the world. We do not think it is fair to take advantage of a brother or sister, do we? Certainly, it is just as wrong for one nation to take advantage of another. We do not really know how kind and sympathetic our parents are to us when we are growing up. They know many times that we make mistakes; but they are patient and kind because they know that we will do the very best we can and that some day we will know how to do better and will do it. Certainly we ought to be kind and sympathetic with the nations of the world; many of them make mistakes and do things that are wrong. As much as we love our own America, yet America makes many mistakes. America will make fewer and still fewer mistakes as she becomes more and more Christian; China and India and Japan and all the rest of the nations of the world will make fewer and fewer mistakes when more and more of the people of these nations become Christ-like in their living.

Hymn: "The Whole Wide World for Jesus." No. 264, Hymnal for American Youth.

Story: "World Friendship's New Coat," Page 49 in "Missionary Programs for Juniors."

Salute to the Christian Flag (All stand and salute): "I pledge allegiance to my flag, and to the Savior for whose kingdom it stands; one brotherhood uniting all mankind in service and in love."

Prayer: (1) That there might be a spirit of friendship in the World Family. (2) That all the nations of the world might become Christian. (3) That more Americans may follow Christ and His way of life. (4) For China; for our missionary work there; for peace in China.

Prayer Hymn: "I Would Be True," No. 170, Hymnal for American Youth. (Last verse).

Memory Work

Memorize the words of "The Whole Wide World for Jesus" and the salute to the Christian Flag.

Suggestions to Leaders

Don't let the activity lag. Keep all members of the group busy. Encourage pupil initiative. Watch your opportunity to teach helpfulness, kindness, respect for the rights of others, co-operation, unselfishness, and sharing. These attitudes can be strengthened as the children do their work together.

Write to Mrs. H. W. Maier, Thomasville, N. C., and tell her that you are using this project.

GRATITUDE GIFT CAMPAIGN REPORT

Our quota for North Carolina is $12,000. Our pledges to date amount to $8,444.12. Please advise at once any corrections, as there are a number of churches that I have been informed have done something but I have no reports from the pastors. Many pastors write "More later."

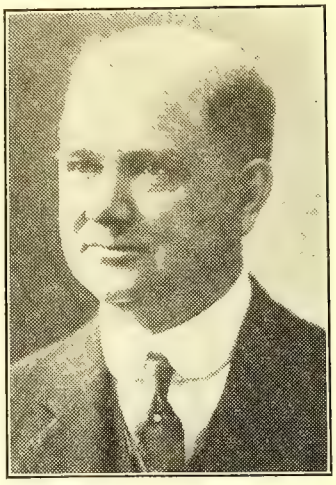
CENTENNIAL SPEAKER



HUGH S. MAGILL

General Secretary of the International Council of Religious Education, and a speaker at our Centennial Convention, May 10-15

Dr. Hugh S. Magill, of Chicago, General Secretary of the International Council of Religious Education, is recognized as one of the outstanding figures in America not only in his own field but in the wider field of general education. For a number of years he was General Secretary of the National Education Association, an organization bringing together all of the forces of the United States engaged in the field of public education. As the guiding genius of this Association, he was largely responsible for its present power and influence in modern educational circles.

At the International Sunday School Convention, held in Kansas City in 1922, when the International Sunday School Association and the Sunday School Council of Evangelical Churches were merged into the International Sunday School Council of Religious Education, Dr. Magill was considered the one man in America most eminently fitted to head the merged forced engaged in Religious Education on this continent.

Under his strong and aggressive leadership, the International Council has reached a place of usefulness beyond question in Protestant religious work. He has gathered around him in the Chicago office a staff of workers of unusual ability and unprecedented power and has been able to weld together the united interests and efforts of the 39 Protestant denominations of which the International Council is constituted.

Dr. Magill is one of the outstanding speakers in America today and we are most fortunate in being able to announce that he will address the opening session of our Centennial Convention in Hampden Methodist Protestant Church, on Thursday night, May 10th. His challenging message on the opportunities and responsibilities of an adequate program of Religious Education in our denomination should inspire all of us to more consecrated effort.

FINANCIAL REPORT FROM MRS. TAYLOR

The following auxiliaries of the W. F. M. S. have paid their budgets in full and quite a number of them have over-paid:

Asheville, Asheboro, Burlington, Bethel (Alamance), Bethesda (N. Davidson), Concord (Saxapahaw), Charlotte, Calvary, Graham, Grace, Harmony, High Point, Hickory Ridge, Hollister, Lebanon, Maple Springs (Forsyth), Mebane, Moriah, Mt. Carmel (Granville), Pleasant Hill, Reidsville, Rehoboth, Rock Creek, State Street, Thomasville (Community), Union Chapel, Welch Memorial, West End, Winston Salem, Whitakers.

The following churches that had no auxiliary have sent in money:

Gibsonville, Pinnacle, Flat Rock (Vance), Julian, Fair View (Anderson), and Mizpah, Fair Grove and Midway on Haw River Circuit.

MRS. S. W. TAYLOR, Treas.

LAW ENFORCEMENT WORK

About two weeks ago a young wife whose husband was being debauched or made drunken in a saloon run by a fellow known as Johnnie St. Auban at Cohoes, N. Y., complained to the New York Civic League and asked what could be done to suppress the place. She was anxious to have something done as quickly as possible. We told her we were not sure that it could be done in short of a week or more as he had a bad record and would be very shy of strangers and it would be hard to get evidence against him.

In fact when talking with the splendid head prohibition agent here in Albany he said that he and his men had been trying to get that place for a month but had not been able to do so.

We called in one of our League's special investigators and asked him to see if he coul l get the place. He went over there and by his tact and skill made a buy of liquor at the first call, and after making an affidavit as to his purchase of liquor, a search warrant was issued thereon and the place raided by the prohibition agents and 1,440 bottles of beer, a gallon of whiskey, a gallon of wine and half a gallon of gin were seized and the proprietor arrested.

He had a barber shop in front of his speakeasy so as to attract little or no attention, and persons going into the barber shop would not be suspected of going in there to buy liquor, but they went through a door at the back of the barber shop to the booze joint immediately behind the barber shop.

Of course, the young wife was delighted at the splendid success of our League man. We are unable, however, because of our very limited resources to employ this man only part time, though he is one of the best men we have ever used. We ought to have sufficient funds to keep a man like him busy all the time.

—Rev. Mr. Schenck, Lutheran pastor in Greensboro, told this story on himself recently: He went to see a man and found him away from home. He accosted a little boy and asked:

"Where is your father?"

"At work."

"What kind of work does he do?"

"He sells bread."

"What do I do?"

"Nothin'."

We are correcting some mistakes this week which Bro. Idol finds were made in sending reports to us. We trust that the figures as they now stand are exact. No new charges are listed this week. The number of charges now having credits is 73. This leaves 19 charges blank. Of the 73 charges that have credits, 34 have no credits on the A. C. B., and 26 are without credits on the G. C. B. except the credits which they have through the missionary organizations. Brethren, this ought no so to be. With the year half gone, no charge should be without credits by membership payments on these budgets. It is noticeable, too, that some of our prominent charges are in these "no credit" lists. We know that the raising of church finance is not an easy matter; eternal vigilance is the price. What we are saying, therefore, is not said in the spirit of censure, but rather by way of calling our minds to remembrance. The year is rapidly passing, and we must be up and doing while it is called today. We shall await with keen interest the report of the Easter offering—and please let us urge again that it be sent Treasurer Idol at once so he may pass it on for immediate use by the Board of Home Missions.

A few charges report this week on college assessment. We are grateful for this. The college will soon need this money to wind up the work of the year, and we most earnestly call upon our pastors and people to co-operate with us in every possible way in raising this full assessment on every charge.

With full appreciation of every assurance of faithfulness on the part of pastors and people, and with renewed confidence in the help of Him who is the Head of the Church, I am,

Fraternally yours,
S. W. TAYLOR.

—In a recent visit to West End we were very favorably impressed by a sight of the new Sunday school building. It has two stories, and provides a large assembly room besides class rooms. It has also a steam heating plant which will warm both the church and the Sunday school building.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Burlington Note.—We had a good day yesterday (Easter Sunday). Church about full at morning service, 18 received into membership. Packed house at evening hour for the Easter pageant.

Bethesda, Halifax Charge.—The fine weather brought out a good congregation yesterday—Easter Sunday—and Mr. Spencer gave us an appropriate sermon concerning the resurrection. Just before the sermon, some of the Sunday school children gave a few recitations, and the music of the day consisted of several Easter songs by the choir. Both recitations and music were good. Collection was $14.00, which is considered good for this season here. We were glad to have in the choir Miss Mattie Moore Taylor, who is home on a visit from N. C. C. W.

Announcement was made that Rev. Mr. Cassady, of Alabama, will assist in the special meeting here in August.

There has been a good deal of sickness in the community, even since measles subsided. The reporter came in for a full share but has recovered sufficient strength, at least, to break into print.

Mr. Richard Taylor (our S. S. superintendent) and his family have been through quite a siege and are not well even yet.

Mrs. N. M. Harrison, Jr., and little Rev. (?) N. M. are on a visit to her parents in Asheboro. In two points at least the young man may be compared to Jeshurun in Deut. 32:15.

Mrs. Thomas Hunter, of Wilmington, is visiting her mother, Mrs. N. M. Harrison.

REPORTER.

High Point.—After his absence of three weeks the congregation was delighted to welcome Dr. S. K. Spahr back to the pulpit Sunday morning, when he brought to us a most comforting and convincing message of the glorious and triumphant resurrection of our Lord and Christ. He selected as his text the last clause of the Apostles' Creed: "I believe in the resurrection of the dead and the life everlasting." Dr. Spahr said that there are very few of us who have reached mature life, who have not followed some loved one to the sepulchre, and but for our belief in this promise of a reunion our grief would be too heavy to bear. He then gave some reasons why we may believe in the resurrection. First, at this season of the year God has risen in nature, and the fields, bursting buds, flowers, and birds speak of a resurrection of life, a renewal of all nature. As the perfume of the lily, which was tucked away as a bulb in the dark earth last fall, greets us today, we exclaim, "We, too, shall live again!" As the silk-worms, eating mulberry leaves, spin their own coffins around them and prepare to die, then from the cocoon bursts forth a beautiful moth or butterfly with gorgeous wings, so shall we emerge from the tomb as glorified beings to live forever with our risen Saviour in the happy fields of Eden. We may depend upon what the Bible teaches in regard to a future life. In the heart of every man and woman is a longing for immortality, a conscious feeling that death does not end all. The death of Jesus and His resurrection shows that without a doubt we shall rise again. It should thrill us and make our hearts unspeakably happy on this gladsome Easter day to know that Christ, our blessed Lord, has risen, and we shall dwell with Him throughout eternity without pain, tears, or sadness.

"Alleluia! Sing to Jesus!
His the sceptre, His the throne,
Alleluia! His the triumph,
His the victory alone;
Hark! the songs of peaceful Zion
Thunder like a mighty flood;
Jesus out of every nation
Hath redeemed us by His blood."

The music was especially beautiful at this service. The choir rendered with most pleasing effect the lovely anthem, "Christian, the Morn Breaks," and Mr. Robert B. Moffitt, of Ramseur, brother of Mrs. John Whitesell, sang the exquisite "Open the Gates of the Temple," by Knapp. The pulpit was exceedingly beautiful in its wealth of Easter lilies, palms, ferns, and roses, a loving memorial to the sainted Evelyn Penny, beloved and only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Penny, whose birthday it was, and who went home to Jesus just six years ago in the promise of happy girlhood. She yet lives in the hearts of many relatives and countless young friends, who hold her memory very dear.

The Sunday evening service was given over to the choir, which rendered a program of exquisite music suitable to the happy season. Mr. Clarence Schultheiss sang in his charming voice, "Come, See the Place Where Jesus Lay," and Mr. Carey Davis played a trombone solo, "One Sweely Solemn Thought," with organ accompaniment. The choir then sang the beautiful cantata by Stults, "Alleluia," with charming effect. The solo parts were given by Mesdames J. C. Whitesell and J. H. Allred, Messrs. A. J. Koonce and Clarence Schultheiss. Miss Mae Kirkman played the organ accompaniment with great skill and expression. The members of the choir wore white vestments, an innovation in our church, and taken together this was the most beautiful and elaborate cantata ever produced in the First church, and was thoroughly appreciated by the congregation. Many thanks are due the choir for the faithful labor of this exquisite rendition.

The Ladies' Aid Society held its usual monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. A. M. Rankin Tuesday afternoon.

Prof. P. E. Lindley has very kindly consented to teach a course in Teacher Training, beginning next Wednesday evening, when this class will be combined with the mid-week prayer meeting. All those from 15 years of age upward are invited to join this class. Mr. Lindley is very efficient in this line of work.

A supper will be served next Thursday evening to the membership of the church. This opportunity will be given to meet Rev. George Shurtz, of Morgantown, West Virginia, who will be present on this occasion. While in the city, Rev. Mr. Shurtz will be a guest in the home of Dr. and Mrs. S. S. Coe in Emerywood.

Miss Daisy Lee York, who is a student at Ashly Hall, Charleston, S. C., is spending the Easter holidays with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. A. A. York.

Mrs. A. H. Kirby, of Philadelphia, who has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. R. M. Andrews, has returned to her home.

After a vacation of six days, High Point College students will resume work tomorrow (Wednesday) morning. For 45 seniors this will be the last lap of the race before graduation on May 28th. These seniors have already secured their classic Oxford gowns and caps, and will doubtless astonish the natives in the near future by appearing in public in this grand and dignified garb.

We are grieved to note that our beloved layman, Capt. A. M. Rankin, is not so well, and will leave tomorrow for the Charlotte Sanatorium to take treatment again. His hosts of friends are praying for his early restoration to health.

Enfield.—Sunday morning at 11 o'clock we had our Easter services. Our program consisted of anthems by the choir, prayer, responsive reading, greetings to the church, welcome to our visitors, two playlets of Easter, and a pageant, "The Resurrection Garden." Mr. Auman's message to us was a beautiful story. The hour of service was very enjoyable. The children on the program played their parts splendidly.

We did not have evening service at our church, but all attended the Easter services at the M. E. church.

Our Sunday school gave the children an egg hunt Monday afternoon.

We were proud of the large attendance at Sunday school Sunday morning.

REPORTER.

Enfield.—Our Easter program was a splendid success. The children in particular did their part in a most acceptable manner. All participating seemed to enter whole-heartedly into the Easter joy. Our offering was $34.53.

The second quarterly conference will convene at Enfield Friday afternoon of this week at 2:30.

Our hearts were saddened by the passing of Mrs. Elizabeth Britt on Wednesday of last week. She was a mother and grandmother to a number of our church family. She had been ill for a number of years and had been cared for by her children. Funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. C. L. Spencer, the writer assisting, and her body laid to rest in the Eden M. P. church cemetery. J. CLYDE AUMAN.

State Street.—The sunrise service by the Christian Endeavor Union, held on the lawn of the Presbyterian church Sunday morning, was well attended and all present were helped and interested. Evangelism and Christian citizenship were the subjects discussed.

We had a fine attendance at Sunday school, although some of our folks were out of town and some are sick.

At the 11 o'clock hour Mr. Bethea preached a touching and inspiring sermon to a large congregation. Eight new members were added to the church at this service. There are several others who would have joined but could not be there Sunday. These will probably come in next Sunday.

The Easter service suggested by the Board of Home Misions was given Sunday night. The children and young people taking part were coached by Mrs. F. J. Cox, and rendered their parts well, making an evening of helpful entertainment for a large and appreciative audience. A liberal contribution was received.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society held the regular monthly meeting at the church last Thursday afternoon. The president, Mrs. A. H. Evans, presided. A chapter of the study-book was given by Mrs. Curtis Koonts. The society has done a good year's work and will have a creditable report for the Branch Meeting soon to be held in Greensboro. REPORTER.

Lexington, N. C.

Community Church, Thomasville.—Growing out of our special pre-Easter services during Passion Week, 14 united with the church on Easter Sunday morning with several to be received next Sunday, illness having made it impossible for them to be present on Sunday.

Two services were held each day during Passion Week, a meeting for children in the afternoon and a service for young people and adults in the evening.

Palm Sunday was observed throughout the church. In the morning worship service, the Junior congregation headed by the Junior vested choir marched into the church auditorium in the midst of the worship service, waving their palm branches and sing their Palm Sunday hymns. They sang "All Glory, Laud, and Honor," by Theadulph; "Fairest Lord Jesus," by Munster; and "There Is a Green Hill Far Away," by Alexander. At the conclusion of the music, the children left the auditorium and reassembled in their worship room for the remainder of their service.

Eight were baptized on Easter morning, with more to be baptized next Sunday.

The attendance in all departments was most splendid Sunday morning with a very fine interest throughout the school.

The crowning service of the day was on Sunday evening when the choir, under the leadership of Mrs. C. F. Finch, presented a program of Easter music, assisted by Mrs. H. W. Maier, who told the Easter story, "The Boy Who Discovered the Spring," by Alden, and Rev. Maier, who read the resurrection Scripture lesson.

About 300 calls were made by the pastor and the members of the church during the pre-Easter campaign. REPORTER.

Asheboro.—Yesterday was rather an unusual day with us. The Senior C. E. Society had a splendid sunrise prayer meeting at 6:30 a. m. Then just before the close of the Sunday school all departments were brought into the church auditorium where a short Easter service was held. The Sunday school's offering was taken which amounted to about $27.00. The loose change in the collection plates at the church services was added, making the total Easter offering about $34.00.

At the 11 o'clock hour the choir rendered beautiful Easter music and the pastor preached an Easter sermon. One beautiful and tender part of the service was the baptism of Nathanael Mason Harrison, the little son of Rev. and Mrs. N. M. Harrison. The mother of this fine little fellow before her marriage was Miss Nan Lewis, a member of our church.

At the evening hour we had the pleasure of hearing a splendid sermon by Rev. N. M. Harrison.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Frank Phillips have the sympathy of our people in the death of their two-year-old son, William Alexander, who was taken to be with our Lord on Friday morning, March 30. The funeral was held at the home on Saturday morning, March 21, at 11 o'clock by the writer and burial was in the city cemetery here.

At 8 o'clock next Sunday evening Mr. Charles Ross, the assistant Attorney General of North Carolina, will speak in our church. Mr. Ross is a son of Mr. R. R. Ross of this place and during his young days was a member of our church here.

Our revival will begin Sunday, April 22. Rev. H. W. Maier, of Thomasville, will come on Monday, April 23, to stay through Sunday, April 29, and as far into the next week as seems necessary. J. E. PRITCHARD.

Siler City.—On Tuesday night, April 3rd, at the Pythians' banquet, the ladies of the Aid and Missionary Societies served a five-course dinner with great success. The net proceeds amounted to $60.

Early last Thursday morning the members of the Senior Christian Endeavor Society drove out to the old Hackney Mill place, about four miles east of town, where they had a camp-fire breakfast. The Senior Christian Endeavor members also met at the church Easter morning and held a sunrise prayer service.

We were very fortunate to have with us last Sunday Rev. Lawrence Little. During the Sunday school hour he delivered a splendid message to many young people, also a number of older people who were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Dixon are still bringing to us very helpful messages. REPORTER.

Alleghany, Davidson Charge.—Brother Ridge preached a good sermon on "The Empty Tomb." This beautiful Easter Sunday makes us feel like praising the Lord for another fair Sunday after so many rainy ones and so much sickness. We were sorry to lose one of our members, Brother Millery Cranford's wife, who died the first of April. We believe that she was a good woman. Our sympathy goes out to the bereaved husband and children.

Our president is to preach for us on Saturday night before the fourth Sunday in this month.

Quarterly meeting will be held at Lineberry on Saturday evening at two o'clock before the fourth Sunday.

Sunday school every Sunday at ten.

ABIGAIL COGGIN, Reporter.

Grace Church, Greensboro.—The Grace Church Workers held an enthusiastic meeting Wednesday evening, April 4. The various committees gave their reports, showing that the Workers had lived up to their name during the last year. The new officers and committees were elected at this meeting. Mr. J. Norman Wills was elected chairman of the Workers. During the coming year, this organization hopes to be one of the largest benefactors to the church. Unified work through the committees was stressed. They hope to have something to show for their work.

During the last week our minister, Rev. R. J. Tamblyn, has been giving a series of Easter meetings. On Friday night, a communion service was held. The music was beautiful throughout all the meetings.

Sunday morning at 6 o'clock the young people of the city, under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Union, met in a sunrise service at the church. Mr. Tamblyn made a short talk. An excellent musical program was rendered at this time.

Sunday night the choir gave its regular Easter music. The beautiful Easter cantata, "Death and Life," by Harry Rowe Shelley, was given. It told in music the story of the death and resurrection of Jesus. The solo work deserves much praise. The choir has been giving us very beautiful music each Sunday.

Hope, Chatham Charge.—We had very good attendance at Sunday school April 8 considering the epidemic of measles. We hope this epidemic will soon be over and all the children will be back in their places.

At the 11 o'clock service Rev. Porter, a Baptist minister of Bonlee, occupied the pulpit for our pastor. He preached a good, plain sermon on "The Love of God." The subject was well handled and he brought out many good thoughts and everybody enjoyed his sermon.

As the weather was unfavorable on our last appointment, Brother Isley had not brought the Gratitude Gift before the church, so this was taken up at the beginning of the service, and we are glad to say our quota was raised.

We were glad to have Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Hanner, Jr., of Madison, Mr. and Mrs. Lookabill, of High Rock, and Mrs. R. G. Henry, of Stokesdale, worship with us. We are always glad to have our members come back and be with us.

Miss Clara Johnson, a student of Eastern Carolina Teacher Training School, Greenville, N. C., is spending the Easter holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Johnson.

Miss Della Hanner has returned from a three weeks' visit to her brother at Madison, N. C.

Best wishes to all.

KARA ANDREW, Reporter.

Asheville.—Mrs. Mary E. Fears passed away last week after a long illness. She was in the home of her daughter, Mrs. F. S. Cunningham. Her body was taken to Hopkinsville, Ky., for interment.

The services Sunday were unusually well attended. In the morning the primary department gave a beautiful program of songs and recitations just before Brother Casto's helpful Easter message.

At the evening service the young people gave a delightful program preceding the sermon by Brother VanMeter. The Easter offering was not quite the quota, but was good. Some of our members were present who have been kept at home by illness. Sunday was the 23rd anniversary, to the day, since the organization of our church here.

We were happy for the presence of Miss Eudora Younginer from High Point schools, Miss Novella McIntyre, from High Point College, and the Misses Fawcett and their guest, from Guilford College. REPORTER.

Bessemer City.—Sunday, April 8th, was a great day for us. We had 174 present at Sunday school. We also had a short Easter program for the children, after which our pastor, Brother Henderson, delivered a very interesting sermon. We are proud of our pastor, as he is a very promising young man, and we feel that he will do a great work in the future.

The Ladies' Aid gave a very interesting play here in the graded school auditorium March 23rd, which was well attended by the public and which was much enjoyed. The title of the play was "The Old-Fashioned Mother." The proceeds went for the benefit of the church. Mrs. Elenor Cathcart, one of the school faculty, and Mrs. Hampton Black acted as very efficient coaches. We wish to thank these good ladies for their many efforts to help the work along.

We have as our visitor Mrs. Annie Steward, from Monroe. We are always glad to have her here to visit and attend church.

The C. E. Society is still moving along and is a great help to the church. Pray for us.

LUCY BLANTON, Reporter.

Winston.—Having preached at the Winston church several times since conference, Brother Taylor asked me if I would take charge of the work during the month of April. I wish to state that I have never preached to a more appreciative people than I have found in this church. Truly, we have some as noble souls here as can be found in the Methodist Protestant church anywhere. The congregations are encouraging and seem to be growing in number each Sunday.

The second quarterly meeting was held last Tuesday night. The nominees for delegate were elected and the usual business was transacted. Three of the brethren were appointed as homing committee for the Annual Conference. Their names will appear later.

We were assured on yesterday that the Gratitude Gift will be paid in full.

The Sunday school is doing good work and new scholars are added each Sunday. They have a splendid corps of S. S. teachers. I should like to make special mention of Mrs. R. N. Hauser, as I have had the pleasure of hearing her twice in the young men's class. I will say that Mrs. Hauser is the finest teacher it has ever been my privilege to hear on a S. S. lesson.

The choir renders some very effective music. As they had no Easter program we took a collection for Home Missions, which amounted to $77.00.

Brother J. D. Williams has been invited to hold revival services in the near future.

J. H. MOTON.

Shiloh Church.—There was a splendid Easter program rendered here Sunday morning. Our pastor, Rev. A. O. Lindley, preached an able sermon the last fourth Sunday afternoon.

The people of this church were saddened very much by the death of our superintendent, Walter K. Hemphill, who died two weeks ago at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Hemphill, near Julian. Mr. Hemphill was a very popular young business man, was active in his church work and had been superintendent of the Sunday school at Shiloh for the past two years and teacher of the young people's class for some time. He had many friends in both Guilford and Randolph counties. He is survived by his parents, three brothers, Grady, Charlie, and Tyson Hemphill, all of Julian, and one sister, Mrs. W. A. Kanoy, of Pleasant Garden. The pallbearers were George Pickett, Willie Henderson, Raymond Jordan, Arville Kime, Robert Shelton and Jim Brown. The flowerbearers were Misses May York, Inez Burrow, Myrtle Coble, and Pearl Kennett. The funeral was conducted from Shiloh church on Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock by the pastor, Rev. A. O. Lindley, assisted by Rev. W. F. Ashburn, a former pastor of his, and Rev. T. F. McCulloch. There was a large crowd of sorrowing friends to pay the last tribute of respect to one much loved by all who knew him.

Our community was very much shocked and saddened with the death of Mrs. A. E. Staley, who died in a local hospital after a short illness. The funeral was conducted from Shiloh M. P. church on Thursday at 11 o'clock by Rev. A. O. Lindley, assisted by Rev. W. F. Ashburn and Rev. T. F. McCulloch. Mrs. Staley had been a faithful member of Shiloh church for several years. The beautiful floral designs showed the high esteem in which she was held. She was a kind and loving wife and neighbor and will be greatly missed by all.

We are sorry to note the illness of one of our good neighbors, Mrs. Caroline Hinshaw.

Since the loss of our Brother Hemphill, the following have been elected to succeed him: Steward, Charlie Hemphill; general interests steward, George Pickett. REPORTER.

Orange Charge.—The second quarterly conference will be held at Hebron church Saturday before fourth Sunday in April at 2 P. M. Officials, please be on hand promptly at 2 o'clock. Candidates for delegate to nominate and other important business.

Centennial services will be held for the charge at Chestnut Ridge church the fifth Sunday in April. The program will be as follows:

10:00—Sunday school.
11:00—Song service; devotionals.

New Church on Davidson Charge.—Pine Hill has a scattered membership of 54. The old church were very small and was under repair. A meeting was called about a year ago to come to definite conclusion for improvement. The majority wanted a new church; some were a little pessimistic about it, but nobody knocked the new church movement; so they went to work with these results: Inside 12 months they have erected a beautiful new church with a brick foundation, size 30x40, with recess pulpit and a beautiful belfry in front; painted it inside and outside, debts paid, ready for dedication the fourth Sunday in April. This church is located on State Highway No. 109, from Thomasville to Troy. A marker in the yard tells what church it is. None of these members are considered wealthy. C. E. RIDGE,

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Resolutions of Respect

Resolutions adopted by the Wesley-Hood Sunday school class of the First M. E. Church, St. Augustine, Fla., for Mrs. Lorena Garrett Lindsay:

Whereas, God, in His infinite wisdom, has seen fit to remove from this earthly life our beloved friend and teacher, Mrs. J. W. Lindsay, whose smile of greeting and faithful service endeared her to us in bonds of love:

Be it resolved, that we shall miss her in our class because of these sweet, Christian virtues; but we bow in submission to the will of God, praying that we may emulate her Christian virtues, and that when the call comes, we, too, may be ready.

Be it further resolved, that the God of all grace may comfort her loved ones, especially her devoted companion; and that a copy of these resolutions be sent the husband, and a copy be spread on the minutes of the class book.

MRS. L. L. KNIGHT,
CHRISTINE JOHNSON,
MRS. WILLIAM E. BRYANT,
Committee.

Resolutions adopted by the Willing Workers Circle of the First M. E. Church, of St. Augustine, Fla., for Mrs. Lorena Garrett Lindsay:

Whereas, God, who knoweth all things best, has in His wisdom called from our midst our loyal and faithful friend and co-worker, Mrs. J. W. Lindsay, whose noble and unselfish life endeared her to us all, and inspired us to higher ideals;

Be it resolved, that we, the members of the Willing Workers Circle of the First Methodist Church, St. Augustine, Florida, shall deeply feel the loss of such a beautiful Christian character, who always responded so lovingly and willingly to any call to service for the Master;

That we remember her and try to emulate her beautiful Christian life. Hers was indeed a sweet incense unto the Lord.

That we deeply sympathize with her bereaved husband, and pray that God, in His infinite mercy, may comfort him.

Be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be recorded in the minutes of the Willing Workers Circle, and a copy published in the Evening Record, and a copy of same be sent to her husband.

MRS. CARL J. ROBERTS,
Committee.

Allred

Chas. W. Allred was born in Randolph county, N. C., on May 4, 1889, near Gray's Chapel M. P. Church, where he lived until a few years since, when he moved to Asheboro. He retained his membership at Gray's Chapel as long as he lived. After having several operations within the last year, he died at a hospital in Greensboro, February 10, 1928. He left a wife and three children. His pastor visited him in the hospital. At the time of this visit, it appeared as though he would get well. But he said, "If I don't get well, I am ready to go."

Rev. Mr. Gregory, pastor of the Friends Church in Asheboro; Rev. J. E. Pritchard, of our M. P. Church in Asheboro, and the writer conducted funeral services at Gray's Chapel on the second Sunday in February. The great concourse of people in attendance manifested the esteem in which he was held. May God bless the bereaved ones.

A. O. LINDLEY.

Pugh

Millard Filmore Pugh was born in Randolph county, N. C., near Gray's Chapel M. P. Church on March 12, 1851. On November 30, 1873, he was married to Letha Jane Allred. This union was blest with 11 children, of whom nine survive. These are: G. D. Pugh, E. L. Pugh, Mrs. R. P. Foust, Mrs. G. H. Hardin, Mrs. A. T. Nixon, M. A. Pugh, Mrs. R. H. Hackett, Mrs. I. E. Routh, and Mrs. J. G. Julian. There are 33 grandchildren living, and 11 great-grandchildren.

He accepted Christ as his Savior many years ago, and joined the M. P. Church at Gray's Chapel in 1879. As long as health permitted, he was one of the most faithful and interested members. When health failed him so that he could not attend the services, he still loved his church, and manifested an interest in the work of the church. Often he was the only member of Gray's Chapel to attend the quarterly conference. He was faithful till death. He has been blind and his health such that he could not leave home for the past few years.

On March 26, 1928, he was called home, after manifesting a patience in all his suffering that is marvelous. He has left an influence for good that has made his community and church better.

Rev. W. F. Ashburn, a former pastor, assisted the writer in the funeral services at Gray's Chapel, where the body was laid to rest.

A. O. LINDLEY.

Staley

Mrs. Annie Kimrey Staley, the youngest child of the late Hampton L. and Mary S. Kimrey, born July 30, 1886, died March 20, 1928. She was united in marriage to Arthur E. Staley May 12, 1917. Besides her husband she leaves the following brothers and sisters: George M. Kimrey, James A. Kimrey, William M. Kimrey, Henry H. Kimrey, John H. McMasters, half-brother, Mrs. Mary Ada Wright, Mrs. Martha E. Kirkman.

She was converted and joined the M. E. Church at a very early age. After marriage she moved her membership to the Shiloh M. P. Church with her husband. Truly she was a good woman, and will be greatly missed. A large concourse of people attended the funeral services at Shiloh, conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. W. F. Ashburn and Rev. T. F. McCulloch, where the body was interred. May God's grace sustain her companion, and all the sorrowing ones.

A. O. LINDLEY.

Hemphill

Walter Kyle Hemphill was born September 28, 1890, near Julian, N. C. He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Hemphill. In early life Walter gave himself to the Christian faith, and joined Shiloh M. P. Church. He loved his church. He was superintendent of our Sabbath school, and also one of our stewards. He was a busy man, as he worked in the store with his father. But he was not too busy to show his interest in the work of the church. He was so upright and honest in all his business transactions that no one found fault or made complaint of any kind. One neighbor said, "I don't believe anybody else could have done the business he has done and no one find fault with him." Surely he was one of our best. We shall miss him. But trust that we shall see him in the Home of the Soul.

He leaves his parents and the following brothers and sisters: Grady, Charlie and Tyson Hemphill, all of Julian, N. C., and Mrs. W. A. Kanoy, of Pleasant Garden, N. C. Death came on March 19, 1928. We felt that he was needed here so much in our church. But God had a higher service for him in glory.

Rev. W. F. Ashburn and Rev. T. F. McCulloch assisted the writer in the funeral services which were held at Shiloh, where interment was made. May God heal the broken hearts of parents and loved ones.

A. O. LINDLEY.

Butts

Mrs. Bessie Butts died in the hospital in High Point, N. C., April 8th, and was brought to Rosemary, N. C., April 9th, and was buried in a family burying ground about four miles out from Rosemary. Mrs. Butts was one of Hawkins Chapel's girls and was nearing her 27th birthday. She belonged to Hawkins Chapel church, having joined this church at the age of 14 years. About four years ago she was married to Mr. Joe Butts.

She leaves her husband and one child five or six months old; also her mother, three sisters and one brother.

The church and community have the deepest sympathy for these dear people in the time of their sorrow.

Mrs. Butts was a very fine young woman and was well known. She served the public a long time in the U. S. post office at Rosemary, N. C., and was liked by the public.

We bow in humble submission to God who does all things well, and makes no mistakes.

Funeral was held in Hawkins Chapel church by her pastor, Rev. M. I. Crutchfield, and the writer, April 10th, then her body was carried to the burying place and laid to rest. There were many beautiful flowers placed upon her grave as a token of the high regard that her friends had for her. Her young life is gone, but will not be forgotten.

—Calvary church is indebted to Bro. James Swain for handsome bulletins containing besides a list of officers of the church and Sunday school the announcements that would otherwise have to be read, and might be forgotten.

—Calvary church people were made glad last Sunday by the accession of three new members: Bro. L. A. Pugh and Mrs. Pugh and Mrs. Nugent.

REV. D. R. BRASWELL

The shining path to eternity is crowded, and the "Celestial Gate" stands ajar.

Another "great man in Israel has fallen." If greatness is measured by faith and works, then, indeed, Rev. D. A. Braswell measured up to the standard, and rightfully takes his place amongst the noblest and best of that splendid group of saints who have lived, labored and won through devoted service in the North Carolina Conference of our Church.

For many years Brother Braswell was my valued friend, and, from the time he began his pastorate in the Conference, I have watched his work, and somewhat kept in touch with the progress of his ministry; and well do I recall when he came to the Conference, and with sorrow in his heart told me that he could not pass the prescribed course for the year because he had not had the time from his work to read and study. I knew how he was handicapped, and how arduous and successful had been his labor of the year, and I said to him that his report was sufficient evidence of his efficiency, and he deserved to be passed by the committee, and ordained. The Conference wisely took that view, and his labors have yielded a rich reward to the church.

When I heard of his death I was not surprised, but grieved. In his going not only I lost a good friend, but the Conference one of its most loyal and effectual workers.

Last summer I visited him in a hospital in Charlotte. He told me of his afflictions, but he felt that he was recovering, and he was restless under the urge to get back to his work, of which he spoke with his wonted ardor and faith. When I was leaving him with little hope of his restoration to health, I said to him that in the beautiful smoewhere and by the mystery of somehow, in the land where time is not reckoned, sickness never comes and we never grow old, I wanted to see the big bright stars in his crown. With a warm grasp of the hand, and quivering lips he said, "Brother, meet me there."

He labored under many difficulties, and was confronted by all the hindrances and hardships incident to one of his calling, but his faith, uppermost and supreme, led his tireless energy where duty called, and thus, there and then he planted a church, one after another, until the record, when made up, will doubtless show second to none, if equaled by any, in recent years. He did a great work.

Brother Braswell knew his talents and his limitations, and the sphere of his work, and he was not ashamed to bear the cross of his Christ into the byways and slums, or into the highways and busy marts of the cities with zeal and humility like unto his Master.

Where sin was there he preached righteousness, and always he bore the banner of his King unfurled. I believe that of him it might well be said, "He did what he could."

I do not know the composition of the Conference as in former years, so many of the veterans have gone on, and I have been wondering whether there is one to take his place.

MARRIED

Chniel-Troxler

Miss Frances Adlean Troxler and William Edgar Chniel were married at Grace Methodist Protestant church, Greensboro, Friday evening, April 6, with Rev. R. J. Tamblyn performing the ceremony. Only the immediate family and close friends witnessed the ceremony.

Mrs. Chniel is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Troxler, of Greensboro, and is an active member of Grace church. Mr. Chniel is the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Chniel, of Richmond, Va., and has made his home for several years in Greensboro, where he is a municipal employee engaged in making highway surveys.

THE SEA

What is this mystery
That holds me dumb
As the tides go and come?
Mutely and reverently I stand
As one awaiting a command.
Is it the Voice of God, O Sea,
Voice of Eternity?

What is this mystery
That holds me dumb
As the tides go and come?
Worn with the suffering of human toil,
Is it the longing of the soul
That hears God's voice, O Sea,
And yearns to be free?

Reformers That Can't Reform

It seems to have been fortunate that our Methodist Protestant church fathers were expelled from the Methodist Episcopal church. We do not see how otherwise they would ever have succeeded in being reformers. Large numbers of laymen in the M. E. church have striven for years to change the form of organization to give the laity more voice in the control of affairs. So small has been their success that some have given up the struggle and quietly withdrawn and joined other denominations which give larger recognition to laymen. Others are continuing the fight, not realizing that nothing short of a revolution can bring to them what they seek. The following letter printed in the Northwestern Christian Advocate reveals the situation:

"Editor of the Northwestern: In this town there are a number of non-Methodist physicians and other professional men and merchants, all belonging to other churches, although they were raised in Methodist homes and educated in Methodist colleges. When I ask them why, they point to the corporation of priests which is the real, legal working Methodist church.

"They say, 'This is America, a republic, with democratic ideas in every community government and representative government to the very top. It takes two hundred laymen's votes to equal one preacher's in your General Conference, and the lay representatives are all of them influenced by strong ministers, so that there is no representation of laymen whatsoever in the legislation of the church. And in the annual conferences, where everything is ultimately settled, no layman's voice can be heard. The preachers voted overwhelmingly against it. Your fundamental law makes it impossible to change this situation, and the only remedy is to join another church or organize one of our own if we would make our religion harmonize with our beliefs and government and general ideas of the diginty, worth and right to freedom of all mankind.' And there isn't a thing I can say in reply, for it is absolutely true.—L. W."

Peter's Proposed Tabernacles

"Let us make three tabernacles: one for thee and one for Moses and one for Elias." Peter spoke without due consideration and made an irrelevant proposition. Still he must have had in mind a more or less definite purpose. What was it? Some have supposed that he meant only to suggest the building of three booths to shelter from the night air the three distinguished personages present. With this understanding it was an offer of hospitality and is a credit to Peter's heart if not to his head. But it seems likely that Peter meant much more than that. In his elation of mind brought on by the extraordinary privilege of seeing and hearing the three illustrious leaders, he grasped at the hope of making permanent the privilege. He would prolong the experience and provide that all men might enter into it. Just as the Israelites of old built a tabernacle in the wilderness to enshrine the presence of Jehovah among His people, so now Peter would provide permanent and appropriate dwelling places for the three great leaders sent from God. He would prepare three oracles that all might continue to speak to men. It seems an answer to Peter's thought that Moses and Elias were at once withdrawn from sight and the heavenly voice declared, "This is my beloved Son: hear ye him."

Patriotism That Leans Backward

It is good to love one's country, but not good to hate the people of other countries. Christianity inculcates love for all mankind. Patriotism if it be true patriotism is consistent with philanthropy. If patriotism is opposed to philanthropy, it is false patriotism. Patriotism is nationalism. Philanthropy leads to internationalism. Nationalism may be first in psychological order, but internationalism must be reached before the moral order is completed. Love is not full grown until it grows beyond the bounds of nationality and flows over into internationality.

One of our patriotic orders composed of women is said to have blacklisted Bishop McConnell, President David Starr Jordan, Rabbi Wise and other prominent men because they are not regarded as safe speakers. Why are they not considered safe speakers? We believe they are objected to because they have gotten beyond the bounds of a narrow and false patriotism and entered into sympathetic relationship with the whole world of mankind. We can imagine no other plausible ground.

"America for Americans" sounds well to those who have no love for men as such, but is really not a Christian slogan. "America for the world" is better. And this need not ignore our right in serving the world to protect ourselves against the evils other nations would impose upon us.

High Point College Catalogue

In my younger days few publications so aroused me as did college catalogues. How fortunate, we thought, were those young people who could become college students. How we yearned for the privilege. But it cost money and we had it not. Still fresh sight of a college catalogue would rekindle the fire within and keep it burning for some time. We never gave up hope and at last found in far-away Michigan in our own Methodist Protestant college an opportunity to pay expenses in work. We jumped at it. It was one of the best jumps we ever made.

The new High Point catalogue is a better-looking book than were most of the catalogues in our college days, and we hope it will reach the young souls susceptible of being set on fire for a better education. It contains information for students who wish to enter and gives the roll of this year's students and announcements for next year. If you wish a copy, write to President R. M. Andrews, High Point, N. C.

SENSITIVE AND INTOLERANT SCIENTISTS

By Bishop W. A. Candler

(The following article by Bishop Candler seems to state the case so clearly and justly that we feel it would be difficult to improve on it, and call attention of the reader of the Herald to the same.—J. F. Dosier.)

There are not two Gods in the universe, but only one.

The God of Revelation and the God of Nature are the same God "who is over all God blessed forever." (Romans ix:5).

No one, whether theologian or scientist, who believes in the existence of a personal God, denies this fundamental truth.

Hence the frequent assertion that the revelation of God in His Word and His revelation of Himself in His works cannot by any possibility be contradictory. This truth is so obvious that it may be regarded as a truism. The frequent iteration and reiteration of it by a certain class of writers and speakers in recent years has somewhat impaired its force and imparted to it the accent of cant.

But it is a great truth which cannot be questioned, and which ought never to be forgotten.

It does not carry with it, however, the inferences which some men draw from it. It does not imply that all the theories of science are and must be in accord with God's writtenWord.

Scientific theories are no more than the interpretation of Nature by men, who are fallible and who are not infrequently biased by their scientific prepossessions.

If the interpretation of Nature by men supplied an adequate and unerring revelation of God, there would be no necessity for any other revelation of His nature whatsoever. But such is not the case.

Since the days of Job wise men have said to one another, "Canst thou by searching find out God? Canst thou find out the Almighty unto perfection? It is as high as heaven; what canst thou do?" (Job xi:7-8). To all these questions honest minds have given negative answers.

The prevalence of poly-theistic cults throughout the habitable earth is the proof that nature cannot reveal God to mankind. If it were not so, mankind would never have made "gods many and lords many," (I Corinthians viii:5) and given to them adoration and subjection.

Even the active and acute minds of Greece fell under the delusions of poly-theism, and made to themselves gods such as Jupiter and Apollo, and Bacchus and Neptune, and assigned to each of these naturalistic deities dominion over some realm of Nature accordant with their imaginary characters and powers. If the agile-minded Greeks could not find in Nature a true revelation of the One God, it is difficult to believe that any others can do better than they did.

There is not in all the universe a polytheistic note, and yet mankind has been unable, without a divine revelation, to escape either polytheism on the one hand or to fall into atheism on the other. Looking at nature alone men reach one of two conclusions, namely, that there are many gods, or that there is no god.

Many of our modern scientists have become atheists or agnostics, that is to say in plain and untechnical language, they believe either that there is no God, or that, if there is a God, He cannot be known.

The prevalent conclusion of present-day science, no less than the pretty polytheism of the Greeks, proclaim with emphasis that nature does not, and cannot, yield a revelation of God. Human interpretations of nature are too ambiguous, contradictory, and changeful to give us any adequate disclosure of the character of the Almighty who created the universe and reigns over it.

For such an unveiling of the Deity we must depend upon a direct and personal revelation made by Himself in mercy to men.

Hence to assert that human science and the divine revelation agree is to affirm what never was true, is not now true, and never will be true, until men have reached a final and inerrant interpretation of all the facts of nature.

A question which naturally arises is this, "When science and revelation disagree, which shall have the right of making the final decision on the matter at issue?"

Many men are ready to say that the revelation of God in the Bible must yield to the authority of science; but that is to say we have no clear and authoritative revelation of God at all.

Unquestionably the scientists and their amateurish disciples have become far too dogmatic and intolerant. They are drawing too many illogical conclusions from their theories concerning the facts of the material world, and they are denying facts in the spiritual world which are just as real as any facts in the realm of physical nature. Indeed, they seek to subject to things material the things spiritual or explain the latter away altogether. Hence their unwarrantable intrusion into the field of theology, concerning which pretentious invasion that great Scotchman, Dr. James Orr, says most pertinently:

"The theologian may be to blame when he rashly or dogmatically intrudes into the domain of science; on the other hand, it is not his place to be silent when the scientist makes bold inroads into his domain, and, in the name of science, would sweep away spiritual facts which stand on their own grounds of evidence as securely as any facts of external nature. Truths in nature and truths in the spiritual world cannot, of course, be in real collision. But this requires to be made clear against unwarrantable assertion on either side."

The scientists are very jealous of their rights over the domain in which they labor, and on every patch of scientific theory they place placards saying to all passersby, especially preachers, "Keep off the grass." It is time for them to moderate their dogmatism and "keep off the grass" on the lawns of religion.

Science cannot justly claim the right to exercise universal imperialism over all the fields of thought. But not a few of them assert, and endeavor to maintain, such an intolerant and imperialistic claim for science to be the monarch of all it surveys and to tyrannize over considerable areas which it has not and cannot survey. It is too plain for doubt that such efforts are vain and vainglorious attempts to cover too much territory. They are manifestations of an unlovely species of Kaiserism over human minds.

By such unwarranted extension of their realm the scientists have intimidated some who live and labor in adjacent fields. The psychologists and the men who work in the field of ethics have fallen down before them and worship toward their altars of materialism in the accents of babbling behaviorism and decreed determinism by which human freedom is denied and the divine Personality doubted.

In like manner the philosophic naturalists of ancient Greece, and, indeed, the benighted students of nature throughout all the ancient world, reached fatalistic conclusions.

When the freedom of man is rejected in order to make way for any scientific or philosophical speculation, there is an irrepressible conflict between religion and science which cannot be compromised or conciliated. Bishop Charles Gore, of the Church of England, has put the matter most clearly and candidly in these words: "In denying that man has any freedom of will, and, therefore, that he can have any responsibility for his actions—if science persists in denying that, then science and the Bible can never agree."

It is a babyish whine for them to say after raising this issue of life and death, that they are being persecuted. Nobody in our day is opposing real science, and no one is persecuting scientists of any sort, whether they be true scientists or pseudo-scientists. The plaintive pleas of some about imaginary persecution are utterly puerile. Let all concerned meet the issue in manly conflict and settle on the basis of immutable fact.

THE SOUTHLAND COMMITTEE OF SAFETY

The Southland Committee of Safety is an organization of the moral forces of the South to protest against the nomination by the Democratic party of a wet candidate for the presidency of the United States. This protest, which explains itself, is printed below. The purpose is to secure 500,000 signatures. When all these signatures have been gathered in, they will be presented to the Democratic convention to meet at Houston, Texas, June 26.

If you are a friend of temperance and public righteousness, clip this protest, paste it upon a sheet of paper, add other sheets as needed, and secure the signatures of as many of your Democratic friends as possible. If no more, sign your own family and a few neighbors. When your list is complete, send to the Southland Committee of Safety, 827 Stahlman Building, Nashville, Tennessee.

To the Delegates-Elect to the National Democratic Convention to Assemble in the City of Houston, Texas, June 26, 1928.

Honorable Delegates:

We, the undersigned, legal Democratic voters of the County of..... State of ..... do hereby record, and respectfully transmit to you, this our solemn protest against the nomination by the Democratic party for the Presidency, or Vice-Presidency, of the United States of any candidate who has declared himself in favor of the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment or the Volstead law, enacted thereunder; as also any candidate who is not fully committed to the principle of the complete prohibition of the liquor traffic, and the enforcement of all laws enacted to that end, which is now the established policy of the American people and nation.

SECRET PRAYER

If we love God, we ought to seek the opportunity to tell Him so. We ought to tell Him how grateful we are for what He has done for us and what He has come to mean to us. The advantage of secret prayer is that nobody but God and yourself know what is going on between Him and yourself.

Secret prayer, then, is the method by which we commune with the Father. If fellowship with genuine friends is so comforting and helpful, fellowship with God the Father, the best and wisest friend everywhere, guarantees benefits and blessings beyond our power to appreciate. Talk with him, then, every day; you will soon learn that life is not the same without this daily fellowship with the Father. Jesus practiced this; we will be wise to follow in His steps.—Washington Christian Advocate.

FLOUR FROM HEAVEN

"They shall not be ashamed in the evil time; and in the days of famine they shall be satisfied." Psalm 37:19.

This incident comes to us from Rosa Lazar, 513 Temple St., Los Angeles, Calif., who went through the Armenian Massacres of 1893 and 1895 and at that time resided in Moosh, Turkish Armenia, not far from Van.

A poor Armenian peasant woman who had given birth to an infant was filled with a great desire to have it baptized, which was the custom among her people, but as they were among the very poorest of the peasant class they were not able to offer even the humblest courtesy in the way of food to the officiating priest.

This was a serious matter, as it was the custom to have the table filled with the very best that could be had for a thank offering after the service was performed.

They had nothing to offer him, but the mother had faith in God. She said, "Let the priest come tomorrow, we will trust in God."

There was standing, inside the room, a huge clay pot made to hold flour for the family use. These pots were made by the peasants from their native earth or clay and were often of great capacity. This one in question would hold several barrels, but was empty at this time.

During the night the mother was awakened by the crying of her child and while awake heard a peculiar cracking sound. Curious to know what it meant she arose and, going near the large pot or container, saw some flour sprinkled on the floor. She went to look more closely and discovered a crack in its side. Then came the question, what caused the crack?

She looked into the pot and to her great surprise she saw that it was filled to the brim with flour. Not coarse, heavy peasant flour, but a beautiful, creamy tinted white flour.

The neighbors, on investigating this wonder, would bring bushels of their own flour that they might exchange it for a small portion of this flour to mingle with their own.

They called it the "blest" flour. In this way the flour barrel of the poor peasant family was never empty, until at last the temptation came to sell flour from the barrel, when soon it was exhausted and ceased to increase.

We notice here how when God's blessing was perverted and they started to make merchandise out of the gift, that it ceased to become a blessing. We have the example in 2 Kings, 5th chapter, of how the servant of Elijah, Gehazi, was punished for making merchandise out of the miraculous healing of Naaman the leper. This remarkable answer to prayer is just another proof that the Word of God is a living Word. Even a poor peasant can unlock the doors of Heaven when the key of faith is used.

"He will regard the prayer of the destitute, and not despise their prayer." Psalm 102:17.

Breaches in the Wall

"The Angel of the Lord encampeth around them that fear Him, and delivereth them."

In the year 1860 an Armenian merchant of Erzerum, Turkish Armenia, was sending some merchandise from Erzerum to another town. There have never been any railways in that part of the country. Everything had to be transported by caravan, and as the load was valuable, he himself went with the caravan. A God-fearing, earnest Christian, he had been instructed in the faith by his believing parents.

It is the custom of such expeditions to camp at night, and the country was infested by Kurds—bandits who live by robbing the caravans.

A band of these highwaymen followed the caravan, intending to rob it at the first camping-place on the plains.

At the chosen hour, under cover of darkness, they drew near. All was strangely quiet. There seemed to be no guards, no watchers. But as they pressed up, to their astonishment they found high walls where walls had never stood before. They still followed, but the next night they found the same impassable wall. The third night the walls stood, but this time there were breaches in them through which they went in. The captain of the robbers, terrified by the mystery, woke the owner.

"What does it mean? Ever since you left Erzerum we have followed, intending to rob you. The first night and the second we found high walls around the caravan, but tonight we entered through broken places. If you will tell us the secret of all this, I will not molest you."

The merchant himself was surprised and puzzled. "My friends," he said, "I have done nothing to have walls raised about us. All I do is to pray every evening, committing myself and those with me to God. I fully trust in Him to keep me from all evil; but tonight, being very tired and sleepy, I made rather a half-hearted, lip prayer. That must be why you were allowed to break through."

The Kurds were overcome by such testimony as this. Then and there they gave themselves to Jesus Christ; and from highway robbers became God-fearing men. But the Armenian never forgot the breach in the wall of the prayer.—From a tract published by Free Tract Society, Inc., 746 Crocker St., Los Angeles, Calif., U. S. A.

"SCIENCE OF THE IMAGINATION"

"It is doubtful if at any time in the world's history," Prof. John S. Newbury declares, "there has been a theory that has gained such popularity with such an unsubstantial basis as that of the evolution of man from the lower orders."

Even Mr. Darwin held the evolutionary hypothesis as merely tentative. In his two principal works the expression "we may well suppose" occurs over eight hundred times. It is submitted that this is a precarious foundation upon which to base an argument affecting the entire universe. Nothing in the modern world is more amazing than the readiness with which prominent educators take a confessedly unproven theory and make it the basis of all their thinking and teaching. Nothing could be more unscientific and unphilosophical than this. Was not the lamented Prof. Alfred Fairhurst justified in saying, "If I were to call evolution a science at all, it would be the science of the imagination"?—From a Tract by W. N. Briney.

—The editor of the HERALD saw the N. C. Branch of the W. F. M. S. organized some twenty-five years ago. This week he looked in upon the annual meeting of the Branch in Grace church, this city. There has been a remarkable growth in interest and numbers. The W. H. M. S. meeting with the other has also enjoyed a great growth since it was organized. We expect a report of this joint meeting written by some of the members. We noted the presence of quite a number of our ministers.

THE MORAL STATUS OF THE YOUNG

Whether the youth of our day is worse than the youth of the past is a question that will not down, notwithstanding the opinion of many.

The opinion is by no means unanimous. Some can see no good in the young, while others can see no evil, and, as usual, the middle ground is the safer one.

That there is much good in them, we must confess. Some are far beyond the youth of our young days. They are more aggressive and have more initiative, and they often accomplish things that we in our early years would never have thought of attempting.

All this is true of a part, but when we consider them as a whole, we have to qualify the statement.

If we weigh the good in contrast with the evil, we have to confess that the evil outweighs the good.

This conviction comes to us when we use our eyes, to see what is going on around us.

The daily papers are crowded with stories of crime, by both young men and young women.

Boys have become bandits, and more than once young women have played the same role.

Our government is forced to protect by an armed guard the mails, even in thickly populated sections of our country.

Of course we realize that in comparing past conditions with the present, there are more means now of knowing what is happening in other sections than we had fifty years ago. Statistics show that crime is really on the increase.

One of the judges in New York, as quoted by Rev. S. B. McLean, in a recent address, published in the Standard, states that 75 per cent of the criminals are under 25 years of age.

Mr. McLean also states that statistics prove that this country leads the world in crime.

We have 15 per cent of the population of the world, yet we have as much crime as all other countries combined.

It is estimated that in Chicago there are 200,000 persons under 25 years of age who are either truants, delinquents or criminals.

In the Illinois State Reformatory there are 1,339 boys and young men, an alarming number when one considers the age of the delinquents.

Many remedies have been proposed for checking this moral decay.

It is not a matter of stricter enforcement of law, though if the laws were more strictly enforced some of this crime would no doubt be checked. It is not a matter of better home influence, though that would help immeasurably. It is bringing the home back to the Old Book, and making religion a part of the family life. It is making the father the priest in his own house, so that his word is respected and obeyed.

These youthful criminals do not all come from the slums. Many of them are from homes of refinement, whose heads are professing Christians.

The difficulty is that they come from homes where there is no law, and where the Word of God is not the rule of life.

We mourn the breakdown of civil law in our land, and we do well to be concerned over it. The breakdown of law in the home is far more serious, because one is largely the cause of the other.

The family is the foundation of the state, so that if one suffers the other does also.

John defines sin as transgression of the law, which is literally lawlessness. Sin then is the explanation of the outbreak of crime in our land.

To cure sin, you need the gospel of Jesus Christ, and until men recognize this fact, all the laws and penalties will avail nothing.—Presbyterian Standard.

THE TEACHINGS OF JESUS

By Floyd R. Garrett

Jesus is regarded as the greatest teacher the world has ever known. His greatness was different from that of other teachers because of His method of teaching and aims for which He stood. The aims and purposes of His teaching were far superior to any teacher. The results of His teaching have lived down through the ages, even through the Dark Ages when civilization was at a low ebb, and when other teachings lost their identity and became extinct.

When Jesus began His ministry He had no intention of destroying the Old Law, as many believed. He came to fulfill the law, and to put a new meaning and spiritual essence into it. He showed the value of His teachings by His own life. His was a model life. Through the scriptures are found numbers of teachings that put the old law in the background and the new into its place. It was necessary that some changes be made because "new wine would not be put into old bottles."

The sources of Jesus' teachings are found in the gospels —Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. It is the theory of most Bible students that Mark received most of his information concerning the life and works of Jesus from Peter and that the book of Mark gives the full account of Him.

Jesus' teaching was broad and reached into many fields of activity. The most perfect and practical teachings are found in the Sermon on the Mount.

Jesus was pre-eminently a moral and religious teacher. The two earliest sources set forth this side of His activity. By His contemporaries and His disciples He was addressed as Rabbi, or Teacher.

That which primarily distinguishes Jesus from the scribal teachers of his day is the quiet note of authority that characterized all His teachings. This quality was the chief source of His charm and effectiveness. It was the authority, not of dogmatism, but of deep conviction born of personal experience. At all times He manifested a profound reverence for the teachers of Israel's past.

The greatness of Jesus' teaching was due to his intimate knowledge of God which was the mystery and yet the inspiration of all that He did and taught. His knowledge of men was a source of skill in His teachings. In public life His judgments were never made known, he expressed them in love and sympathy and in desires to aid rather than to criticise them. In the modern sense, Jesus was a great psychologist, as well as a prophet and philanthropist of His age.

Another reason for Jesus' greatness as a teacher was the clarity and concreteness of His teachings. He taught as He thought, in figures drawn from nature or from the eyes of the everyday life of the people. Again, Jesus' aim was definite and His method intensely practical.

Jesus' conception of ideals and reconstruction of life are clearly shown in the gospel story. The ethics of Jesus seems to be in harmony with "self-realization," and finds its bonum in love and service. Hence the Golden Rule becomes its precept and the Kingdom of God its goal. If Jesus' ideals of love and service are analyzed they will be found to imply charity, mercy, forgiveness, and a number of new virtues. Through the ideals of Jesus the lives adopting them are to be reconstructed.

To effect this reconstruction, Jesus uses a three-fold means —His life and death, as well as His teachings. His life was unique in its union with the purposes of the Father. His death was an example of fidelity to duty.

Jesus clearly shows His conception of the future. He both assumes and asserts a resurrection, but he leaves the details unsettled. Reurrection may occur in the preent, as well as in the future, through a moral inspiration or feeling of certainty that one will rise again. He asserts the principle of judgment. The gospel description of reward and punishment must be considered as figurative and cannot be taken as eternal.

All the teachings of Jesus center around His conception of the Kingdom of Heaven, which back to various apocalyptic writings of the Jews. Jesus tended toward spiritual interpretation of the Kingdom. He regarded the Kingdom as present as well as future, but held that it was to be foreshadowed by an earthly community.

The nature of Jesus is revealed in His idea of God. To the wisdom, majesty and power conceived by the Jewish traditions, He added the idea of fatherhood, with the attributes of protecting care, pity, and forgivingness. Men become children of God in so far as they adopt these qualities.

Sin Jesus felt to be based on the inner life, rather than to be something external, technical, and the types of people He holds to be judged by this internal test. Hence the discrimination between the "sinner" and his sins, and was exceedingly optimistic about being able to redirect the lives even of great "sinners." Jesus did not divide men into two distinct classes as "sinners" and "righteous," but believed that men were swayed by mixed motives, and that total depravity never existed.

The teachings of Jesus will fit any age. He formulated ideals and principles, and did not lay down any definite rules. Jesus' attitude toward divorce seems to be a striking example. While He held that marriage united two personalities, He also held that the breach of union, though it be legal, constituted adultery. Throughout His teachings He places marriage as sacred, as an expression of natural instinct, but He did not lay down many rules concerning the treatment of women and the rearing of children. He was a celibate and did not have the parental influence or experiences that men had, but His knwoledge of those problems was superior to any man's. He regarded marriage as monogamous.

With the conception of the aim, the purpose, and the general ideals of Jesus at hand, it is necessary to recapitulate some of the things that Jesus taught. He describes God as "father" with the attributes of protecting care, pity, and forgiveness, and held that men become sons of God by adopting these characteristics. On the social side He regarded God as King and made humility, purity, and service the test of membership in His Kingdom. A present resurrection as well as a future is asserted. For a solution of the social problems —divorce, the family, diversion, wealth, almsgiving, individual conduct, and politics—Jesus had no definite rules. Upon close examination of these principles there will seem to be contradiction unless they are examined together.

All of the teachings of Jesus are centered about the problems of an ideal society, character building, and right living.

OPTIMISM | The President's Letter | EVANGELISM

THE VOICE OF A TRUE PROPHET

The Literary Digest of April 14 contains a quotation from the anniversary sermon of Doctor Charles E. Jefferson, preached recently in the Broadway Tabernacle, of which Doctor Jefferson has been pastor for thirty years. What he says here goes so directly to the very heart of the church that we are constrained to pass it on and let it take the place of our usual weekly letter. Every utteracne of this great preacher in this quotation has the ring of a true prophet, and it is our feeling that his words should be burned into the heart of every minister and woven into the warp and filling of every church. The ideals that he voices for Broadway Tabernacle, as his only hope and purpose for that great church, are the ideals that must be rengant in every church that has life, and that does the work that Jesus meant his church to do. The quotation follows:

"A real church on this corner need never die. But it must be a real church. No sham church can succeed here. It must be a drawing church, and to draw it must be alive, and to be alive it must love.

"No church can be saved by an endowment. An endowment is of value only when you have a living church to use it. There are dead churches with heavy endowments. They have piles of gold, but no life. There is no life in them, because they are lacking in love.

"If you ask me what gives me the keenest satisfaction as I look back over these crowded years, my reply is that I am happy to think that I have never cheapened or vulgarized the Broadway Tabernacle pulpit. Broadway loves stunts, but I have never performed one. Broadway yearns for a sensation, but the Broadway Tabernacle pulpit has declined to be sensational. There are enough cabarets and vaudeville shows on Broadway without a church adding to their number.

"I have never shortened my sermons to please the fancy of a sermonette-loving age. I preach long sermons, because I deal always with large themes. No petty subjects have had a place in this pulpit.

"It is a source of satisfaction to me that I have never neglected the Bible. Through thirty years the Bible has held the central place in all our Tabernacle thinking. My joy has been to unfold the ideas of prophets and apostles and of the Prince of Glory. It has never been necessary for me to go outside of the Bible to stimulate your minds and feed your hearts.

"You can not build a church by music. No church is saved by its choir. Only personality draws. Only sacrificial love draws. 'And I, if I be lifted up, will draw.' So said the Man who best knew the secret power of drawing.

"Only a Christlike personality incarcerated in a group of people who have been baptized with the Spirit of Christ, and who have been fused into a compact mass of life by devotion to a cause which is rooted in the mind of God, this is the only power under heaven which can keep the Tabernacle alive through the next thirty years."

Appointments

April 21-22, with Bro. Ridge on Davidson.

April 28-29—Centennial Day—with Bro. Powell on Greensville charge.

May 6, with Bro. Whitaker on Forsyth.

May 13, with Bro. Neese at Worthville in the opening of the new church.

May 16, attending the General Conference.

May love, courage, and consecration grow in every pastor and on every charge. Amen.

PRAYER CHANGES THINGS

Skies seemed dark to me one morning
And my thoughts were tinged with gloom,
But my eye fell on a motto
That was hanging in the room,
Silvery letters on blue background,
Heavenly thought on shining wings
Heavenly thought on shining wings
In these words: "Prayer changes things."

Things surround like iron mountains,
Things that make a thorny way,
Things that curtain skies with doubting,
Things that make it hard to pray,
Dreadful things that never happen
Dog our steps, but faith still sings
In our ears this golden message:
"Don't forget, "Prayer changes things'."

We have seen some things prayer changes,
Greater things we yet may see.
When the Hebrews came from Egypt
Prayer made pathways through the sea;
In the hot and dusty desert
Moses prayed and cooling springs
Gushed out from their rocky prisons,
Just because "Prayer changes things."

We should be so very watchful
Lest some things should change our prayers;
Pleasing things like lotus perfume
Steal in on us unawares,
Till we loiter in a dreamland
Slaves, but thinking we are kings;
There's a golden key to freedom—
It is this: "Prayer changes things."

When we think that our surroundings
Keep us from the heavenly way,
Or that wealth or change will help us
In some distant place or day,
Let's remember 'tis our Savior,
Not environment, that brings
Happiness and peace and pleasure;
Here's the way: "Prayer changes things."

—Raymond Browning.

—We hope for good additions to the Gratitude Gift this week and next. Many people have the feeling of gratitude who do not have on hand sufficient money to make what they consider a worthy offering. Hence the delay in their cases. Others have never thought about their debt to the church to come to appreciate what the church has done for them. Hence the delay in their cases. After the occasion has passed it will be a more pleasing recollection to have made a small offering than none at all.

OUR STORY PAGE

ONE FROSTY NIGHT

"I think you'd enjoy it now, Ned."

"No, mother, I don't want to go to church. Of course, if you insist—say I must."

James Frazer, sitting by the cheerful blaze of light wood in the sitting-room fireplace that bright, chilly September Sunday morning, looked quickly up from the open Bible on the stand before him.

"No, Ned; we don't insist. You're eighteen. I don't want to say 'must' in this matter, any more than I have in —in less important things—work about the farm, for the past two years. I want you to decide, man-fashion, what's the right thing for you to do."

There was a stiff silence, while Ned Frazer stood looking out of the window across the fields in which his father and himself had worked so hard for two seasons. Then Mrs. Frazer spoke again, in her gentle, eager voice:

"Mr. Kent is—is different from Mr. Marden. Mr. Marden is a good man—he was a faithful pastor to us—but, well I know he didn't understand young folks very well. He antagonized them unconsciously. Still many of the young folks kept on going to church and Sunday school, keeping up the Young People's Society and the chorus choir. And now, Ned, several who became indifferent have come back, you know, since Mr. Kent came."

"I know, mother. But—well, I think ministers are all a lot alike, and—well, I think I can worship better taking a good spin through the country, and down along the beach, where everything is so beautiful, than I can in that ugly old meeting house."

Mrs. Frazer spoke quickly. "It is ugly, I know, son. But the fund for painting and decorating, and a new carpet, is almost made up, and it'll look so different then. Why not help by——"

"Oh, mother, I don't like church!"

Mr. Frazer raised his hand, and his sonorous voice earnestly rolled out a portion of Scripture, and then all three sang the morning hymn, Ned's clear tenor soaring blithely in the air above his father's soft, unmelodious bass. Then he leaned his head on his hand as the others knelt in the morning prayer.

It was chillier when Mr. and Mrs. Frazer returned from church, still more chilly when Ned returned from his ride in time for chores; chillier still at bedtime! more so by the next morning. There was a frosty sky; frost was in the air. And the thermometer was steadily going down. Only the beginning of the second week of September, but in old Fairway, way down in Maine, a killing frost had been known even a month earlier. It felt ominous.

The sweet corn for the canning factory was not more than half picked, but nearly all of it was full enough to do. Loads and loads of their most valuable crop, over which the two men had toiled backbreakingly though cheerfully, for both liked farming, were still on the stalk, at the mercy of Jack Frost. The slightest touch of frost in the kernels would ruin it for canning, bringing into its rich sweetness a queer acid flavor.

The Frazers were up long before dawn that morning, as indeed were most of the farmers in that part of the state, for sweet corn is a popular crop; and besides other crops which might be injured by frost were still unharvested. And the peril was evidently great. A government bulletin, by radio, which the farmers, for a time skeptical, as most of us have been of Old Prob, had learned to trust and appreciate, had given sharp warning.

In the garden Mrs. Frazer hurried from grape-arbor to tomato patch; from tomato patch to the everbearing strawberry bed; from strawberry bed to cucumber and melon vines, not forgetting chrysanthemums and dahlias and some persevering pansies, the latter of which she covered with an old shawl.

Down in the cornfield Mr. Frazer and Ned worked desperately, picking off the ears into bushel baskets, and emptying them into the farm cart, where Old Bob, blanketed, drowsed. Full, it was drawn down to the barn, and dumped on the clean-swept floor, where it would be safe until the factory manager, who had phoned the farmers to gather all they could and hold it, should direct its delivery at the factory. Better a little loss of sweetness from lying picked off the stalk than be frost-bitten. If only they could have cut talks and all; but that would have been slower, and there was no time to spare. The frost would injure the leaves and stalks for the silo, but they would be usable, if not too badly frozen. The ears were the most important. And oh, how important they were that fall.

Mrs. Frazer finished the garden at noon, and made hot coffee and substantial sandwiches for her men. They ate on the run, as indeed did she, joining them in the corn-picking at once. Her chief treasures in the garden were gathered, or, as in case of the strawberry bed and pansy bed, covered with old quilts, shawls, rugs, and horse-blankets. Saved, they could take advantage of the long warm spell that always follows an early frost, and ripen what had been too green to pick. Under the coverings, weighted down with stones, most of them could now defy sharp frost. Tired enough she was, but she would join her men, in spite of their protests.

At supper time she hurried to the house and made more coffee and sandwiches, and were, however, not allowed to check the desperate corn-picking. There was so much still ungathered.

Dusk was closing down fast when the whir of a flivver was heard coming along the road near which they were just then at work. It stopped. The Rev. Donald Kent jumped out and strode over to the wall.

"Good evening, folks! A busy day, I take it."

The Frazers returned greeting, swallowing chokily, their hands still in a nervous pause.

"Been all about. Everybody is hustling. But most of them are pretty well cleaned up now. I've been helping out a little. Can't I do a bit here?"

"Oh, we couldn't think of it, pastor," protested Mr. Frazer. But Mr. Kent broke in unceremoniously. That hastily eaten snack told him volumes, as it would a man much less perceptive than the energetic, in-love-with-his-work young minister.

"You'll have to, Frazer. You shouldn't oppose your pastor when he isn't doing any harm. Just give me a swig of coffee, Mrs. Frazer, and one of those mammoth sandwiches—I see you have a plenty, which makes me unco bold—for I was going home to supper, and then you'll see what an ex-high-jumper and weight-thrower can do to a corn-field."

It was no use to remonstrate. His fresh strength and enthusiasm put new life into the three tired workers. The baskets filled incredibly fast. But it was growing colder quite as fast. Presently Donald Kent paused. "I say, do you mind if I run to the house and phone my wife? I want to set her mind at rest, although she's pretty well used, by this time, to my uncertain arrivals. But just now, with a three-week-old youngster——"

He hurried off to the house. It was some time before he returned. Mrs. Frazer smiled to herself as she worked. "He just couldn't hurry away from that dear little wife of his—and she with that little baby!" She picked all the faster.

It was perhaps a quarter of an hour later when singing was heard across the fields. Shadows emerged from the corner of the big Holt woods, which ran along beside the grazer pasture across the road from the corn-field. Singing a harvest song lustily, on they came. The Frazers straightened their tired backs. Mr. Kent kept on picking.

"It's the Holts!" sang out Ned.

It was Mr. Holt, Mrs. Holt, Frank (Ned's age), Carter, the twins Bart and Ben, Edith, and Dave. Not one missing.

"We're looking for a job!" sang out Frank.

"Green, but willing!" added Carter.

"We've come to help you speed up your corn a bit, if you can make room for such a mob," said Mrs. Holt.

"How did you know?" parried Mrs. Frazer breathlessly.

"A little bird," began Mr. Holt. But Mr. Frazer broke in with a tremble in his deep voice: "You phoned him, pastor!"

Mr. Kent kept right on picking. "Well, I'd been all around, and knew who had in their frostable stuff, and—"

It was Mr. Kent's turn to be interrupted. Frank broke in: "We all were only too glad you did. Ought to have thought of it ourselves. So many of us, and three here. And Mrs. Frazer looks to me about tired enough, seems to me!"

She surely was. And when Ed and Kate Brent came hurrying up the road, and the Peake boys came rumbling from the other direction in their big farm truck, she consented to go to the house—if Mrs. Holt would go with her. Mrs. Holt protested that she had come to pick corn. But after a little private talk with Mrs. Frazer she gave in, and off they went together.

Jim Peake hailed the minister disrespectfully: "Say, there, Mr. Kent, how's this? After you helped us out all the afternoon!"

"And us all the forenoon!" chimed in Kate Brent.

Mr. Kent, like Brer Rabbit, "jes' kep' right on sayin' nuffin'." But actions were speaking loudly.

Many hands made light work, even if some of them are small, and most of them tired. The men had come equipped to cut fodder, and the Peakes' truck could take on noble loads. Before eleven o'clock corn and fodder were safe.

Just then out from the kitchen window floated Mrs. Frazer's musical "Supper-r-r-r!" The responses were various.

"What on earth!" "That poor tired woman!" "I could eat!" "She shouldn't have done it!" "What ever!" "M'm!"

"Hurry!" called Mrs. Holt. They did. And it was a merry company that gathered about the Frazer extension table, with all the leaves in, and laden with ham and eggs, baked potatoes, baked squash, steamed cranberry pudding with butter-and-egg sauce, cookies, long-ripened fruit-cake, and coffee.

When Mr. Kent asked the blessing, Mrs. Frazer might have been seen whisking her handkerchief up to and away from her eyes, with a quick look at Ned's bowed head.

Yes, it was a merry meal, and a merry company that after doing it full justice bade the Frazers good-night.

"Rather abrupt to eat and run, as the beggars do," said Mrs. Brent, laughing.

"I suspect they're glad to have us impolite, if they're as sleepy as I am," said Ben Holt. Everybody laughed and nobody contradicted.

Ned Frazer walked out with Mr. Kent to his car. He stood digging his boot-toe into the gravel path.

"Er—heard you wanted another tenor in the chorus, Mr. Kent. If you think I'd—er—"

"I do!" supplied his pastor, gripping his hand with a corn-harvesting grip. "Rehearsal Wednesday night."

"I'll be there," said Ned.

"And prayer meeting Friday night."

"I'll be there," said Ned.—Minnie Leona Upton, in Young People.

TEDDY AND THE GOLDEN RULE

"Now, then! There is room for one more!" cried Uncle George. "Pack him in, and we're off!"

Room in the great big crowded sleigh for only one more: and, also! there were two eager little boys left standing on the curb-stone, longing with all their hearts to take a ride. "Which of you shall it be?" said Uncle George. There was a moment's pause, then Teddy stepped back. "Let it be Harry," he said. "I can stay behind."

So Harry was swung up into the empty place. The whip cracked, the bells jingled, and away they went, leaving Teddy alone, winking with all his might to keep the tears out of his eyes. Pretty soon he ran upstairs to visit grandma. Grandma was sitting by the window. She laid down her sewing and gathered Teddy up in her arms. "My dear little boy," she said, "has been trying to follow the Golden Rule, hasn't he?" Teddy nodded. Presently he said, "Grandma, does God up in heaven notice when a little boy tries to mind his rules?" "Yes, indeed, He does; and it makes Him feel very glad." Teddy's round face grew solemn. "Can just a little boy like me make God feel glad?" "Yes, dear." "Isn't that queer," said Teddy; "and—and splendid!"

"And isn't it queer," said grandma, gently, "that when little boys like you, and old ladies like me, can make God glad, we sometimes forget and make him sorry?"—Sunbeam.

IF I WERE A MILLIONAIRE

"If I were a millionaire" (I seem to hear you say), "I'd live on but a modest sum and give the rest away. I'd found a home for aged folks where they could spend in ease the twilight of their fading lives as happy as you please. I'd make a fund for widows, too, to save their homes from wreck, and see that every month that passed each one received a check. A home for homeless animals I'd heavily endow and make a happy hunting ground for every lorn bow-wow. I'd scatter seeds of kindness with a free and generous hand, but as I'm not a millionaire, I don't see how I can."

But though you're not a millionaire, and never can be one, you still can practice giving and you'll find it lots of fun. The happiness of helping needs no Rockefeller's pile. It doesn't take a million to win an orphan's smile; it doesn't take a million to make a garret bright; it doesn't take a million to make a burden light; it doesn't take a million to do a lot of things that bring a happiness beyond the happiness of kings. So when the chance of giving comes, remember every time—if you haven't got a dollar, do your best to give a dime.—Source not known.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

SENIOR CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC

April 29: "Right Attitudes Toward the Religions of Others." Rom. 14:1-13

I

Plans for the Meeting

"Round Table Meeting." There are enough denominations and different religions in the world to give each member of your society a name. Term one a Methodist Protestant; another, an M. E.; another, a Presbyterian, Baptist, etc. Include the non-Christian religions and name members for them. Announce a "Round Table Discussion Meeting" at which time the various members will pretend that they belong to the group for which they were named. It will be their duty to give the good points of their respective sects. To add to the interest those representing non-Christian religions could dress as the group does that they represent. Get your pastor to help suggest a list of names, or consult some library on the subject.

Have appropriate songs between the discussions. "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," "Win the One Next to You," "Whosoever Will." Close with "Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

Have your pastor (if not present, the leader) to sum up the various impressions of the meeting with this thought from Dr. George Herbert Betts:

"There are not many differing truths. There is one great truth of which different people possess different pieces. Some day when we really understand each other, we shall see that all the little pieces of truth fit together."

Hints for Leader

1. The topic for this week deals with "Right Attitudes." The great purpose of all instruction and learning is to shape the correct attitude. One's attitude determines largely what one's background has been and determines what that one's future will be.

2. An attitude must be made in reference to something. That something that we have for our discussion is the "Religion of Others." What shall be our attitude? Shall we be so narrow in our own religion that we will assume the attitude of hate rather than be broad and assume an attitude of love and understanding?

3. Intolerance has led to wars. Think of the middle ages with the angry Crusaders going forth against heathens with physical force to find Christ. When the Holy City was reached, Christ was not there, for He was not sought aright.

4. Think of the crusade of North American youth today. They are going forth armed with a broad mind, an attitude of love, and a desire for service. For the three-fold purpose of world evangelism, Christian citizenship and world peace, they go, and Christ goes with them.

Pertaining to Topic

"None of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself," reads our scripture. We are just one great brotherhood regardless of race, religion, social standing, or color. Love is the bond of unity. Misunderstandings and hatreds are the cause of disunity. Christ today finds a way into every race and country. Dr. Stanley Jones in India has found India hungry for "The Christ of the Indian Road." He finds the same desire as he sits with this people in discussing the "Christ of the Round Table." Let us cease to hate those who follow false religions and love them in an understanding way to the real religion of Christ as Stanley Jones and many others have done.

Denominationally there is need of a greater understanding. "God made the church, men have made churches," what a shame denominationalism presents to history. Think of the hatred, intolerance, wars, persecutions, etc., caused by differences in the Christian ranks. There comes hope! Remember the spirit which brought most all of the Christian world into conference at Lausanne last summer! Recall the great comity conferences on missions and the unity conference at Baltimore, etc. Is it not time denominations were gathered around a "Round Table" for a better understanding?

An aged minister recently told a class of young ministers that he never passed a church or place of worship without taking off his hat and breathing a prayer for the minister and his following. Isn't this a wonderful attitude?

* * *

The name, Christian, should mean more than denominationalism. It means a fellowship with Christ and a service to others for Him. "To Christ be true and as follows the night the day thou canst not be false to any church."

* * *

How narrow this sounds:

"I'd rather be a Baptist
And wear a shining face,
Than be a dirty Methodist
And fall away from grace.

"I'd rather be a Methodist,
And talk about free grace,
Than be a hard-shell Calvinist
And damn near half the race."

This very song appeared a few years ago in a church hymnal! How changed our attitude today!

Correlation With S. S. Lesson

"The Cost of Discipleship" is the lesson for today. Have someone tell of the price some great missionaries have paid and are paying to bring about a better understanding in the world.

Scripture and Comments

A Harsh Attitude—Jno. 4:9.
Judgments—Matt. 7:1-5.
Beware of False Teachers—Matt. 7:15:23.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

April 29: The Cost of Discipleship

Scripture Basis: Mark 10:17-27; 12:41-44.
Golden Text: Where thy treasure is, there will thy heart be also. Matt. 6:21.

The Searcher for Salvation

His Society: The young man of the lesson today was rich, which placed him above the common people socially as well as financially. He was also a ruler. Whether the position he held made him rich, or his riches made him a ruler, we do not know. It matters little. But as with Naaman, he was imperfect in one respect, at least.

His Piety: The rich young ruler was evidently a student of and adherent to the law, for he declared that he not only knew but he kept the Ten Commandments. We cannot help but admire him for his piety. It is no wonder that Jesus "beholding him loved him."

His Anxiety: During two periods relative to this incident must the inquirer after truth have felt anxiety tugging at his heart-strings: Before he came to Jesus, as he was constantly conscious of an aching void that even strict adherence to the law could not satisfy; and, after he left Jesus, not having had his need supplied. His last state must have been worse than his first, for how could he part with the god he loved, Money? "His countenance fell at the saying, and he went away sorrowful."

The Sermon on the Subject

The Declaration: "How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God!" declared Jesus. Around Him and His disciples were some of the rich men of the day who held high positions in the church and state. Are rich folks barred from the kingdom? This would be hard to believe, for many righteous men today are rich.

The Explanation: Fortunately for His hearers, yea, fortunate for us also, Jesus explained. By adding one word, "trust," He cleared up the matter. It is depending upon riches that keeps men out of the kingdom. Many who are prospering live as if they do not longer need God, except when tribulation assails them. They act as though they believe money will pave their way into heaven.

The illustration: What Jesus meant by the illustration of a camel going through the eye of a needle is not certain. He may have meant it literally, as the proverbs of many nations have been gross exaggerations. Or He may have referred to the little wicket gate built in the big gates, which was used by pedestrians after the big gates of the city were closed at the end of the day. It would be with great difficulty that a camel would pass through such an opening. So it is with those who trust in money.

The Sacrifice of Substance

The Treasury's Need: A number of chests were placed in the temple area, in which the people cast their money, either free-will or temple offerings. At that time, the temple treasury was very wealthy, much of the money being used lavishly upon the building. So extravagantly did the people give that a law had to be passed limiting the gifts to a certain portion of their incomes. Imagine that if you can! If any such law is needed today, it is one requiring every one to give at least a tithe.

The Widow's Deed: This widow was one of the many who cast in their gifts. Quietly and maybe somewhat abashed she slipped up to the chest, dropped in two mites, about one-eighth of a cent in our money, and hastened away. How little that was. It seemed useless for her to deprive herself of her little bit, when the treasury did not need it.

The Lord's Need: Jesus knew the woman's condition, and was mindful of the great sacrifice she made. In substance, He taught His disciples that it wasn't the amount of the gift that counted so much as the amount of the sacrifice. The rich gave much, but felt it none. The widow gave little, but it cost her her living. The poor give from the abundance of love in their hearts and are rewarded with the joy of giving and the consciousness of heavenly treasure. The rich, who only give for show or for conscience sake, do not know the blessedness of the sacrifice of substance.

CENTENARY PROJECT FOR JUNIORS

"Our Big Methodist Protestant Family in Baltimore"

LESSON EIGHT

"Our Family in Japan"

Facts for Centenary Discoverers

1. Our Methodist Protestant Family in Japan is much larger than in China or in India. We have 13 missionaries in Japan, 37 ministers and preachers and over 2,000 church members; we have 54 Sunday schools with over 3,000 scholars.

2. The following is a list of our missionaries in Japan:

Miss Alice Coates, Hamamatsu, Japan, who has been our missionary to the children of Japan for 33 year; Miss Olive Hodges, who has been our missionary to Japan for 25 years, and who has charge of our school in Yokohama, Japan; Miss Evelyn Wolf, a teacher in our Girls' School in Yokohama, who went to Japan in 1920; Miss Margueritta Sampson, in language school in Tokyo; Miss Mary E. Williams, Atsuta, Japan, going out in 1897 as a missionary to Japan; Miss Ethel Hempstead, Atsuta, Japan, a kindergartner to Japan since 1921; Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Obee, who have given long years of service in Japan, taking charge of the Nagoya district; Rev. Paul F. Warner, Nagoya, Japan.

3. We have 19 Methodist Protestant churches in Japan with a number of mission centers, including 13 organized chapels, and 24 other preaching places.

4. In Tokyo, Japan, we have a school for the blind with an enrollment of 99.

5. In Yokohama, we have a graded school including two departments of kindergarten, a primary school and a high school. We have 165 little children with seven teachers in our kindergarten. Our primary department has an enrollment of 153 pupils and seven teachers. In our high school we have 307 enrolled and 27 teachers.

6. In Hamamatsu we have a kindergarten with three teachers and 55 children. The Oyama kindergarten has an enrollment of 55. Our Nagoya kindergarten has an enrollment of 94.

7. The largest college in our Big Methodist Protestant Family is in Nagoya, Japan; it has an enrollment of over 1,100.

8. Our work in Japan is mostly evangelistic and educational. The Methodist Protestant churches in Japan are not very different from our Methodist Protestant churches in America; and our kindergarten work is carried on there much as it is in our own country.

9. All denominations have been doing missionary work in Japan longer than they have in either China or India. As a result, the work is more highly developed; we have more Japanese in places of leadership and Japan comes more nearly being Christian.

Suggested Activity

Map Work: By the time the project has reached this point of development, all groups have their maps made. Some may have made a map of the world; others may have made several maps, one of the United States, another of India, another of China and now one of Japan. Locate Yokohama, Tokyo, Hamatatsu, Oyama, and Atsuta by means of seals or small flags cut from colored paper. In the November, 1924, issue of the Missionary Record, you will find pictures of our work and workers in Japan. Draw lines out from our mission centers to the blank space on the muslin; here paste the pictures of our work in Japan.

Birthday Cake Poster: Add facts about the work in Japan to the Birthday Cake Poster.

My Church's Birthday Book: Let each child add as many facts as he can about our work in Japan to his "My Church's Birthday Book."

Photograph Album: Let each Centenary Discoverer add pictures of our work in Japan to his Photograph Album.

Centenary Discoverers at Work: Centenary Discoverers will want to learn all they can this week about Japan and her people, what they do, how they dress, and how they worship. Begin collecting pictures of our colleges in America for next week.

Worship Service

Theme: "Working With Our Heavenly Father."

Call to Worship—Leader: "O Lord, open thou our lips;"

Children: "And our mouth shall show forth thy praise."

Leader: "Praise ye the Lord."

Children: "The Lord's name be praised."

Praise Hymn: "Praise to God and Thanks We Bring," No. 45 in back of Hymnal for American Youth.

Hymn: "O, Jesus, I have promised," No. 138, Hymnal for American Youth.

Conversation: We have so many wonderful things in the world and these wonderful things have come to us because God and people have worked together. It requires both God and man to grow a field of wheat and make the wheat into flour. It takes both God and people to build churches. We could never have the Methodist Protestant churches in Japan if it hadn't been that our missionaries were willing to work with God. It is because God and missionaries have worked together that we have our schools and kindergartens in Japan. Japan is becoming Christianized because people and God have worked together.

Do you believe that God has given to the world all that He has to give?

On whom is He depending to help Him to give to the world the rest of the lovely things He has for us?

Yes, He is counting upon us, upon you and me. Our fathers have helped; our mothers have helped; but we have a part. We can work with our Heavenly Father to make the world better and finer. How can we help?

Hymn: "I Would Be True," No. 170 in Hymnal for American Youth.

Conversation: There is a hymn that tells us what we have to give to the nations. As we sing it I am wondering if we can think of anything that other nations have to give us. Let us see if we can name some. Do you suppose Japan has anything that she can give to us? Do you suppose that we could learn something from Japan as well as to have her learn something from us?

Hymn: "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations," No. 260, Hymnal for American Youth.

Prayer: (1) For Japan and her people; (2) For our missionaries; let us name them one by one. (3) That we might see the good in the Japanese and learn what we can from them as well as to be willing to help give them the story of Jesus. (4) That we might learn to work with our Heavenly Father; that we might first of all learn to obey him and trust him. (5) That God might use each one of us to carry on His great work. (6) That the whole wide world might become Christian.

Hymn: "The Whole Wide World for Jesus," No. 264, Hymnal for American Youth.

Suggestions to Leaders

Choose your stories from the Missionary Record or some other missionary magazine. A story of Japanese life which will give appreciation of Japanese people should by all means be chosen to be told with this lesson. We regret that space in the publications has not permitted publishing stories to accompany these lessons.

Memory Work: Have a memory drill, testing the memory of the pupils on the facts which they have discovered about the Methodist Protestant Church.

AN APPRECIATION

The writer was in the State Sunday School Convention at Concord for only one day and evening but would like to say a word about the devotionals conducted by Brother Pritchard, pastor of our Asheboro church.

I heard only one of his talks, but it was very fine and measured up to anything else I heard there. And I heard a number of favorable comments from different ones who attended. I was told by a resident of Concord that the folks were very much helped by these talks.

I have been listening for the past week to one of the great preachers of the South, said to be the greatest in his denomination in the South, and I declare to you I have heard men in our own North Carolina Conference do just as great preaching. I understand that in a certain town in our state where we have a church that it is the usual talk that our preacher is the best preacher in town, and yet that man does not get half as much as some of the other pastors. Why is this? Our people are prospering today as never before. Is it possible that many of them think that because they are prosperous that they must get outside our church and conference and find something that we do not have? This is not a case of "sour grapes," for I have no complaint against any appointment ever given at the hands of the Conference. All of them more than I was worthy to receive. But, brethren of the ministry and of the laity, do we appreciate what we have? Are we doing our best for them to help make them the best? Answer the question conscientiously, not ambitiously.

N. G. BETHEA.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Concord.—The Gypsy Smith meeting got under way here last night. Notwithstanding the rain the huge tent was almost full. Mr. and Mrs. Earl Robinson, of Chicago, have charge of the music. The choir is composed of 200 voices, coming from the 19 churches in our city co-operating. We are hoping and praying for a great meeting. Anyone from out of town wishing to attend will find the tent located on the grounds of Central Graded School on North Spring street.

Our services have been well attended since our last report. The pastor preached Sunday morning from the subject, "The Divine Standard." All night services are called off during the evangelistic campaign.

We were glad to see several of our ministers in attendance at the State S. S. Convention last week. Among them were Revs. N. G. Bethea, J. E. Pritchard, L. W. Gerringer, H. F. Surratt, Robert Short, G. H. Hendry, Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Ballard and Rev. and Mrs. H. W. Maier. Brother Pritchard brought the devotional messages at each service, which were helpful and inspiring.

MRS. D. A. McLAURIN.

State Street.—Our Easter services were fine. Offering amounted to $39.84. We have received into the church eleven members during the Easter season. This is all encouraging.

Our Sunday school is doing well; 114 present yesterday notwithstanding the severe weather. This all looks good to one that saw the work in its beginning.

Our M. P. C. G. G. was paid in full at Yadkin College and State Street has paid the allotment and there will be a small amount overpaid when all subscriptions are in.

We are trying to line up our folks with all the interests of the church which is a rather hard thing to do when you consider the fact that they have a big financial burden to carry on the building. Some cannot see why we could not let all these other things go till the debt is paid but that is not the ideal way, for in doing that we would be like numbers of our big charges are now—have no interest in the Kingdom beyond the local church.

Our Christian Endeavor is doing very fine work. You would not know if you were to drop into one of our meetings but what it was an old school of workers. Our greatest hope here is our young people, for we have not increased much in financial strength since the beginning, but we are hopeful that from these children and young people we are developing that we will have a strong church in the future.

Lexington has been enjoying a treat at the First Presbyterian church the past week in listening to Dr. Vance, of Nashville, Tenn., said to be the greatest preacher in the Southern Presbyterian Church. This week Dr. McLarty, of the M. E. Church, South, will be preaching at that church and then the Baptists have their special meeting. The first week in June we begin ours with Brother Millaway doing the preaching, and I am not uneasy about his holding his hand with any of them, for he is one of our greatert preachers. Had he been in some of the churches that boost their preachers more than our folks do, his fame would have spread abroad also. Will you please read a little article entitled "An Appreciation" in this week's Herald?

If you do not know what we are doing here and you would like to see something that has proven a surprise to a number of M. P. people who have come to Leington, just drive one block off of Main street as you pass through and we will be glad to show you what we are doing on State Street, opposite the post office on Main Street.

Will all who read these lines pray for us in our work here. N. G. BETHEA.

Yarboroughs Chapel.—Easter service was held on Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. A very interesting program was given. Our Easter offering amounted to $10.10.

Our attendance at church services has been small lately, due to an epidemic of measles in the community.

Funeral services were held Sunday, April 8, for George Tramell, aged 55, who was killed by an auto on the Cross Anchor-Union Highway. The accident was found unavoidable by a coroner's jury.

REPORTER.

Burlington First Church.—Easter Sunday was the best day we have had this year. The attendance in the Sunday school was 359, with excellent music, as usual. We received 18 new members at the morning preaching service and six new members April 15th, making a total of 24 new members for the two Sundays. Easter Sunday night the attendance was so large we had to use the space in the Baraca room and the pageant given at this service was enjoyed by the congregation, we are sure, and proved very interesting and helpful.

All of our sick members who have been in the hospital, are back home, although some are not able to be up as yet.

Our pastor preached two splendid sermons yesterday and the congregation at the morning service was very good despite the rainy, cold weather.

Sunday, May 6th, will be "Home-Coming Day" for the Sunday school and church, and all former pastors, members, and out-of-town members are especially invited to be present for the services throughout the day. We are expecting a full attendance and want each and every member to plan now to be with us. If you live some distance from the church and do not have any way to get to service, just call Mr. J. G. Rogers, superintendent of the Sunday school, and he will see that you are provided with a way to get to the services.

All regular services next Sunday.

L. A. BRAXTON, Ass't Reporter.

Graham.—We are glad we can report those who have been in hospitals are all back home and getting on nicely. Mrs. A. P. Williams was in McPherson Hospital at Durham. Mrs. Lee Fuller and DeWitt Foust were in Rainey Hospital for appendicitis operations. Mrs. Lucretia Johnson had the misfortune to fall and break her arm; she, too, is getting on nicely. We have had measles by the wholesale. All of these have cut off attendance at S. S. and preaching service.

Mrs. John McPherson and Mrs. Stafford had charge of training the children for the Easter exercise, and they gave us a splendid service. We are hoping to increase our attendance as the spring weather opens up.

D. R. WILLIAMS.

Pleasant Grove.—Henry B. Newby, the oldest person in our community, was buried here Easter Sunday at 11 a. m.

Our Easter program was rendered at night to a good sized congregation. The children acquitted themselves well. At this hour we had the pleasure of having with us our president, Rev. S. W. Taylor; also Mrs. Taylor and the children. At the close of our program Brother Taylor made some very appropriate remarks; first, on the subject of home missions; then followed the collection, which amounted to $20. After this, Brother Taylor spoke for a few minutes on the C. G. G. campaign and our subscription was easily raised from $50 to $100. The people enjoyed Brother Taylor's short visit and hope to have him with us when he has more time to speak to the people. G. L. REYNOLDS.

Halifax.—We held our second quarterly conference Friday, April 13th. All the churches were represented except one. The reports were all good except the financial report, which was a little short of what it was at the second quarterly conference last year.

Hollister church will meet tomorrow to organize a better system for collecting their finances. We are expecting other churches to follow their example and we hope by the end of the year we may have a better plan at each church.

Mr. E. T. Ellington and Mrs. T. C. Williams, both of Hollister church, were placed in nomination for delegate to the next Annual Conference.

Measles and flu have greatly hindered our work for the last two months, but both seem to be subsiding. Our reporter at Bethesda has been sick but we are glad she has recovered sufficiently to attend church again.

C. L. SPENCER, Pastor.

Laurel Hill.—The fine weather brought us a large congregation Easter Sunday. We were proud of the large attendance at our Sunday school. At 11 o'clock Rev. J. M. Morgan preached a good and plain sermon.

Our Easter program was given Sunday night at 7:30. The program consisted of beautiful music given by the choir, prayer, readings, one play of Easter, a drill, and a pageant, "The Resurrection Garden." Every one seemed to enjoy the program very much. The children on the program did their parts well.

Our hearts were saddened by the passing of Mr. Cullen Willis on April 5. He was 51 years old. He was born in Cleveland County. At the age of nine he professed faith in Christ and united with the church at Pleasant Hill. Later he moved his membership to Laurel Hill where he remained a true and faithful member until his death. He is survived by his mother, his wife, one son, two daughters, two brothers, four sisters, two grandchildren, and a great host of friends.

Mr. Willis was superintendent of Laurel Hill Sunday school for five years. At the time of his death he was superintendent of Ball's Creek Sunday school, near Maiden. He moved to Maiden about two years ago. In all our church there was no more devoted and faithful Christian than Mr. Willis. He bore his suffering with patience. When the call came he was ready. He called his family around his bedside just a short while before he died and told them that he was willing and ready to go.

Mr. Willis was always glad to support every department of the Lord's work. In his passing the wife has lost a true husband and the children a devoted father, and Laurel Hill has lost one of its most concerned and faithful leaders. He will be missed by every one who knew him. A place is vacant at Laurel Hill and in the home that can never be filled. He is gone but not forgotten.

We, too, must lay down our lives just as Mr. Willis has, and many there be a grond reunion around the great white throne when our life is ended.

LOIS WILLIS, Reporter.

Pine Hill.—We have finished painting our new church, and are planning for our dedicatory service the fourth Sunday in April. Brother Ridge preached a good sermon the second Sunday. We had a small crowd.

Sometimes our prayer meeting is mighty good. We pray that more people may get interested in the work of the Lord.

W. D. SMITH.

Rockingham.—We spent a good day in the Lord's service on Easter Sunady. On Easter we first held a sunrise meeting at our church. The meeting was well attended and enjoyed by all present. At 1 o'clock we had our regular Sunday school hour. This hour was also well attended and the interest was good indeed. At 11 o'clock our pastor, Rev. J. H. Trollinger, delivered a very inspiring sermon. In the afternoon the pastor and a group of the members visited the jail and county home to try to bring Easter cheer to those behind the prison bars and those aged and denied the privilege most of us have. At night at 7:30 o'clock the children of our Sunday school rendered an Easter program at which an Easter collection was taken.

Our Sunday school is fine for the time of year, bad weather, and so much sickness. We have a very good attendance and collection each Sunday.

On the fifth Sunday of this month we are expecting to have an all-day meeting and dinner on the grounds. We are expecting two or three out-of-town speakers. Every one is invited to come and be with us in the worship.

Pray for us that we may have God's blessings and progress in our service for the Lord.

(Miss) BIRDIE CONNELL, Reporter.

Mebane.—Special music and a splendid sermon by the pastor were enjoyed at our church service Easter Sunday morning. At the evening service Mr. Suits delivered an inspiring message and some special musical selections were rendered. The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of our church together with the young people's societies of the different churches here, held a sunrise service at the Presbyterian church Easter Sunday morning, the Easter Scripture being pantomimed. This was a very beautiful and impressive service. Miss Pauline Nicholson had charge of this program.

The Ladies' Aid Society met at the home of Mrs. Jack Smith in April with good attendance. The usual business was transacted and the collection very good. During the social hour Mrs. Smith served sandwiches, pickle and iced tea.

Monday evening at 7:30 Mrs. J. E. Barnette was hostess to the missionary societies. The program for the evening was in charge of the Home Society and very interesting. The study book was given by Mrs. Suits. Attendance and collection was very good. During the social hour Misses Grace and Katie Lee Barnette served a chicked salad course with iced tea.

The William Nicholson Mission Band met in March with P. N. and Marie Thompson. A large number was in attendance. This Band is doing splendid work under the direction of Mrs Nelson Thompson and Mrs. George Wyatt.

Misses Elizabeth and Edna Nicholson, Grace and Katie Lee Barnette and Alta Allen and Mr. Hassel Allen, students at High Point College, and Mr. Joseph Kirk, of State College, spent the Easter holidays at their homes here.

REPORTER.

High Point.—Last Thursday evening an enjoyable treat was given the congregation when they were served a delicious supper in the assembly room of the church. This was given by a few of our laymen in honor of Rev. George G. Shurtz, of Morgantown, W. Va., and in order to give an opportunity to all our congregation to meet him. He made a splendid address on this occasion on "Brotherly Love and Kindness of Heart," which pleased his audience. There were several delightful musical numbers, vocal solos by Clarence Schultheiss and Mrs. J. H. Allred, and a violin solo by Miss Dorothy St. Clair, of the college faculty. Several short talks were made by Mr. J. M. Millikan, of Greensboro, Rev. P. E. Lindley, Arnold J. Koonce, Rev. S. K. Spahr, of Greensboro, C. C. Robbins, Dr. S. S. Coe, and others. A tempting supper was then served, cafeteria style, to the large number present.

Rev. E. L. Ballard, superintendent, was in charge of the Sunday school session at 9:30 o'clock Sunday morning, the Young People's and Adults' departments meeting in the assembly room for the period of worship, the theme of which was "My Vocation As a Christion Purpose."

At the 11 o'clock service Rev. S. K. Spahr, of Greensboro, brought a very forceful message on "After-Easter Reflections," and enumerated the 11 different appearances which Christ made on earth during the 40 days He spent after the resurrection and before His ascension. Under the direction of Mrs. John C. Whitesell, the choir rendered two unusually beautiful anthems, "The King of Love My Shepherd Is," and "From Every Stormy Wind That Blows." The offertory was a lovely violin solo by Miss Dorothy St. Clair. At the same hour, the members of the Junior church met, and Rev. Mr. Ballard presented the seventh lesson for Centenary Discoverers on "Our Chinese Methodist Protestants," which was followed by an appropriate story.

At the evening service at 7:30 o'clock, the message was delivered by Prof. Paul S. Kennett.

A very enthusiastic and harmonious meeting of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies assembled at the church Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock with a fine attendance. The respective presidents, Mrs. C. L. Whitaker and Mrs. Ben T. Moore, presided. The treasurer of the Foreign Society, Mrs. P. E. Lindley, reported that she has sent the sum of $600 to the Branch Treasurer, Mrs. S. W. Taylor, and the treasurer of the Home Society, Mrs. R. T. Pickens, has sent $409.00 to Mrs. H. A. Garrett. The Home Society was divided into three circles to correspond with those of the Foreign Society, but with different treasurers in each. Plans for entertainment of the Foreign Executive Board on May 9-14 were discussed and committees appointed. In the Home Society the very efficient Secretary of Loan Fund in H. P. College, Mrs. E. L. Douglas, reported that she has raised the sum of $60 for this cause with some additional pledges. The Society gave her a rising vote of thanks for her prompt and painstaking work in behalf of this worthy interest. The late Mrs. W. D. Burgess has been made a Memorial member in the Foreign Society.

A most inspiring and impressive investiture service was held at the college last Friday morning when 45 seniors donned the Oxford gowns and caps for the first time. They were placed by members of the sophomore class. Seated on the rostrum were President Andrews, Dean P. E. Lindley, Miss Mary Young, dean of women, Miss Mabel Williams, class adviser, and little Miss Garnet Hinshaw, class mascot. This class, which is the first to spend the full four years in study, means much to the college. The class is leaving a beautiful memorial in the form of a handsome gate at the entrance to the campus. It is now in process of erection.

The Junior-Senior banquet will be held in the college dining hall Wednesday evening of this week.

On Monday evening a banquet was given to Prof. T. C. Johnson's class of journalism, when an address was delivered by Oscar J. Coffin, professor of journalism at the University of North Carolina.

English Street.—On Easter Sunday morning there was a very impressive runrise prayer meeting held at the church. On Easter Monday afternoon the four small classes enjoyed an egg-hunt given by their teachers.

The Philathea class held its regular business meeting this month with Miss Bettie Morgan. After the business was over, Mrs. Maud Howard entertained with jolly games. Ice cream and cake were served. Those who were there went home feeling it was good to be present.

The Ladies' Aid met with Mrs. Bertie Bowers last week. This was a busy meeting and several things were looked after. We were very sorry to have our president, Mrs. Robert Russell, offer her resignation because she could not attend the meetings regularly. Vice-President Mrs. J. A. Lee takes her place, while Mrs. P. M. Caudle was elected vice-president. After refreshments were served and a social chat together, all went home in the downpour of rain, jolly just the same.

We are sorry to report our pianist, Mrs.

Floyd Little, is still unable to be in her place at church.

Mrs. Paul Hulin has returned home much improved after a rest at the home of her parents. We are hoping she will soon be well again.

The Senior Endeavor business-social met with the Misses Caudle on Allred street Friday night of last week. As the president was absent only a short business session was held, after which, it being Friday and the 13th, the social committee carried the guests on an unlucky journey. Then they were invited into the dining room and a delicious supper was served.

A revival meeting began Sunday, April 15, at 11 a. m. with the pastor preaching from the text, "Revive Us Again." Psalms 85:6. Brother Isley has been secured to help throughout the meeting.

Christian brothers and sisters, pray for us that a great revival may sweep the whole community. MRS. J. A. LEE, Reporter.

Enfield.—The second quarterly conference convened at Enfield last Friday afternoon. This conference was by far the most successful conference we have had. Bros. John Davis and Stanley Whitaker are nominees for delegate to Conference.

The matter of the Gratitude Gift is still being placed before our people. Quite a number of the people have made gifts. Others will be joining before the time expires.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Zoar, Mecklenburg Circuit.—We have been moving along, though our reports have been few. We hope to do better in the future. Yesterday at 11 o'clock Mr. Hall delivered a good sermon. It seems that his sermons get better. We people at Zoar like him as a man and pastor.

The offering was taken yesterday for the Children's Home, also for the college.

Glad to have Mr. and Mrs. Stallings and Mrs. Hall with us the first Sunday.

REPORTER.

Siler City.—Since our pastor was away on the Gratitude Gift campaign, Rev. G. W. Holmes conducted the morning service last Sunday morning. He selected for his subject, "The Cross," and delivered a splendid sermon. While serving on the Alamance Charge, Rev. Mr. Holmes was pastor to a number of our Siler City members, and we are always glad to have him with us. He and his daughter, Miss Bessie, spent Sunday afternoon in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Woody.

In a Bible reading contest between the Junior Baraca and Junior Philathea classes the Junior Baracas were victorious. Both these classes are very young, being organized only about two years ago by Rev. F. L. Gibbs, but they are growing rapidly in interest as well as in number. The defeated class will entertain at the church net Thursday evening at 7:30, at which time a business meeting of the Senior Christian Endeavor Society will be held.

Because of her inability to attend Sunday School regularly since her mother's death, Mrs. Los Wrenn has resigned as teacher of the Junior Philathea Class. The class elected Miss Pearlie Moore as teacher to succeed Mrs. Wrenn and Miss Minnie Cooper as assistant. However, Mrs. Wrenn will be supervisor and teach when she is present.

"The New Guide," a weekly paper for young people, has recently been distributed to members of the two Junior classes. This paper contains helpful Christian Endeavor notes, excellent stories, latest current events, good editorials and many other paragraphs that will be helpful to the young boy and girl.

The members of the Ladies' Aid Society decided in their last meeting to furnish the shades for Liberty-Siler City parsonage.

The Sunday school attendance was at a low ebb last Sunday morning but this was due to bad weather and an epidemic of measles. However, we were very glad to have worship with us one of our members, Mr. Berylon Cooper, from Baltimore, Md.

The little two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Parks is very ill with pneumonia.

REPORTER.

Kernersville Charge.—On Good Friday we had the pleasure of moving into our nice, new, seven-room, two-story parsonage. This building is beautifully located on Cherry street, 40 feet from our church. The lawn in front is about 50x50 feet. The back part of the parsonage lot extends to Highway No. 60.

The parsonage trustees and all others on this charge who have used their influence, or co-operated in any way in the building of this parsonage have the sincere thanks of the pastor. Right much has been done in furnishing the parsonage with the heavier furniture. The parsonage trustees had a part in this good work, and the second quarterly conference by vote empowered the trustees to take further steps along this line, and in addition to this the Ladies' Aid Society of Kernersville came in for their full share in the good work; so we are resting easy about furnishings for the parsonage. Many thanks to all who have had, or yet may have, any part in this much-needed work.

Up to the time we moved into the parsonage we had been very pleasantly housed in an apartment at Brother and Sister A. N. Linville's. For their very great kindness while there, Mrs. Lowdermilk joins me in many thanks.

Our church paper is now going into more than 40 homes on this work.

Mrs. Rachel Pegram, who is 66 years old and a member of Ai church, lives alone, feeds and milks her own cow; does not drink coffee, or use tobacco in any form. She is also faithful in paying her church dues.

A Ladies' Aid Society was organized at Sandy Ridge last Thursday. Mrs. R. K. Anderson was elected president.

Mrs. Mode Barrow died almost suddenly this morning, Monday, April 16th. She had rupture of the brain while eating breakfast, and died in less than an hour afterwards. She was a faithful and good member of Pine Grove church. She will be buried tomorrow at 3 p. m. at Bethel church.

E. G. LOWDERMILK, Pastor.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—The attendance at preaching and Sunday school has been very good considering the weather and sickness. Our pastor continues to bring us inspiring messages. It seems that his sermons are better each time we hear him preach. We feel as if we could not get a better pastor than our present one.

The Missionary Societies held their monthly meeting on Tuesday afternoon, April 10, in the home of Mrs. T. C. Williams. The secretary reported a fine report for our year's work. We have paid our budget in full for both Home and Foreign Societies.

We were very sorry we could not give the Easter pageant on account of measles.

The second quarterly conference was held at Eden church on Friday afternoon, April 13. The nominees for delegates to the Annual conference are Mr. E. T. Ellington, and Mrs. J. C. Williams, of Hollister church.

Mr. C. R. Knight, of Hollister, and Miss Emma Knight, of near Enfield, were married at Emporia, Va., on Saturday, April 7. We wish them a happy and successful life.

KATHLEEN SHEARIN, Reporter.

Davidson Charge.—The second quarterly conference will be held at Lineberry Church on Saturday afternoon, April 21. Our president, Rev. S. W. Taylor, is expected to be present and hold this conference. Brethren of this charge, please take notice and come. Important business. Below is the plan of appointments for the president's visit. At Lineberry, Saturday, April 21, preaching at 2 p. m.; quarterly conference at 3 p. m.. At Alleghany church, preaching at 7:30 p. m.; at Pine Hill church, Sunday morning, April 22, to preach dedication sermon at 11 o'clock. At Chapel Hill church, preaching, 2:30 p. m. At Pleasant Grove church, preaching, 7:30 p. m.

I am sure that our people are going to receive great inspiration by attending these services and we are looking forward with pleasure to these dates.

C. E. RIDGE, Pastor.

The report is very gratifying this week in the number of charges sending in Easter offerings and also the number paying on A. C. B. Of the former there are 23 charges, and the latter, 8. The list of charges with budget credits goes up by three. South Lexington, Democrat and South Winston are added this week. The number now with budget credits is 76, with 16 charges yet blank. We are confident that these will soon get out of this column, and that every charge in the Conference will be listed with budget credits. Let's hurry that good day. And once more: Please see that the Easter offering is sent in promptly. It belongs, now, to the Board of Home Missions, and we must get it to them as quickly as possible so as to help meet pressing needs.

Fraternally,

S. W. TAYLOR.

REPORT OF TREASURER OF COLLEGE BUILDING FUND

Amount previously reported	$182,741.99
W. L. Ward	500.00
Total	$183,241.99

Endowment Insurance Fund

Amount previously reported	$9,134.21
Miss Bettie Cox	25.00
Total	$9,159.21

The payment made by Brother Ward is on a recent pledge—one of the new series. Brother Ward is among the good friends of the college, who are willing to make sacrifices in order that this institution may be placed upon a sound financial basis.

It is expected that a new institution will have a hard struggle during its early years. High Point College has a different record from that of almost any other young college; from the beginning it has had an able faculty, and the attendance has been much larger than might have been expected. Our one problem, therefore, is that of providing adequate financial support. The college has demonstrated what it can do. It has shown the church that the investment already made is a paying one, and that it is worthy of entire confidence. We have undertaken to build a college. If it is to be a healthy, growing institution we shall never finish the undertaking, but we should provide the means for a healthy, substantial growth.

J. NORMAN WILLS, Treasurer.

HOME MISSIONS

Returns From the Easter Service

We supplied approximately one thousand churches and Sunday schools with the Easter programs, including the sacrificial envelopes and decision cards. There was also sent to every pastor, as far as we could secure their names and addresses, a return postal card with the earnest request that they would report to our office at once the number of members received into church during the Easter season and the amount of the offering for Home Missions.

At the time of this writing only 216 churches have returned the cards although nearly a week has passed. We are preparing the report of the Board of Home Missions for the General Conference and this report must go to the printer in a few days. Our ministers can easily see how important it is that we shall hear from them. It will take but a moment of your time to fill in the card and mail it. If the card has been misplaced please send a note stating the name of your annual conference, your charge, with the amount of your offering and the number of members received.

The 216 churches that have reported received 1,378 new members. You do not wish an incomplete report to go to the General Conference. You can prevent this by complying with this request.

J. M. SHERIDAN.

THE SURRENDER

Christ shall lead and guide my life
Through all its joys, trials and strife.
He alone is the Truth and the way;
His Light leads on with each new day.

Christ has come in and won my heart;
No happiness is mine when from Him I part.
He is joy and love and life sublime,
He is a constant friend for all time.

What have I to give my Lord?
I who am sinful, foolish and weak.
To Him my life, my love, my all
I have surrendered at His call.

His it is to use or take
For service, either small or great;
I have no will but His to do,
No life but for His service true.

Here am I; use me, Lord,
Wherever Thou would'st send Thy word.
Strength and guidance from Thee I ask
As I live to perform Thy task.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

A Loving Tribute to the Memory of Mrs. Martha Johnson

"A solemn murmur of the soul,
Tells of the world to be;
As travelers hear the billows roll,
Before they reach the sea."

Intoned thus, and fortified by life's solemn munitions, this elect lady passed into the silent land, a gentle heart, a serene spirit, a lovely character, spotless, a soul sincere. With Tennyson she believed—

"Because right is right, to follow right,
Were wisdom, in the scorn of consequences."

And she practiced this.

The eldest daughter in a phenomenally large family, and herself the motherly mother, queenly and astute, of a number of sons and daughters. Friends, can you in your imagination compute the accumulated steps of this saint.

In the sphere God placed her she toiled, using the means He gave her, just what she had in her hands. False pride and arrogance, that God says, "my soul hateth," had no part nor lot in her.

"Far from the madding crowd,
Within the cool, sequestered value of life,
She kept the noiseless tenor of her way."

Her home ever the minister's, and from these ministerial ranks, the numbers she entertained surely are legion.

Devoted to her church, devout and worshipful, she ever attended, despite life's handicaps, she ever had something to give. Her husband's heart rested in her, in all her flock of noble sons and daughters, not one black sheep dwells there today, and they rise up and call her blessed. With a heart attuned to the heavenly, she also loved the beautiful in nature, and the flora of the neighboring farmyards, transplanted, bloom in hers.

But after the family had scattered and duties became less arduous, but numerous, a lovely, long, spacious hedge graced her yard. O the health of beauty of this horticultural ground. Truly, while here, God's gentleness made her great, and we believe in that land beyond the sunset she still is great. O, the souls she has led to Christ.

Friends, think of the eternal years.

"They that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars of the firmament forever and forever." We shall miss her along life's pilgrimage; life's winters will be bleaker, and barer.

Christian Rosetti said, "God's strength is always stronger than strong enough," and placing her weakness against this and thus buoyed up she wrought. Every one of these children was ever in the Sunday school. A superior woman; quite good were her early educational advantages. She was closely related to that anciently gifted family immortal, in its love for and the development of music and poesy, having sung in the courts of royalty, and the homes of earth's humble folks, the Laniers—and this blood coursed through her veins.

A woman of culture and wide travel attending Flat Rock church with the writer asked who she was. She said her face stands out pre-eminently, she has passed life's acid tests, and we believe in its finality she has triumphed triumphantly. She might with Gray have felt:

"Full many a gem of purest ray serene
The dark unfathomed caves of ocean bear,
Full many a flower is born to blush unseen
And waste its sweetness on the desert air."

And yielding to this fallacy (though half-true), dejected, embittered, discouraged, raised a family of incorrigibles, but not so she. She knew the Living Christ, and walked with Him day by day, and wrought out her life's work, its fame, her immortality.

"She hath reached the land beyond the river
That we call the sweet forever,
And she only reached the land by faith's decree;
And she dwells with the immortals,
There she knows no sin nor sorrow,
In that haven; for us tomorrow;
For her barque has sailed beyond the silent sea,
And she only knows the blessing of her Father's sweet caressing,
Here her days have known their numbers,
And in death her body slumbers,
And the King commanded her spirit to be free,
Never more with anguish laden,
She hath reached that lovely Eden,
Where they ring those golden bells for you and me.
Don't you hear the bells now ringing?
Don't you hear the angels singing?
Just beyond that shining river,
There they ring those golden bells for you and me."

FANNIE O. KIRKPATRICK.

THE OPTIMIST

I sing a song to the Optimist,
To the man that is brave and strong,
Who keeps his head when things go right,
And smiles when things go wrong.

I am proud of the genial Optimist,
His radiant voice and speech,
He helps to smooth the rugged path
Of all within his reach.

I like the way of the Optimist
Who looks for the bright and best,
He scatters sunshine as he goes
And leaves his fellows blest.

I am glad to meet the Optimist
With his message of good cheer.
He carries hope and confidence
To those assailed by fear.

So here's a song to the Optimist
Who joyously works and sings,
And daily shows this weary world
The way to better things.

—Grenville Kleiser.

FOREST WEEK

"I, Calvin Coolidge, president of the United States of America, do hereby designate and set aside as American Forest Week the week beginning April 22 and ending April 28, in this year of 1928.

"I recommend to the Governors of the various States that they also designate this week for special observance by all our people; and that where practicable and not in conflict with law and custom, Arbor Day be observed during the course of the same week.

"I urge that during that week all citizens and appropriate organizations—including public officials, legislators, business organizations, educators, editors, clergymen, landowners and others—give thought to the preservation and wise use of our forest, to the end that energetic forest policies will be adopted in all communities. In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done at the City of Washington this 24th day of February in the year of our Lord one thousand, nine hundred and twenty-eight, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and fifty-second.

"CALVIN COOLIDGE."

As I went down to St. Ives,
I met seven wives,
Each wife had seven sacks,
Each sack, seven cats;
Each cat, seven kits;
Kits, cats, sacks, and wives,
How many were going to St. Ives?

This is a very old one of course, but it will still work. Try it on your friends. The answer is, of course, one; the rest came from there. —Pathfinder.

EIGHTH DISTRICT RALLY

The eighth district rally will be held at Maple Springs church, Forsyth circuit, the fifth Sunday in May. Let every one that can walk, run, ride or fly be there. A good program is promised. Bring lunch and spend the day. R. C. STUBBINS, Chairman.

—There were 198 persons at seven pruning demonstrations in Catawba County recently. There is increased interest in apple-growing in the county. One man has a six-acre orchard in which the trees are 25 years of age, but he harvested some 800 bushels last year.

—The ancient Hebrew custom of loading the sins of the people on a scape-goat which bore them off into the wilderness has a modern parallel in a certain district in central India. It is not sins, however, which the modern scape-goat is required to carry off, but smallpox. When an outbreak of smallpox occurs in a village, the inhabitants resort to the ceremony of "Nakasi." A female goat is purchased by public subscription, and is adorned with the particular types of ornaments usually affixed to the image of a goddess. The goat is then apparently looked upon as an incarnation of the goddess of the disease. The animal is supposed to remove the epidemic as she is passed on from village to village until she reaches her own temple, or is devoured by wild beasts on the way.

—That the South now leads all other parts of the United States in cotton manufacturing capacity is brought out in the 1928 edition of the Southern Railway System's Textile Directory, just issued. As of January 1, 1928, there were in southern mills a total of 18,399,832 spindles, this being 305,168 more spindles than in the cotton mills of all the other states. Since 1880, when the South had only 5.27 per cent of all the cotton spindles in the United States, there has been a steady, almost uniform increase from year to year, until now 50.42 per cent of the total are in southern mills. Of the total spindles in the South, 13,562,332, or 73.71 per cent, are at points served directly by the Southern Railway.

—The Department of Commerce announces that, according to the returns received, there were in the United States 32 churches of the Holiness Church in 1926, with 861 members, as compared with 33 churches and 926 members reported in 1916. The total expenditures for 1926, as reported by 30 churches, amounted to $23,913, including $19,239 for current expenses and improvements and $4,674 for benevolences, missions, etc. The total expenditures reported by 28 churches in 1916 were $8,988.

—Rev. C. W. Bates, assisted by five young people of Salvary Sunday school, gave a pageant, "The Church of Our Fathers," last Sunday morning during the preaching hour.

—Bros. J. F. Williams, W. F. Medearis, and J. A. Cox have been elected as building committee for Calvary's new parsonage. A committee of three ladies appointed by the Ladies' Aid Society are to be associated with the building committee in considering plans for the house.

—Many posters adorned the walls of Calvary's Hut during the C. E. meeting last Sunday evening. They all related to the right use of language. They were loaned to the society by Greensboro schools. Next Sunday evening an address is to be given by Mr. Koontz, a lawyer of the city.

—Chauncey Depew, distinguished New Yorker who died a few days ago at a very advanced age, is spoken of as "a man without an enemy." His genial spirit and his ready wit made him a universal favorite.

Roman Catholic Intolerance

Again and again has the Roman Catholic Church demonstrated its intolerance of Protestants. A recent instance was a letter from one of the Italian cardinals sent out to warn the priests of Italy against the Young Men's Christian Association. Since the World War work has been done in Italy by the Y. M. C. A., young men have been drawn into it from the Church of Rome. Priests receiving the cardinal's letter have gone to see the parents of these young men, threatening excommunication if the offenders do not cease to attend meetings of the Christian Association. The Protestant denominations mentioned by name as offenders are the Baptists and Methodists. The Masons also are denounced.

It seems that the Romish church will always be narrow and intolerant. It was built that way. The theory of infallibility makes it intolerant of dissenters. Will the time never come when Roman Catholics will see that their priests, including the highest cardinals and the pope himself, are but men? If they could only see this obvious truth, perhaps they would step down a little to a more humble level.

The refusal of the pope to consider the matter of church unity in any other way than with himself as the head of the whole body of the church was a recent example of intolerance. Will the pope still claim to be the head of the church after Christ comes?

Ineradicable Difficulties

Some difficulties can be dug up by the root and removed. But there are other difficulties so deep-rooted that they cannot be so removed. It is wisdom to recognize the ineradicable nature of some difficulties and act accordingly. Lincoln's advice was: "When you strike a stump in ploughing, don't try to plough it up—plough around it." This is good advice in dealing with ineradicable difficulties. Don't stop to complain about them or to worry about them. Go round them and go on. The changes of time will disintegrate the stump and it can be gotten rid of with all ease. But just now the thing to do is to bear with it. It may be unreasonable for the stump to be in the midst of a plowed field, but it did not get there through any perversity of its own. The stump is innocent of any intention to offend. Don't condemn the stump. Forget about it and go on.

—No such distinction as that between wines and beer on the one hand and spirituous liquors on the other is practicable as a police measure. . . . Any such loophole as light wines and beer would make the amendment a laughing stock.—William Howard Taft, Chief Justice of the United States, in a letter to the Chicago Tribune.

Trying to Destroy the Bible

It would seem that the failure of former efforts to destroy the Bible would convince men of sense of the futility of such an effort. And perhaps it has. But there are some foolish atheists in New York who have raised a fund of one hundred thousand dollars with which to accomplish that end. What can they do with their little hundred thousand dollars in destroying the Bible? They can destroy themselves. They can mislead a few dupes. But the masses of men are so thoroughly convinced that the Bible is a book of unparalleled worth that they will only laugh at the ridiculous spectacle of this little group trying to destroy the Bible with one hundred thousand dollars.

Responsible for the Other Man's Faith

Do we duly recognize our responsibility for the faith or lack of faith of our neighbors? Are we not prone to put all the responsibility on our neighbor if he fails to believe to the saving of his soul? But really we are also responsible for the spiritual attitude of those about us in so far as we might affect it by our lives. Paul expressed a desire to visit the people of Thessalonica in order that he might "perfect their faith." He knew that he had power over their faith. So have we power over the faith of our neighbors. We have power to increase their faith by our godly living, and we have power to diminish and destroy their faith by our own failure to measure up in our living to the demands of the faith we profess. It is a very serious thing to live in the same world with other human beings. We are involuntarily affecting them, making them better or worse.

What College Was It?—One of our ministers sends this story: A young college graduate was asked by one of the professors what the epistles of the New Testament are. He replied: The epistles are sisters of the apostles. He did not tell what college it was. Therefore the story is not quite complete.

—The testimony now being given by manufacturers, physicians, nurses, and social workers as to the improvement in the condition of the population at large which has taken place since the Eighteenth Amendment was adopted is so potent that it will convince he great majority of the American populaion, both native and foreign, that the complete disuse of alcoholic drinks will result in enormous benefits to any people that accomplishes it.—Charles W. Eliot, "America's Policy of Banishing Liquor," Congressional Digest, October, 1924.

—Good spelling is not the most important thing in the world, but it is important, especially in communications to the public. If you are not sure of the correct spelling of a word, look it up in the dictionary. Challenge every word as it comes and be sure that it is entitled to pass. MOTHER TO 132,366 ORPHANS

By Charles V. Vickrey

She was only 43 years of age, but the last ten years of her life were worth more to the world than centuries as life is lived by many on the more favored boulevards of opulence and opportunity.

Her heritage was poverty. Her preparation was through paths of perseverance. Her education was in the university of adversity. Her equipment consisted of handicaps.

After a period of carefree and happy married life, she suddenly found herself without financial resources and the sole support of a hopelessly invalided husband, a paralyzed mother and two children.

While facing the problem of earning a livelihood for those dependent upon her, a cablegram came from the American ambassador in Turkey announcing that the Christian population of that country was facing starvation and death. A committee was formed for the purpose of receiving and transmitting help to the stricken peoples, and she offered her services at a salary much less than her ability might have commanded elsewhere. With the same spirit of self-sacrifice that sent relief workers abroad to minister to the stricken, diseased peoples, she devoted herself to the details of the work of the office.

Knowing that life depended upon getting the facts and the appeal before the public, she gave cheerfully long hours of overtime work. Office closing hours and holidays meant nothing to her when there was life to be saved. She had no money to give, but she gave her splendid service and gave it in full measure.

Through all the terrible years of the Great War, which continued for five years in the Near East after peace had come to the rest of the world, she read the cablegrams and letters from relief workers and missionaries in Trebizond, Sansoum, Mersine, Constantinople and other ports where the Christian population of Asia Minor had gathered, and she knew that upon her and those whose work she directed rested the responsibility for transmitting these appeals with promptness and efficiency, to those who could, by their gifts, mitigate such suffering. Her work was never done mechanically. It was ever prompted by the keenest sympathy for those whose cause she served.

Saturday, May 13, 1916, was a specially proclaimed holiday in New York City. From the office in the Metropolitan Building, she turned occasionally from her work to look down upon the 125,000 men and women who were marching in the great "Preparedness parade." She knew that more innocent noncombatants, men, women and children, had perished during the preceding days in the Near East than there were marchers in that great, possibly unprecedented, parade, and that at least twice as many more, chiefly women and children, were at that moment homeless, penniless, comfortless in refugee camps, absolutely dependent upon America. She knew that, even as the bands played and banners waved, women and little children in the Near East were dying of hunger. She knew that for her and her associates to take a legal holiday, that Saturday, would mean a delay of 48 hours in securing the funds upon which depended the lives of many. She did, therefore, what she would wish others to do under reversed conditions. She applied—she practiced—the Golden Rule.

Following the solution of the major refugee problems, she knew that there were tens of thousands of orphans who were not only without fathers, mothers, or responsible relatives, but were also without country. Most of them were under the "teen" age. They were absolutely dependent upon continued aid. The immediate ravages of starvation had been checked but would begin again with these innocent orphaned children if the stream of food and benevolence ceased. What if her own children were among the number? She continued to apply—to practice—to live—the Golden Rule.

Then her robust health began to fail. Physicians seemed unable to cope with the trouble. Perhaps she could have lingered longer had she not, through the past decade, drawn so heavily upon her reserve strength. But until the end she continued to think, plan, and pray for the children overseas whom she had never seen, but for whose life and happiness she had given her service with such abandon.

Did it pay? As to the worthwhileness of the investment there will be no doubt in the minds of any who have mingled with the more than a million people who are living today because she and others were Christians in deeds as well as in creeds. More than 100,000 orphan children, rescued from the streets and from disease, have been restored to health and "graduated" from Near East Relief orphanages. They are rapidly winning their way to positions of increasing usefulness to the world.

Remembering, however, the 32,000 children still in need of support and guidance in preparation for life's battles, she asked that the money which some might wish to spend for flowers for her be sent to help the orphans, whom she affectionately called "her children."

When the end came, her girls in the office, with other friends, decided to make a floral offering that would endure. A modest sum provided a simple wreath for her casket, and the remainder, amounting to approximately $1,000, was set aside as the beginning of the Amelia B. Horton scholarship fund for the children through whose lives she, "being dead, yet speaketh."

AN EXCEPTION

Editor of the Methodist Protestant Herald: I have been reading your paper continuously now for over thirty years, and have accepted most of its statements without question or mental reservation. It is with reluctance I now take exception, but on the front page of the issue for April 19th is anarticle entitled, "Reformers That Can't Reform," which is so contrary to fact and practice that I feel an exception is justified, and the statement of the real facts demanded.

The Methodist Episcopal Church is not a church of "priests," except in the general sense that all Christians are "priests" as termed by Peter in his epistle and John in the Book of Revelation. The Annual Conference of said church practically settles nothing. The real power is vested in the Quarterly and General Conferences of said church. In the Quarterly Conference where the property is held and controlled by a body of lay trustees, and all young men entering the ministry must be endorsed by the laity before they can get into the ranks of the ministry. The ministry is so outnumbered in the Quarterly Conferences by the laity that their votes stand about twenty to one in favor of the laity.

The Annual Conference makes no laws, nor determines no policy for the church. In the General Conference, which is the supreme law-making body of the church, the laymen and ministers are equally represented and have equal influence in determining all the policies of the church. The laymen elect outstanding laymen to represent them in the General Conference. Many of these laymen go to the General Conference more often than do ministers, and are thoroughly versed in all the laws of the church. I know one layman who has gone eight consecutive times to the General Conference. No man in the Methodist Episcopal Church so influenced its policies in the last generation than the late Judge Henry Wade Rogers, who was chairman of the powerful Judiciary Committee for so many years. The millions in the M. E. Church would not tolerate such conditions as set forth in said article on "Reformers That Can't Reform."

W. A. LEDFORD.

(Reports from the M. E. Church, like reports from Russia and China, seem to be conflicting. It was a Methodist Episcopal paper and a M. E. contributor that we quoted from last week. That contributor is probably a layman. Bro. Ledford is a minister. The points of view are different. In the long struggle between the laymen and the ministers of the M. E. Church, the laymen have been trying to lessen the hold of the ministers in the control of practical affairs. The ministers have refused to give up control in the realm in which the laymen most seek to have a voice. Laymen have place in the General Conference, and also in the Annual Conference; but they wish to go into the Annual Conference and have a voice in determining where ministers shall serve. Ministers are not willing to submit to a stationing committee composed partly of laymen. The fundamental difficulty seems to be that the ministers have not faith in the laymen and the laymen have not faith in the ministers. This prevents the recognition of "mutual rights."—Editor M. P. Herald).

GOVERNOR SMITH'S MORAL RECORD REVIEWED

Albany, N. Y., April 7.—In this week's issue of The Reform Bulletin, published in this city by Rev. O. R. Miller, state superintendent of the New York Civic League, which is just off the press today, there is a broadside attack upon Governor Al Smith, reviewing what purports to be his record on moral questions.

The opening editorial says that the influence of Governor Smith throughout his whole public life of 25 years has been injurious to the moral welfare of New York State; that he has refused to respond to appeals to him of local citizens in various towns to use his influence with local officials to have moral laws enforced, when said local officials had refused to enforce the laws. Reference is made to such governors as Hughes, Sulzer, Dix, Glynn and Whitman—both Republicans and Democrats—who responded to appeals for such help in law enforcement work.

The Bulletin reprints a short article from the New York Times of March 9, 1923, where Governor Smith is reported to have said to the Albany newspaper correspondents with reference to the fight of Senator Edge, of New Jersey, to get a three per cent beer bill passed, that:

"I will be glad to go down and help him put over his bill if that will get us somewhere where we can put a foot on the brass rail again and blow off the froth."

The story is also told that at Hotel Vanderbilt, New York City, April 24, 1922, at a Democratic dinner party, in discussing plans for raising campaign money and party platforms, that Governor Smith arose and said:

"I don't believe the Democratic party should camouflage on this subject. The Democratic party is a saloon party and everybody knows it is a saloon party, and it ought to come out and say so."

The Bulletin editor says that a man who was there at the party gave a typewritten statement of the substance of all the speeches made on the temperance question and that the one who received this statement gave the same to the Bulletin editor, which he now has, and from which Governor Smith's little speech was taken.

Further reference to Governor Smith's record is made to the fact that he has been seen to be present in places in Saratoga Springs in the summer time where he must have witnessed drinking and gambling, and never protested or stopped the same.

One of the severest arraignments of the governor is the claim that throughout the eight years of Governor Smith's official residence at Albany it has been over-ridden with immoral houses, speakeasies, gambling places and dens of vice and the governor has never made any move to have the laws against these places enforced. The reason claimed for his indifference in this matter is that for eight years past the Democrats have been in control of Albany, and that two notorious Albany Democratic politicians who have "shaken down" the Albany underworld for large sums of money and who were convicted in the United States Court last year of conspiracy in connection with conducting the infamous Albany baseball gambling pool, now dominate Albany Democratic politics. The charge is made that there are now nearly 200 places in Albany running wide open selling lottery tickets for the Albany baseball and stock market pools.

It also asks what the governor ever did to suppress the red light district here where more than 100 houses were running wide open until a few months ago when the New York Civic League started red light injunction and abatement proceedings against them and secured the closing of these places.

The governor is charged with attacking New York City schools and in being the leading influence in the impeachment of Governor Sulzer, a Democrat, because he would not sign the "ripper" bill, the McKee bill, to throw out of office Dr. Wm. H. Maxwell, the superintendent of schools, and thus give Tammany full control of the same. It is intimated that by some means, fair or unfair, Al Smith, when speaker of the Assembly, induced seven Republicans to vote with the Tammany Democrats to impeach Governor Sulzer, because Smith could not get the up-State Democrats to vote with him on that proposition.

The Bulletin also gives a list of some of the leading brewers and alleged gamblers and what is claimed to be theatrical men who put on off color shows or movies who were large contributors, from $1,000 to $5,000, toward Al Smith's campaign in 1926.

The last page of The Bulletin is devoted to Al Smith's legislative record on moral questions, in which his record in brief is given year by year, from 1904 to 1928, and it purports to give the dates when Smith voted for or against each and every so-called moral or immoral measure.

—Rev. N. G. Bethea uses bulletins for State Street Church. They are printed on two outside pages and typewritten on the two inside pages. A good picture of the building (Sunday school rooms)appears on first page.

—The graduating thesis of Rev. F. L. Gibbs will be "An Integrated Program of Religious Education."

OPTIMISM | The President's Letter | EVANGELISM

Centennial Day

Next Sunday is the time. Some of the charges are planning for all-day programs. We hope for fair weather and for great inspirational occasions wherever our people come together to commemorate this first 100th birthday of our beloved church. In some manner every church in the conference should give recognition to this important event. That we have lived, served, and grown for 100 years, is a great achievement, and no church should let the event pass without giving it due attention.

We hope to hear good reports from Centennial Day.

Gratitude Gift

The General Conference is coming on apace, and what we do must be done quickly. And what must we do? The answer is clear: we must raise $12,000—our Gratitude Gift allotment. This is, beyond question, the most important matter before us just now, and the church that does not get in on this will have nothing but regret when the time of rejoicing comes. No church can afford to be put in the position of lacking in denominational loyalty by refusing to share in this noble undertaking. We are going to get this money, but we want every church in the conference listed as a contributing church. See to it, brother, that your church is there, and that the amount given is in keeping with the ability of your church. God help us that no church shall fail in this testing time.

A voice from the far east brings us heartening news. Bro. Shelton says, "Spring Church went fifteen dollars over their allotment on G. G. I hope to get it at all of the other churches in a short time." Bro. J. D. Williams reports this morning for West End, $127 paid. Bro. Bates reports all but about $20 pledged at Calvary. He expects to get the full allotment. All this has the right ring, and gives us new hope. Come on, brethren, this thing must be done.

Vickory

April 8.—Easter Sunday we were with Bro. Ashburn at Vickory church. We enjoyed preaching and worshiping there. The response to the Gratitude Gift was disappointing, however. We trust that they may yet do something that will be worthy of their nice little church. Bro. Ashburn has pressed the matter, and his charge has pledged $110.00, with one church yet to contribute. We are grateful for what the charge has done.

Pleasant Grove

At night we motored, with the family, to this church, and enjoyed, with the large congregation that we found there, a splendid Easter program. The offering which followed was gratifying, being, we believe, $20. Pastor Reynolds permitted us to speak to the people on behalf of the Gratitude Gift, though he had already presented the matter at another time, and the people had responded. Their attitude toward this appeal was pleasing, and their response heartening. In a short time they raised their pledges to $100.

Our impressions on our first official visit to this church were highly favorable. Pastor Reynolds and his people are doing progressive work, and there seems to be a fine spirit of co-operation. The church is well located, and the outlook for continued development is bright. We enjoyed our visit with them.

Randleman

April 11 we were with Bro. Neese and his people in their second quarterly conference, held in the Randleman church. The conference was well attended, all churches being represented. Delegates were nominated, and all other business promptly and harmoniously transacted. The budget receipts will be increased this year, we think, especially the A. C. B. The attractive new church at Worthville will be formally opened on the second Sunday in May. This church is a credit to both the charge and the conference. We urged that a suitable marker be placed on the highway at Level Cross. The passerby should know that the little church there in the grove is a Methodist Protestant church. The new parsonage for this charge, located at Randleman, is commodious and well constructed. We most heartily commend them for providing this good home for their pastor. Bro. Neese is serving his third year on this charge, and is doing faithful and efficient work. We are confident that Randleman will report a year of progress.

Branch Meeting

It was our privilege, on Tuesday, April 17, to be present at the joint opening session of the branch meeting of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies, and to share with them in the devotional service. The North Carolina branches of these two societies have grown from their small beginnings, a few years ago, to strong and efficient organizations. The attendance at their branch meetings increases each year. At this meeting considerable space in the beautiful and spacious auditorium of Grace Church, where the sessions were held, was necessary to accommodate the delegates and visitors. We were glad to note a number of our ministers present. We bespeak for these organizations continued growth, and we most heartily commend them to the fullest co-operation and earnest prayers of all pastors. A good missionary society promotes every interest of the church, local and general.

Assigned

At the request of the Winston church, Rev. J. H. Moton has been assigned there as pastor. His official appointment was forwarded to him April 24. Reports from the church there are encouraging. Bro. Moton will be zealous for every church interest, and we are looking for a year of growth in that field.

Faithfulness

God and man put a premium on faithfulness. David says, "The Lord preserveth the faithful." Solomon declares, "A faithful man shall abound with blessings." When Paul sent Timothy to the church at Corinth, his commendation was, "My beloved son, and faithful in the Lord."

I do not know any obligation on the part of a minister to be successful, but I do know a thousand obligations on him to be faithful. Faithful to God; faithful to his ministry; faithful to his charge; faithful to his conference; and faithful to his denomination. The minister that thus serves may not achieve all the desire of his heart, but he will not miss his crown, either here or hereafter.

Appointments

April 25, with the Spencer congregation in conference regarding their church building project.

April 28-29, Centennial Day, with Bro. Powell on Greensville.

May 6, with Bro. Whitaker for two services.

May 13, with Bro. Neese in the formal opening of the new church at Worthville.

May 16, General Conference in Baltimore.

With abounding love and confidence toward every pastor and every charge, and with grateful appreciation for unfailing labor to promote all conference and denominational programs, I am,

Fraternally yours,

S. W. Taylor.

SENDING AND CALLING

Bishop Mouzon wants it understood that home talent is sufficient to fill the pastorates in the Western North Carolina Conference, that he doesn't have to go outside the state for material to supply the leading churches, as rumor suggested. Supplying Methodist pulpits is a matter for the Metohdist folks. But sympathetic bystanders will crave the privilege to applaud the bishop's declaration. When a congregation of any denomination becomes strong, wealthy, the disposition is to become fashionable, put on considerable style. A "big preacher" is wanted for a big congregation, quite naturally. But the ordinary idea of size, of importance, is that which comes from a distance. The importation may be no better, if as good, than the home material, but the urge is to send away for it. Hence the talk of importing preachers for some of the important charges, which Bishop Mouzon rebuked.

There is no reason to believe, so far as can be ascertained from this viewpoint, that the ministry of the Western North Carolina Conference doesn't measure up to that of any other conference in the southern church. Therefore the importation for a specific purpose would be a reflection on home talent the while it amounted to nothing more than the big of the thing. But that isn't the worst of it for Methodist folks. Congregations that select their own preachers may do as they please. But it is the glory of the Methodist church that its men are sent, not called. That has given the Methodist people a pastoral system that surpasses all others and it has been one of the chief causes of the growth and power of Methodism. Importing preachers for a specific place, in answer to the request, probably, of a congregation that was craving to be fashionable, would in effect be a reversal of Methodist itineracy.—From Greensboro Daily News of November 5, 1927. Published here by request.

A BANKER'S IDEAL

In his farewell address to the American Bankers' Association, President Mell Taylor, of Chicago, in giving up the presidency, said: "This is my hope for the future: that we may be rich without forgetting to be righteous; that we may have leisure without license; that we may be powerful without being offensively proud; that we may be nationally-minded without being narrow-minded; and finally, that we may live in a world of fact without surrendering our faith." A good sermon in that statement!—Selected.

Nowhere in our land are the priests of Moloch persecuted. The armament boosters, the scaremongers, the sowers of distrust among nations, the big-navy champions, the compulsory-military-training advocates are never denied a hearing. It is only the friends of peace and international good understanding that are hounded.—The World Tomorrow.

PASTORAL LETTER

The "going-to-church problem" is a very serious problem within our church. It is the jerky church-goer who creates this problem. There are some folks who attend church by jerks. You can never depend upon them; they may or may not be there.

They hide behind a multitude of excuses, such as bad roads, cold weather, hot weather, headaches, backaches, etc. These folks are indeed a great hindrance to the progress of the church. They act as a deadly influence upon the active and consistent church-goer. They bring a jerky spirit into work of the congregation.

They are a constant irritation to the regular church-goer and to the pastor. They help to cheapen the church and the work done in the church. They witness by their attitude before the world that the work going on in the church is cheap and not very important.

Friend, stand aside and watch yourselves go by. Take a good look at yourself and tell us what you really think about your conduct. And then be honest enough to acknowledge that your attitude toward your church is far from right. —Rev. W. G. McFarland, Pastor, in The Wesleyan Churchman, M. E. paper, Kernersville, N. C.

WHAT ONE DOLLAR DID

It was a very little shiny dollar, and because it was put in the hand of the Lord, it did a great work. It was like the five barley loaves that the little boy had. Do you remember about it? If he had kept them in his basket, instead of giving them to Jesus, they would never have fed all those hungry people. And if the owner of the gold dollar had kept it rolled up in cotton in a box it would have never helped to build a church.

The pretty little coin belonged to a little girl, it was all her own—she could do with it just what she pleased. What would you have done with it? She meant to keep it always, and she probably would, if it had not been for her mother.

One evening her mother came home from a meeting and told her about a little band of God's people who had no place to hold their services but a blacksmith's shop, and that money was needed to build a little church for them. I don't know all the mother said, and I don't know what passed through the mind of the little maiden—I only know how highly she prized her treasure, and yet the next day she wrote this letter:

"Dear Sir: A few weeks ago I had this gold dollar given me to spend as I choose. It was so pretty I rolled it up in cotton and put it away in a little box and thought I would keep it always. But last evening mother came home from the association, and told me about the little church you were trying to build. She said you had to hold your meetings in a blacksmith shop. I want to help build that church, and thought I would send you my gold dollar. Please accept it from a little girl who loves Jesus."

The gold dollar left its hiding place and started on its mission; and many people heard how "a little girl who loved Jesus" had given the very best thing she had to help the kingdom on earth. Her generous act touched their hearts and opened their purses until over two hundred dollars was subscribed.

And it was the little gold dollar that did it. This is a "really truly" story, too, just as true as the Bible.—Lutheran Mission Journal.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

Our Children's Day Design

The samples for Children's Day services have been sent to the different pastors and Sunday School superintendents. I desire to introduce this year's Children's Day program with an interpretation of the front page cut designed by Mrs. Emma W. P. Slack, a sister of Mrs. Fred C. Klein. This story of this beautiful design harmoniously combines the centennial anniversary of the Methodist Protestant Church, the inspiring pageant, "Wings of the Morning," written by Miss Dorothy Elderdice, and our Children's Day program portraying the beginning and development of our Foreign Missionary work. I will let the artist tell her own story:

"The theme throughout this design is 'Peace on earth, good will towards men'—the brotherhood of man through Christ Jesus.

"Back of the words, Children's Day services, the bells of the centuries are still ringing and re-echoing the messages which have been sent out, the first bell, 1828, the last, 1928.

"At the left is a sketch of Old St. John's Church, Baltimore, Md., where the Methodist Protestant Church had its birth.

"From this church we see the innumerable host coming forth appearing first as men and women, leaving after services, then as each one follows his or her own spiritual light, they wend their way in different directions—some towards the group in the foreground (which represents Foreign Missions), while others pass by in their own chosen path.

"The third group of these hosts of the past, which all some day must join, are seen wending their way along the 'Invisible Trail' which leads to heaven.

"The hills in the distance are type and symbol of the distant past, but beyond is the ever-rising dawn, with bright rays of hope and faith sending forth the light and memory of the good accomplished in the centennial year.

"The group in the foreground pictures the man, woman and child of each nation where the Methodist Protestant Church has established its work through the Board of Foreign Missions and the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. In this picture the occidental and the oriental meet in brotherly love.

"The American young man and young woman have come by airplane which is seen in the sky to bring the 'Good Will' message and are sincerely welcomed by all.

"The beginning of the Foreign Mission work of our church was in a girls' school in Japan and you will note the designer has not lost sight of this fact as the American young man has placed his hand upon her shoulder and from the expression on the girl's face one can easily feel that a tribute has been paid which is most befitting, thus 'paying honor to whom honor is due.'

"The American girl in speaking has not failed to touch the heart of the Hindoo woman who clasps her hand in mute appeal for help as the women of India today are looking towards American women for help to break the bondage to which centuries of heathen customs and religion have bound them.

"The Chinese, who have been passing through such upheavals and wars that they are not permitted to express their true sentiments, are typified by the Chinese man and woman who, like thousands of their countrymen, have felt the touch of the Christ through Christianity, are listening intently and their faces indicate that in their hearts they are receiving the message, 'Peace on earth, good will to all men.'

"The Hindoo and Japanese men are listening with deepest interest while the children of these nations have caught the spirit of the message and are joyous in hearing this good news.

"Thus these children of God, winged with divine love, have traveled through space to carry the good-will message to all who have ears to hear."

I trust that you shall find this year's Children's Day program just as inspirational and suggestive throughout. Do not fail to fill out the order card at once and order freely of whatever supplies you can use and they will be sent immediately. Send all orders to Rev. S. W. Rosenberger, Executive Secretary, Station B., Box 96, Columbus, Ohio.

THE WEIGHT OF WORDS

Words are thoughts just merely spoken,
But they have tremendous weight;
Some may scatter love and kindness,
But they're spoken oft too late.
Real encouragement is given
When we speak these words, "Be True,"
To the soul that's in deep sorrow;
Words have pow'r e'en though they're few.
Then ofttimes our lips have uttered
Just a phrase, in which was told
Faults of others, and they heard it,
And it made our friendship cold.
Words are little, but they're mighty;
Let us speak the word of cheer,
And the ears that long have listened
Will, with joy, its message hear.

ARE YOU EXCUSED FROM GIVING TO MISSIONS?

Horace Bushnell once made an interesting list of all who might be excused from giving to missions. Here it is:

Those who believe that the world is not lost and does not need a Saviour.

Those who believe that Jesus Christ make a mistake when he said, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

Those who believe the gospel is not the power of God, and cannot save the heathen.

Those who wish their missionaries had never come to our ancestors, and that we ourselves were still heathen.

Those who believe that it is "every man for himself" in the world, and who, with Cain, ask, "Am I my brother's keeper?"

Those who want no share in the final victory.

Those who believe they are not accountable to God for the money entrusted to them.

Those who are prepared to accept the final sentence: "Inasmuch as ye did it not unto one of the least of these, ye did it not to me."

Do you belong to the mission or the omission band?—Moody Monthly.

MARJORIE'S CHILDREN'S DAY

Dr. Elwood had just returned from the hospital and was looking very thoughtful and sad.

"What is the matter, father?" asked his little daughter Marjorie.

"Oh, I am thinking of Emily Monroe, poor child!"

"Who is she?"

"She is a young girl in the hospital. She had to have an operation a few days ago. She was so brave, but she is drooping now, and I am very much afraid she will not pull through. I'm sure she is homesick."

"Why doesn't her mother go to see her?" asked Marjorie, eagerly.

"Her mother is dead."

"Where is her father?"

"On a long business trip in the Far West."

"Has she any sisters?"

"Yes, several, but they are little children and are in a distant city, too far away to come to visit Emily. What she needs is cheer."

The following Sunday morning little Emily was lying on her bed at the hospital, her limbs tied, for she was not allowed to move them. Her face was pitifully pale and sad. Her eyes were closed, but slow tears forced themselves between her lids and rolled down her cheeks.

She was homesick—so homesick!

Presently the nurse came in softly, and, resting a hand on the aching head, said, "Would you like to see a dear girl who is waiting in the hall?"

The tearful lids opened, revealing an eager look in the brown eyes.

"Waiting?" she asked.

"Yes, she came to see you."

"I do not know any girl in this town. Who is she?"

"She is Marjorie Elwood, the doctor's daughter."

"Oh, I love Dr. Elwood! Please bring his daughter in."

Presently Marjorie stood by Emily's bedside. Her face was radiant.

"I know you're Emily," she said gently. "Papa told me about you. I'm Marjorie Elwood. I've brought you these; aren't they sweet?" and she held out a bouquet of sweet June roses.

A smile broke out over the wan face as the frail hand clasped the roses and kissed them.

"Oh, I thank you! I thank you so!" she cried out. "How did you happen to think of bringing these to me?"

"Why, it is Children's Day at the church and I wanted you to have a share in it."

The nurse left the two girls together for 15 minutes, during which time Marjorie did most of the talking. She told Emily of the songs that were to be sung that night, of the flowers and the birds, and the recitation that little Tom Clark was to give. "I'll coax him to come over with me some day and recite it for you," she said.

Marjorie told other cheering things—how her brother, Roland, had a wonderful dog that could play many tricks and dance, and that when she came again she would bring some more interesting things.

"Time is up," said the nurse, coming in quietly.

"All right," was Marjorie's cheerful response. Then, bending over Emily, she touched her forehead softly with her rosy lips, and laid down on the coverlet a small box with a pictured cover.

In the evening just as Marjorie was about to start for the "children's services," her father came in. He had just returned from the hospital.

"My dear," he said, "Emily is much better. She has improved wonderfully since morning."

"Oh, I am so glad!" said Marjorie.

"She was asleep when I went in," he said, "and there was a smile on her face. Upon a little stand beside her bed was a bowl of beautiful June roses. In her frail hand there were clasped some sweet rosebuds. A small box lay on the side of the bed. Its contents were scattered over the spread. There were pictures and booklets that would interest her. I took her temperature and felt her pulse, and then looked at the nurse. She said, 'It was Miss Marjorie who brought these flowers and pictures and made it so cheerful for Emily.' It was a heaven-born thought that took you there, my dear. I verily believe she was pining for home or the sight of some of her people. You did a good deed, Marjorie, and Emily is likely to get well."

Marjorie's face was beaming as she heard these words. Do you wonder that she felt happy as she kissed her father and hurried away to the service? That Children's Day meant a lot to Marjorie. It was a happy, happy day.—Youth's Banner.

FIGHT CRIME WITH RELIGION

Lack of religious training of the youth is one of the main factors in Chicago crime, State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe asserted recently in a speech at a luncheon of the Evanston Chamber of Commerce.

"We have two main types of criminals," he said. "One is the racketeer, the mature man who is ruthless in his pursuit of money and power. The other is the youth of 19 or 20 years. Youthful crime would be lessened if parents gave youth religious training as well as education."—Chicago Tribune.

THE SEVEN DEADLY SINS

As listed by Canon Donaldson, of Westminster Abbey, are:

1. Policies without principles.
2. Wealth without work.
3. Pleasure without conscience.
4. Knowledge without character.
5. Commerce and industry without morality.
6. Science without humanity.
7. Worship without sacrifice.

Considerable resentment has been expressed against alleged attempts on the part of religious groups to impose their will upon legislative bodies and government officials. For years manufacturers' associations and similar commercial groups have maintained their lobbies and expended vast sums upon propaganda designed to secure governmental action favorable to their interests. It is strange that intelligent citizens should become alarmed when those whose only aim is the betterment of the conditions of life exercise such influence as they can legitimately command to secure needed legislative action.—The American Child.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

SENIOR CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC

May 6: "How to Choose a Life-Work"

Eccl. 9:10; I Thess. 4:9-12

The Worship Period

This is the monthly consecration meeting. Make it mean much in spiritual growth and purpose. Give the first ten minutes at least to song, prayer and devotional readings. Some suggested songs are :"It Pays to Serve Jesus," "Must I Go, and Empty-Handed," "Saviour, like a Shepherd lead us," and "I'll Go Where You Want Me to Go." After this worship period have several members of the society make minute talks on the various occupations which are attracting youth today. Of course, the people who make these talks must be notified before the meeting, so that they may prepare. Have someone who is a success in a particular field come in and tell the society of his "call," and his life's work.

Hints for the Leader

"The three great choices of life are the choice of Christ, the choice of a life companion and the choice of a life work." In this meeting, however, we must confine our thoughts and speeches to the choosing of a life work. This is one of the greatest questions which confronts youth, "What am I going to DO in life?" Surely, every one ought to desire to live such a life as would make the community in which he lives a better community. Surely, no one would like to have it said of him: "And that this world would be the same, if it had never known my name." The leader should stress such thoughts as these and especially emphasize the HOW of choosing a life-work.

1. Through PRAYER. One should not enter a life work without praying about the matter. Through prayer he should seek the guidance of the Holy Spirit so that he may be led to choose the right work. People have different capacities and abilities; they are fitted for various callings in life and they ought to find these places through the influence of the Holy Spirit.

2. Through BIBLE STUDY. The Bible has many values; one of its great values is this: It is a Guide Book. One writer says of it, "Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." The Light from the old Book still shines. If we but follow its gleam, it will guide us into the right calling in life.

3. Through A STUDY of the WORLD'S NEEDS. Study the problems of the present day. Find the outstanding need. Seek to enter the hardest field, if it be His will. Work where your life will count for most and where the need is greatest.

Pertaining to the Topic

In addition to emphasizing the How of choosing a life work, the WHAT and WHY and WHEN of choosing a life work should be emphasized in this meeting.

1. WHAT? What should determine the choice of a life work? Of course, one should and must have a living wage, but money should not determine such a choice. It is passingly strange how this feature is emphasized today. It is pathetic. Money, fame, nor popularity should ever determine the choice of a life work. The determining factor in deciding a life work and the deep desire in every heart ought to be: Let me do that kind of work in and through which the largest service may be rendered to the world.

2. WHY? Why should an individual choose a life work? An individual should not be content to just "drift" into a life work. He had better drift into a good, noble work than not to get into such work at all; but it is much better if he does not "drift" into his work. It is much better to make a definite choice because in all probability the work will mean more to you.

3. WHEN? When should an individual choose his life work? This choice ought to be made early. It's such a tragedy to waste the best part of one's life and then find his real place in the world's program. This matter of choosing a life work should be presented to youth early in life. It would be a a fine thing if every youth could come to a definite decision as to life work early in life, then the whole life could be given to the work.

"Search the Scriptures"

1. The highest duty. Eccl. 12:13, 14.
2. Honest work. Prov. 16:8.
3. Use opportunity. John 9:4.
4. Choose wisely. Prov. 13:16.
5. Work faithfully. Prov. 18:19.
6. Make a living. I Tim. 5:8.
7. The highest values. Matt. 6:31-33.

Correlation With S. S. Lesson

The Sunday school lesson for today can be very easily linked up with this topic. The Sunday school lesson is: "How to be truly great," or "Jesus' Standard of Greatness." Greatness is based on real service. Here is a fine opportunity to link up the truth taught in the S. S. lesson with the C. E. topic and carry out the truth in reality.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

May 6: Greatness Through Service

Scripture Basis: Mark 9:33-50; 10:35-45.

Golden Text: The Son of Man also came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many. Mark 10:45.

Greatness Presented

In His love and long-suffering, our patient Father in heaven must often look down upon humanity and smile at the manifestations of its imperfection. How patient Jesus had to be with those "babes" in spiritual discernment! And even in this enlightened age it is a question as to whether or not the rank and file of Christ's followers have advanced much.

Perceiving that His disciples had been disputing about who should be the greatest, Jesus had to take them aside and instruct them in the factors of true greatness. Contrary to their preconceptions, the paradox that he who would be first must be the least in His kingdom was taught. "Whosoever shall humble himself shall be exalted." (Matt. 23:12).

Greatness Pictured

Illustrating His teaching, Jesus called a child and affectionately put His arms about him as He said, "Whosoever shall receive one of such little children in my name, receiveth me." So many of the elements of true greatness are incorporated in the life of a child, such as love, faith, trust, obedience, humility, service, etc. "While the apostles gazed upon that sweet, trusting, loving face, He bade His followers take that child as their model and seek to incorporate in their lives the child spirit, which is free from ambition, and which in true humility takes from day to day the good things which its father gives it."

Greatness Performed

Although called the beloved disciple, John was also designated by Jesus as the son of thunder. He would repuke a man, who evidetnly was a believer in the power of Christ over demons, for casting an evil spirit from a sufferer. John explained that he forbade him because "he followed not US." We may read here a bit of egotism and self-righteousness. But Jesus was prompt to inform the mistaken disciple that the performer of the good deed must have been an apostle of His. Then He asserted that so much as a cup of water to a thirsty needy one would receive the approval of the Lord of all. Little deeds of mercy and kindness will merit reward.

Greatness Preserved

Rather severe punishment Christ requires should be ours to purify ourselves of dross, and preserve within ourselves the spirit of true greatness. It is better to be deprived of life, of a hand, a foot or an eye, if we should take Him literally, than to run the risk of losing one's soul. "Have salt in yourselves, and be at peace with one another." Salt is a preservative. If we would preserve our souls, we must have within the salt of the gospel. Then, disputes concerning position and preference would be obliterated.

Greatness Pursued

Matthew tells us James and John put their faithful mother, Salome, up to asking the Master if they could sit in the high seats when He established His kingdom. Still they pursued greatness. The question He put to them and the answer they gave are significant. "Are ye able?" "We are able." These two ambitious disciples knew not what was included in those three little words. At that time, they were not able, but they became so after being endued with heaveny power. Then they were not concerned about the chief place, either. Their ambition was to do His will.

Greatness Practiced

Again Jesus had to display patience, when the ten manifested their displeasure with the two ambitious ones. Again He had to explain greatness and inform them how to practice it. They were accustomed to seeing those in high positions exercising arbitrary authority over their subjects. This was entirely contrary to the spirit of Christ's kingdom. Instead of being served, they were expected to serve. Instead of practicing austerity, they were to show humility. This is still the essential requirement of greatness in His kingdom.

Greatness Personified

Without fear of contradiction could the Master say that He came to minister unto mankind, for perhaps the greatest eulogy that is recorded of Him is that He "went about doing good." (Acts 10:38). No person was too common, vile, or insignificant but that

He would help him. On the other hand, no one occupied so high a position that He would hesitate to declare unto him the principles of His kingdom. And when He could do no more, He gave His life a ransom for all. Who has been the greatest character throughout the ages? None other but Jesus Christ, the Son of God. And He was servant of mankind.

METHODIST PROTESTANT YOUNG PEOPLE'S UNION ORGANIZED

Representatives from Albemarle, Pine Bluff on Midland charge, First Church, Charlotte, Friendship, and Concord, met in the Methodist Protestant church at Concord, Sunday afternoon, April 1, for the purpose of organizing a Young People's Union.

The devotional period was led by Rev. G. H. Hendry. Following the devotional service, Rev. John R. Anderson, pastor of Albemarle Methodist Protestant church, was elected temporary chairman of the meeting. Mr. Anderson in setting forth the purpose of the meeting said: "The purpose of this meeting is to organize the young people of a certain district into a Young People's Union, representing all the organizations for young people within the local church, and to have a program that would include all these organizations, meeting at some stated place at regular intervals for program, problematic discussions, etc."

The following officers for the year were elected: Rev. John R. Anderson, president; Mr. D. A. McLaurin, vice-president; Mrs. J. L. Sides, recording secretary; Miss Ruth Green, corresponding secretary, and Mr. Roy Gorman, treasurer.

It was voted to have the next meeting on Sunday, April 29th, at Rocky River, Pine Bluff charge. A banner will be awarded to the church bringing the largest group of young people to this meeting.

SPECIAL NOTICE!

On the first Sunday in May, First Church, Burlington, will observe "Home-Coming Day." All members, former members, former pastors, preachers who have gone out from the Burlington church, and friends are invited to fellowship with us that day.

"Home-Coming" observance will begin with the Sunday school. A goal of 600 attendance has been set for the Sunday school. A hundred members of the cradle roll are expected; also a hundred members of the Home Department or others who are not regular attendants. These together with our regular enrollment will run the attendance beyond six hundred.

One of the most important features of the 11 o'clock service will be the voting for a new site upon which to build our new church. All members are urged to be present for this.

Special music will be a feature of both the Sunday school session and the church service.

Don't forget the date. May 6th. Let's visit the old home church once more before it is displaced by a new and modern church building. L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.

EIGHTH DISTRICT CORRECTION

By mistake in last week's notice we said the Rally would be the fifth Sunday in May. Don't wait till then, for the right date is fifth Sunday in April. The program begins at 11 a. m. sharp. Prof. Paul S. Kennett is the morning speaker. R. C. STUBBINS.

CENTENARY PROJECT FOR JUNIORS

"Our Big Methodist Protestant Family in Baltimore"

LESSON NINE

"Our Family Is Being Educated"

Facts for Centenary Discoverers

1. Since our Big Family started one hundred years ago, America has made great progress in education. One hundred years ago, only the rich and the moderately rich could afford to give their children an education. Then for a long time there were only a few colleges, and the grade schools were just small one-room buildings. Now we feel that the most important thing we owe the boys and girls is an education; so we have better school buildings, and more high schools and colleges.

2. When one finishes high school, he must go away to college unless there is a college in his own city. It is a wonderful thing to begin planning as soon as you enter high school to go to college when you have finished the four years there. Then we begin to ask ourselves a very important question, "Which college will I attend?" Some colleges are started and maintained by the state legislatures; for instance the college known as the Ohio State University is maintained by the State of Ohio and all the men and women in Ohio who own property help to support this university. Each state has its own state university.

3. The state universities are very fine; but they do not have a great deal of religious life in them. Many of the instructors are not Christian men and women, and Jesus would not approve of everything which enters into our state universities. There is another type of college all over our United States; it is known as the Christian college, and is maintained by various denominations. Practically all denominations have their own colleges where they can give their own young people just as fine training as in a state university, yet in a Christian environment. In our Christian colleges, our instructors are Christian; we have religious organizations within the college to help develop the religious life of the students. A great many Christian parents would not be happy to send their children to other than a Christian college.

4. Our Big Methodist Protestant Family, because it wants to educate its young people, has a number of such Christian colleges, and some of the finest men and women of the land are teachers in our own Methodist Protestant colleges. You will want to know where they are all located. We have a very good college and a seminary at Westminster, Maryland. There is no lovelier spot in our land than around Westminster, Maryland. Here we have our college with its many buildings including a library, recitation halls, dormitories for boys and dormitories for girls, a quaint old stone chapel, a large auditorium for large audiences, and a great many homes where the president of the college and the teachers live. At Westminster, we also have our seminary where young men go to prepare for the Christian ministry. Practically all of the young men here are members of our Big Methodist Protestant Family who have decided to give their lives to the Christian ministry; and all over our church there are men in the ministry who have graduated from our Seminary at Westminster.

5. We have another college at Adrian, Michigan; a college which has stood for many years and has sent out into all walks of life its graduated men and women. There is something majestic about those red brick buildings; there is something in the atmosphere around Adrian that one who has lived in it never forgets. As we meet the men and women who have gone forth from these institutions, we feel a sense of loyalty to the institutions which is more than the usual.

6. Our youngest college is in High Point, N. C.; it graduated its first class less than a year ago. One is impressed with the beautiful buildings, with the convenient dormitories, and with the spacious campus; but more than these the spirit of the college is the magnetism which draws.

7. We have a junior college at Tehuacana, Texas. This school is doing much to serve the part of our Big Family living in the Southwest. Here our ministers are receiving their education; here our young people of the great Southwest are receiving their training.

8. There are thousands and thousands of our Big Family, however, who do not get into our colleges. Some of them are men and women who are too old to go to college; some are young people who remain at home and do not go to college and still others are boys and girls who are not yet ready for college. The churches all over our denomination are helping to educate this part of our Big Family. One hundred years ago, churches did not think very much about having an educational program. They built little one-room buildings much like the one-room schoolhouses years ago; but we soon discovered that we had to have large churches with many rooms to give the boys and girls and the young people the proper training. One hundred years ago, we thought that, most anyone could teach a Sunday school class; but we are realizing now that it is as important the Sunday school teachers be trained as it is that school teachers receive an education. So all over our denomination, we are conducting Leadership Training Conferences where Sunday School teachers and Christian Endeavor leaders may go to receive better training. Each year, our Big Family is giving a better training to those in our churches who are teaching boys and girls and young people.

9. We have two church Boards which are responsible for the education of our Big Family, the Board of Education which directs and assists our colleges and the Board of Young People's Work which takes care of the Religious Education of the boys and girls and young people in our churches. The Board of Young People's Work conducts the Leadership Training Conferences and directs the whole Religious Educational program of the entire denomination.

10. Our Big Family is not doing a bigger piece of work than its educational work. Through our colleges, young people are being prepared for their life's work; and through our religious educational programs in local churches children and young people are learning how to live the Christian way; they are having built into their lives love, unselfishness, kindliness, patience, courage, self-control, obedience, respect for the rights of others, honesty and fair play. Our Big Family is truly being educated.

Worship Service

Theme: Preparing for Life.

Call to Worship—Leader: "Happy is the man who findeth wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding."

Children: "For the merchandise of it is better than the merchandise of silver, and the gain thereof than fine gold."

Praise Hymn: Doxology.

Conversation: Should we not be thankful for the colleges which our Big Family is maintaining that we may some day go to one of them and receive our education under Christian men and women. Let us sing our Praise Hymn wholeheartedly this time and as we sing, be thankful in our hearts for our Christian colleges.

Second Hymn of Praise: Doxology.

Conversation: We are all dreaming of what we are going to do when we are men and women. Those who receive the best preparation are going to occupy the highest places in life and will be the best fitted for service. Certainly all of us are looking forward to the day when we will go away to school. But there is a preparation which we must make long before we go away to college. We must learn how to live the Christian way right now; we must learn how to be honest and fair in our work and play; we must learn to obey and respect laws—the laws of our home, the laws of our school, and the laws of the church; we must learn to control ourselves, to respect the rights of others, to be kind and unselfish. These are the lessons which we are learning every Sunday through our Sunday schools. Should we not be thankful for our Sunday schools and churches which teach us how to live the Christian life now?

Third Hymn of Praise: Doxology (third time).

Conversation: Everything we do now is being built into what we are to become when we are men and women; we are preparing now to live after while. I am wondering what we ought to build into our lives now while we are boys and girls. (Have the children discuss it.)

Hymn: "Dare to Be Brave, Dare to Be True," No. 175, Hymnal for American Youth.

Prayer.

Suggestel Activity

Map Work: Locate all our colleges and seminary on the map; draw lines out from our college centers, at the end of which paste the pictures of our colleges.

Birthday Cake Poster: Add facts about our colleges to your Birthday Cake Poster.

My Church's Birthday Book: Let each pupil add facts about our colleges to his "My Church's Birthday Book."

Photograph Album: Paste pictures of our colleges in your Photograph Album.

The Organization of My Church Poster: Label one spoke, "Board of Education," one spoke, "Board of Young People's Work" and the last, "Board of Publication." (Explain that the Board of Publication publishes our Sunday school lessons.

Memory Work

Have the children memorize the hymn, "Dare to Be Brave, Dare to Be True."

Suggestions to Leaders

Since there is but one more lesson, leaders should be getting all posters, books and maps finished. The last lesson will be in the nature of a birthday celebration and may take the form of a public meeting before the whole church or a real birthday party to which others may be invited.

THE CENTENNIAL GRATITUDE GIFT

Here is the last word on the subscriptions to the Gratitude Gift. These amounts have not been paid in as yet to the treasurer of the General Conference and in many cases not to the treasurers of the Annual Conferences. It is subscribed and should be paid in not later than May 1.

Conference	Subscribed	Quota
Alabama	$ 1,320	$ 1,000
Arkansas	1,000	1,000
Colorado-Texas	100	100
Eastern	7,500	7,500
Florida-Mission	100	100
Ft. Smith-Okla.	518	500
Georgia	500	500

West Virginia	7,500	7,500
*Seattle, Wash., Churches	.....	500
Japan, 280 yen	133	.....
Special	350	.....

* Deficient.

These amounts are practically correct. A few of the conferences not reporting lately may have additional figures. Eastern was the first of the larger conferences to subscribe in full, in fact, $1,000 over their amount. Then came Maryland and West Virginia. We are in striking distance of the goal. At this writing most of the conferences are assured. Let none fail.

We are grateful indeed for the nice list of contributions of this week. You will note the good work of the Woman's Home Missionary Society continues.

We have five new cases of mumps in the Home this week, but all are doing well.

E. F. ALLMAN, Superintendent.

(This report should have been published in last week's issue of the Herald, but was in some way misplaced.—Editor).

Offerings by Churches and Individuals

Maple Springs, Forsyth Circuit, $2.11; High Point, First, special contribution, $7.00.

Offerings by Sunday Schools

Young Ladies' Class, M. P. Fairmont, W. Va., $4.00; Ray Bible Class, Graham, $6.00; Mt. Carmel, Forsyth Circuit, $4.75; Fair Grove, Haw River Circuit, $3.50; Denton, Denton Circuit, $4.47; Lebanon, Spring Church Charge, $2.65.

Our contributions have been small during the past week, however we are very thankful to all who had part in it and hope by the time our next report comes up it will be much larger financially.

We have recently received the following: Mr. W. L. Ward, Asheboro, a nice lot of sheeting; Philathea Class, Mt. Lebanon, Randleman Circuit, two sheets; Mr. H. A. Moffitt, High Point, a fine lot of boys' underwear; Mr. Moss, who is manager of the American Bakery, High Point, contributed to the Home since our last report 350 loaves of bread.

To all of these we wish to express our deep appreciation.

We were very fortunate in having with us on Saturday night Miss Annie L. Forrest, a returned missionary, who gave us a very interesting talk on her work in Japan and India; it was received with great enthusiasm among the children, as well as others.

E. F. ALLMAN, Superintendent.

—Mrs. S. K. Spahr was missed in Grace church last week. Dr. Spahr had taken her north to see a sick sister of hers.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Liberty-Siler City.—There are some things just now that can better be reported from Liberty-Siler City charge by the pastor than by anyone else.

The second quarterly conference has been held and the reports were good from all departments of each church. The Gratitude Gift has been overpaid by each church, pastor's salary paid in full to date, and the other finances are in fair shape. For some years now this charge has met all of its financial obligations to the Conference and to the General Conference, and they plan to do the same this year.

The Easter services were held in each church, with offerings for Home Missions. A committee in each church, appointed by the Sunday school, trained the children for this occasion. They did it well, and have our thanks.

Rev. Lawrence Little, executive secretary of the Board of Young People's Work, spent Easter Sunday with us. He spoke at the Sunday school hour in Siler City, and at the 11 o'clock hour and the evening hour in Liberty. Our people were delighted with his messages.

On Friday, April 20, we moved into the new parsonage in Liberty. It is a beautiful home, and is well arranged for the needs of a pastor's family. There are seven rooms, a living room, dining room, kitchen with breakfast nook, three bed rooms, bath room, a good hall, and a delightful room for the pastor's study. It has hardwood floors throughout, is well lighted, and has a good steam-heating plant. The people have built well, and will through the years have reason to be proud of their preacher's home. We thank every one who contributed in any way to the erection of so good a home.

Then on Saturday evening about the time supper was over and we were sitting down to our study for Sunday's lessons, a number of ladies came in bearing bundles. So we soon found ourselves surrounded by a group of pounders, and some who could not come sent their pounds. In the pounding we found fruits, flour, sugar, coffee, pickles, meats, milk and butter, two rugs, an old hen with a beautiful flock of chicks; potatoes, onions, soap, soup, oatmeal, beans, cakes, jellies and preserves, tomatoes, and a combination step-ladder and kitchen stool, and heaps and heaps of good will.

We have since learned that the Siler City people had planned to join the Liberty people in this onslaught, but were prevented by the downpour of rain. It seemed like old times to be pounded once more, after having gone for more than ten years without such an experience. We thank all these dear people for their kindness.

We are now living on the Burlington end of No. 62 in Liberty, and will be glad to have our friends call to see us.

With all our hearts we thank Mr. and Mrs. John W. Curtis, of Liberty, and Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Johnson, of Siler City, for furnishing us shelter and food since Conference. They were exceedingly kind.

We also thank Rev. G. W. Holmes for preaching for us the third Sunday in April.

Faithfully yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

Greensville Circuit, Hobbs Chapel.—Last Sunday morning the service, "Church of Our Fathers," was given here by Brother Powell, little Mildred Moore, Misses Ella Melvin, Bernice and Mabel Pearson. The service was well rendered and very impressive. Miss Mael deserves special mention as she took the part of the fourth story-teller—the one having that part being ill and unable to attend. Methodist Protestant hymns were used—and well sung by singers from Philadelphia, Matthews Chapel and Ebenezer. The decoration by Mrs. W. W. Pair was very fitting. Upon a background of white, printed in silver figures and letters was: "1828-1928, 100th Birthday of the M. P. Church." Dogwood and other blossoms were effectively used. It seems that any Methodist Protestant hearing this service, learning what a struggle our fathers endured, and what our denomination has accomplished in this hundred years would be more than proud of the church and consider it a rare privilege to join all Methodist Protestants in a Gratitude Gift.

The amount collected was $19.55. Those giving $1.00 or more are as follows: Joe Taylor, Jr., Bill Taylor, F. L. Tudor, W. A. Phillips, W. T. Phillips, Mrs. W. T. Phillips, Mrs. Sallie Mitchell, Mrs. J. T. Barnes, W. W. Pair, Mrs. W. W. Pair, little W. Carter Pair, Dora Pair, R. D. Pair, and Mrs. R. D. Pair. Other members will contribute next Sunday at the final service.

Don't forget to attend the quarterly conference at Matthews Chapel next Sunday. President Taylor will preach at 11 o'clock and Brother Powell will appreciate "some gifts" at the afternoon service.

DORA PAIR, Reporter.

Lebanon, High Point.—The officials met in quarterly conference on Thursday night, March 29. We were delight to have President Taylor present, who gave an excellent talk, offering timely suggestions for the membership of the church. Messrs Delos Hedgecock and Garland Blair were elected nominees for delegate to Annual Conference.

Our Easter service was rendered on Easter Sunday night. The children presented the pageant, "The Signs of Easter," which was very interesting. The offering amounted to about $10.

Mr. I. W. Montgomery's Sunday school class enjoyed a very nice egg-hunt and weinie roast on Easter Monday evening.

On the second Wednesday in April "The Sunshine Circle Mission Band" was organized with 20 members under the leadership of Mrs. W. M. Crouch; they had a very interesting program. This promises to be a very live band. At the close of the program the leader served ice cream.

The church attendance has been off for some time on account of so much sickness among the congregation. Our pastor was also absent Sunday, April 22, on account of sickness; hope he will soon be able to be back.

Mrs. Erma Cockman and Mr. I. N. Hutchins, both members of the church, were united in marriage on March 17 by Rev. J. H. Moton. They are now at home on Fisher street.

REPORTER.

First Church, Concord.—We held our Centennial service last Sunday and the service was well attended. Rev. R. L. Hethcock, of Creswell charge, was with us and took part in the service. Brother Hethcock was called to Concord by the illness of his wife's mother. We are always glad to have him among us. He went out from this church into the ministry and the church appreciates him very much. Our Centennial Gratitude Gift has been pledged and will be paid within the next few days.

Our church is just now in the midst of a co-operative evangelistic campaign put on by the churches of the city which is being led by Rev. Gypsy Smith, Jr. The meeting is attracting wide attention and the large tent is crowded each evening. A great meeting is under way.

We are hearing much talk about our Young People's Centennial Convention which is to be held in Baltimore. We hope to run a bus from Concord to the convention. We have already half enough signed up to make the trip possible. We still have places for about ten persons. Anyone desiring to join us can do so by letting us know by next Sunday. The bus will leave Concord early Friday morning, May 11th, and go through High Point, Greensboro, thence through Danville and Richmond, reaching Baltimore Friday evening in time for the evening session of the convention; will stay through the closing session on Monday and will leave Baltimore Tuesday morning and make a sight-seeing tour in and about Washington and will leave Washington Wednesday and return home that night. Anyone desiring to join us can do so by calling or writing me and sending $5 as a registration fee which will secure your seat in the bus and the remaining $10 can be paid aboard the bus. The round trip fare will be only $15.00. We believe this to be the opportunity of a life-time. Don't miss it. Plan to join and let us hear from you at once.

G. H. HENDRY.

High Point.—On Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock service Dr. S. K. Spahr delivered the fourth sermon in the series on the Resurrection, basing his remarks on Colossians 3:1-3, "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Set your affection on things above, not on things on the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God." When one realizes the resurrection, a new light has come to you, and you are on a different plane. First of all, you must put away lying, blasphemy, bitterness, hate, but must put on the new man, and practice kindness, compassion, forgiveness; a man who has come into this beautiful life, has come into a new relation to his family, and the tragedy of divorce would be eliminated if this higher rule of life prevailed. He has come into a new relation to his country and to his church, to his calling or profession, his sympathies are enlarged, and he longs for the redemption of the world. God grant that we may today realize the resurrection of Christ and learn to love beautiful things, gaining a pure and holy affection for things above.

After the sermon, Miss Annie L. Forrest, returned missionary to Japan, brought a brief message. At the evening service Rev. Paul S. Konnett delivered the sermon.

The Junior Mission Circle, under the leadership of Mrs. R. M. Andrews, held its monthly meeting at the church Monday afternoon.

At the Christian Endeavor meeting Monday evening Lewis E. Teague, judge of the Municipal court, was the speaker, and discussed the topic, "Why and How Should Christians Support the Eighteenth Amendment," which is a most vital subject for young people as well as adults.

Prof. P. E. Lindley is conducting a teacher-training class each Wednesday evening in connection with the regular prayer meeting, and is making the lessons very interesting and helpful.

The following members attended the Branch meeting of the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies at Greensboro last week: Mesdames C. L. Whitaker, S. S. Coe, J. A. Gray, H. U. Oakes, J. B. Spencer, B. T. Moore, R. T. Pickens, Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Ballard, W. P. Pickett, J. H. Walker, Jr., Minnie P. Harrell, S. D. Shelton, G. T. Penny, and H. A. Moffitt.

Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Harris, of Henderson, were the guests of Dr. and Mrs. R. M. Andrews over Sunday.

Mr. Lester B. Teague has returned from a business trip to New York.

Mr. Clifton L. Whitaker, of Gastonia, and Mrs. Stanley Owen, of Lexington, were week-end guests of Mrs. C. L. Whitaker.

Holt and Garland McPherson, students at the University of North Carolina, spent Sunday with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. D. McPherson.

Spurgeon Ferguson, young son of J. H. Ferguson, is visiting home folks after a cruise of several months in Chinese waters. He belongs to the United States navy.

Circle No. 4 of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society has been changed into an anxiliary with Miss Mary Young, president, and Miss Paulette Rogers, secretary, and will hold its first meeting for new year Tuesday evening, when the organization will be perfected.

North Davidson Charge.—We had a good service at Mt. Pleasant Sunday at 11 o'clock; had the largest congregation we have had for some time. We have some sickness in the community, but all seem to be improving. We hope they will all soon be well.

Had service at Bethesda at 3 o'clock. It was raining, but in spite of the rain we had a good service.

Bethesda has overpaid her quota for the C. G. G.; they paid over to me $97.25 Sunday, and are expecting to pay some more. Friendship has also paid over its quota; they paid over $54.00. We thank these good people for the interest shown in raising the C. G. G. and for the committees who have worked so faithfully.

Our new church at Greer's Chapel is coming along fine. We are going to have all-day service next Sunday; preaching at 11 o'clock, dinner on the grounds, and service in the afternoon; special singing; we are going to have a good day. Come, and be with us. Our folks there are working hard to get the church finished, and they will have it ready, if they don't get any corn or cotton planted.

Only a few more weeks until our General Conference will meet in Baltimore. I hope every charge can report its quota paid; let's work hard to make it so, for it would never do for Miss North Carolina to go to the General Conference empty-handed, or not enough to lay $12,000 upon the altar of her church in gratitude to Him who through one hundred years has led us successfully to victory.

Yours for service,
R. S. TROXLER.

ONE OF OUR PIONEERS

MRS. MARGARET S. RAY

Aged over 92; a charter member of the Methodist Protestant Church in Western North Carolina, now living in Troy, Oregon. We believe she is a sister of Rev. C. A. Pickens, now deceased.

Spencer.—The congregation at Sunday school was small Sunday, but we hope when our folks get well and weather gets good the attendance will be larger. We were glad to have Rev. C. H. Hill and wife with us at 11 o'clock Sunday. He preached a splendid and helpful sermon; hope they can come again soon.

We want to thank, and we highly appreciate the gift of $15.50 from Calvary church, South Greensboro, on our church building fund.

We are looking forward to Wednesday. Our president, Rev. S. W. Taylor, will be with us at 7:30 o'clock in regard to the church proposition. Pray for us that we may have a building of our own in the near future.

REPORTER.

Vaughan, Little Circuit.—We had our regular preaching services Sunday. In the morning we observed the Lord's Supper. In the evening service Pastor Crutchfield brought us a very helpful message.

Our mid-week prayer meeting is still being held.

Delegates were appointed to attend the rally at Whitakers Chapel church Sunday.

The subject of the Centennial Gratitude Gift is still being talked, but it seems as if our amount is going to be small.

REPORTER.

Democrat Charge.—The .work .has .been greatly hindered, as the winter weather has been extremely cold and roads bad, congregations small. But we are looking for the spring weather to bring a brighter day.

The second quarterly conference was held at Terry Fork church. Three churches were represented; all reports very good except the finances. J. W. Wallen and J. W. McClurd were nominated delegate to Annual Conference. Either will make a good delegate.

Sunday school began at Pleasant Gap church the first Sunday in March with good interest. Sunday school will begin at Democrat church soon. Mid-week prayer meeting will begin May 1 at three of the churches.

Brother David Carter already has about half of the money for repairing the parsonage. We hope to get that done within the next three months.

The Gratitude service was held at Democrat church the third Sunday in April with a very large congregation. We were very glad to have with us the choir from Fletcher; they sang several of the old hymns that our fathers used to sing. The spirit of brotherly love prevailed all through the service.. I believe one of the great needs of our churches is to get back to some of the old forms of worship.

There will be a Gratitude service at Pensacola church the fourth Sunday in April in memory of our forefathers and the many blessings that God has bestowed upon the churches for this hundred years. Brethren, let's begin the new century with stronger hope and courage. Let us remember that the same God that spoke to Joshua is with us. He will roll the waters of the Jordan river back for us as He did for the children of Israel.

Pray for us, brethren. H. W. BELL.

West End, Greensboro.—The readers of the Herald must not conclude that West End has ceased to be active because the pastor does not report anything through the Herald. I have a good local reporter who reports all that is of interest to the public.

This has been a busy year with us and many things have been done that are gratifying to us, though they may not be of interest to the readers of the paper. Our educational building that was begun last November is about complete and when it is we will be able to accommodate our large and growing Sunday school.

We began our revival meeting March 25th and closed April 4th. Brother H. F. Surratt came Monday and did all the preaching to the edification of Christians, the reclaiming of backsliders, and the conviction and conversion of sinners. The church was greatly blessed by the strong gospel sermons Brother Surratt brought to us.

J. D. WILLIAMS.

Orange Charge.—The second quarterly conference met at Hebron church Saturday, April 21st. Usual business was transacted. W. A. Davies, of Union Grove church, and Julian G. Jobe, of Hebron church, were nominated as candidates for delegate to the next Annual Conference.

Work is progressing very nicely now on the Efland church. B. M. WILLIAMS.

To the Officials of Greensville Circuit.—The second quarterly conference will convene at Matthews Chapel on Saturday, April 28th. This is Saturday before the fifth Sunday in April. Preaching at 11 o'clock by Rev. S. W. Taylor, president of our conference. Everybody invited to hear him. After the lunch hour the business of the quarterly conference will be transacted, presided over by our president. Stewards and all officials, be prepared to render good reports.

We are practicing our Centennial program. We will present the program at Matthews Chapel the third Sunday in April at 11 o'clock; Wesleys in afternoon at 3 o'clock; will give it at Hobbs Chapel on the fourth Sunday at 11 o'clock; Ebenezer in the afternoon at 3 o'clock. On the fifth Sunday at 11 o'clock the program will be given at Philadelphia. Following the lunch hour the congregation will re-assemble at 1:30 o'clock to hear Rev. S. W. Taylor. On this day a union service of the five churches will be held. Let all come and bring their lunches with them. Come praying; let's make this a great day for the Methodist Protestant church in this community. H. L. POWELL.

Asheville.—Sunday was a good day for us. There was unusual interest in addition to the fine messages from Brothers Casto and Van Meter. In the evening service the chancel was filled with those who wish to be fitted for soul-winning. Two of these were ministers. There is an earnest desire on the part of many for personal salvation and for the saving of others.

Miss Annie L. Forrest will speak in our church here next Sunday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Boling have our congratulations and good wishes for the marriage of their only son, Paul, to Miss Anne Josephine Brown Sunday morning. Both are delightful young people. They will reside with Mr. Boling's father and mother on their return from their honeymoon.

Corinth Church, Littleton Circuit.—For several weeks there has been something said in the Herald concerning the history of some of the older churches, that they may more fully celebrate their 100th anniversary this year. We think that Corinth church can go down in history as one of the oldest churches in North Carolina. So I have busied myself to look up some of its history.

About the year of 1829 or 1830 a church was organized by Caswell Drake and Ned Dromgoole, two preachers in the M. E. Church who were expelled probably for inveighing against the discipline. Together with Richard Jones, an influential man of considerable means who was the father of Miss Maria and Rebecca Jones, who bore the burden of building the second church, with the help of others.

By the two preachers already mentioned, a house for the worship of God was built for those who like themselves with their families would not stay in a church from which their companions had been driven. The first house built, was a frame house, not ceiled or plastered, with wooden shutters for the windows and box pulpit for the preacher. The house was located on the road between Littleton and Gretna Green, known in those days as the old stage road. This house was used for worship for about 25 years. Then a new house was built about 300 yards from the old site, farther back from the road. A modern and up-to-date church was built, with large windows with blinds, plastered, good floors and pews. The church was built with its side to the road, and a door in each side. This church was used about 53 years. Then, under the pastorate of Rev. R. C. Stubbins and S. W. Taylor, a third church was built, located in front of the old one, nearer the road, in 1910, which was more modern than either of the others.

This church has never had a great number of members, but has managed to keep her membership normal. This church is being carried on year after year by the great-great-grandchildren of the ones who organized the church.

Therefore, the Methodist Protestant churches of North Carolina can readily see that Corinth church is one among the oldest churches, and deserves credit for her long life.

M. J. MORRIS.

State Street.—Sunday was a good day for us, although it was a rainy day. There was a large increase in Sunday school over the Sunday before. At 11 o'clock the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered, Bro. C. B. Way, assisting Brother Bethea.

There will be no preaching next Sunday. Our pastor goes to Aurelean Springs to preach the commencement sermon for the high school there.

Mrs. F. J. Cox and Mrs. J. F. Burkhart attended the Branch Meeting of the Woman's Foreign and Home Missionary Societies in Greensboro last week.

The Sunshine Circle of State Street church won the attendance banner. The Sunshine Circle is a very live band under the guidance of a very live leader, Mrs. Curtis Koonts.

REPORTER.

Kannapolis.—The many friends of Mrs. E. G. Cowan, wife of Rev. E. G. Cowan, will regret to learn that she is in a very serious condition at their home in North Kannapolis. Some time ago, Mrs. Cowan suffered a complete nervous breakdown, and has not rallied to the treatment of the physicians as we had hoped she would, and for the past ten days she has been in a very critical condition. We trust and pray that she may soon be restored to health again, as we miss her so much in the Sunday school, the church, and our Ladies' Aid Society.

AN APPRECIATION

My Dear Brethren and Friends:

Many letters bearing expressions of sympathy have been received since the death and burial of my father. In my own behalf, and in behalf of the entire family, you will please permit me in this way to express our very great appreciation for the thoughtfulness and kindness of our friends in thus thinking of us, and for their kind expressions of sympathy.

Father was a bit over 86 years old. He had fought many battles. Sometimes he lost out, but in most cases he was victor. He was a member of the Methodist Protestant Church for about 76 years, and had read the Methodist Protestant regularly for at least 60 years. He also subscribed for "Our Church Record" when it first began to be published, and was taking The Methodist Protestant Herald at his death.

God was good to us in sparing him to us for so long a time.

For the family,

A. G. DIXON.

ALAMANCE CHARGE RALLY

Following is the program to be given at Bethel church, Alamance charge, for the Centennial Gratitude Gift, April 29, 1928:

10:30-11:10—Survey of the progress of the Methodist Protestant Church for the past one hundred years, Rev. W. M. Pike.

11:10-11:30—Survey of the progress of the Methodist Protestant Church for the past one hundred years in Alamance County, Wesley Whitehead.

11:30-12—What I owe my church, by Prof. J. A. Hornaday, of Elon College.

12:00-1:30—Recess for dinner.

1:30-2—The future of the Methodist Protestant Church as I see it, Dr. T. C. Amick, of Elon College.

2:00-2:30—Missions, Mrs. A. G. Dixon, of Liberty, N. C.

Adjournment.

This will be a day of good speaking and good music. All are cordially invited and urged to come. J. A. BURGESS.

NOTICES

Every once in a while Brother Stubbins ups and does or says something that makes me sit down and think awhile before I can understand his motives. Now, in regard to his announcement of the Eighth District Rally the fifth Sunday in May. I wonder why he gave us a whole year to get there in, as there don't happen to be a fifth Sunday in May this year.

Brother Stubbins is a big-hearted and sympathetic soul, and I like his way of doing things. It almost makes me mad to read the announcement of something good that is all over with, and that I could have attended had I been given notice beforehand. Brother Stubbins knows there are some people who dearly like to go to rallies, etc., who can neither ride in a car, fly nor walk, and I hereby give him my sincere thanks for letting all of us who still have to ride behind the out-of-date little mule know of that rally in good time to get there.

I believe in being on time and I don't like to be hurried about it.

MRS. J. J. CRANFORD.

The report this week is highly gratifying. Five charges remit on the A. C. B.; six on college assessment; and 21 on the G. C. B. In the language of Paul to the church at Corinth, "I praise you, brethren," and may your good works be an inspiration to the 19 charges that have as yet made no payments to either annual or general conference causes.

The spring weather is with us now, and under the touch of God, all nature is bursting into glad and abounding life. Surely the church, too, will live anew, and thus join nature in obeying and praising God.

Fraternally,

S. W. TAYLOR.

Rev. J. D. Morris, $3.00; Rev. R. C. Stubbins, $1.50; Rev. C. L. Spencer, $1.00; Rev. H. F. Fogleman, $4.50; Rev. N. G. Bethea, $3.00; Rev. M. C. Henderson, $7.25; Rev. R. S. Troxler, $1.50; Mrs. H. W. Wade, $1.50.

Brother Henderson sends seven subscriptions this week and writes that he and others have made an earnest effort. We thank him and them for the success achieved in securing subscriptions and the others previously received. Brother Henderson increased the number on Denton charge and he is increasing the number on his presnt charge.

OFFICIAL NOTICE

The officials of Littleton charge will take notice that because of the lack of a quorum of the officials the second quarterly conference was not held as announced, but is called a second time and will be held Saturday afternoon, April 28, in the M. P. church in Littleton at 2:30 o'clock. Brethren, it is important that you be present. The church law, page 116 of the Journal for 1927, says: "The second quarterly conference of each pastoral charge shall nominate double the number of laymen to which the charge, circuit or station is entitled as delegates to the Annual Conference." Therefore it is important that we transact that important item of business, and there are other very important matters to claim our attention. I urge you to be presen. The work of the church is our most sacred privilege. Please be present.

Rev. M. P. Chambliss, pastor of Vance Circuit, will be present and preside.

M. IVEY CRUTCHFIELD, Pastor,

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE NORTH CAROLINA BRANCH, W. H. M. S.

Just home from Branch Meeting. My! Wasn't it great? Over 200 delegates and representatives from auxiliaries and churches. There were present also Dr. R .M. Andrews, president of the High Point College; Dr. J. F. McCulloch, editor of the M. P. Herald; Rev. S. W. Taylor, president of the N. C. Conference; Rev. Homer Casto, superintendent of Bethel Home, an d19 other ministers of the North Carolina Conference. Every one present was enthusiastic for missions. Miss Annie L. Forrest was with us and was a great help in inspiring and suggesting plans and ways to interest others. For two and a half days and two nights the beautiful auditorium of Grace church, Greensboro, has been a verifable bee-hive of activity.

Beginning Tuesday, April 17th, at 2 p. m., the joint sessions of our Branches, Home and Foreign, were held. These are always helpful and interesting. Following this was a business session of the Young People's Departments of the missionary work. Miss Mary Young, secretary of the foreign, and Mrs. T. L. Spease, of the home, gave most excellent reports showing marked growth during the past year. Mrs. H. W. Maier presented a very helpful explanation of the efficiency chart for young people's work.

At night the young people's department of the work gave a most excellent program.

Wednesday the foreign branch held its meeting. The reports showed good work done throughout the year. Someone else will tell of these meetings. I am to tell you of the home branch which opened on Thursday with our loved and efficient president, Mrs. W. C. Hammer, presiding. The devotional exercises were led by Dr. S. K. Spahr, who in his own inimitable way, stressed the privilege, blessing and opportunity that was Mary's that early morning after the Sabbath when she went to do service for a dead Christ and found a risen Saviour. Women said the service led them to wish earnestly to rededicate themselves to the service of our Lord.

The minutes of the Executive Committee sessions during the year were read and showed that much good service had been rendered during the year.

The reports of the officers and secretaries were just great. "More" might be called the key word to the meeting. There were more of the officrs and secretaries present,—only two bing absent,—more and better reports sent in, more auxiliaries represented, more full delegations, more people really interested and ready to take part in the discussions than any other branch meeting of our branch. Five new societies were reported and of the 63 organizations only five failed to report or send a delegate.

Superintendent Allman of the Children's Home gave a splendid report of the Home, the children there, and the work being done. After a fine presentation of the work being done, Mr. Allman said that there was great need of more dormitory room, also of a school building and he listed a number of needs in furnishings and supplies for the dormitories.

Rev. Homer Casto, superintendent of the Bethel Home, was present and told of this home and the dear people there. The building for women has been opened and is now occupied. Mr. Casto spoke with great earnestness and feeling of the splendid young men who come there, some of whom recover and others who are benefited in their last days. This home is a great refuge and blessing to those afflicted with tuberculosis. Now that the woman's building is being occupied it is a greater blessing than ever. The writer has visited this home many times and too much cannot be said in praise and commendation of it and the great work being carried on there.

The general work of the Woman's Home Missionary Society was presented, stressing the needs and the opportunities and the success of our work at Pine Ridge and in the Ohio River Valley. We were urged to earnest prayer and consecrated effort for these two great fields of service. Th members present who visited Pine Ridge last year during the Board Meeting held there gave their impressions of the work. Mrs. D. S. Coltrane told in a very happy way how the neatness of grounds, buildings and pupils, the orderliness and the congeniality of the teachers and pupils, the readiness of all to serve anywhere, any time, and the evidence of the school spirit present impressed her. Mrs. C. W. Bates spoke of being impressed with the religious life of the place and Mrs. W. C. Hammer of the hardships that sometimes came along to be borne by all—teachers, pupils and the parents of the school community; of the distance some of the parents came to be present at and witness the graduation or promotion of their children, how it was impossible to take automobiles over the roads and the best means of travel was on horse-back.

And the dinner served by the Grace ladies, um! um! If there are better cooks anywhere we do not know where they are.

Rev. N. Brittain, pastor of St. Paul M. P. church, led the devotional service for the afternoon meeting. After the reports of committees which were good beyond any other year, the officers were elected for the coming year. All the old officers were re-elected. The following were elected delegates to the Annual Board Meeting to be held in Washington, D. C., May 12, 14, 15: Mrs. T. L. Speas, Mrs. J. M. Millikan; alternates, Mrs. C. W. Bates, Mrs. D. S. Coltrane, Mrs. R. M. Andrews, and Mrs. J. E. Pritchard. By virtue of office, Mrs. W. C. Hammer and Mrs. C. H. Nicholson are delegates to the Board Meeting.

So ended one of the very best yet branch meetings. You might search far to find two women more suitable for this great work than our two presidents, Mrs. W. C. Hammer of the Home Branch and Mrs. George R. Brown, of the Foreign Branch. Such splendid co-operation and complementing each other in the work, helping out and filling in; uniting offices and committees where the work is the same and making of two branch meetings one beautiful rounded out meeting so that while each remains distinct one finds no break in the interest whether the delegates have come to represent one or both of the branches, and there is no thinning of the attendance until the last benediction is pronounced.

DISTRICT RALLY

There will be a special Centennial District Rally of the first district next Sunday at the Whitakers Chapel church on the Enfield charge. It is the hope that there will be a good attendance from all the charges in this District. All pastors, with the exception of Brother Powell, have signified their intention of being present. Brother Powell happens to have a Rally of his own this day. We are expecting a good time. Be sure you plan to be with us. Dinner will be served on the grounds. Those bringing their lunches are asked to put their lunch with the rest. There will be provision on the grounds for this.

Do not forget that Whitaker's Chapel neighborhood is the oldest Methodist Protestant neighborhood in North Carolina. Here the church in North Carolina had its beginning. This spot is holy ground for Methodist Protestants in North Carolina. If you have never been to see the place, it is worth the trip. Loyalty to Christ through being loyal to our denomination should be our slogan.

An interesting program has been prepared, but its success will depend largely upon whether you come or not. When you read this, make it personal, fill your tank with gasoline and be sure you start in time to be on the spot at 10 o'clock.

The program for the day will be as follows:

10:00—Song service; prayer; song.

10:15—Devotional exercises conducted by Rev. J. B. O'Briant; special music.

10:30—A Brief History of Whitaker's Chapel Church, Mrs. Stanley Whitaker; song.

11:00—Address: "The Early Beginnings of the Methodist Protestant Church," Rev. A. D. Shelton.

11:30—Address: "The Methodist Protestant Church During the Civil War," Rev. C. L. Spencer; song; prayer.

12:00—Intermission.

1:45—Song service.

2:00—Address: "A Brief Survey of Methodist Protestant Institutions," Rev. M. I. Crutchfield.

2:20—Address: "The Centennial," Rev. R. L. Hethcock; special music.

2:40—Address: "The Present Status of Our Foreign Missionary Enterprises," Rev. J. Clyde Auman.

3:00—Address: "The Call for Leadership and How Our Church Is Answering the Call," Prof. Charlie Davis; song.

3:20—Benediction.

J. CLYDE AUMAN, Chairman.

—Bros. C. G. and J. F. Hunter, of West Forsythe, were among the laymen in attendance at the Branch Meeting in Greensboro last week.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Beam

John Cephus Beam departed this life April 10, 1928, aged 65 years, 6 months and 4 days.

He connected himself with the Lutheran church early in life and remained a member of that church until after marriage. Several years after his marriage he connected himself with the Methodist Protestant church at Bess Chapel and was an active member and worker until his death.

On August 19, 1886, he was married to Dora E. Baxter. To this union were born seven children, two of whom have preceded him to the great beyond. His wife, four boys, Connie, of Union, S. C., Earl and Willie, of North Brook, Irvin, of Plymouth, N. C., and one daughter, Miss Velma, who is teaching at Freemont. He also leaves three brothers, Charlie, Jacob, Sidney, and one sister, Mrs. L. H. J. Houser, all of Cherryville, three brothers and one sister having preceded him to the grave.

He was active in community and county affairs, having served several terms as county commissioner from North Brook township, and was for a number of years a justice of the peace, and was a continuous member of the board of stewards of Bess Chapel church until two years prior to his death.

He was a kind father, loving husband, and a constant worker in the Sunday school. The community has suffered a great loss in his passing.

He has fought a good fight; he has finished his course; he has kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give him.

The funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. M. C. Henderson, assisted by Rev. J. J. Beach, of Cherryville, and Rev. J. E. B. Houser, of Spruce Pine, after which his remains were laid to rest in the nearby cemetery.

Newby

Henry B. Newby, son of William Newby and Susan Lanier Newby, was born in Randolph County June 21, 1839, and died April 6, 1928. He was therefore 88 years, 9 months and 15 days old at the time of his death. He spent the early part of his life in the community of his birth, but later moved to Thomasville, in which community he spent the greater part of his life.

On January 28, 1866, he was married to Delphina Kennedy, which union was honored with 12 children, all of whom still live except one child who died in early life. The surviving children are: B. H., J. C., and Mrs. J. E. Cecil, who live in High Point, Mrs. Robert Kennedy and E. G. Newby who live in Rushville, Ind., Mrs. W. H. Willey, of Pittsburgh, Pa., Mrs. B. E. Kennedy and W. H. Newby who live in this community, Robert Thomas, Danville, Va., Mrs. R. N. Peck, Traverse City, Mich, and Carl Newby, who is in Alaska. Fred, the youngest child, was born in 1888 and lived about four years. Besides these there are 45 grandchildren and 40 great-grandchildren; also four brothers and two sisters.

Sometime in the early part of his life he joined the M. E. church at Thomasville, After leaving Thomasville and coming to this community he affiliated with this church. Since my pastorate here, he has been a regular attendant and seemed interested in the church and religious mattrs.

Brother Newby lived a long and honorable life and we join the children and relatives as they mourn for their departed loved one. The writer conducted the funeral on Easter Sunday at 11 a. m. at the Grove in the presence of an unusually large congregation, after which his body was placed in the family burying plat in the church cemetery.

G. L. REYNOLDS.

MARRIED

Ross-Coltrane

In the parlor of the Central Hotel at Asheboro on Thursday afternoon, April 19, the writer united in marriage Miss Cornelia Coltrane and Mr. L. F. Ross. Only a few intimate friends of these young people witnessed the ceremony.

Mrs. Ross is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Coltrane of the northern part of Randolph County and is a talented young woman. For some years she has made her home in Asheboro where she has been the assistant to the Register of Deeds of Randolph County. She is a teacher in the Sunday school of the Methodist Portestant church and a member of the various organizations of the church.

Mr. Ross is a son of Mr. R. R. Ross and the late Mrs. Ellen Ross and has lived in Asheboro all his life. He is identified in a large way with the religious, educational and business interests of Asheboro and Randolph County.

After a brief southern trip the happy couple will be at home to their friends here in Asheboro. A host of friends wish them much happiness in their new relationship.

An Unsafe Conclusion

Methodist Episcopal bishops do not often discuss the merits of the episcopacy, but occasionally one of them breaks the silence. The widespread dissatisfaction with the government of the M. E. Church has moved Bishop Blake to say something in defense and recommendation of the episcopacy. He is quoted as saying the following:

"The remarkable development of the Baptist, Congregational, and Presbyterian churches is frequently pointed to as an evidence that the non-episcopal churches have succeeded quite as well as those that have had episcopal leadership. The conclusion has been drawn that the episcopacy has been a minor influence in the life of Methodism. But before pressing this conclusion too far, it should be remembered that religious movements frequently differ in type and spirit. It is difficult, therefore, to make comparisons or draw conclusions from differences. It is far safer to make comparisons between groups that have the same general traditions and characteristics. If we adopt this principle and make our comparisons between the several Methodist groups, episcopal and non-episcopal, we shall find that the former have achieved results so far surpassing the latter that it is difficult to make a comparison between them. We do not offer this as conclusive, but as suggestive of the part played by the episcopacy in the growth and development of American Methodism."

We note that he does not "offer this as conclusive." Doubt as to the soundness of his own argument probably moved him to make that statement. Instead of comparing his own church with non-episcopal Methodist churches, he might have compared his church with the Protestant Episcopal Church, which is under an episcopacy and which is relatively a small church in this country. If the episcopacy has made the Methodist church grow great, why has it not made the Episcopalian church grow great? But granting that episcopacy has made the Methodist church great, does that justify episcopacy? Does the end justify the means? John D. Rockefeller's business methods made him grow rich, but does that justify his business methods?

Thirty-five years ago, we asked an educator of national reputation as a lecturer how much of the success of the Methodist Episcopal Church he attributed to the episcopacy. He replied: "None at all. The popularity of the Methodist church is due to the cordial spirit of the Methodist people."

The episcopacy has its uses as has the miltary form of government. But no people like to live under a military form of government in time of peace. And few churches will long be content under an episcopal form of government.

—Some warm political speeches are being heard in the land this year. Some of the proposals of some of the politicians are enough to rouse deep resentment. It is a pretty safe rule to follow, to find out what the selfish politicians are in favor of, and then oppose it. Let honest men who have no axes to grind determine who shall be our officials.

The Mysteries of the Future State

We can ask many questions about our future state of existence which nobody can answer and which the Bible throws but little light upon. But the same thing is true of our present state of existence. Who can tell us how the food we eat is changed into the living flesh of our bodies? Who can tell us how our minds receive impressions from our bodies? Who can tell us how we recall to mind the experiences of the past? Who can tell us what sleep is? If we understand not our present lives, why should we expect to understand our future lives? We need not be surprised that "a dark veil" hangs between that land and this.

But while we cannot conceive the mode of the future life, we are well assured that it is a fact. Jesus proved to the Sadducees that life is not extinguished in death. "God is not the God of the dead but of the living." Since He is the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob must be alive. Men live on while their bodies lie mouldering in the tomb. Death simply separates the two elements of man's twofold nature. The body, which came out of the earth, returns to the earth. The spirit, which came from God, returns to God. God's treatment of the spirits of men as they return to Him from the test of life on earth depends of course upon the way they have stood the test. If they come as loving children, we can believe that God will receive them most fondly and care for them most tenderly. If they come as rebellious spirits, unfilial, hostile, we can believe that God's treatment of them will be very different. But doubtless it will still be loving and wisely adapted to the case. In the moral sphere we can conceive of the diversity made necessary by the diametrically opposite characters of men. Those who have become sons of God through the power that Christ brings to them will find in God a loving Father. Those who have failed to avail themselves of the proffered divine help and have resisted all its influences will find condemnation and the penalty that divine justice provides. We may not draw so terrible a picture as did Jonathan Edwards in his description of "the sinner in the hands of an angry God," but in full view of the mercy of God we are forced to the conclusion that the penalty will be marked with terrible severity. Paul said, "Knowing the terror of the Lord, we persuade men."

We cannot know how we will look or how we will travel or how far we may go in exploring God's universe, but we can know that God will still be both just and loving and that men will be assigned according to the lives they have lived and the characters they have formed. We can change worlds, but we cannot change Gods. Our relation to God is our most important relation here and will ever be, no matter what world we are in. If we are right with God, nothing else greatly matters.

Though we cannot picture the features of our future lives, we can assure ourselves that God will provide most generously for the comfort and happiness of his obedient children. They

JESUS AND THE HUNGER FOR RIGHTEOUSNESS

Matt. 6:33

So intensely human was Jesus that He knew every hunger of the human heart. Like all the rest, this hunger is inborn in all men. It is as old as humanity. In all nations men have been seeking after something that would satisfy this hunger. In this text Jesus declares that it is the first thing in each life that should be satisfied. It should stand at the head of this list of the human hungers. "Rightness," the opposite of "wrongness." Many church members are wrong, not all are right. None of those away from Jesus are right. If only the membership of the church were full of "righteousness," how quickly they could move the entire world to God. What a tremendous responsibility, therefore, rests upon the active members of the church. No one has done his duty until he has done all he could in this matter. Just as soon as the church wakes up to the fact that each member is called to be a soul-winner, a worker together with God, there will come a great awakening. No person can do this work without being filled with "His righteousness." No one can help another who has never felt the touch of God upon his own life.

I think this is the most real of all the hungers. To be like God. To be filled with His righteousness and reflect His glory. Jesus here tells us that not only is this true, but if it be the chief aim of our life, all things else shall be added unto us. And here is a problem of addition of which no man has ever found the sum. He never paused to tell us just what He meant by "all things" but here it stands in His word and will never be taken out. If the soul is anxious to be filled with the Spirit of God, all will be well. He said in another place in "the Book," "Blessed are ye that do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." This is the promise of Jesus to satisfy this hunger of our hearts conditioned solely upon our being conscious of our hunger for it. If we come to Him as hungerers and thirsters we will be filled before we go away. Thousands of people bear testimony to this blessed truth. It is just as real today as when first spoken and just as powerful to transform the lives of all who will accept His invitation to prove its truth and worth.

Ways to satisfy this hunger. Most of us have a mistaken diagnosis to start with. Some of us have the idea that it comes from the outside, when really it is deeper than any of the hungers I have mentioned. Some go away to colleges and universities thinking that a study of the sciences will satisfy this longing. A sad fact is that so-called higher criticism has made wrecks of some, fools of others and infidels as well. No one will ever find in any book outside of the Bible a single thing that tends to satisfy this craving of the heart. Neither is it to be found alone in buildings anywhere.

Others join the church as if that were the proper thing to do, perhaps with the idea that it is a "good thing to git religion and jine the church so that you will go to heaven when you die." There is entirely too much of that sort of thing abroad in the land. We cannot afford to laugh at it or pass it by lightly. It is a stern fact that is unpleasant for us preachers to face. Certain it is that we have our share of the church's backwardness. We sometimes increase the membership without adding to the power of the church, which always means additional burden and harder work for both pastor and people. Two members with this hunger satisfied are worth more to any church than ninety and nine who do not care to try.

There are still others who enjoy social reform work, and they try to reform everything and anything with which they come in contact, until they succeed in making a veritable nuisance of themselves. We have perfected all sorts of organizations from the "'A. B. C." to the "X. Y. Z." to try to do the work which the Divine Master sent the church to the world to perform. Paul speaks of the "'variegated' ministrations," her manifold forms of service, yet there is but one end in view, namely to save men and women. Some folks I know seem to be lodge crazy, never thinking of the fact that no lodge on earth can ever do the work that Jesus sent the church in the world to do for Him. So, to start out with a mistaken diagnosis of the case, leads us into confusion and further away from the solution of the problem in hand.

The true way to satisfy this hunger is to take time to be at Jesus' feet and learn of Him. See how He did it. This hunger was just as real to Him as it is to any of us. He knew what it meant for folks and so He said, literally, "If you want to have this hunger satisfied, then seek it first. Everything else will come in its proper order and proportion if you will put this first. It is more important than anything esle you may be able to do for yourself. You will then be willing to "learn of me," and "take my yoke upon you" and find as you go along that the hunger is satisfied and the yoke the greatest pleasure you ever had.

Another way is to forsake your evil ways. Church members have them as well as those who are not in the church. There should be no compromise with evil in any form. Sin is still sin, and as hateful to God as it ever was. Here enters the question of amusements, God wants us to play, but to be careful what we play and where we go to play. Wherever the interest lies, the hand and the heart will be sure to go. This hunger, so real and so awful, can never be satisfied at the moving picture house, pool room, theatre, saloons or dance halls, either public or private. There is usually a sense of shame and sorrow that you have tried to satisfy this holy longing at places of this character. And often when you leave, you look around to see if any one saw you enter or leave.

You may satisfy this hunger by having a deeper reverence and love for the Bible. It is not out of date, neither has it lost any of its power. It is still the loving message of God to His children. It has a living, vital message for every living, vital theme that stirs the hearts of the people today just as it had for our fathers. We want to love it more, study it better, catch its meaning and feel the thrill of its mighty power. You can find this out in your church work; you will soon learn that the Master has a place for you. Here is where you will broaden your life, become filled with His spirit as you study His word and try to impart it to others.

Another way to satisfy this hunger is by attending the weekly prayer meeting. This duty is sadly neglected by any church of which I have any knowledge. I know it has been true with every church I have served. Often I have been made to feel that it was my fault. Perhaps I am not living as close to my Lord as I should, or something is wrong with me. It does not help the case any to say that nearly every other church has the same trouble, often trying to solve the problem with suppers and church fairs and teacher meetings and entertainments in order to bring out the people to the place of praise and prayer. It is a dreadful state for any church to come to. Pray, and pray again for a revival of attendance upon the church prayer meeting.

The final thought I want to give you as to how to satisfy this great hunger of our hearts is by cultivating the spirit of sacrifice. Crucifixion of self is always painful and people shrink from it even as Jesus did. What else can be the meaning of His heart-rending cry, "If it be possible, let this cup pass from Me." The cross had its terrors for Jesus and it has them for all who would follow Him.

As to the result of all this attempt to satisfy the hunger for righteousness, "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them," is Jesus' way of telling us that we shall find great happiness to our soul. There will be a new lease of life for you. "All things will become new." The great longing of the heart will be at rest and the soul find a 'peace that passeth understanding" with both men and God.

All this is not a dream, but the most blessed fact of human experience. Thousands of men and women can tell of the blessed time when this hunger was satisfied and the great question of life settled for both time and eternity. So, the only reasonable thing to do is to give yourself to the blessed loving service of Him who, knowing how hard people try to satisfy this hunger, said, "Seek first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you." May God help and bless you in effort for Jesus' sake.

THE CHURCH OF GOD

The church of God is a society of twice born men, women and children; born of the flesh, but also born of God's Spirit, made a new creature; changed inwardly and outwardly. "Except a man be born of the Spirit he can not see the kingdom of God." Christ loved the church and gave Himself for it that he might present it to Himself a glorious church not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing, but that it should be holy and without blemish. The beautiful church is the church adorned with Christ, the head. We are his body and "every one members, one of another." So beautiful, so pure, and holy should be every member of Christ's body, the church. Christ, the head of the church, is to the church what your head is to your body. When the head is cut off from the body, the body dies. When Christ, the head, is eliminated from the body, the church, the church dies. We sometimes hear people say, "The church is dead; the church has lost its power." What do they mean? Simply this: the church has severed itself, the body, from Christ, the head. The body of Christ, the church, can not lose power till it has lost Christ, its head, or ceased to be a channel through which the current of love and obedience flows.

The church, which is His body, must be characteristic of Christ, the head of the church. Only as Christ lives in His church can the church live and win souls to Him.

The first characteristic of the Christ seen in the body we wish to notice here is prayer. The church must know how to pray. Daniel was the type of man that knew how to pray. He knew how to get to God and how to talk to Him. God knows the language of human hearts. It may be uttered or unexpressed. The moving of a sacred flame, kindled by love in the breast. By this still electrified voice, he could move God to drop heaven around him and lock the jaws of lions so that he could sleep in a lion's den as securely and as happy as a lamb in a pasture that had never heard the voice of a raging wolf. Prayer is the key that unlocks the power house of heaven. Prayer is the church's leverage, while it stands upon the rock of faith and by prayer turns a sinful world to God.

Just one other characteristic of Christ must be seen in His church. The church must serve the community wherein it is situated. In a peculiar sense and in a peculiar way. It is not to be ministered unto but to minister. Christ says, "I am among you as one that serveth." "The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto but to minister." "As my Father hath sent me so send I you into the world."

The church which is the body of Christ is not to be ministered unto by human society but to minister unto human society, to cleanse and to purify and to keep it in the channels of decency and in the way that leads to God. It is to satisfy the spiritual wants of the community and to magnify and glorify Christ the head of the church. As only the body has hands and feet, the church must walk out and reach out and save the community from sin and its terrible consequences. The church must move by the power that is in Christ.

EVANGELISM

That there is a crying need for a deeper spiritual life in all our churches, no one will deny. When we remember that practically all the additions to our church rolls come from the Sunday school, that is children brought up in the church, that the evangelizing leaven of the church is not reaching or converting to Christianity those on the outside, we should look about us for the cause. The trouble is not with Christianity or with the gospel, but with the members of the churches.

Dr. W. R. Patterson, of the General Council of the Presbyterian church, says that over 32 per cent of the churches in three of the larger Protestant denominations in this country did not have a single convert during last year, that if this percentage maintains in all the Protestant denominations there were over 60,000 churches without a single convert during 1927. He gives several causes for this, one of which is "the failure of the younger generation to accept Christianity as the guiding force in their lives." Why do they not accept Christianity? Let us not deceive ourselves, but face the facts. Is it not due to the lack of the spirit of evangelism in the church, to the sinful practices of church people, and the indifference of church people toward the unsaved? I think this charge may be laid at the door of both laity and ministry. To the laity for becoming so materialistic, and to the ministry for their failure to preach the old-time religion in the old-time way. The world is starving for the preaching of the gospel in a way that stirs the souls of men, sermons that come from the heart of God, through the heart of the preacher, to the heart of the hearer. I think we should stop arguing about the virgin birth of Jesus, and talk more about the saving power of Jesus, less about when and how man was created, and more about the Creator and His love for a lost world, and as another has expressed it, less about the age of the rocks and more about the Rock of Ages.

Let us all as loyal Methodist Protestants celebrate our one hundredth anniversary, not with our gifts of money alone, but in giving ourselves in a deeper consecration to our Lord Christ, the Great Head of the church.

D. A. Neese.

Evangelism is one of the great needs of the church today; we have put on our membership drives, and emphasized money until we as ministers are measured by a dollar mark, rather than the number of souls we get saved during the year.

The quicker we can realize the biggest business in the world is getting souls saved, the more hurriedly we will go to the task. Oh! if we could separate circumstance from facts, and non-essential from the essential, and reduce everything to its essence, we would see Jesus only; with a great passion for souls, and if we have not the spirit of the Master we are none of His.

Three things essential to become a successful soul-winner: (1) Keeping unspotted from the world. All great sermons are not preached from behind the sacred desk; but they are preached from the sacred lives lived for God.

No person has ever preached more powerfully than he lived. Paul with all of his great gifts of speech never came up to his life. The masses do not read the Bible, but they read our lives.

(2) We must be men of prayer. No great revival has ever come without some one or ones feeling the need of a revival, and the need drove them to their knees, and God rewarded them openly. Esau was never conquered until Jacob went to God in prayer; we may theorize but we will never put the devil to flight until we go to God in prayer. The greatest compliment ever paid to prayer was when "Bloody" Mary said, "I fear the prayers of John Knox more than all the swords of Europe." Prayer will win when everything else fails.

(3) When we have kept ourselves unspotted from the world, and have prayed much, the natural thing will follow: a passion for lost souls. The kind that Dr. S. H. Hadley had when the great midnight parade for God in California had ended, and they were gathered in an Opera House. Dr. Hadley arose to speak. A young man who had been standing by the platform (for every seat was taken) took the doctor's chair. He made a great appeal with tears rolling down his cheek; so great was his passion for souls he would sob frequently. He closed his address by asking the audience to pray with him for a wandering boy. "I met his mother out west and promised her to pray for him to return." After the doctor had finished his prayer the young man who had occupied the speaker's chair arose and embraced the doctor and said, "I am the boy; send mother word her boy will soon be at home."

When we preach let's expect some one to come home to our Father.

Yours for a good revival,

J. M. Morgan.

The Mysteries of the Future State

will ever be among the blessed ones. As to the disobedient, one likes to cherish the hope that age-long punishment may so work upon them that they will change their attitude to God. The scripture gives little ground for even this glimmering hope. But who could reconcile himself to the prospect of fifty years in the penitentiary as a preparation for life? The only wise life is the life that sincerely honors God. With the favor of God one can face the mysterious future with hope and confidence.

Granville Charge

April 15. On this date we were with this charge in the interest of the G. G., having appointments at all of the churches. We were able, however, to hold services at but two of the points—Rehobeth and Union Chapel. Owing to an all-day rain and bad roads, we found no one at Carmel on our arrival there Sunday night. The day was "cold, and dark, and dreary," about the worst of the year, they said. Of course attendance was not large at Rehobeth and Union. But we enjoyed being with these people, as we always do. The response to the G. G. was not large, as would be expected on a day like this. We had assurances that more would be forthcoming, and we shall look for this old and honored charge to rate up at the top when the counts are all in. When we found we could have no service at Carmel, we drove over to Henderson and heard a good sermon by Bro. Hunter. Pastor Fogleman is busy with his work, and we expect continued progress for this charge under his leadership.

Davidson

April 21-22. These two days were given to this charge. This work is located in the southern part of the county where we grew to manhood, though it was never our privilege to be in this section before this visit. We found good homes, farms, roads, and churches. The natural scenery, in places, was very pleasing. The churches on this charge are all located on or near a good road—a decided advantage to a rural church. And every church on the charge is indicated by a prominent marker. Methodist Protestantism is strong in southern Davidson, and you can't travel through that section without finding this out. On Saturday we preached and held the second quarterly conference at Lineberry church (named in honor of Rev. A. W. Lineberry, D.D.). The conference was attended well, and a good spirit prevailed. Annual conference delegates were nominated, and various other matters of importance dealt with by the conference. The budgets were apportioned to the various churches, and it is our hope that more may be raised for these purposes this year. Three dollars and thirty cents less per member than was raised last year will practically pay all claims of the charge this year. We would like to see Davidson on the honor roll. Alphabetically it stands at the top, and so it should otherwise. We visited all the churches on the charge except Liberty, preaching Saturday night at Alleghany, Sunday morning at Pine Hill, and Pleasant Grove at night. The appointment at Chapel Hill for two o'clock Sunday was rained out, though we were there at three for a funeral. The outstanding service of the day was at Pine Hill. Here the old church has been replaced by a new one, and the dedicatory church was held Sunday. This church, costing about $1,800, is a credit to the charge, and we heartily congratulate the earnest and loyal band there on this achievement. We enjoyed visiting this charge, and becoming acquainted, at first hand, of something of our strength and prospects here. Bro. Ridge is popular with his people, and is doing good work. We bespeak for Davidson charge a year of progress.

Spencer

On Wednesday night, April 25, we were at Spencer in conference with our people and their pastor regarding their contemplated new church. We had an interesting meeting with them, and found them anxious to go ahead with the erection of a building on their well-located lot. They are hindered, however, because of limited means, and we were pained to have to tell them that the Board of Church Extension was unable to give them any assistance at this time. They, of course, were disappointed, but accepted the situation without complaint, and with an undaunted courage to go right on with their work, hoping and praying that some way may be found by which they can erect their building. We were delighted with this spirit, and it will be our pleasure to continue to co-operate with them in every possible way for the largest measure of success in their work.

Greensville

April 28-29 found us on this charge. The five churches making up this charge are all, we believe, in Brunswick County, Va. Philadelphia is one of the oldest churches in the denomination, having its origin, we were told, in what was then a nearby M. E. church, in a controversy over mutual rights. Here we spent the beautiful Sabbath day in joyful worship and helpful fellowship. A well prepared Centennial program was effectively rendered in the morning, and in the afternoon we preached to a full house of attentive hearers. At night we were at Matthew's Chapel, and here again we were greeted by an encouraging congregation. At each church the G. G. was presented, and both churches subscribed their allotments. The amount raised for this purpose during the day was $90.00. The charge now is short only $18 of the total allotment of $150. We are confident this balance will be raised. On Saturday we preached at Mat. Chapel at 11 a. m., and held the second quarterly conference in the afternoon. The reports showed finances considerably behind. This charge is in an agricultural section, and depends largely on fall crops for surplus cash. Long years of practice, too, probably has something to do with the present financial system. We are sure that the pastor's salary will be paid in full, and we are hoping for considerable increase in budget receipts. Some repairs were ordered to be made on the parsonage, and other regular conference business transacted. The programs and institutions of the church were stressed and full co-operation urged. Bro. Powell is serving his fifth year on this charge—an evidence of the confidence and esteem in which he is held by his people. We enjoyed being down there and we shall watch, with renewed interest, the continued growth of this work.

We are grateful for all kindnesses shown us while visiting these charges, and we pledge to them again our abiding interest and constant prayers. It was our privilege to see Bro. Crutchfield, Bro. H. S. B. Thompson, and Bro. Fishel on our way home Monday, and to have dinner with Bro. Fishel. We were glad to find Bro. Fishel in better health than he was some months ago.

Report Blanks

These will be in the hands of pastors in a few days, for the second quarter. Pastors will favor us by filling them out and returning to us promptly.

Gratitude Gift

In ten days our $12,000 should be in the hands of Chairman Ross. We appeal once more to every pastor and every charge to rally with full might in these last days that this necessary and honorable thing may be accomplished with becoming credit. The individual and the charge that fails the church now will have no pleasure in that fact as we enter upon a new century of larger service.

Church Law

A leading layman in one of our strong churches said recently, "I think we could go ahead and build a church now, if we had a church law that we could work by." He was referring to our law regarding building, buying, selling, etc. His opinion is that a majority of members present at a duly called meeting should have authority to act on these matters. In a large church, with a scattered membership, it is almost impossible to get a majority of the members present at any one time. And yet it appears that a deed for the sale of church property would not be valid unless there is compliance with this provision in our church law.

We wonder if this layman does not see this matter in the proper light, and if it would not be well to modify this law at our coming General Conference?

Optimism

Let us keep it alive. There will be discouragements, and they will look large and insurmountable at times; but they are not. The great Head has said, "If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye may say to this mountain . . . and it shall be done." All hindrances give way before the spirit of an unyielding optimism, and the hardest work becomes a delight when we do it in the spirit of hope and confidence. The Lord bless us, and keep our spirits buoyant.

Appointments

May 3, at Mocksville, in conference with the Mocksville charge.

May 6, with Bro. Whitaker on West Forsyth.

May 13, with Bro. Neese in the formal opening of the new church at Worthville.

May 16, General Conference in Baltimore. We hope that many of our people may attend this conference, also the young people's Centennial Convention in the same city, May 10-15.

Fraternally,

S. W. Taylor.

"The Gospel According to You"

You may not be writing a gospel with pen and ink as did Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John; but nevertheless you are in some fashion proclaiming the gospel of Christ. What sort of Christ are you representing Him to be? Does your life reveal His saving power? Does His grace appear in you? Can the world see in you the marks of the Lord Jesus? Does the influence of your life move men Christward? Do His virtues show themselves forth in your spirit and conduct? Does your copy of the Gospel flash with the beauty of holiness? Can men see that you have been with Jesus and learned of Him? Or are you misrepresenting Christ, writing a false gospel? What does the world think of Christ when it sees you? Are you causing any to turn away from Christ? Are you causing men to lose faith in the world's only Savior and only Hope? The gospel according to you is an important book.

—Gambling has undoubtedly increased, and to an alarming extent. The war was the real cause. Life itself became a gamble, uneconomic wages and profits destroyed the sense of economic equity, and crude and unnatural excitement paralysed the imagination. Only when life regains "atmosphere" will this stupid and soul-deadening practice abate.—The Scots Observer.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

"Wings of the Morning"

"Wings of the Morning." This is the title of the beautiful and unique pageant presented by Miss Dorothy Elderdice for the Children's Day service this year. She was assisted by the Methodist Protestant missionaries of Japan, China and India, and Rev. Wan Yu Chang and Rev. Yoshio Ito, Chinese and Japanese students in the Westminster Theological Seminary. The native music was arranged by Miss Caroline Wantz. The scriptural basis for the pageant is Psalm 139:9-10:

"If I take the wings of the morning,
And dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea;
Even there shall Thy hand lead me,
And Thy right hand shall hold me."

The pageant portrays an aeroplane visit by an American boy and girl visiting a group of boys and girls in each of the three foreign countries where the Methodist Protestant Church is functioning. The American boy and girl carry with them a Children's Day offering for the native boys and girls, besides some other gifts. They are greeted in each instance by the group of boys and girls of the respective countries, attired in native costume. The native groups then entertain the American boy and girl with a short program of native stories and songs.

It is not a difficult pageant and is so arranged that a part or all of it may be used without spoiling the effect. It can be given by few or many boys and girls, thus making it possible to be rendered by the small as well as the large Sunday school.

By portraying the habits and customs of Japan, China and India the pageant will visualize the value and needs of Christian missions to the American boys and girls and thus stimulate a deepened interest in and a larger support for our foreign missionary enterprise. This is the aim and purpose of the pageant. Miss Elderdice closes the foreword with the following paragraph: "'Wings of the Morning' is presented to you with a prayer that it may bring the children of Japan, of China, and of India very close to the hearts of our own children, that it may bring the call from across the seas very close to the hearts of all of us."

It is our hope that many of our Sunday Schools will use this beautiful and impressive pageant. Any number will be sent free. Order liberally and order at once. If you have not filled out the order card sent you, do it now. Already the orders are beginning to pour in. They are being cared for as soon as received. If you have not received an order card, just write to Rev. S. W. Rosenberger, Executive Secretary, Station B., Box 96, and tell him how many pageants, Children's Day programs, recitation sheets and offering envelopes you can use. Or give the attendance of your Sunday school and he will guess the number of supplies you are needing.

The First Word From the Japan Mission Conference

The following letter has just been received from Japan signed by Rev. S. Tsugawa and Rev. E. I. Obee, committee to send Gratitude Gift:

"Tokyo, Japan, March 23, 1928.

"Rev. S. W. Rosenberger, D.D., Exec. Sec.,
"2525 N. High St.,
"Columbus, O., U. S. A.

"Dear Brother Rosenberger,

"At the recent session of our Japan Mission Conference we decided that we also would like to take part in the Centennial Gratitude Gift. We, therefore, immediately raised y283.00, which amounts to $133.01 for this purpose, and elected Mrs. Tetsutaro Kinoshita, of Madison, N. J., to represent our conference in presenting the gift. Her husband is a student in Drew Theological Seminary and was elected as our lay representative to the General Conference. Both are members of our Azabu church in Tokyo, of which Rev. S. Tsugawa is pastor.

"We are enclosing a draft for the money, $133.01, and ask you to kindly collect the same and to present it to Mrs. Kinoshita at the proper time."

This same letter states that Rev. Y. Ito, ministerial student at Westminster Theological Seminary, was elected ministerial representative by the Japan Mission Conference, and Rev. J. K. Otake, recently come to Chicago University for post-graduatee work, was elected alternate to the General Conference.

Th draft has already been sent to Mrs. Kinoshita informing her that her own conference has made her "Miss Japan" and giving the time and place of the meeting of the General Conference. I am sure she will be there with high spirits to bring this gratitude gift from her native land and lay it upon the altars of her church in America. This gift comes unsolicited from Japan. It is a fine spirit and should be emulated by every conference and individual of the Methodist Protestant Church. Well, we are going to be there with the $100,000 Gratitude Gift which will be one of the finest missionary offerings ever laid upon the altars of the church at one time.

S. W. Rosenberger, Executive Secretary.

WHEN WE NEGLECT THE BIBLE

Sick people lose their desire for food. If we do not desire the Bread of Life it is because we are spiritually sick. These are discerning words quoted from Robert C. Chapman in the Keswick Calendar: "The Book of God is a store of manna for God's pilgrim children; and we ought to see that the soul does not get sick and loathe the manna. The great cause of our neglecting the Scriptures is not want of time, but want of heart, some idol taking the place of Christ. Satan has been marvelously wise to entice away God's people from the Scriptures." When we say that we have not time to read the Bible, have we honestly faced this searching word that the real trouble is "not want of time, but want of heart?" Even in our crowded lives of today we do the things that we most want to do. When we have yielded ourselves unto God as those that are alive from the dead, and are trusting Him wholly, moment by moment, we shall esteem the words of His mouth more than our necessary food, and His Word will be unto us the joy and rejoicing of our heart. The way to get rid of "want of heart" for such vital things as Bible reading and prayer is to give our hearts wholly to God, and trust Him to create in them His own desires.—Selected.

—It makes no difference how rich a country may be, or how well fed are its people, if the people have not the bread of life. The worst famine is a famine of the Word of God.

OUR STORY PAGE

A FLOOD AND TWO BOYS

The most exciting time in Peter Stanford's life was one spring when the ice gorge broke up on the Susquehanna River. After school one of the boys, John Dill, said:

"Pete, you come along with me and I'll show you something like you've never seen before."

"All right," replied Pete, "if it doesn't take too long. Mother says I got to get back in time to cut some wood for her."

"It won't take long," promised John Dill.

The two boys walked cautiously in their big rubber boots, for the mud was slippery, and mud seemed to be plastered over everything.

My, it had been a cold winter! It had started before Christmas and lasted through January, February and part of March without any "warm waves." Grandfather Schultz had said it was the coldest winter he remembered. Then suddenly a change came about. A warm wind blew from the south and quickly the trees began to bud, a bush in the back yard burst into yellow blooms, robins seemed to hop right out of the ground. Spring had come overnight.

John Dill lived a little ways out of the village on a farm. Peter thought he wanted to show something at his home, but they walked right past the house and soon reached a pasture fenced off from the road. They climbed into it.

"It's like a bog!" exclaimed Pete as he felt himself sinking.

"Sure is! Come over to a bank I know about. It's a sort of little hill; you remember the place. It's where we had a cave once," said John.

Peter remembered the place quite well.

"What's the noise?" he asked.

"It's the river," replied John. "She broke loose last night. After we look into the cave, let's go to the bridge. They say it might be swept away. A lot of fellers went down there to see it."

They could see the river now. My, it was a sight! It was very swift and very high and great chunks of ice were racing down, and lots of other things.

The boys climbed up to the little hillock under which they used to have their cave right above the river, but now there was no cave and the water almost washed over their feet.

"Isn't there danger of your whole farm being flooded?" asked Pete.

"Sure!" replied John. "This lower pasture is flooded now. I wanted to show it to you and let you see our cave. Isn't it a grand sight!" He meant the river, and Pete said: "You bet!"

John went to a small tree and took a long rope off one of the branches. It was fixed like a lariat. He whirled it around his head and threw it out over the river and caught a branch of a tree that was floating down. Both boys hauled and pulled and landed their prize.

"Let's try to get something else!" said Pete excitedly.

Just then they saw a raft-like object coming. It was the float from an amusement park further up the river. The boys tried lassoing it. They got the rope around the spring board at one end of the raft, and both tugged hard. The rush of the water almost pulled them from the bank, but a miss is as good as a mile.

They landed the raft, then they fastened it to the small tree and both got aboard.

"Wee!" exclaimed John. "I wish I dared go out a ways."

He had hardly spoken the words, when the boys heard a new note in the river's roar, a great menacing growl. They both looked up-stream and saw a terrible sight. A great wave of ice and water and all sorts of things like kindling wood was coming down in a rush.

"The bridge must have given way!" cried John. "Gee! Look at it coming! We'll have to run for it."

"Wait!" cried Pete, catching hold of his friend. "Maybe we can't run fast enough through the thick mud." His eyes traveled down to the pasture. "Gee! It's all water!"

John pulled the raft about, reached into the tree and unfastened his rope ready to cast off if necessary. Crash, bang! The racket was awful. Up went the raft on the wave, they had to duck the branches near the top of the little tree. Peter reached over and grabbed something which floated near. It was a rake and with it he began to push, trying to keep their craft from being drawn into the terrible clutches of the river.

"That's the boy!" said John, looking blue with fright. "Keep her out! Keep her out!"

"See if you can find something and help," panted Peter.

John grabbed a board and together they poled and pushed keeping clear of large, floating objects which might have swamped them. Suddenly John yelled: "I can't see the fence! Gee! It's a regular flood. Let's try to get over to the house. Maybe we can help."

Even then the boys did not realize what was happening. They were being carried along pretty fast, but by pushing they managed to keep in the direction of John's home, which was fortunately down-stream. Soon they saw the top of the farmhouse and the barn. There was a big tree near the house and in the branches were perched a lot of chickens. The water was three feet deep all around the house and rising very fast when they arrived.

"Yoo-hoo!" shouted John at the top of his voice.

Four heads came out of the upstairs window. John's mother's, his sister Jane's, his small brother Bob's, and the dog Skip's.

"This is a regular flood!" shouted John.

"Well, don't laugh about it!" replied Jane. "Mother's been scared stiff about you."

"The water's rising," said Peter.

"Better lock up the house and get on the raft," advised John, although he did not think it was really very necessary.

"You ought to have been here helping," scolded Jane. "Mother and I had to take up carpets and we didn't get them all up and we moved most of the things up to the attic."

The mother was looking over the scene, not saying much but looking scared.

"Your father went to the barn to set the animals free," she explained. "There he is now!"

They saw him looking out of the loft window.

"The barn isn't very strong, it may come down," said John.

They poled over to get Mr. Dill, and they noticed that now they could hardly reach the bottom. The water must be five feet, at least.

"Thank heaven!" exclaimed Mr. Dill. "This is a god-send."

He got onto the raft, and just then three heads and shoulders came out of the barn. They belonged to the horse and two cows.

Mr. Dill was a great help. He got a stout clothes prop and poled over to the house and got the family and dog onto the raft.

Then they worked over in the direction of the village. The water got deeper and deeper, and Peter began to worry about his family, but the village was on a hill. They at last stranded in a mud bank and left their raft.

All the village people were anxiously waiting for them, and some were setting out in improvised boats.

Peter took the Dills home and they were made comfortable until the flood went down.

Ever afterwards the boys were known among their friends as Noah and Yesah, because they were the only ones who had a real craft in the emergency.—Selected.

ONE OF LAZARUS' DOGS

Some people take special pleasure in hunting up and criticising the faults and sins of professed Christians. Such a man at the shop of a blacksmith began his usual tirade.

The smith listened quietly until the speaker made a pause in his torrent of abuse.

"Have you ever read any of the Bible?" said the smith.

"Surely," answered the critic, complacently.

"Have you ever read the parable of Lazarus and the rich man?" continued the smith.

"Of course," was the reply.

"Well," said the smith, "you remind me of the dogs in the parable."

"How so?" questioned the critic, in surprise.

"Why," answered the smith, "the only thing that the dogs did, was to lick the sores upon the body of poor Lazarus; and it seems to me that the only thing that you do is to look up sick places in the lives of honest Christians for the good that is in them you have an eye and no appreciation."

The loud-mouthed critic shortly withdrew in silence from the shop of the sturdy blacksmith. It was a center shot.—Selected.

NECESSITY OF REGENERATION

In regenerating the sinner, God's part is to do everything that is done. In this great work He uses His Spirit and His Word. We are said to be born of the Spirit. We are said to be born again, not of corruptible seed but incorruptible, by the Word of God which liveth and abideth forever.

So it is said concerning God's children, "Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God."

What is the sinner's part? Nothing except to trust himself into God's hands for God to do with him as He wills. Hence, we read, "Ye are the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus." This faith simply means complete passivity in God's hands.

Regeneration is a work done in us by divine power when we become passive in God's hands. So sometimes we speak of faith as the condition of regeneration.

Regeneration is absolutely essential to salvation. "Except a man be born again he cannot see the Kingdom of God."—Exchange.

HAVE YOU LEFT GOD OUT OF YOUR FAMILY BUDGET?

"Something in the tone of my husband's voice as he read the last words and laid the paper down made me glance up into his face. A half-startled look was there. He had been reading over the closely-written sheet of paper on which we had been working the whole evening. It was our budget for the next year. He had read 'house rent, food, clothing, fuel, amusements, books, automobile expense, church, and charity.' It was when he stopped there that the half-startled look came.

"'My dear, do you see what we have done? For amusements and the automobile we have appropriated almost ten times as much as we are planning to give to the church and charities.'

"I glanced over the list. I saw that we had set aside for these last two items about as much as we would pay for two new automobile tires. We had made the appropriations, never thinking of the absurd disproportion. The truth is that we were both interested in our church and in the needs of other people, and we honestly had thought we were giving all we could.

"'What are we going to do about it?' he continued. 'We've got to fix up that thing right away.'

"'We can cut the clothing item,' I answered. 'You remember it includes a fur coat for me. Cut that out, and we'll give the money to the church benevolences.'

"'Really, little woman, can you give up that fur coat?'

"I nodded assent, though I didn't want to. 'What sort of a Christian do you think I am to prefer a fur coat for myself to helping other folks, when once the thing's been put up to me like this?'

"He mused a moment. 'Well, really now, I don't need those fancy accessories for the machine. The old car'll go without them. They were chiefly to pamper my pride, anyway. We'll cut those out and transfer the credit to charity.'

"And so we went through the list, eliminating here and there expensive trifles we had thought we could never do without. After a half hour's work, the sum set aside for church and charity amounted to a little more than one-tenth of our income.

"Now we have literally 'grown up' as supporters of the enterprises of our church and are no longer mere children, giving on impulse. We weigh one claim against another, so as to be sure not to waste our little hoard. Each year we give a definite proportion of our income—a tenth. We just could not do all the things that had to be done.—The New Christian.

THE CURE FOR HEART TROUBLES

The cure for heart troubles is religion. As modern civilization advances, heart troubles seem to increase. There is an appalling number of sudden deaths in the prime of life, in full swing of work or play. Fatty degeneration, hardened arteries, heart failure. Physically, this comes from the increased speed and complexity of life. We have invented so much machinery that it breaks our hearts to keep it going. If Methuselah had owned a herd of automobiles and a flock of airplanes he might not have lived 969 years.

Spiritually, the trouble of our age comes from the increase of actual knowledge and the decline of vital wisdom; high velocity and vague direction. This produces mental agitation. . . . To be helpless is the worst of all heart troubles. The only cure for this sickness is religion.—Henry Van Dyke.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC

May 13: "Mother—and Home"

Home life a test of my Christianity. Titus 2:1-14.

I

Plans

Write the mothers of the members of your society and invite them to your meeting. When they come, give them the honored seats. Give each a carnation. Have a mother, then a daughter, then a son, to speak on the subject, "What Makes a Real Home."

II

Hints for Leader

Origin of Mother's Day: It was the opportunity and privilege of the writer to hear Dr. T. C. Miller, of the University of West Virginia, speak one year ago to a graduating class at the Seminary commencement. He was introduced as the one who taught Miss Anna M. Jarvis, who founded Mother's Day. She lived in an old-fashioned home and, desiring to make her mother happy, she called together a group of children and had a social gathering in honor of her mother. This idea was adopted by others until Congress passed a resolution in 1910 setting aside the second Sunday in May as Mother's Day. Woodrow Wilson issued the first proclamation in 1914 and made it of national importance. Thus we have Mother's Day.

Thoughts for the Occasion

We do not honor mothers because we only desire to make them happy, but because they have made us so very happy by their love and sacrifices. Certainly we can join with the poet who sang:

"My mother, 'tis of thee,
Who did so much for me,
Of thee I sing.
God bless this Mother's Day,
Which brings its cheering ray,
To help us on our way,
Thy praise we sing."

We honor mothers because they stand by us in every avenue of life. When failure comes, when sickness overtakes a child, or when disgrace comes, the mother is the last one to desert her child. In time of joy, success, and health, the mother rejoices with the son or daughter.

"Who ran to help me when I fell,
Who would some pretty story tell;
Or kiss the place to make it well,
My mother!"

We honor mothers because of the meaning of the name, mother. The name is universal and is spoken in every language and is practically the same in all.

(a) The name means comfort: "As one whom his mother comforteth, so I will comfort you." Jesus could not be with us in person, so He left His ministering angels to comfort us when He gave us mothers. The writer of proverbs describes the severest pain as one grieving for a mother and the greatest comfort as one comforted by his mother. Another wrote: "It's the name of God on the lips and in the hearts of little children."

(b) It means sacrifice. Mothers are ready to give all for their children's welfare. The story is told of a rough football player who, when the name, mother, was mentioned, he would break down and weep. It was learned that at birth the mother was given a choice between her life and her son's life. She gladly gave her life for the boy. This is only one example of the heroic sacrifices of mothers.

The name has many other suggested meanings, such as faith, love, hope, patience.

* * *

The Christianity that fails to exalt the mother is no Christianity at all, for Christ taught the sacredness of motherhood.

Sing These Songs

"Meet Mother in the Skies," "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," "Home, Sweet Hom," "More Like the Master," "Help Somebody Today," etc.

Poetry to the Point

The bravest battles that were ever fought
Shall I tell you where and when?
On the maps of the world you'll find it not,
'Twas fought by the mothers of men.

Nay, not with cannon or battle shot,
With sword or noble pen;
Nay, not with the eloquent word or thought
From the mouths of wonderful men;

But deep in a walled up woman's heart,
Of woman that would not yield,
But, bravely, silently bore her part,
Lo! there is the battlefield.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

May 13: Jesus Enters Jerusalem

Scripture Basis: Mark 11:1-33.

Golden Text: Behold, thy King cometh unto thee; he is just and having salvation. Zech. 9:9.

The Trip Triumphant

Coming up from Jericho, a distance of 15 miles, Jesus and His disciples approached Jerusalem on the day we term Palm Sunday, which was the beginning of Passion Week. As they drew near to Bethany and Bethphage, the Master sent two disciples after an ass's colt tied somewhere along the roadside in the latter town (so Matt. 21:1-2). The ruins of Bethany may be seen today, located not over two miles from Jerusalem. No signs of Bethphage have been found, but some think it was between Bethany and the Jewish metropolis.

Securing the colt without difficulty, doubtless because it was the property of a friend of Jesus whom he had healed or helped, perhaps, the two messengers brought it to their Master. Preparing a saddle of their outer garments, the disciples felt honored to have their great leader sit upon them. This is the only time that Jesus permitted himself to be heralded as king. It was significant of kingship to ride upon an ass, for so rode the old kings of Israel. Furthermore, it was in fulfillment of prophecy (Zech. 9:9).

Picture the scene if you can! See the Christ of God riding through the Golden Gate on an ass's colt, as the people lay their garments in the way, as palm leaves were waved before him, and as the children sang glad hosannas to Him "that cometh in the name of the Lord." Their hope had reached its pinnacle, for they thought they were about to crown Him the King of the Jews. Yes, He was to be crowned, but differently from the way they had hoped. It was well that He should claim royalty at this time, for was he not the King of kings and Lord of lords? Have we made Him such in our lives?

The Traffickers Thrashed

During Passion Week, Jesus spent the night with his friends in Bethany. Coming from Bethany Monday morning, he spied a fig tree in full foliage. It is probable that He and His disciples had had no breakfast, and were hungry. Although the season for figs was not yet, the fruit preceded the leaves and consequently they expected to find it full of luscious fruit. Finding it barren, they were much disappointed, and Jesus pronounced a curse upon it that He might teach a lesson to His followers. The tree is significant of showy boastful but fruitless professing Christians—"all leaves." The next day when the disciples called His attention to the withered tree, the Great Teacher gave them the lesson of the power of faith in God.

Entering into the temple, Jesus observed the greedy traffickers in animals, doves, and other sacrificial material, together with the money-changers, eagerly plying their trade in the outer court of the temple area. This market had been permitted for the convenience of the worshipers who came from afar and had to purchase the sacrificial animal or exchange their money for the Temple Shekel, which was required to pay their temple tax. This bartering, with its attending noise and excitement, was obnoxious to our Lord who loved His Father's house and deemed it a place of prayer. Fearlessly He upset their tables and drove them out of the court.

Some of us may be inclined to use this as an example of Christ's disapproval of church suppers and the like, but let us observe that these merchants were trading for personal gain and not for kingdom interests. However, we may obtain the lesson that it is our duty to keep the church a house of prayer, and, applying it to our indivilual lives, to keep them fit for the Master's use.

The Taunters Tamed

The next day the chief priests, scribes and elders assailed Jesus when He came into the temple again, and asked for His credentials. "By what authority doest thou these things?" they asked. They were shrewd, they were pointed, but they could not defeat that master mind. Instead of answering them directly, which they wanted Him to do that they might have whereof to accuse Him, He turned a question on them concerning John the Baptist's authority. They were speechless, for they dare not confess that they did not believe he was divinely appointed for fear of the resentment of the people. Hence, as they failed to give Jesus an answer, He reserved the right to refuse to respond to their inquiry. And they left Him, whipped again.

There is no question in our minds concerning His authority. We know that He came from God, as Nicodemus acknowledged as his belief. And we know that He has returned to the Father, though the Paraclete, the Holy Spirit, now dwells among men. We know that His power has been manifested down through the ages, even from His public ministry. Most of all, we have the witness within ourselves that He is the Son of God, the Redeemer of the world, the Saviour of our own souls.

CENTENARY PROJECT FOR JUNIORS

"Our Methodist Protestant Family in Baltimore"

LESSON TEN

"The Birthday Party"

Suggestions for Leaders

We have come to the last lesson in our Centenary Project. This lesson is to be a "Birthday Celebration" and may take the form of a birthday party prepared by the group who may invite others as agreed upon by the group; or it may be a public service in the church to which the public may be invited.

If the group decides upon a Birthday party the following suggestions may be carried out:

1. Place on a table in the room where the party is to be held all the "My Church's Birthday Book;" make sure each child's name is on his book.

2. On another table place all the "Photograph Albums."

3. Hang on the wall or screen the map or maps which have been made on which the denominational interests have been located.

4. Hang on the wall the "My Church's Birthday" Poster, "The Organization of My Church" Poster and the Triangle Poster.

5. Flowers and ferns may be used for decorations.

6. As the guests arrive, they may be met at the door by the children, the Centenary Discoverers, and conducted around the room where the children will explain the various maps, pictures, and posters to the guests.

7. Each member of the group and each guest may have been invited to bring a birthday gift to the church on its one hundredth birthday; the gifts may be some special gift to one of our colleges or mission stations; or it might be a gift to be included in the Centennial Gratitude Gift from your church. These gifts may be arranged in a basket made ready to receive them or in some nook in the room.

8. The following are some suggestive games:

(a) Centenary memory game. Appoint two leaders; let them choose sides. Each player must take his turn to state clear facts about some phase of our denominational work; facts will be given by alternating sides. When a player fails to remember a fact immediately when his turn comes, drops out of the game.

(b) Prepare posters containing pictures of our Mission Stations and missionaries, our colleges, and our denominational workers. Number each picture, Give to each player a pencil and paper containing the numbers of as many pictures as on the posters. A first, second and third prize may be given to the three who name the most pictures correctly.

(c) Other games may be played, such as Circle games, singing games, and running games.

9. Refreshments should be served at a large table on which there is a huge artificial or real birthday cake on which are burning one hundred candles. It will be better to use the artificial cake so that larger candles, which will burn a longer length of time, may be used. Place cards may be tied to candles burning at each place.

10. At the close of the refreshments, the worship service planned for this lesson may be used.

11. Send all of your hand-work used in the Centenary Project to Miss Ruth Parker, Hampdon Church, Falls Road at 34th St., Baltimore, Maryland. Mark your package, "Project Exhibit." Make sure that the name of your church is placed on each article which you send so that it may be returned to you.

For the groups who prefer to make their Birthday Celebration a public service and have it during a public worship service, the following will be suggestive:

1. Have on exhibit all the booklets, the maps and the posters which the Centenary Discoverers have made.

2. Have your large birthday cake with the burning candles on the platform.

3. Use the worship service accompanying this lesson in your public service.

4. The following is a suggestive outline for your evening service:

Prelude.

Worship service (use service printed with this lesson).

"Our Big Methodist Protestant Family and how it was started." (Let one Centenary Discoverer give this in about two minutes.)

"The Part of Our Family which lives in the Kentucky mountains. (Let one child tell about this).

"Some of Our Family live in Big Love Homes." (Let another child review this lesson).

"Some of Our Family Are New Americans." (Let one of the group tell about our Americanization work).

Hymn: "I Would Be True."

"A Part of Our Family Live in India." (By one child, two minutes).

"Our Chinese Methodist Protestants." (By one of the children.

"Our Family in Japan." (Two minutes review by one child).

Hymn: "The Whole Wide World for Jesus."

"Our Family Is Being Educated." (Let one Centenary Discoverer review this).

Offering to the Centennial Gratitude Gift.

Hymn: "I Would Be True." (All sing).

Worship Service

Theme: "Thanksgiving and Loyalty."

Call to Worship, and Praise: Leader—For our church and for what it stands, for its leaders who have fought for its cause;

Children—We thank thee, our Father; we praise Thee.

Doxology. (All sing).

Leader—For our colleges and all our schools, for our mission stations and our missionaries at home and abroad,

Children: We thank Thee, our Father; we praise Thee.

Doology. (All sing the second time).

Conversation: We are thankful for our church; for all it has done in the first hundred years of its history. Our faces, however, are not turned to the past; they are turned to the future. Our hymn, "I Would Be True," expresses what our attitude should be toward our church in the future.

Hymn: "I Would Be True."

Conversation: Let us sing the hymn which tells us something of our obligation to the nations of the world. We have a story to tell to the nations; it is the story of Jesus. We have a message to give to the nations; it is the gospel message. We have a Saviour to give to the nations; He is ours and He is willing to be the Saviour of all who will accept Him."

Hymn: "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations."

Conversation: May we pledge our allegiance to the work of the kingdom and give ourselves to the work of our church which is helping to carry forward Christ's kingdom?

Flag Salute: (Christian Flag): We pledge allegiance to our flag and to the Saviour for whose kingdom it stands, one brotherhood uniting all mankind in service and in love.

Prayer.

Special Notice

Please send all hand-work done in this project to Miss Ruth Parker, care Hampdon Church, Falls Road at 34th Street, Baltimore, Md., for the exhibit during the Centennial Convention, May 10-16.

BARACA-PHILATHEA CONVENTION

The eighteenth annual meeting of the North Carolina Baraca-Philathea convention is to be held in Durham May 16-18, and the indications are that it will be one of the largest-attended sessions ever held. The program is being shaped to include some very excellent features. Miss Henrietta Heron, Cincinnati, National President of Philatheas, and prominent world-wide union worker, will be one of the headliners. Dr. Frank S. Hickman, prominent professor of the psychology of religion in Duke University, and Rev. R. H. Daughtery, of Central Methodist Church, Mt. Airy, will be other speakers.

Entertainment will be provided by the Durham people and those intending to attend should communicate at once with H. V. Byrd, Box 543, Durham, N. C., who is local chairman. All organized Bible classes of the state are invited to send representatives to this meeting.

NOTICE

Next Sunday, May 6th, will be "Home-Coming Day" in the Sunday school and church at the First M. P. church of Burlington, N. C., and we wish to extend a special invitation to all ex-pastors of this church and all out-of-town members to be present at the services at both Sunday school and preaching on this day. Plans have been completed to make this a day long to be remembered; so plan now to be with us and shake hands with us.

Hoping to see you Sunday, May 6th.

J. G. ROGERS, Supt.,
L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.

IMPORTANT

Free tickets, to the number of six, to the Lyric meeting in Baltimore, May 16, will be allowed each of our representatives, provided application is made for them by May 8.

A ticket will be sent to me for each of our representatives, but in order to get these extra tickets, application must be made for them. I trust that every one of our allotment may be used by our people. This will be a great occasion, and we hope that a large number of North Carolina Methodist Protestants will be there.

All persons who desire these tickets will please notify me at once.

We are glad to enroll two new charges this week: South Winston (Union Ridge church), Bro. P. L. Kinnaman, pastor; and Porter, Rev. C. H. Hill, pastor.

Five charges contribute to the A. C. B. this week, ranging in amounts from $25 to $100. Ten charges remit on the G. C. B. and three on the college assessment.

The number of charges now having budget assessments is 75. We must expect that the remaining 17 charges will get in this list within the next few weeks. No charge should be content to go longer without budget credits.

With full appreciation of all that is being done by pastors and people to supply the material needs of the Kingdom, and praying the blessings of God upon these continued efforts, I am,

Fraternally yours,

S. W. TAYLOR.

—"Wasn't that a sweet sermon?" said a lady after hearing Brother Bates' sermon last Sunday morning.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Calvary, Greensboro.—I suppose the pastor of a church ought to report to the church paper now and then, whether the reporter does or not. So "I take my pen in hand" to let you all know what we are doing here at Calvary. I don't know how far back I ought to go to begin. Perhaps I had better begin with yesterday, and go back until my space, or paper, gives out.

Yesterday was big day all day. The attendance at Sunday school was 226, 14 more than the previous record attendance. Our hut is overflowing, and it appears we shall have to build another addition to take care of the folks. Too bad we cannot put up our Sunday school building, but we cannot attempt that until the debt on the church is considerably reduced from what it now is.

The attendance at both preaching services yesterday was fine. The attendance at the night service was perhaps the largest of the present pastorate; that is, for a regular service. Just before the morning service we finished raising our Gratitude Gift. It was given with such a fine spirit that it was delightful to see how the money came. "Not grudgingly, nor of necessity, but gladly."

Last Friday one of the classes got up a Snowdrift Cake baking, sold the cakes, and with the prizes that were given by the Snowdrift Company, cleared about $25. On last Monday night the Ladies' Aid gave a supper to the Guilford County school superintendents and cleared some $40. Some weeks ago the Circle headed by Mrs. J. A. Cox held a demonstration of aluminum ware in the hut. There were more than 60 couples present, and the church hut is equipped with $50 worth of aluminum ware as a result. The Missionary Societies went to the Branch meeting with budgets raised in full. So the women are not selfish in their activities. They are busy in Jerusalem, but they are not unmindful of Judea and the uttermost parts.

The Senior C. E. Society is busy raising the money to purchase a bulletin board to be placed on the church lawn. Such parts as cannot be made here will be ordered from the factory. The brethren who are skilled in the use of tools have volunteered to do the rest of the work. We hope to have it in place within the next two weeks.

The matter of building a parsonage is making haste slowly. The building committee is looking over plans both for the building and for financing it. The sound of the hammer will be heard in the air shortly.

On the Sunday night before Easter the choir gave the Cantata, "The Crucifixion and the Resurrection." It was splendidly done. The offering, with that given on Easter Sunday morning, totaling a little over $40, has been forwarded to the Conference Treasurer for the Board of Home Missions. The offering this year is more than twice that of last year.

We received three into membership on Easter Sunday, and one last Sunday. So far this year there have been 14 additions to the membership. We are expecting a number more before the year is out.

The Church Yearbook and Directory is proving a great help. And now, through the kindness of one of the members, we are having a weekly bulletin for use at the church services.

C. W. BATES, Pastor.

Burlington, First Church.—Sunday, April 29, was a good day for us. Attendance at Sunday school was 360 with offering amounting to $21.47. Full attendance at the morning preaching hour. The Lord's Supper was observed at this service with many participating in same, and as most of the time was taken up in administering this sacred ordinance, the pastor did not preach a regular sermon. The evening service was very well attended. At this time Brother Gerringer delivered a very helpful and inspiring sermon on the subject, "Never Man Spake Like This Man," (or the Incomparable Speaker).

We are to have a get-together meeting on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock for the adult members of the church to discuss important matters of the church. It is hoped that we will have a full attendance of the members at this meeting.

Next Sunday will be observed as "Home-Coming Day" in the Sunday school and church and plans are well under way to make this day as interesting and helpful as possible. A special effort is being made to have the Home Department members and members of the Cradle Roll out in strong numbers. Plans are made to have a photograph made of the Cradle Roll and we want, at least, two hundred of the little folks in this picture. If you can come to these services Sunday morning and have no way of conveyance, please call Mr. Charles M. Coble at his residence some time this week and give him your name and street number, and he will see that you get a way to ride to and from church. Plan now to be present next Sunday, May 6th, and we assure you that you will enjoy the program.

Hoping to meet you at church next Sabbath,

L. A. BRAXTON.

Henderson.—There are many encouraging features about the work here, some of which have been mentioned by our good reporter.

The Coghill gift of $500 has been used in beautifying the church building. The woodwork on the outside and the walls on the inside have been painted, adding considerably to the appearance.

The good women of the church haven't forgotten the parsonage. Recently the Young Ladies' League bought a new suite of furniture for the reception hall and the Ladies' Aid re-papered three rooms. The men, seeing what the women were planning, got busy and put a new roof on the parsonage.

Our Sunday school recently reached a high-water mark with 218 present. The attendance at the preaching services is also increasing as the spring weather opens up. The congregation on Easter Sunday was unusually large and five new members were received.

Last Sunday we united with the other churches in the district in an all-day rally at Union Chapel church. At the evening service we had with us Dr. R. M. Andrews, who brought to us a very helpful message on "Courage." Dr. Andrews is a former pastor of this church and has many friends and admirers here. He was heard by a large congregation.

We are glad to report that Brother George B. Harris, who has been a patient in Watts Hospital at Durham for many weeks, has returned home, and we are hoping that he may be able to be with us in our services again at an early date. Brother Harris has been a leader in the church for many years and the entire congregation is praying for his complete and speedy recovery.

Brother J. B. Hicks and the writer are representatives to the General Conference which will meet in Baltimore. Our people here are interested in that occasion and many of them are planning to attend some of the sessions.

R. A. HUNTER.

Tabernacle Charge.—No report has appeared from this charge for some time. This is no indication that we have been idle. Both of our Sunday schools, in spite of the very unfavorable weather, have been running on full time. The interest and attendance are good. Large congregations attend the preaching services when the weather is favorable.

Our second quarterly conference was held at Julian March 31, with both churches represented. A committee was appointed to draft resolutions concerning the life of Brother David H. Hunter, who was a member of the quarterly conference for nearly one-half century. On recommendation of the pastor, the trustees of Tabernacle and Julian churches were instructed to place suitable markers on the highways near the churches. Brothers W. T. Hanner and R. L. Jones were elected as nominees for delegate to our next Annual Conference.

A number of our faithful members have been kept from church because of sickness, but we are glad that they are all improving.

Julian church and pastor were very sorry to lose Brother T. G. Coble and family, who recently moved to Greensboro. They are splendid people, and we hope they can visit us often.

Brother and Sister J. E. Hanner have the thanks of the pastor for some fine sweet potatoes.

H. L. ISLEY.

Concord.—Our Sunday school made a Gratitude Gift Sunday morning of $100 in memory of the late Mr. W. H. Scarboro, who was the first superintendent of our school and served faithfully in that capacity for more than 20 years. Mr. Scarboro loved the M. P. Church, and to his efforts is largely due what success we have made. Therefore, it is very fitting that our Sunday school should thus honor him. Other memorial gifts have been made also, and there is one other we wish to mention: one good woman made hers in memory of the late Rev. I. I. York, who was helping in a meeting years ago when she was converted. All of these dear old soldiers of the Cross should be honored. Some have gone on, but some are still with us, and what a fine thing to show our gratitude to them for all their years of service by making a Gratitude Gift in their honor.

Lots of our young people are planning to attend the Baltimore convention.

Our church was well represented at a young people's rally held at Pine Bluff church Sunday afternoon. Miss Bettie Brittingham, D. A. McLaurin and our pastor, Mr. Hendry, were all on the program.

Mrs. Harry Hunter and Mrs. R. A. Holland, who have been seriously ill, have improved. The condition of Mrs. Lee Reed is critical now. Will all Christians remember her in prayer? MRS. D. A. McLAURIN.

Orange Charge.—Yesterday, the fifth Sunday in April, was a good day for us. Centennial services were held at Chestnut Ridge for the charge, as follows:

11:30 a. m.—Address, J. Norman Wills, of Greensboro, N. C.

1:30 p. m.—Song service. Historical papers.

2:15—Sermon, Rev. L. W. Gerringer, of Burlington, N. C.

Brother Wills gave us a splendid address, which was well received. Brother Gerringer was at his best, which is saying enough.

The historical paper for each local church contained interesting facts about these churches.

Brothers Wills and Gerringer were not strangers to the people of Orange charge, both having visited this charge before. Both have a standing invitation to come again.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Pleasant Grove.—Brother Reynolds gave us a very interesting history of our church at the 11 o'clock service. He also delivered a very inspiring sermon Sunday night from Psalms 116:7: "Return unto thy rest, O my soul, for the Lord hath dealt bountifully with thee." We all make mistakes and mis-steps, as did David, and we also should profit by them when we think how good and how bountifully the Lord has dealt with us.

The second quarterly conference was held Saturday afternoon, April 28. Very good reports were handed in from most all officers. The nominees for delegate to the Annual Conference are Mr. B. E. Kennedy and Mrs. R. J. Kennedy.

The Brotherhood held its regular monthly meeting Saturday night at the home of Mr. Ivy A. Teague.

There are still some of our members sick. Mr. Noah Charles, who has been shut in for some time, is not as well as he has been. Mrs. F. H. Clark has not been able to be out for several weeks. We hope for these a speedy recovery. REPORTER.

English Street.—The revival which has been going on at this place for two weeks closed Sunday night. There were not many souls saved as we hoped for, but we are not discouraged, for much good has been done to revive the church members and those who work with us from other churches. Six souls were born into the kingdom and eight were added to the church membership.

Our pastor was blessed in being able to secure the help of Rev. Claris Isley, of Bonlee, who delivered splendid messages each evening. He declared it a terrible tragedy for anyone, young or old, to dwell on this earth without Jesus as their guide, earnestly pleading for souls to trust in Him.

A special service for children on Thursday afternoon was held and the little folks will never forget it.

This young man, who has started this great work so early in life, promises to be a soul-winner for Christ. He has won many friends here by his personal interest in them. And we hope he will come back to High Point and preach for us again.

The Sunday school is increasing in number and we hope many others will take the opportunity to come and study these great lessons with us.

Mrs. W. P. Ridge, who has a bad head trouble, was not able to be in her place at Sunday school Sunday. The little folks miss her. Mrs. S. C. Ring is seriously ill and not expected to live. We are glad to say she has a hope that is indestructible.

Let us not be weary in well-doing. Persistence always precedes the reaping.

MRS. J. A. LEE, Reporter.

Asheville.—Miss Annie L. Forrest gave us a fine message Sunday morning. She also addressed the Sunday school in a most interesting manner, telling the children about missions in a way to impress them all their lives.

In the afternoon Mrs. C. C. McNeil carried Miss Forrest to Democrat and Clark's Chapel and Bethel Home.

The ladies of our church here are invited to a tea in honor of Miss Forrest this, Tuesday, afternoon in the home of Mrs. J. S. Williams. She has certainly endeared herself to all in these parts.

In the evening service Sunday the Christian Endeavor Society led the meeting with Brother E. C. Fawcett as principal speaker. He spoke in his usual inimitable manner on "Our Attitude to Other Religions." Brother E. C. Pratt presided over the meeting. In the morning service, Miss Flossie Stout's solo was a delight. She was accompanied by Miss Verdie McIntyre.

We were glad to have Mr. and Mrs. Paul Michael, of Pennsylvania.

REPORTER.

Grace Church, Greensboro.—The branch meeting of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies was held at Grace church April 17, 18 and 19. The opening session on Tuesday was well attended. Wednesday evening a play, "The Color Line," was presented. After the play a very delightful musical program was rendered. Miss Charlotte Van Noppen played several pieces on the violin, accompanied by Mrs. Van Noppen. Mrs. E. S. Wills, soprano, and Miss Evelyn Barnes, contralto, sang several beautiful selections. Refreshments were served by the ladies of the church.

From now on, the first prayer meeting of each month will be turned into a supper in the hut. After the supper the meetings of the Grace church workers will be held. We think that this will greatly help the people of the church. The congregation will have a chance to get together the first Wednesday of every month.

Our pastor, Rev. R. J. Tamblyn, will preach the baccalaureate sermon at Guilford High School next Sunday.

Mebane.—Last Sunday was an especially delightful day at our church here, for at this time we held our Centennial service. First, we had a very interesting paper on our local church history, this being prepared and given by Mrs. H. C. Nicholson. This church is 25 years old and was erected under the leadership of Rev. W. D. Fogleman, he being its first pastor. During these 25 years this church has seen remarkable growth and has had some of the strongest men of our Conference as its pastors. We feel sure we have much for which to be grateful. Next on our program was a very helpful talk on "What Youth Demands of the Church," by Miss Elizabeth Nicholson, granddaughter of Rev. Mr. Fogleman and now a student at High Point College.

The principal address of the occasion was given by Rev. G. W. Holmes, a beloved former pastor. This message was very forceful and full of interesting facts about our early church. Rev. Mr. Holmes told of the early manhood and later years in the life of John Wesley, how during his youth he became interested in, and studied the Scriptures. It was he who started the great Methodist movement in the United States first by sending missionaries to this country and later coming himself. Then, 100 years ago this year there gathered in Baltimore, Maryland, a small band of faithful workers who believed the lay members should have a voice in church government and as a result of this meeting or conference the Methodist Protestant Church came into existence. The speaker then reviewed briefly some of the great achievements accomplishd by our church since that time. We have a right to feel proud that we are Methodist Protestants and we have had an opportunity to express our gratitude by contributing to the Gratitude Gift.

Monday afternoon the Ladies' Aid Society met with Mrs. George Wyatt, 29 members being present. The collection amounted to $27.60. Next month the election of officers will be held and a short program will be given since our society will be 16 years old in June. During the social hour Mrs. Wyatt served fruit salad on lettuce with crackers.

The Workers' Council met at the church Monday evening. REPORTER.

Mebane, May 1.

Pleasant Grove Brotherhood.—The Brotherhood held its monthly meeting Saturday evening in the home of Brother I. A. Teague. Brother Z. B. Morris presided in the absence of the president, Brother J. W. Burton. After the devotional service, the business was transacted.

Our subscription for the M. P. C. G. G. was paid.

Brother Reynolds urged the Brotherhood to buy a large record book for future use. In future years it will be possible for the church to see how and why the Brotherhood was organized. The next meeting will be held at the home of Brother Wesley Teague, of Thomasville, on the fourth Saturday night. At this time we hope to have some good speakers with us. REPORTER.

Rockingham.—On Sunday, April 29th, we had an excellent Sunday school. The attendance was good indeed. Each member seemed to take a great interest. It is growing in interest and number as the spring lengthens towards the summer. We hope to have the best record in Sunday school this year that the church has ever had.

Our Centennial day was a great success. We had with us as speakers of the day Dr. C. M. Compher and Brother W. T. Collins, of Winston-Salem. Dr. Compher is a very noted preacher. He was pastor for some time in Washington, D. C. He has a wonderful history of work for the Savior. Dr. Compher came to us in the morning at 11 o'clock with a message that thrilled us to the depths of our souls. His text was "If I be lifted up from the earth I will draw all men unto me." After the morning service, we had dinner on the grounds, which was enjoyed by all. In the afternoon Brother W. T. Collins gave a history of our local church, after which Dr. Compher spoke to the children and young people. Brother Collins was formerly a member of our church. He is the only one that was on the building committee for our church that is living.

In the evening at 7:30 Dr. Compher again delivered a very inspiring message. These two men of God and this day will rest long in the memories of the people of our church and community. We were glad to have them with us and our doors stand open to them at all times. May God bless them in His service.

Pray for us that we may press toward the mark of the high calling in Christ Jesus and may succeed in anything we undertake to do in His name.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

MISS ESTHER ROSS, Editor
MISS MARY C. McCULLOCH, Assistant

Address matter for immediate publication in this department to Miss Mary C. McCulloch, 1705 Asheboro Street, Greensboro, N. C.

REPORT OF THE BRANCH MEETING OF THE W. F. M. S.

The annual session of the North Carolina Branch of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society opened in the beautiful auditorium of Grace Church, Greensboro, on Wednesday morning, April 18, with the largest attendance ever recorded for a Branch meeting. We noted with pleasure that throughout the entire three days of the sessions a large number of our ministers were in attendance, lending inspiration and encouragement, and gathering information for the benefit of those in the churches they serve. We were also pleased to have Miss Annie Forrest with us during the entire time.

Rev. C. W. Bates led the devotionals, calling attention to the motto for the morning, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to whole creation."

The minutes of the executive sessions held during the year were read, following which Mrs. M. P. Harrell read her report as corresponding secretary. This report was gratifying in many ways. It showed that 111 new members have been added to our ranks, three new societies organized among the adults and 15 new societies among the young people. It also indicated renewed zeal and deeper consecration in the work, and firmer establishment in the already organized societies, especially in the district where group meetings were held. This plan of getting the auxiliaries together for inspiration and education has proven very successful and was heartily recommended by a number of committees and secretaries. Again, however, it was necessary for Mrs. Harrell to urge that the corresponding secretaries report in full the work that is being done over the state, and stress the importance of sending in reports quarterly as well as annually. A few—a very few—forgot to send in reports this year, but we hope they will have especially good ones for the first quarter.

A growing list of Tithers and Intercessors indicated progress, as did also the reports of the various secretaries. Mrs. C. L. Whitaker made a strong plea for the Student Loan Fund after reading her report. This is one of the most worthy causes in the work of missions and to those who are preparing for foreign work it is a necessity. We are asked for only ten cents per member per year. May we not give ten times that amount?

During the morning Mrs. E. C. Caldwell sang a beautiful solo, and in the afternoon Miss Katherine Hutton delighted the audience with a splendid rendition of "Cast Thy Burden on the Lord."

At 11:15 Rev. J. Clyde Auman told in an interesting and earnest manner something of his work in Japan. He used as his subject, "The Second Mile in the Missionary Work," and pointed out how missionaries really have to go the second mile. In part, he said: "The spirit of missionary work is the same as always, but the means of teaching is different. The lesson leaders have learned is that the missionary himself must be willing to decrease and let the foreign brothers increase." Mr. Auman stressed the importance of Americans practicing the spirit of brotherhood they preach to the foreign people, saying that the majority of Japanese leave America non-Christian or lose zeal for Christianity because they are treated as outcasts here.

At 12:30 a delicious lunch was served by the Calvary and Moriah auxiliaries to a large crowd assembled in the hut, and at 2:30 the meeting reassembled in the auditorium. Rev. J. D. Williams was in charge of the devotionals. "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross" was sung reverently by the congregation and Rev. T. F. McCulloch led in prayer.

During the afternoon Miss Annie Forrest, field organizer, gave some interesting facts concerning our work and workers in Japan, China and India. Miss Forrest has been in North Carolina several weeks and has aroused missionary interest and enthusiasm in all the churches she has visited.

The report of the committee on extension of work contained so many good things of interest to those who could not attend the meeting that it was ordered published in the Herald. A copy of this report appears in the Woman's Missionary department of the Herald.

And so the work of the year was summed up and closed, the scope of it showing that the entire program of our Board had been covered this year. We have contributed to the Student Loan Fund and to the Birthday or Retirement Fund. Various auxiliaries and individuals are supporting Bible women and teachers in our foreign fields. We are praying more and paying more than ever before. The older members of the branch marvel at the changes that have come about during the past few years, changes in attendance, in enthusiasm, in determination, in plans and in prospects for the future years. We marvel, yes, and we humbly give our Heavenly Father the honor and credit for all the changes which been wrought, but we are not satisfied. As yet no young woman has gone to the foreign field from the North Carolina branch. Some of us forgot to contribute to the Student Loan Fund and as a result only two girls have been able to get financial help in preparing for foreign work. A number of names were dropped from our list of membership this year because they did not pay their dues. Perhaps this was of little importance to those who suggested that the names be dropped from the roll, but did we stop first to think that perhaps if we had prayed more earnestly these lost members might have been retained? They might have stayed away for lack of interest, and on the other hand they might have been going through deep waters and needed the prayers and encouragement of our good missionary women. Systematic instruction is needed in the Christian Endeavor societies and in the Sunday schools. Do you have a Secretary of Missionary Education in your auxiliary?

There is much yet to be done and we pray that God may continue to direct through another missionary year.

MRS. E. LESTER BALLARD, Sec'y.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON EXTENSION OF WORK, BRANCH MEETING, W. F. M. S.

We, your committee on Extension of Work, after careful consideration, offer to you the following recommendations, that seem to us worthy of your attention and adoption as plans to be followed during the coming year.

1. That an effort be made through the districts to organize more auxiliaries.

2. That an effort be made to get every woman in the church to be a working, contributing member of the missionary societies.

3. Because of the fact that there is a lack of missionary knowledge in our Sunday schools, we suggest a missionary secretary to present a missionary lesson or program once every quarter, or once every month when possible.

4. That we bring vital, up-to-date, accurate information to the attention of the entire church by placing monthly or quarterly in the church pews small, printed pages of "Missionary Radios" or "News From the Front!"

5. That the Secretary of Literature mail occasionally to the women and girls of the church a leaflet containing interesting missionary news, the local contingent fund to pay for both the literature and the postage.

6. Where there are young people in the women's societies that we encourage them by giving them a part on the program or electing them to an office. And that we send a representative annually from the Young People's society or from the church to the Young People's Conference to attend the missions class, paying their way, if necessary.

7. Remembering that "More things are wronght by prayer than this world dreams of," let us pray regularly and earnestly for each meeting of our societies, as well as for the work and workers abroad.

MRS. J. M. MILLIKAN, Chairman.

OF INTEREST TO YOUNG PEOPLE AND OTHERS

The Executive Board of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society is meeting with the First Church at High Point beginning on the evening of May 9 and continuing over Sunday. It is expected that Rev. and Mrs. Soderbom, Dr. Fleagle and a number of our other missionaries will be here for the meeting. On Friday evening at 6:30 a banquet will be served at the church, at which time the exercise will be of especial interest to young people. Plates will be fifty cents each and should be secured by communicating with Mrs. D. A. Neese not later than Friday noon. (Earlier, if possible). It is hoped that the people of nearby churches will attend all the services.

MRS. PAUL S. KENNETT, Cor. Sec'y.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

To Representatives to the General Conference:

Any of the representatives electd at the last session of our Conference who find they cannot attend the General Conference in Baltimore, are asked to notify the Secretary of the Annual Conference to that effect, so notice can go to the alternates, and be certified to the Secretary of the General Conference.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Black

Mr. John Black, aged 81 years, died at his home in Graham April 16. He had been a resident of Graham several year, going there from near Kimesville, Patterson Township.

Before the procession left the home, prayer was offered by Rev. W. E. Harrup. The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Mount Pleasant M. P. church, with Rev. D. I. Offman, Rev. G. F. Millaway, and Rev. D. R. Williams conducting the services. Four of his comrades of the Civil War marched in front of the casket to the cemetery.

Mr. Black was a Confederate veteran, a member of Company P, Third North Carolina Regiment, entering the war when only 17 years of age, and serving through most of it. He joined the M. P. church in Graham in October, 1916.

He is survived by the following sons and daughters: W. H. Black, Burlington; George W. Black, Hendersonville; Mrs. Bright, Schoolfield, Va.; Mrs. John Allred, Mrs. W. N. Drumwright, Mrs. Thomas N. Small, and James G. Black and John T. Black, Graham. The following brothers and sisters survive: Peter Black, Kimesville; Mrs. Ardelia Allred, Hillsboro; Mrs. Adoskie Clapp, Whitsett; Mrs. Sarah Moser, Liberty; Mrs. Cornelia Drumwright, Graham; Mrs. M. M. Glosson, Cary, and A. C. Black, Burlington. The grandsons were pallbearers.

Elkins

On Sunday morning, April 15th, the entire community was saddened by the news that Dorothy Anna Elkins had passed to her eternal home that morning in the very early hours. When she was about five years old she had spinal meningitis, which left her a cripple for life. Se was a cheerful, happy spirit and made a large place for herself among the children and young people of Liberty.

She was the daughter of Robert L. and Florence Anna Elkins, and was born December 24, 1914.

She was converted and joined the Liberty Methodist Protestant church on June 13th, 1926, under the pastorate of Rev. F. L. Gibbs, and all who knew her will readily agree that no one ever lived a more consistent Christian life than did Dorothy. She was faithful and punctual to all her responsibilities to the church and to the community life. When the hour came for Sunday school to open on Sunday morning, the workers always knew that they might count on Dorothy being in her place, if physically able. And many, many times she was in her place when others less heroic would have given up and stayed at home. She was also peculiarly anxious to keep up with her classes in school, and often went beyond her strength that she might be in her place in the classroom.

Dorothy loved life, and made a brave struggle to hold on to life here that she might grow up into noble womanhood; in fact, she was one of the most heroic little soldiers it has ever been my privilege to know.

She leaves to mourn their loss: father and mother, four brothers and three sisters, many relatives and a great host of friends; for to know Dorothy was to love her and to be her friend. The floral offering was large and beautiful, and a large number of friends and neighbors gathered at the service to sympathize with the stricken family, and doubtless every heart present beat in loving sympathy with the bereaved ones as we dropped our tears with theirs because of their loss and ours.

The funeral services were held from the home of her parents in Liberty, and the little body was laid away tenderly to await the resurrection morning. There is a bright ray of hope for all who sorrow on account of her going; for if Dorothy be not safe in heaven then there is a poor chance for any of us. She was as pure and as lovely as a spring morning.

The services were conducted by her pastor, assisted by her former pastor, and close friend, Rev. Paul S. Kennett.

Yours in His loving service,

A. G. DIXON.

Barrow

Sallie L. Dwiggins, daughter of D. B. and M. J. Dwiggins, departed this life April 6, 1928, aged 58 years, 8 months and 14 days. She was married to W. M. Barrow about 40 years ago. This union was blessed with five children, four sons and one daughter. Two survive, Mrs. Hilah Lou Parish and John Hartsell Barrow, both of Kernersville. Her faithful companion departed this life March 4th, 1923.

There are two brothers and three sister: Mrs. Walter Wwiggins, Kernersville, R.F.D.; John Dwiggins, of Newberry, S. C.; Mrs. Annie Dillon, Kernersville, R.F.D.; Mrs. Emma Jones, of Greensboro, and Mrs. Addie Dillon, of Kernersville, R.F.D.

Sister Barrow was converted at the age of 12 years, and joined Pine Grove Methodist Protestant church, and remained an appreciated member of the same until her Lord called her home. Her death was very unexpected. On the morning she departed, she prepared her breakfast, ate a few mouthfuls, was stricken with hemorrhage of the brain, and died in less than an hour. A few weeks ago while seriously ill she lay upon her bed and sang, "I'm going home to die no more." She thought she was going then, but through the providence of God she was permitted to remain with us a little while longer.

In the passing of this good woman the church has lost a faithful member, the children a loving mother, and the brothers and sisters, a sister who loved them.

On the day following her death at 3 p. m. her funeral was conducted at Bethel M. P. church. The writer was assisted by Rev. J. R. Miller and Rev. R. B. Crowder, both of the Baptist church, after which the deceased, surrounded with many beautiful flowers and a host of relatives and friends, was laid to rest to await the day of the resurrection morn.

May the Lord greatly comfort the many relatives and friends, who keenly feel the departure of a loved one.

FROM CONCORD TO BALTIMORE

All aboard for Baltimore! The bus leaves Concord early Friday morning, May 11th; expects to reach Baltimore in time for the College Banquet and night program of the same day. Twenty persons are registered for the bus. We can take two more along with us. If you have registered for the convention and would like to join us, let us hear from you at once. The first two applications will be accepted; $15.00 round trip fare, including a day in Washington.

Our passenger list is as follows: Two from Charlotte, one from Albemarle, one from Lexington, and the rest from Concord.

We expect to take in the first day of the General Conference also and will return Thursday, the 17th.

You must act quickly if you would go with us. G. H. HENDRY.

—We will have an opportunity to send some of our letters by airplane from this on. The flying mail man between New York and New Orleans will stop at the airport near Greensboro.

NO PRAYER MEETING

There is to be no prayer meeting this evening in a little negro church down in Atlanta, Ga. That's the news broadcast Tuesday by the Associated Press, and when that great and busy news-distributing agency considers such an item of sufficient importance to place it on its wires, there must be a reason.

And there is a reason for the abandonment of the mid-week prayer service. The church is without the essentials for such a meeting, except the desire. The parson who has been guiding the little flock of negroes has taken unto himself the five song books, the Bible, the collection box and the church organ. In other words, he has grabbed onto everything the congregation has, except the church building, and he probably will put a padlock on that.

The parson says the congregation owes him back pay, and he intends to keep his hands upon the property until the brothers and sisters fork over his just dues. He does not intend to let such an item escape their attention and has taken this means of making an impression.

The congregation is appealing to the courts to help recover its property. The brothers have filed a petition in which they say "it is well nigh necessary to hold Reverend Jones when the collection is taken up." Further enlightenment of this statement was not given by the Associated Press, but it is taken to mean that the parson has been trying for some time to get what he thinks should be coming to him.

Preachers, recognized in times past as an underpaid group of men, have had to wait long and often, at times, for their remuneration, and the action of the Atlanta parson may show them that fellow-workers in that section are having their troubles, also.—Twin City Sentinel.

—Bro. H. A. Garrett, field agent for High Point College, was in Calvary congregation last Sunday night.

—Joseph Ross made a trip from Asheboro to Pittsburgh in one day. And he did not go in an airplane, but an automobile. It is a wonder he was not arrested for speeding. Perhaps the reason was the officers could not overtake him.

—Miss Jezzie Smith has become Mrs. F. D. Pike, and has moved to Areadia, S. C. She wants the Herald to follow her. It is the only link, she says, between her and the M. P. Church in her present situation.

—We regret to hear that Rev. J. T. Sisk has felt constrained to give up his pastoral work. We are informed that he expects to devote himself to evangelistic work. We wish him good success in whatever field he may undertake to work.

—Bro. J. M. Stone of Grace Church came over to Calvary Sunday, April 22, and taught Bro. Norman Kirkman's Sunday school class and then made a short talk to the entire school. We were glad to see him.

—Buick, the originator of the popular car that bears his name, has lost out in the business world and is said to be so poor that he cannot afford a telephone. Perhaps the slogan will have to be changed: "If there is a better car made, Buick will make it."

—Lindbergh's airplane, The Spirit of Saint Louis, has been presented to the National Museum in Washington. This does not mean that Lindbergh does not intend to fly any more. Hereafter he will fly in another airboat.

"What Lack I Yet?"

The young man that asked Jesus this question was vaguely conscious of deficiency, notwithstanding his blameless moral life. He was so much concerned about eternal life that he was unwilling to let the matter rest without investigation. In this he was superior to those who think by persisting in ignorance to be able to defend themselves against blame. This young man was conscious of his ignorance but was not content to go on in ignorance. He wanted to know that he might do the thing necessary. Yet when Jesus told him what to do, his countenance fell and he went away sorrowful. Jesus' answer was a startling revelation to him. He had no idea that the way of eternal life involved so much. He had no suspicion that his deficiency was so great. He perhaps imagined that the Great Teacher whom he knew only as a great teacher would tell him to perform some special act to recommend him to the favor of God. Had Jesus told him to devote the tenth of his income to religious uses, probably he would have consented readily. But when Jesus pointed him to the way of complete self-denial, he was staggered by the greatness of the requirement. He could not at once get the consent of his mind to pay the price. It is to his credit that he went away sorrowful. He might have gone away with sneers and scoffs. We like to believe that he continued to weigh the matter until he was not only convinced that the great teacher was absolutely right but that he was ready to make the exchange necessary. Although his possessions were great, they dwindled into insignificance in comparison with eternal life.

Eternal life is a gift—declared so in the Bible. But we learn from the case of the rich young ruler that a man must put himself in a position to receive this gift. There was no room in this young man's heart for the great gift while his affections were upon his wealth and position. He must make the great renunciation before he could have eternal life.

We may measure our growth in the divine favor by what we have given up for God and His Kingdom. We may measure our deficiencies by what we still cling to contrary to the will of God. Not until we are ready to give up everything can we receive everything. When we are ready to give up all of self, then we may receive all of Christ. It is such a great thing that takes place in the soul that becomes a Christian! There is great danger of our making the impression on young and thoughtless people that it is a small matter to become a Christian. It is the greatest, most important experience of life. There is nothing else we can become that is to be compared with becoming a Christian.

There is a legend that the rich young ruler who went away from Jesus sorrowful later became a Christian and a missionary. I like to believe it and think it plausible. He must have continued to think about Jesus and His message, and if he thought honestly, what conclusion must he have reached?

"A Better Resurrection"

The unknown author of the Book of Hebrews, after describing (eleventh chapter) some of the heroes of faith, says (11th verse): "Others were tortured, not accepting deliverance; that they might obtain a better resurrection." What did he mean? How can one resurrection be better than another?

One opinion of the author's meaning is that he was contrasting a resurrection to the eternal life of the future state with a resurrection to the temporal life of the present state. Women by faith had received their dead raised to life again, as in the case of the Shunammite's son. Persons restored to the present life die again, whereas the other resurrection is to a state of immortality and therefore much better.

A more probable meaning is based on the conception of inequalities among people of the future life. Paul seems to teach that we shall differ in degrees of glory in the future state. "As one star differeth from another star in glory, so shall it be in the resurrection of the dead." Those who refused to accept deliverance from a martyr's death by recanting were nerved by the hope of a more glorious state in the future as a result of their faithfulness.

What Is It That Is Revolving?

Lecturers and magazine writers frequently afflict us if they do not terrify us with their pronouncements regarding the revolution that is taking place or is about to take place in the religious world. If we have not become accustomed to that sort of thing they may make us very uncomfortable—they speak with such an air of superior wisdom and finality. It is unquestionable that these writers and speakers are sincere. They believe what they say. And there is a basis in fact for their predictions. There is a movement going on which is clearly apparent to them. But the movement, like the movement of the solar system, is subject to more than one interpretation. There is the Ptolemaic interpretation and there is the Copernican interpretation. These lecturers and magazine writers would do well to pause and consider whether the world is revolving or whether the movement is not simply in their own minds. When we graduated from college years ago we had an oration on "The Present Religious Revolution." We then thought that the whole world was revolving; we now see that the revolution was mainly in our own mind. We suspect a similar thing will be found true in the careers of the alarmist prophets of today.

—We must learn to overlook little things we do not like. Otherwise we shall always be trying to enforce our will upon the other person, and this is neither fair nor loving.

CAN CONVERSION DO FOR YOUTH WHAT RELIGIOUS EDUCATION CAN?

FLOYD R. GARRETT

For a number of years the question of conversion has been one of much discussion and much disputation. Not until recently have the opinions of the best religious leaders been changed concerning the sacred conventionality. Down through the years leaders have been struggling with the problem and its successful solution. Formerly conversion has had too much of an emotional state which soon loses its power and distinction. Conversion and decision have been interpreted as synonymous terms, but in reality are not.

Some of the best writers and religious leaders believe that if a child grows up in a religious home, a religious community, in church, enjoying religion and life there is no need for conversion. Only decision is needed.

The view that conversion is the most essential element in one's religious life appears to be false. From observation and statistics of different churches, both rural and urban, it is found that those whose lives are cleaner, purer, more serviceable to the church and to the community, are those who have grown up into religious experiences gradually. They have grown up in the church and no great emotional change was made in their lives.

James, the noted psychologist, tells us that the human body is made up of a bundle of habits which are built and interwoven into his life as he grows. This being the case, one could grow up a Christian and not know himself otherwise, or vice versa. When the child has reached adolescence he has moulded a life of habits. These habits determine his life during maturity and old age. In most cases when the non-Christian has reached such a stage, conversion may mean very little to him. His old habits soon reappear and master his life. How can he help it? Do we expect him to undo in a few minutes what he has built in several years? Do we expect him to gain in a few minutes what he should have obtained in several years?

Christian living is an evolutionary process, beginning early in childhood and building itself upon experiences which enter the life as it grows. Decisions should be made early.

To advocate the limitations of conversion would mean the destruction of a sacred cult practice, and I do not advocate its abolition. I do say that there is something more important in one's religious life. This more important factor is a system of religious education in the church which will be sufficient to train youth up in the Christian life; a system which will imbed right principles in the child before he grows up. To bring youth into the church early means a decrease of "emotional evangelism," which in most cases lasts only during the emotional period. To bring youth into the church by gradual growth rather than by conversion means the imbedding of the right attitudes, right habits, and right responses to the problems of life.

To show that gradual growth far surpasses the "conversional growth" a review of a recent survey is necessary. The survey was made of a small rural church of approximately 350 members. Of this number only a small per cent who attended the church were converted after the age of fifteen. All of the present workers were brought up in religious homes, in church and in the Sunday school. Not one of the recent "after-fifteen converts" was a loyal supporter, nor an influential worker in the church.

"A policy of religious education that postpones the beginning of personal religion of a social sort till adolescence, relying upon the chance that a conversion experience will reverse the set that childhood has given to the character, is a fatal policy. It has not worked in practice. For parallel with the streams of adolescent conversions are two other streams that issue from the Sunday schools, a stream of youths who come into full church membership without a conversion, and a stream of those who go into mature life without taking any religious stand at all. The constant aim of elementary religious education should be to make conversion unnecessary."

What a mistake is made when a church fails to give the gradual development training. Very few churches have added the necessary training. Too little is being done in the way of training of the young people. The time and money are spent on the adult church which in many cases is struggling by itself for existence. The building of a church on the foundation of youth is sure proof that the coming adult church will be securely rooted in a firm foundation.

Three stages, conviction, surrender, and victory, are the divisions given to conversion.

We leave conversion to do for us what the church should do. The supreme test of our religious power lies in the prevention of wrecks which call about such a problem of conversion. To put the matter in terms of construction rather than in terms of disaster, the predominant function of the church is to get Christian motives into control of the growing powers of children and youth. This function predominates in religion precisely as sanitation and hygiene predominate in matters of public health. The educational function must prevail in Christianity because of what it is: (1) The church can maintain the spirit of prophecy within itself only by educating its people. (2) Education of the people is an indispensable means for correcting the faults of the church. (3) Through popular education the church makes its contribution to the life of the community.

THE BROKEN ARM

At the request of the editor of the HERALD, I will give a little explanation. I have never had much trouble, never suffered much pain from bodily afflictions. So a broken arm was new to me, pain was new, but the pain was not all of it. Helplessness, being almost entirely dependent upon others for forty days, waiting for the arm to heal, my patience was severely tried. I felt myself to be nothing. I was led to see what it means to suffer pain and inconvenience, to be helpless, and to sympathize with others who suffer. It occurred to me one night, Would I swap back for an arm never broken, if it were possible? I answered, No, because the benefit was greater than the loss. A broken limb might affect others as it did me. The greatest sorrow in life for beings like ourselves would be to have no sorrow.

W. L. Watkinson—"I walked a mile with Pleasure, she chattered all the way, but left me none the wiser for all she had to say. I walked a mile with Sorrow, and ne'er a word said she. But oh, the things I learned from her, when sorrow walked with me."

MORE DEMOCRACY THE CURE

Shall I tell you what depresses me most in the discussion preceding the meeting of our General Conference? It is the frank, and in most cases apparently unconscious, acknowledgment of the belief that the motives and ideals of Christian ministers—and Christian laymen—in no wise differ from those held by so-called men of the world. The chief arguments against the election of bishops for a period of years and other similar changes seem to be based in the belief that even the Christian minister is incapable of responding to anything other than the appeal to selfishness. We cannot democratize our church because our Conferences would thereby become hotbeds of political schemes and schemers. We must not elect our bishops for a period of years, or limit their episcopal authority, because we should thus rob the office of a certain dignity or security and thereby make it unattractive to our most capable men. What a strange acknowledgment is here of the unworkableness of the Christian ideal of unselfish service, of the inability of the Spirit of Christ working in human hearts to make that ideal operative, and especially of the total breakdown of our church as an instrument for the achievement of such an end.

To approach the whole question from a slightly different angle, how are we going to reconcile this practical denial of faith in democracy with the sermons on that great theme which most of us ministers have preached in the last dozen years? Were the sermons pure bunkum? Or are we to suppose that democracy is alone unsuited to Methodist ministers and outstanding Methodist laymen?

If the dire consequences that have been prophesied should ensue as the result of the changes in organization that have been suggested, I wonder if it has occurred to some of us that the men who would then so grossly indulge in these orgies of political selfishness are those who have been trained under the present dispensation.

Lest some become impatient with this apparently silly question, may I say seriously, even in the United States of America in the year 1928, that I believe that the cure for the weakness of democracy is to be found in more democracy rather than less. If that sounds familiar to some of my brother ministers, I refer them to the above and aforesaid sermons.

I cherish no illusions concerning the effects to be accomplished by the limitation of episcopal authority or the election of district superintendents or the election of bishops for eight years, or the admission of laymen to the Annual Conferences. I am quite inclined to agree that these changes would lessen the efficiency of the machine as a machine. Perhaps they would take from our bishops something of that superficial dignity with which they have been invested in popular thought. But as I most surely believe that democracy in government, even under its present limitations, has enriched, and, yes, dignified, the life of the common man, so I believe that even these simple reforms will make for a new sense of personal freedom and worth in the breast of the great mass of our ministry.

Is the efficiency of the machine something to be sought above all else? Especially if it dampen personal ardor, and blight the freshness of pure ideals? None of us would claim that. And yet, can any man doubt, as he looks into his own life and thinks of the lives of other fellow ministers, that this is just what has happened? Of course the abandonment of these vestiges of autocratic forms will not bring in the golden age. But it will at least bear witness to the fact that the church no longer believes in false and outgrown distinctions among men, and that it places its seal unreservedly on Jesus' estimate of man as man. It will place men where Christianity always places them—quite dependent upon the possession and development of qualities of Christian leadership for their influence over their fellows.

The function of the church is to create free, Christianized personalities. If its organization is such as to rob any portion of its ministry—its chosen leaders—of this sense of freedom, should not that fact cause deep concern?

As I read what I have written the words sound harsh and unreasonable, but as I allow my mind to travel back over nearly thirty years in the ministry of our church, I am bound to say that I believe them true. Not that I expect that any reforms in organization will recreate the church. The Spirit of God alone can do that, and He will do it when we are ready to pay the price of obedience to what we know to be His will. But that mighty Spirit will be helped and not hindered if we seek to shape the organization of the church in sympathy with the ideas of freedom and faith in humanity which are the very breath of life to our Christian hope.—Robert E. Brown, Pastor Trinity Community Church (Methodist Episcopal), Grand Rapids, Mich., in Zion's Herald.

A CHANGED HOME AND WHAT IT DID

An Argentine woman who had bought a Spanish Bible was so much afraid of her husband that she read it every day in his absence, as he was an enemy of religion. One night, however, she had omitted to hide the Book, and her husband saw it on the table. Without saying anything, he began to read it, and then remarked to his wife that it appeared to be a good Book; and every night when he returned home he went on reading his wife's Bible.

Shortly afterward his wife suggested that they should go together to see her parents, to whom they had not spoken for about two years. They went, and asked forgiveness, and now both families are following the Lord.—The Bible in the World.

The best evidence of the Bible's being the Word of God is to be found between its covers. It proves itself.—Charles Hodge.

OPTIMISM | The President's Letter | EVANGELISM

West Forsyth

May 4.—On this date we were in North Charlotte, conferring with our people regarding our work there. We are having some difficulty in developing this field as we would like to do; but this is not unusual with new enterprises. We think we have the work provided for now, and we shall watch with interest for encouraging developments.

North Charlotte

Sunday, May 6, was given to this charge in the interest of the Gratitude Gift and the college assessment. The appointments were Baltimore 11 a. m. and Stony Knoll 3 p. m. Congregations were not large at either place, but encouraging, both in numbers and the manifested interest. Rain in the afternoon no doubt reduced the attendance at Stony Knoll. In addition to the Gratitude Gift and the college assessment, other conference programs were emphasized, and full support of the charge urged. At Baltimore the college assessment of $14 was raised, and about $10 on the Gratitude Gift. The full amount of $25 was pledged at Stony Knoll, and the college assessment had been provided for already. While we were working at these points, our good friend, Bro. C. G. Hunter, was presenting the Gratitude Gift to the Sunday school at Pleasant Hill. He secured pledges to the amount of $32, and expects the full allotment of this church, $70, to be paid.

Bro. Whitaker is pressing the work along all lines. A goodly sum will be raised on the Gratitude Gift, and he expects the college assessment to be paid in full. His people speak highly of the earnest and helpful interest that he takes in all forms of church work, both local and general. The spiritual necessities of the church are on his heart, and along with other matters he is giving earnest concern to this. We have now visited all of the churches on this charge, and our impressions of the field are favorable. We would like to see this work come into its own, and become one of our choice charges. Wise, patient, and zealous leadership, and the hearty co-operation of the people will bring about, in the course of a few years, marked and pleasing results in this materially developing section of our conference. The indications are that this year will be fruitful and, perhaps, one of the best of the present pastorate. A coat of paint and some other repairs are needed at the parsonage. We trust the brethren will give this prompt attention.

During these visits we have met with kindness and hospitality at the hands of both pastor and people, for which we are very grateful.

Markers

Bro. H. L. Isley says in HERALD of last week, "On recommendation of the pastor, the trustees of Tabernacle and Julian churches were instructed to place suitable markers on the highways near the churches." Good! Let this be duplicated throughout the conference, that the people who travel our highways may know that the church "by the side of the road" is a Methodist Protestant church.

Children's Day

The programs are now out, and copies are no doubt now in the hands of pastors and Sunday school superintendents. This program is well worthy of the church, and the Board of Foreign Missions should have our full co-operation in this effort to promote our missionary enterprises. The program will impart missionary information and stimulate missionary interest, and besides, the Children's Day program is a means of providing much of the funds with which to carry on our work. Please see to it, brethren, that this program is given in every church, and an offering taken for foreign missions. Take credit on your G. C. B. for amount of offering.

Next Week

Our usual letter will not appear next week, owing to the fact that we are to be in attendance upon the General Conference. We hope to see many of our people in Baltimore during this conference. A few are asking for tickets to the Lyric meeting Wednesday night, May 16. They may be procured at the conference church any time after 10 a. m. Wednesday morning, as we can not get them in time for distribution here. We are glad to note that a number of our people have gone on already in order to be there for the Young People's Centennial Convention. Let us all pray very earnestly that God may be in this General Conference and Young People's Convention in great power, and that the church may begin the new century with renewed vigor and enlarged programs of Kingdom service.

Finally

This is the last word through the HERALD regarding the Gratitude Gift, before the meeting of the General Conference, when this money must be in hand. We do not want to go to the General Conference without our full allotment of $12,000, though a small amount of it will probably be unsubscribed. It is our faith that 28,000 Methodist Protestants in the oldest conference in the connection will not endorse a failure in this worthy undertaking to praise God and honor his church on this the first centennial of our Zion. Denominational loyalty, conference integrity and gratitude to God all demand that we lay upon the altar of the church our full quota.

Appointments

May 13, with Bro. Neese in the formal opening of the new church at Worthville.

May 10, with Board meeting in High Point.

May 16, General Conference in Baltimore.

June 3, with Mocksville charge.

June 10, with Fairfield church.

June 17, with Saxapahaw charge in rally at Concord church.

With brotherly love and anxious concern for success, in the largest measure, of all plans to exalt Christ and establish His Kingdom, and with fervent prayers for you all, I am,

Fraternally,

S. W. TAYLOR.

COULD THIS HAPPEN IN YOUR HOME?

Christian Life gives this from an old bookmark:

"Mother, I've found an old dusty thing High on the shelf—just a book!"
"Why, that's a Bible, Tommy dear.
Be careful—that's God's book!"
"God's book!" the child exclaimed,
"Then, mother, before we lose it,
For you know we never use it,
We'd better send it back to God."

FOREIGN MISSIONS

Who Not Every Sunday School?

From every quarter of our denominational world orders are coming in for Children's Day programs and pageants. Most of the schools are ordering both. And why not? Children's Day Sunday ought to be a day set apart for the cause of foreign missions. Well could the Children's Day program be used in the morning and the pageant in the evening. This will make a day full of interest and a church full of people for both services.

Never has our church reached the happy experience of every Sunday school observing Children's Day. What a fine experience that would be and how wholesome and beneficial in its results! Not only would it result in blessing for the cause of Christ's Kingdom abroad but there would come also added blessings upon our churches and our work in the home land.

It is worth while to do some things together. There is not a more favorable or more beautiful month in the year in which to do some things together than the month of June. It is not only the month of roses and of brides, but to us Methodist Protestants it is also the month of Children's Day and Foreign Missions. Last year 1,035 of our Sunday schools held the Children's Day service. But these are not all of our Sunday schools. There are a large number that have never observed this great day and have not yet entered into the worthwhileness of doing some things together.

Well did Dr. Klein, in one of his refreshing missionary articles, write, "Surely every Sunday school ought to share in so good a cause, apart from the valuable aid a Children's Day service would be to the Sunday school that never held one. The local church that is not fostering the missionary spirit, not sharing in the supreme work God assigned to the church—sending the gospel to all peoples—cannot expect, in fullest measure, His blessings because it is not doing His will, as is plainly set forth in the gospel."

We must be sharers of His gospel if we would be recipients of His mercies and blessings. There is no finer or more inspirational way of sharing His gospel than by using the Children's Day services. And there is no class of people that will delight to be such sharers more than the boys and girls of our Sunday schools. And their sharing will bring joy and gladness to parents, brothers and sisters, uncles and aunts, and cousins. Why deny them this delightful privilege and miss the joy ourselves? Try it!

An Additional Incentive

To every Sunday school that holds the service this year we have something that has never been given in the 100 years of the church's existence. We are preparing an historical poster of our foreign missionary workers. On this poster will appear the picture of every missionary that has ever served in Japan, China and India, under the direction of the Board of Foreign Missions and the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. This is a very valuable poster. A copy will be sent, absolutely free, to every Sunday school holding the service. We won't even ask you to pay the postage. All we ask is to let us send you our free supplies, you put on the program and take an offering for foreign missions and send it to your conference treasurer telling him that it is your Children's Day offering. This will then go direct for foreign missions and will apply on your General Conference budget.

The Right Spirit

One young lady, the chairman of the Children's Day Program Committee, in ordering the supplies, wrote, "Our superintendent has plans to try to get a big offering. We are going to try to have a fine program with your help." One superintendent wrote, "We have a small school but will try hard to have a good offering." These schools will not fail. May this splendid spirit catch fire and spread. "Let's go." Right now fill out the order card and let's have every Sunday school in the procession this year.

BEIRUT UNIVERSITY HAS TRANSFORMED ARABIC COUNTRIES

The Near East would revert to medievalism in its industrial and commercial as well as intellectual and spiritual life if the teachers, lawyers, doctors and government officials whom the American University of Beirut has trained were withdrawn from the land, President Bayard Dodge wrote J. Elmer Long, of Durham, who is state chairman for the Near East College Association campaign now being conducted in North Carolina.

President Dodge wrote that the peoples of the Near East themselves recognize that graduates of the university are responsible for the modern renaissance which is transforming the Middle East. Students of Near Eastern affairs, casual visitors and travellers, he asserted, are unanimous in the opinion that graduates of the university exercise greater influence over their communities than the graduates of any similar institution in the United States.

"Wherever you go in the Near East," President Dodge writes, "you will find that the government official who vises your passport in the ports of Alexandria, Jaffa, or Beirut; the physician, pharmacist or dentist whose services you may need up the Nile near Luxor, down the Euphrates in Iraq, over the plains of Palestine or the mountains of Lebanon; the editor of the English paper which you buy in the streets of Khartoum or in the hotels of Jerusalem and Baghdad, are graduates of the university.

"At the present time King Feisal's secretary, the director of medical services, the secretary of the Council of Ministers, and the inspector of education in Iraq are graduates of the university. The head of the Bahai religion in Haifa, the leading judge of Palestine, the governor of Tiberias, the director of the Ministry of Interior in Cairo, the editor of the leading newspaper in Cairo and in the Arabic world, the civil judge of Khartoum, the Minister of Interior and Public Health in the Lebanon Republic, and the medical officer of the government of Syria, are all graduates of the university.

"Sir Said Schoucair Pasha, the greatest authority on financial affairs in the Arabic East, who has received the highest honors from the British as well as the Turkish and Egyptian governments for his services, was once a poor student from the Lebanon.

"One of the most outstanding examples of the influence of the university is that of the Bordeosh family of six brothers in Palestine—one is a physician, another a dentist, two are pharmacists and two leading business men.

"In sixty-two years the university has graduated 1,328 students. Of these 151 physicians, pharmacists, dentists and nurses are in the employ of the governments of Lebanon, Syria, Palestine, Trans-Jordan, Iraq, Egypt and the Soudan; 721 graduates are physicians either in government service or private practice; 271 are in business and the remainder are engaged in educational, religious, journalistic and legal work.

"These men are raising the standards of professional and business ethics, fighting disease and ignorance and promoting principles of peace and accord among the diverse nationalities and many sects of the Near East."

FASTING

Fasting, in the spiritual sense (Isa. 58, and I Cor. 7:5), has a much broader basis than a temporary abstinence from food. It aims to put an end to the dominion of the body over the soul, and to restore the soul's dominion over the body. You know that everything that feeds and pleases the body has a tendency to repress the clearness and elasticity of the life of the soul. The side of our life that is turned toward the world rarely operates in harmony with the side of our life that is turned toward God. When you are alone you feel as a rule closer to God than when you are in company. In the banquetting hall you seem farther away from God than in your bed-chamber. In the midst of your cares to increase your wealth you enjoy less of God's presence than at the times when you give of your money to the poor. You are closer to God when you feed the hungry than when, with your family and guests, you feast on choice food and drinks.

In brief, experience confirms again and again, that the less enjoyment you have in the world, the more intimate is your thought of God. The more you get apart from the cares and the joys of the world, the closer becomes your walk with God.

Fasting has a right of being introduced into the habits of life. Our first interest is eternal life. This can only be tasted in an ever deeper knowledge of God. This is true as fed by secret prayer. And secret prayer has need, that in the face of the offensive dominion of the body and the environments, the dominion of the soul be strengthened by fasting rightly understood. That sobriety in food and drink is an aid in this direction, appears from the difficult in prayer, which you find upon your return from a banquet hall. But this is merely the beginning of real fasting. It is not only abundance of food and drink, but extravagance as well, in diversions and satisfaction of the senses, and in financial cares, voluntary or involuntary, that harmfully affect your approach to God. Fasting, therefore, is an aid to sanctify prayer and to make it more fervent is by no means alone the depriving of the body of food and drink, but the withdrawal of self by generosity from the dominion of money, by sobriety and simplicity of life to liberate oneself from the power of self-indulgence and certainly also by seclusion to escape the mastery of environment.

This is what the Lord declared, when He extended fastening to loosening the bands of wickedness, and to feeding the hungry. From time to time the soul must set itself free, cast away all bonds and become entirely itself. Then the gates lift up their heads, then the door of eternity is opened, and God makes His approach to us, and our soul its approach to God, and the knowledge of God, which is eternal life, blossoms in the sanctuary of the heart.—Selected.

As the years pass, life becomes more joyful for those who really love. The important point is to be sure that we love.

THE GOSPEL

The only thing which makes a church memorable and sacred is its love for the holy Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ.

I can think of no words of the Bible which so briefly and completely sum up the ideals and purposes of a New Testament church as this word with which the Apostle handed the church at Philippi down to immortality, "Your fellowship in the gospel."

The true Gospel is just as unworldly, as unlike man's wisdom and devices as when it first fell from the lips of Christ's apostles. As is well said of it on the Luther monument at Worms, it "strikes the world with thunder and lightning."

Christ's death on the cross, not as an accident, not as an example, not as an appeal to our emotions, but as sin-bearer, tasting death for every man, as the sinner's substitute answering to the law of God and thus enabling God to remain just and yet the justifier of them that believe in Jesus; His resurrection from the dead; His ascension into the heavens; His bestowal of the Holy Spirit; His present mighty intercession; His coming again in glory to judge men and angels—these are the sublime and stupendous facts which comprise the Gospel and which, when she heard them, made even the demented maid of Philippi cry out, "These men are the servants of the most high God, which show unto us the way of salvation!"

The great problem before our church today is to get our people to "strive together" for the spread of the Gospel, for the bringing of men into the kingdom of Christ. But, on the human side, the secret of the rapid conquest of the Gospel was that those who had received it and believed it became propagandists, missionaries, witnesses to it. Last summer I met a classmate of mine who had been passing through deep waters of affliction and trial. He told me that in the midst of his troubles he said to his wife: "We have talked about it, and preached about it, and sung about it, and prayed about it, now we will see if it works!" "It worked, did it not?" I said to him. "Yes," he answered, "it worked!" Can you show in this church, in this city, in your home, in your place of toil or business, that the Gospel "works"?

"So let our lips and lives express
The holy Gospel we profess;
So let our works and virtues shine
To prove the doctrine all divine."

The fellowships of this world pass and perish; but the fellowship of the Gospel abides and survives.—McCartney.

MY CHURCH IS CHRIST'S CHURCH

"My" church is Christ's church, and Christ is concerned about it. He is its head and Lord. The churches are His organized agencies for carrying on His work in the world. He walks in the midst of the churches; He knows their works; He reproves them for their imperfections and shortcomings and commends them for faithfulness and zeal; He chastises them when they cannot be brought back to faithfulness without chastisement, and, as a last resort, He removes their candlesticks. "My" church is mine because it is Christ's, and I belong to Christ. I show my loyalty to His church, and whatever shows contempt for Christ's church shows contempt for Christ. As you love Christ, be faithful and loyal to your church, because it is the church and you belong to Him.—Baptist Advance.

OUR STORY PAGE

HERBERT MAKES HIS WAY TO SCHOOL

YETTA KAY STODDARD

Herbert James (nicknamed "Herb") was a lonely little ranch hand not quite four feet five inches tall. No one knew where he came from or who his parents were. He came to the ranch house one day, asking for "a job."

"What can you do, my little man?" good old Foster James had asked.

"I can do 'most anything. Ride your ponies. Wash your ma's dishes. Feed your pigs."

"What's your name?"

"Herb."

"Where did you come from?"

"I don't know. We were in a wagon and we fell over the trail and when I woke up there wasn't anybody but me."

"Was it your father and mother with you?"

"No. I was in a 'sylum and they farmed me out and I got lost."

"Well, come in, Herb, and eat your dinner. Maybe we can find something for you to do. What do you want to do most?"

"Go to school and learn to figure and be an engineer."

But Herbert had not got down to book lessons. Rancher James had not far to look for something for the little fellow to do and the days went on with tasks piling up. Almost before any one realized it, the boy was doing a ranch hand's work, getting nothing but his board and clothes for it.

"Maybe I can go by next fall," he was saying to himself one afternoon, as he went up the trail towards the Upper Corral. "If they'd let me ride Hamie back and forth, I could go to school and do chores on the ranch morning and night."

He decided to ask "the boss" when he came back to the ranch house after "riding the fence."

What Herbert was doing was not difficult but it took time. Thousands of sheep were enclosed in the Upper Corral where they remained sometimes for weeks at a time without shepherd or caretaker of any kind. As long as the fence held they were practically safe; but if one place became broken through it would not take long for the corral to be emptied. Where one sheep went through the others would follow. It was Herbert's task to examine the fence, examine it carefully, making sure that it was intact.

It was a hot afternoon. There was a strange threatening stillness in the air. Not a breeze stirred. Not a bird whistled. The silence and heat were oppressive.

Suddenly, for an instant, Herbert went dizzy. It seemed to him as if the rock on which he sat had heaved beneath him. His pony snorted.

"What was that, Hamie?" Herbert asked his pony, looking around.

There was fear in the pony's eye. Herbert knew then what had happened.

"It was an earthquake, Hamie. That's all. And it's all over and no damage done."

He mounted and rode along the fence again. As he approached the West Line, he looked across to the dam which held back in storage enough water to supply the town of Antler for a year. It made him think of a blue stone set in a dull golden ring—the shiny water and the yellow sands that rimmed it.

"I believe I'll have time to ride over there," he said. "There's nothing but chores when I get back and I can easily do them."

He had not gone far when he stopped his pony short, sat up in the saddle and gazed with fixed eyes at a point to the right of the spillway, a new crack in the solid masonry!

"The earthquake cracked it open!" he was saying, aghast at the thought of the damage that would be done to the town of Antler if the water undermined the foundations of the dam.

"They've got to be told. Somebody must get out here and put a force on to mend it. Quick!"

Believing that there was not time to go down to the ranch house to notify the people there of the break. Herbert headed his pony down a precipitous and rocky grade. It was a short cut to Antler. The danger of falling did not enter his mind.

He had reached a point of rocks jutting above the lower trail. Once down there, the way would be easy. Hamie would fly, he knew. The difficulty was to get there; for he had come dashing down at such a pace that he found himself in a position from which he at first thought he could not extricate himself nor the pony. The rock was shelving; the jump from it to the trail too far; and there seemed at first to be no possible path on either side. He dismounted, wondering if it would be practicable to try the jump alone, leaving Hamie on the rock until he returned. That would take too long, even if he succeeded in the jump, which he doubted.

He clambered down under the rock. There was a straight slide beneath it. Herbert considered.

"I believe Hamie could take it. He slid coming down from North Hill one day, and that's longer, even if it isn't so steep."

Carefully he led the pony down to the place under the rock. There, mounting, and throwing his arms around Hamie's neck, he whispered.

"Go!"

When Herbert came to himself about two hours afterwards he was lying on the lower trail, with Hamie standing near.

"I must have been thrown over his head," he was saying. He sat up and examined his limbs. His head and shoulder ached terribly, but that was all.

"The dam!"

He had remembered his errand now. Painfully he mounted and let Hamie have his own way along the narrow path. They went at a terrific pace, with the wind whistling past the horse's pricked-up ears.

Into the town, up to the door of the Mayor's house, Herbert rode, knocking loudly and calling out at the same time.

"Quick! The dam!"

The Mayor opened the door himself. Herbert told him what he had seen from the ridge behind Upper Corral.

"There was an earthquake, you know," he said.

"An earthquake? My wife and the neighbors were talking about feeling one at half-past two this afternoon, but I didn't notice it. I thought they imagined it," said the Mayor, anxiously. "Are you sure about the break?" he asked.

"Yes," said Herbert, convincingly, "I rode over in the direction of the dam right after I felt the jar of the quake, and I saw the crack. I know it was not there when I was up at the Upper Corral last week."

"You go back with me, boy," said the Mayor, hurrying out to the stable and mounting.

"It'll take more than one man to stop the leak," ventured Herbert.

"I know. We'll rouse the fire company and some of the men as we ride through town. You go across the street now and tell Jim App to follow us."

Through the darkness along the trail the men from Antler rode late that night, led by the Mayor and Herbert. They found the dam as the boy had described it. The foundation had been cracked and there was danger, already, of undermining—of losing the precious water, or worse still a flood that would destroy Antler.

It was dawn the next morning when the Mayor and Herbert rode into the side yard at the ranch house. Foster James was already out. He was saddling his horse.

"I was just going to look for you, Herb," he said. "I thought something had happened to you up at the Upper Corral. Where have you been?"

The Mayor answered for the boy.

"He's been saving the lives and property of the people of Antler, James."

Then, between them, he and Herbert told the story of the night's work. The Mayor was saying, at the end:

"And I know the people of Antler will want to do something handsome for Herbert. What do you want? Do you know? Boys usually want something pretty bad."

"I'd like to get a good education," said Herbert. "I want to be a civil engineer some day."

"All right. Will Antler do to start in?" asked the Mayor.

"Of course," laughed Herbert.

"I'll let you have Hamie," said Foster James. "You'll need a pony to take you back and forth."—Selected.

A MAN OF HIS WORD

"Mother," said John, hanging his head, "I broke my promise to you today. I spent my lunch money for ice cream instead of milk, but I'm sorry, and I won't do it again."

"Being sorry doesn't alter the fact that you broke your promise that you made only the other day. And having broken the promise once, how can I know that you will keep your word now when you give it again? Listen, John, it is a very serious thing to break your promise. You will want to be trusted all through your life. You must begin now to build your character for the future. When a man has earned the reputation of being trustworthy he becomes heroic and his word is taken in all things. Let me tell you a story. Long ago there was waged between the ancient city of Rome and its enemy city, Carthage, a long and hard war. First one country would win a batlte, and then the other would win, and it was hard to tell which would prove the final victor. This went on for many years, wearing out both armies. Now among the generals in the Roman army was a man named Regulus, of whom it was said that he always kept his word. Regulus had left his home, his wife and his children because he felt that his first duty was to his country and he had engaged in the battles of this lengthy war until he was broken in health. It was in this condition that the Carthagenians captured him and carried him a prisoner to Carthage. There, weak and lonely, he dreamed of his home and wondered if he would ever see his family again. Deep in his heart he felt that in time, if they held out long enough, his beloved country would be victorious in this long fight. He could see that Carthage was gripped by fear. It is true foreign soldiers had been hired to augment the troops of Carthage, but even with these they would not be able to fight much longer against Rome.

"One day an astonishing thing happened. Some of the rulers of Carthage came to the prison to talk to Regulus. They offered to let him go home to see his family. Regulus was overjoyed. Then he heard the conditions under which he was to go. Carthage was anxious to make peace with Rome. The rulers of Carthage wanted Regulus to carry the message to Rome and urge the Romans to ask for peace. 'Tell them of the battles you have lost,' said his captors, 'and show that nothing can be gained for them by prolonging this war. But you must promise us that if they will not make peace you will come back to prison.'

"'Very well,' said Regulus, 'I promise you that if they will not make peace, I will come back to prison.' And so they let him go for they knew that he was a man of his word.

"Great was the rejoicing in Rome when Regulus returned. He was questioned about the war and he answered them truly. He told that Carthage wanted to make peace, but he advised them not to stop the fight at that stage of affairs. 'The people of Carthage are afraid,' he said, 'and well they may be. Keep on the war a little while longer and Carthage will be yours. As for me, I have come to bid my wife and children and Rome farewell. Tomorrow I start back to Carthage and prison, for I have promised.'

"Then the people begged him to stay. They offered to send another man in his place, but to all their entreaties Regulus answered: 'I have given my word and I will not break it.' So he bade them good-bye and returned to the certain death that awaited him, but he had kept faith with the men who had trusted him and with himself, for he had been true to his word, and more than that no man can do."—Exchange.

THE PATH TO HOLINESS AND POWER

Sorrow seems to be necessary to the making of majestic men. Those untouched by it appear to be too much concerned for self and too much enamored of the world to become completely surrendered to God and to carry the needs of their fellowmen fully upon their hearts. It was a lonely disciple, who had been scourged and banished, that the Heavenly Father adjudged to be fit to receive the sublimest revelations of the eternal world ever given to a human being in this present life, and Christianity's mightiest builder was afflicted with a grievous "thorn in the flesh" for which there could be no deliverance this side of the tomb. The most moving and inspiring preachers that we have ever known had been trained in the school of suffering. In finding relief for their own burdened and bleeding souls, they learned the secret of how to comfort and strengthen other needy ones about them.

Wonderful are the following words contained in the 12th chapter of the Epistle to the Hebrews: "For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth. If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons; for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not?" And the writer, furthermore, states that the object of this chastening is "that we might be partakers of his holiness." These and other like passages of Scripture should tend to reconcile us to the sorrows and afflictions that may come to us along life's pilgrimage and help us to try to obey the exhortation of the poet:

"When God afflicts thee, think He hews a rugged stone Which must be shaped, or else aside as useless thrown."

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC

May 20:
"How to Train for Larger Leadersship"
Num. 27: 15-23.

Plans for the Meeting

Invite some of the former alumni to the service and have each one tell how the Christian Endeavor has helped him or her to be a leader. Then have the present members to tell how the various society activities are giving them opportunity for leadership.

Have the members to bring a list of qualities that one would expect to find in a Christian leader. Have these read and commented on. Then discuss how these qualities can best be acquired and developed. Let each member measure himself in the light of the standard set by the members.

Leader's Help

1. Point out the truth that in every field of activity of today there is found a trained leadership; namely, the field of secular education, the world of medicine, farming, manufacturing, etc. Show that the religious world needs a trained leadership, also.

2. Show that huge sums of money are used to train leaders for the temporal world but in the eternal things of life very little is done.

3. Call attention to the fact that one needs not wait until one enters college or some higher institution of learning before starting to train for service, for the great opportunities for training are found in the local churches. In the Christian Endeavor, the Sunday school, the Daily Vacation Church School, and the various activities of the church.

Pertaining to the Topic

The writer has just listened to the greatest sermon he has ever heard, preached by one who has been in the business of developing the leadership of the church. He said many things that one would never forget, but he gave one principle that will make one a leader if applied; namely, "Always do the right thing, in the right way, and at the right time."

There is a cry being heard from every part of the Kingdom for a greater leadership. Leadership training is one thing that the Protestant world has neglected too long. If Protestantism hopes to meet the challenge of the new times in which we live, the Protestant churches must prepare a leadership that will take the life of the child at its very beginning and see to it that it has the proper religious nurture.

Some qualifications for leaders are: (a) a sound Christian character; (b) a general education; (c) courses and experience in some field of religious education; (d) if a teacher, one must possess skill in presenting the materials to be taught. Unselfishness, love, sympathetic attitude, courage, good health, etc.

Some places for training are: Denominational and interdenominational standard training schools; summer training schools and summer conferences; local church, Sunday school, Christian Endeavor; correspondence courses with the International Council and the various denominational boards (for our own church write Lawrence Little, executive secretary, Concord, N. C.); colleges that are promoters of religious training; seminaries, and universities that promote religious training.

Correlation with the Sunday School Lesson

The Sunday school lesson for May 20th is along the thoughts of Teaching and Loving. Certainly this subject can be carried into the Christian Endeavor discussion. Have some one who is connected with the Sunday school to tell the society the part that love plays in the developing of leadership.

AN APPEAL TO PASTORS

In a previous letter I very earnestly requested the pastors to report on the cards sent out just before Easter the number of members received into the churches during the Easter season and also the amount of the offering for Home Missions. There were 834 ministers to whom the cards were sent. Up to the date of writing, May 3, only 367 have reported.

It is very important that I shall hear from all if a complete report is to be made to the General Conference. Will the pastors therefore take a minute of their time and return the card they received or mail another card stating the number of members received and the amount of the Easter offering? It will greatly help me with my report.

GIPSY SMITH IN CONCORD

As a preacher Gipsy Smith, Jr., has gripped Concord as no other person has done. Night after night he has been heard by large audiences, and by the very winsomeness of his personality and the depth of his teachings he has led many to consecrate their lives to the Kingdom of God. There have been no tactics of the hoodlum, no plea to class consciousness, no play upon feelings, no wild and distorted tantrums from the pulpit. He has preached regeneration, and has offered the love of God and the blood of Christ as the only means of salvation.

Hundreds face the closing of the meeting with regret. Many there are who would like to hear this evangelist night after night for an indefinite period. And still more there are who find in their heart a personal note of regret over his leaving. They would like to keep him here always, so entirely human, so delightfully wholesome, and so overwhelmingly Christ-like is this preacher, healer and friend.—Concord Times.

WAR EXPERIENCES AT HAW RIVER

Capt. C. A. DeSaussure, general agent, passenger department, Memphis, Tenn., writes that the article about the new bridge at Haw River, N. C., on the Greensboro-Goldsboro line of the Danville division, which appeared in the March issue of the Bulletin, recalled one of the most thrilling of his experiences while a soldier of the Confederacy, which he describes as follows:

'I was a private in the Beaufort, S. C., Artillery, No. 5, on the second gun of the first section. This battery, then known in service as Stuart's Battery, had been personally placed by General R. E. Lee and charged with preservation of the Charleston and Savannah Railroad from being cut by the Federal gunboats and forces which infested the inlets of the coast line between the two cities.

"When Sherman's advance developed the uselessness of further effort in that direction, the battery was ordered to join. Gen. Joseph E. Johnston in his movement to effect a junction with General Lee, who was moving south from Richmond. After participating in the engagements at Averysboro, Bentonville and Smithfield, the march was resumed towards Greensboro.

"After leaving Raleigh wet weather set in. We followed the line of the railroad and when we reached Haw River, it was a roaring, raging torrent between its high banks. There was no wagon bridge and fording was impossible. To wait was equally impossible. Our army consisted of only 17,000 while Sherman with his 60,000 well-fed, well-equipped men were close behind.

"The railroad bridge, a single track deck structure, no trusses or anything to even suggest protection from a fall into the rushing waters (it seems to me now 100 feet) below. But the ten or twelve-foot width of this 250-foot length was covered with plank and our battery, four guns, four caissons, ammunition, commissary and baggage wagons and forge went across on this narrow path. It looked like a mile. We got across in safety, but I recollect seeing a wagon and team go over the side onto the rocks and into the water below.
